Bost was confronted by an overtone of gasps and objections from the members of the council at large when he appointed Mason as the chairman of the committee and suggested that Mason appoint the other members of the committee.

West Objects

West objected to the mockery and asked the president to appoint an unbiased committee.

At this point Frank Allen, dean of students, suggested that several members from both sides of the argument meet with him as advisor and discuss the matter outside of the council.

At this time Staton took the floor to present a bill similar to West's which would achieve the same purposes. When Mason rejected this resolution on the same grounds as he had West's, Staton asked for a majority vote of the congress to overrule the parliamentarian.

Referring to Mason, Staton said that he could "control any action that he wants to... he can make all the rules he wants to and cannot be overruled."

Mason rose in his defense conceding that Staton had a good point. He went on to say that he thought that the council should simply drop the matter and move on to things of greater importance. Mason suggested that the problem of the accumulation of do-not wrappers around the campus was of greater importance than the procedure of the council meeting.

Council Accepts Allen's Proposal
At the closing of the meeting the resolution was referred to the type of committee as suggested by Mr. Allen.

Annexation Not the Answer

Some day when you are not doing anything take a walk down South Front Street between Dawson and Dock Streets. Then stroll up Dawson until you get to about Eighth Street and walk down what is called Millis Alley. It's an old argument, but then compare these areas with Forest Hills or any of the areas which are being considered for annexation. It's no mystery how abject poverty and affluence can exist side by side in the city of Wilmington or anywhere else for that matter. But that doesn't make it any less disturbing. For example, it might surprise you to find out that there are a good many people in Wilmington who don't have any of the modern toilet facilities, and an awful lot of people who have no fuel to burn in winter. Many of these are not living as well as the worst tenant farmer.

If this isn't enough, examine any of the "paved" streets from Seventeenth to Third Streets; find out how many streets are not paved in the areas of Wilmington which are predominantly Negro. I'm sure you will find that a tremendous amount of repair is needed. In addition, it appears that in the midst of all this emphasis on expanding the city limits the civic center of Wilmington is going completely to the dogs. Wilmington is one of the few cities in North Carolina which is in a position to reset a real foundation for a strong civic center in the Metropolitan area. Granted we must grow, but let's not make it a cancerous growth which will sap the strength of the city itself. The nominal urban renewal plan is a wonderful thing, and maybe with the construction of apartments in the cleared area the civic life will be revitalized.

The troublesome thing is the perpetration of the idea that the residential areas which will be annexed are going to provide all kinds of capital. It seems that what is wanted is to take advantage of all the businesses which are going out of town. That's a lot of tax money. Also a statement like Mr. Louie E. Woodbury, Jr.'s, that "Our Committee agrees with the City Council that an extension of our City Limits is essential to the economic development of Wilmington." We further believe the extension of our City Limits will provide governmental services essential for sound development and for the protection of health, safety, and welfare of the areas adjoining our present city limits makes one wonder if anyone intends to do anything at all about say the sorry condition of the downtown area. In the midst of all this economic development will we someday see another Millis Alley down Twenty-fifth Street?

Seahawks Begin Baseball

By DICK CARAVATI

Spring is one day old and with the advent of the warm, sunny weather comes the beginning of baseball season. Our well-known Hawk baseball team is about to launch its 1963 campaign with many questions to be answered.

The Wilmington College team will open the season at home week in back-to-back series with touring Williams College of Williamstown, Mass., and Purdue University.

Coach Bill Brooks' 1963 lineup will show the effects that graduation has on all athletic teams. Only, naturally, these effects occur twice as often at Wilmington College than at a senior college since players eligibility is only two years instead of the normal four. Brooks' squad has a group of new faces to fill in all but two spots on this year's diamond team.

Two Returnees

Although there are only two returnees from last year's Virginia-Carolina Conference champions, they could be no stronger than the number one and number three hitters — shortstop Stirling Coward and centerfielder Steve Coley.

Stirling or Flea as his teammates call him) had nothing short of a spectacular season last year leading the club in hitting at a sparkling .391 pace. Coward tied a National Junior College tournament record when he banged out five straight hits in one game at the Grand Junction, Colo., event to give him a record breaking total of twelve hits in the six game series.

In addition, Flea was named as an honorable mention All-American by the National Junior College Athletic Association for 1962. He has his work cut out for him in taking over the shortstop position vacated by All-American Dave Miller.

Coley added a strong punch to the Seahawk infield last year with his sharp glove play and excellent .359 batting average. Steve is versatile and will help the Hawks by playing both outfield and infield this year. At the present Coley is playing centerfield and seems to be doing a commendable job. Brooks will be able to count on Coley's big bat as well as Coward's to give the team some definite RBI strength.

Graduation

Graduation took its toll at all positions on the Wilco club. In the infield, the loss of powerful first-baseman Larry Edens, fleet-footed shortstop Dave Miller, and third sacker Bob Stephenson leave wide gaps to be filled by first year men.

Whitey Hunsucker will hold down the hot corner at third base with a steady glove and a strong bat. Hunsucker has had a good spring and, with the help of shortstop Flea Coward, should give the Hawks a steady infield on the left side.

Wilmingtonian Bob Shipp is expected to replace Edens at first base. Shipp, who co-captained the NHHS nine, is being counted on to provide the added strength which the club will need this year. South Carolinian Jackie Smith is another good first baseman and will add needed depth at first base.

Brooks, in moving Coward from second base to shortstop, left the keystone position open for grabs. From what can be gathered, Bill Harris is expected to switch uniforms after the basketball season and fill that position, but he won't do so without some stiff competition from Butch Watts and Jerry Hooks.

Both of these boys are scrappy and have quick hands. Hitting might tell the tale at this position.

Prospects

In talking with Coward, a veteran in the infield, about the changes in the players, he said, "Edens was strong and had a lot of power. The loss of Miller and Stephenson will definitely hurt our infield, but with a little more seasoning we should have as good a foursome if not a better one than last year."

Losses in the outfield include the much honored Ronnie Smith, and .306 hitter Lawrence Keith. Smith was an All-Tournament choice last year, being voted the most valuable player of the tournament. He set a new tournament record with 13 runs-batted-in and was named the "Player Most Likely to Succeed in Professional Baseball." Keith's four hits in the first game of the tourney got Coach Bill Brooks' team off to a roaring start. He was a good "leg" man and covered the outfield well.

Another two-sport player, Tom Cole, from Danville, Va., and Larry Hunsicker are expected to team with Steve Coley to cover the outfield for the "green and gold." Brooks' switched Coley from second base to centerfield at the beginning of practice and Coley seems to have adapted himself to it very well. Hunsicker doubled to drive in the first Wilco run in the first of the three "exhibition games" at Camp Lejeune last week. That was the only extra base hit in the game.

The outfield will be inexperienced and untried. All three boys need to work together and get their timing at the plate. Coley proved himself last year as a hitter and is expected to do as well this season.

Pitching

The mound staff has the unenviable job of replacing a group which compile a 2.55 earned run average in 19 games last year. The loss of such stalwart hurlers as big Bill Haywood and lefty Lou Howard has to hurt this year's team. Haywood's 5 wins against only 2 losses and his 1.86 ERA helped the Seahawks most of all. Lou Howard, who was named to the NJCAA's second-team All America squad, had a 4-3 record for the season and won 2 of the 6 games at the national tournament.

The 1963 squad has an abundance of hurlers both right and left handed. Leading the group are Percy Wood, Sam Page, Ed Lemon, and Jim Braxton. Wray Ware, Parris Croom, and Harold Criddle are also contenders. Wood, from Charlottesville, Va., and a transfer from the University of Virginia, is a stocky right-hander with a lot on the ball. Page, in his first outing, gave up only one hit in five innings to the Marines at Jacksonville and fanned three.

Lemon also saw action against the Leathernecks last week and looked impressive for his first assignment of the season. Lanky Jim Braxton fired three shut-out innings at Jacksonville in his debut as a Seahawk and had complete command of the game while on the mound. Criddle's shaky start does not illustrate his ability by any means. He, Ware, and Croom have time to prove themselves and are being counted on to add depth to a young pitching staff.

South Carolinian Bill Lawson, Virginian Tom Hall, and Glen Mills will handle the mitt duties behind the plate. Lawson collected two singles in the opening exhibition game win and probably has the edge on starting next week. Hall and Mills both handle themselves well behind the plate and are still contenders for the starting berth as catcher.

Overall

In retrospect, the generally inexperienced team is unproven and will need the first week or two to settle itself into a unit. Outdoor practice has been limited and the extended basketball season has hurt. Inevitably, the late-comers (basketball players) will have to be shuffled, and the pitcher's rotation will have to be set. Nowhere can nine men be put on a diamond together for the first time and be expected to perform even near flawlessly. The shortstop and second baseman, pitcher and catcher, or leftfielder and centerfielder cannot be expected to work together perfectly the first, second, or even the third time they work together.

The success of the '63 Hawk baseball team will hinge on some important "ifs." Perhaps one of the most important questions is how quick the basketballers such as Shipp, Harris, Cole, and Ware can make the transition from tennis shoes to spikes. If the mound staff can take advantage of its depth and hold its ERA down, the possibilities could be bright, to say the least. Look at what a 2.55 ERA did for last year's Wilco team.

Although Wilmington hurlers gave up 16 big runs in the three game "exhibition" series with Camp Lejeune last week, that was their first outing. It is also interesting to note, however, that the Hawks did get half of those runs back and did exhibit some definite defensive ability.

Prediction

We predict that the team will stand out in defense this season and will commit less miscues. The team hitting is not bad at this stage, but still has a long way to go. The pitching staff holds the key to success. They have all the potential that is necessary and with a few breaks they could very well lead the way to a successful year. The team will shape up eventually. Have you ever seen one of Coach Bill Brooks' baseball teams that did not? Let's just hope that the weather or any adverse circumstances do not stand in their way.

Seahawks Win In NJCAA Play

HUTCHINSON, KANSAS —

Wilmington College's Seahawks eked out an 83-79 victory in the third overtime period over a stubborn Broome Tech team in a first round game of the NJCAA Basketball Tournament here Tuesday afternoon.

In the second half Broome Tech cut the Hawk lead to two points with less than a minute remaining on the clock.

Binghamton's guard John Ramza sank a last ditch push shot from the top of the circle to tie the score at 54-54 as the buzzer sounded. The overtime periods ended in 63-63 and 71-71 deadlocks respectively.

In the final stanza Broome Tech jumped to a 73-71 lead, but the Seahawks quickly tied the score. Harry Buzzell and Bill Harris each picked off a Tech pass and connected for scoring plays.

Bogash, whose 34 points captured game honors, racked up two baskets in the final period to put the game on ice.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

WE KNEW THEY COULD DO IT!

In the last edition of The Seahawk we expressed our faith in the Wilmington College basketball team. We listed the reasons for our belief that the Seahawks were tournament material and were capable of competing successfully against the opposition which they would have to meet.

At that time it was doubtful whether the Seahawks would attempt to win a berth in the NJCAA tournament. Those of us who displayed faith in the team were dismayed but the opposition seemed too great. However, someone finally saw the light and the Seahawks did go on to compete for the region crown which they won decisively over the highly-rated Brevard team.

As a result of winning the Region 10 championship school spirit has once again soared to new heights. Rallying behind such organizations as the cheerleaders and The Seahawk the students at Wilmington College have shown the basketball team that they are behind them to a man.

It is our contention that the students as well as the basketball team deserve a sincere "well done" for the interest and support which they have so enthusiastically given. Whether or not the Seahawks win in Kansas the students of Wilmington College can feel justly proud of them for their never-say-die spirit against overwhelming odds.

Win or lose we're behind our basketball team all the way.

INTRAMURAL ATHLETICS

The intramural athletic program at Wilmington College is looking up. Earlier successes this year have inspired representatives from several clubs to seek such a program. Their search has not been in vain for the faculty and administration have enthusiastically supported the students in their efforts. In fact they have voluntarily pitched in and given much needed irection to the program.

As a result of the encouraging enthusiasm with which this program has met a softball league composed of teams representing various campus organizations and as an added attraction—a faculty team.

Faculty members are not limiting themselves to softball alone as evidenced by the golf match to be held next Friday afternoon.

Active as they are in both supporting and participating roles, the faculty and administration are to be congratulated for their interest and help in establishing this welcomed activity on campus.

Wilmington College Linksman To Start Competition Against Faculty Friday

Wilmington College's golf team will play its first match of the season against a team composed of faculty members Friday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. at the Municipal Golf Course.

The Hawk golfers will carry into Friday's match high hopes for what promises to be the most successful squad in the school's history. Composed of many of the most respected young amateur golfers in the Southeastern North Carolina area, the Wilmington College linksmen figure to present themselves as formidable opponents this season.

Frank Allen, the team's advisor, claims that this year's vastly improved schedule has prompted the Seahawk golfers to make every effort to get out and practice for the upcoming matches.

Friday's competition will be a preliminary event as the Seahawk golfers test their strength against the more capable golfers of the faculty. Nevertheless, the match cannot be considered a push over. The faculty members have spent many weeks in improving their games and reportedly are knocking strokes off their handicaps. With the aid of the handicap the faculty members can be considered tough opponents.

Ricky Berman heads up the Seahawk golf team as its captain. Other members of the team are: Roger Fowler, Andy Gemmell, Will Gemmell, Fred Hallman, Jack Harrell, Scott McKinnon and William Randolph.

Members of the faculty team will be: Frank Allen, Walter Biggs, Tommie Lupton, Rolla Nelson, and Fred Toney.

Seahawk golfers prepare for faculty match Friday.

Award Winning Artist, Walter Thrift Exhibits Paintings In Hoggard Hall; Exhibition Is Fifth Showing Of His Works

by Randy Johnson

The current showing of the works of Walter Thrift of Virginia Beach and Washington, D. C., gets my vote for the most exciting showing of paintings that has been in Wilmington in recent years. Thanks to the efforts of Claude Howell and his art department the show is hung very nicely. His efforts in bringing works of art to the college establish his department as one of the most important in the school.

One out of every two people who look at one of the works by Walter Thrift immediately make some remarks like "What in the world is it?" or "I could just get some paint and some canvas, and some old rags and do that in thirty minutes." Mr. Thrift would assure his viewers that it is not nearly so easy as all that and that neither does the work have to look like anything to be a work of art.

We don't want a flower to look like a wheelbarrow; we want it to look like a flower. Thus, we want, or should want, a painting to look like what it is . . . a painting. This show points out the very important fact that Walter Thrift's paintings exist as works of art, that they do not over-reach the dimensions of the plastic arts by going into the realm of photography.

Of the thirty paintings exhibited there are several which point up certain characteristics of the work which should not go unmentioned. My favorite, the oil and collage Piers, probably used the simplest design of all with the dominant horizontal and the curve in the left corner providing a perfect balance. Also the color contrasts and subtleties are wonderfully alive. The task of containing such strong elements within the frame of the picture is by no means an easy one, I would think.

Plateau Canyon No. 4 is a good example of visual and tactile texture. The oil and collage indicate the extent of Thrift's skill with the assemblage. It is our objective but abstract. By use of organic color, forms, and texture some resemblance to visual reality is achieved. Honage to Florence has as its subject color; however, the formal elements may be as well integrated as they are in some of the other works. The watercolor seascapes, Blue Dock and Hampton Roads No. 4, executed earlier than the collages, reflect no doubt Thrift's residence in the Tidewater area of Virginia.

In all of the paintings Walter Thrift conveys by color areas, shapes and textures the mood and tone of a visual experience. The geometric elements are often quite jumbled so that they give the work a meaning in a plane other than the natural appearance of the phenomena.

Students Voice Opinions On Mental Atmosphere

A college is a place of learning. So be it. But every place of learning differs, and the differences entail more than size of enrollment and curriculum. From campus to campus the outstanding variant is mental atmosphere. It is a result of many factors, most of which are indigenous to a specific college.

But no matter what the causes are, it exists and brings with its existence certain psychological benefits and curtailments. Therein lies the basis for this interview. Where in the range of mental atmospheres does Wilmington College lie? What, in the student's opinion, are the psychological aids and restrictions at Wilmington College?

ELMORE SPELL:

The personal relationship between students and teachers creates a favorable atmosphere for learning. The student is not just a face in the crowd. He is an individual. However, the faculty's unwillingness to let students take part in any activities other than those which please the masses, retards school spirit.

MARY C. HODGINS:

It can be safely said that any institution is limited in as much as its student body is limited. So it is here. Wilmington College lacks the "collegiate" atmosphere of being a college. This can be attributed to many things: its youth, lack of outside support, its faculty. But the faults lie, I think, in the students themselves. As long as they continue to overlook the fact that their aim is to receive as many fragments as possible that one day might be pieced together as an education, Wilmington College will remain as unchallenging, uninteresting, and dormant as it now appears.

Granted, an attempt is being made to raise the aesthetic level on campus. But until this becomes a campus movement, we can just sit back and hope that one day Wilmington College will somehow emerge a first rate institution. But before this happens, there must emerge a student body worthy of the best.

WALTER WINTIN:

The atmosphere at Wilmington College is extremely friendly. The local citizens are loyal to Wilmington College, and the faculty is willing and able to help at any and all times. On the other hand, the administration's overbearing dominance on every aspect of student and faculty activities seems not at all conducive to study and teaching.

RITCHIE WATSON:

We have a fair amount of academic freedom, as far as I'm concerned. I have never felt overly restricted. I think the instructors are on the whole very good. There is, however, a prevailing sense of idleness around the campus. You feel inferior; you feel surrounded by academic rejects. Admission standards could be altered in order to give students more pride in where they are going to school.

BARBARA BRADLEY:

An aid is that the students themselves are made to study and dig out information for themselves and to look forward to the future. I can make my own grades without worrying about it. But a restriction is the fact that there is a feeling that the administration is running the college too closely, like a high school; in other words, it is taking responsibility away from the student.

OTIS SEWARD

Wilmington College is a good school scholastically, but it is too much like a high school. Things that are optional at other colleges are made mandatory or are forbidden here. On the whole the teachers are friendly and are anxious to help the student. They care about the student. They are more than willing to help the students who seek their help. This is not found in all colleges.

RONNIE STATION

The question is couched in language quite beyond my level of comprehension, and I decline to answer for fear of making as big a fool of myself as the person who advanced the question.

The Play That Would Not Die!

Once upon a time there was a play that wouldn't die. It went on and on and on. The hero of the play was a handsome, young prince of Parthia named Arsaces. He was in love with the beautiful, young Evanthe. But the mean, old Vardanes who had killed Arsaces' dear father, the king, had imprisoned the handsome young prince and was holding Evanthe for his own.

This made Arsaces very mad at Vardanes and he escaped. When dear Evanthe heard that Arsaces was killed in battle, she was so sorry that she drank poison. (Here was a defeatist's attitude if ever we've heard one.) When Arsaces (who really didn't die) came back to find his sweet maiden upset, he stabbed himself; and they, with their hands intertwined, went to the great big kingdom in the sky.

They died . . . but the play didn't. It seemed as though " . . . eternity was scarce enough" — to tell the mighty theme. The theme was told in Wilmington. The theme was told in Chapel Hill. The theme was told in Raleigh. It will be told in Whiteville. It has an invitation to Chicago. Two rising musicians will make a musical from it.

The story of the "star-crossed lovers" sob's, "Am I to die . . . to lie numbered with the dead?" "Tis in vain!"

South Exhibits Steel Sculpture In Hoggard Hall

By GENE MARLOWE

The abstract sculpture of Stanley South currently on exhibition in Hoggard Hall constitutes the first one man show of this artist whose works are also on display in the Winston-Salem Gallery of Fine Arts and the Mint Museum.

Mr. South constructs his "sketches in steel" from plastic steel on copper frameworks and materials collected from junkyards.

Perhaps the most striking of his works is "Plexus", large silver coils mounted on two bars which give the composition the human element of having legs. Calling "Plexus", meaning "coiling or winding around", one of his "most abstract and modern in concept" works, Mr. South said it is "mainly a composition of curves and straight lines, a contrast of color and texture."

"First Love", a study in curved and flowing lines, captures the magic of the touch or a tender moment," said Mr. South, pointing out that one of the persons is just a straight line and the body is implied.

Mr. South considers "The Thrust" as his most successful statue in that one can view it from any angle. "Move around it slowly and you'll see lines converge, straight lines forming a tangent, a letter, or a pleasing composition." "The Thrust" symbolizes how the human body can be made into a powerful spring.

"If you want to see realism in these sculptures you can," explained the artist; "if you don't know what it is, you can look at it just as a completeness, a statement of a complete form."

"The Promise," one of the most popular with girls, envi-

Dramatics Department Begins Amphitheatre

Theatre Alfresco, an amphitheatre constructed after the Greek form, is being built northeast and to the rear of Hoggard Hall by the Dramatics Arts Department under the direction of Doug W. Swink.

Dr. William Randall proposed the idea three years ago when the college was still housed in the Isaac Bear Building.

The site behind Hoggard Hall was chosen for three reasons: it will be located behind the future site of the proposed Fine Arts Building which will house the college theatre and Dramatics Arts Department, the ground has a natural slant which lends itself to the proposed amphitheatre, and the clearing of land as such will from the air help to form a balance to Brooks Field.

Two weeks ago Harry Payne, Chairman of the Building and Grounds Committee of the Board of Trustees, gave his approval to the clearing of underbrush and the job was immediately begun.

Calvin Doss, head of the Engineering Department, and Buck Bronson, burned off the dense undergrowth after a two-day rain so that none of the trees would be lost. Albert Jackson cut down the remaining growth with the tractor.

In preparing the site, the "rustic effect" of the "natural beauty of the location" will be preserved. Landscaping with flowering bushes native to this region will be used to decorate the theatre and the surrounding grounds.

The theatre will seat not more than 600 hundred people and will be used by the Department of Dramatic Arts during the Spring and possibly Autumn Quarters. Theatre Alfresco will also be used by the Wilmington College Straw-Hat Theatre, and perhaps for commencement exercises.

In addition to flowering bushes, old railroad ties are also needed for the construction of the theatre.

The only requirement placed upon the Dramatic Arts Department in the building of Theatre Alfresco is that it not be an added expense to the college.

The Circle K and Collegiate Civitan clubs have taken on the project of helping the Dramatic Arts Department clear the area of the future amphitheatre.

After the theatre's completion, Mr. Swink says he hopes to present a pageant centering around Rose O'Neil Greenhowe and Fort Fisher as the first production.

WC Students In Midst Of Festival Events

Wilmington College will be represented in a number of ways at various events during the Azalea Festival.

The festival began for the college last night with the dance and party in the Pub for the Queen's Court. Approximately 150 college students were on hand to host the Queen and her court. Two musical groups, the Jetty Jumpers and the Huntsmen of Wake Forest, performed.

Ronnie Staton was general chairman of the event, and Barbara Black and Faye Barnes were in charge of the decorations.

Several floats in tomorrow's parade will carry college students.

The Wilmington College Float will bear Joy Lee Lewis, Wayne Holley, Hugh Paschal, and Bob Bowden. (See detailed feature elsewhere in this issue).

Sondra Wilson will ride the Carolina Beach Float as "Miss Rebel" of 1963.

The Sealtest float will carry four girls from our May Court: Memory Farrar, Sarah Avery, Martha Jay Staton, and Nancy Bradshaw.

Margie Smith, Mary Henderson, Jack Loftus, and Nat Bost will ride on the float of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Freshmen student nurses, Melva Harris and Jean Campbell, who have classes at the college several days a week, will be on the James Walker School of Nursing float.

May Queen Judy Matthews will ride on the Queen's Float. Judy, as a member of the Queen's Court, will be in The Queen's entourage as they visit and take part in the various events of the festival.

Cottage Lane will have the paintings and drawings of many members of the college in their exhibit when they open this morning. Having entered their works in the show are Claude Howell, Peggy Jo Worrell, Faye Barnes, Emily Codington, Nancy McIntyre, Bebe Bloome, Steve Mintz, Robert Autry, Ray Oxendine, Louise Lanier, Catherine Knox, Geraldine McGinnis, Betty Bickford, Kenneth Stanley, Jane Funston, and others.

Students Welcome Visiting Legislators

Ten bus loads of North Carolina State Legislators visited the campus yesterday after holding a regular legislative meeting on the Battleship North Carolina and touring a few places of interest.

The law makers, invited to Wilmington by the City Council, were escorted formally around the campus by 25 coeds.

At the Seahawk Honor Assembly, Ronnie Staton appealed to the students to turn out en masse and show the legislators that the students of the college want a four-year institution.

Last Tuesday the Circle K and Collegiate Civitan clubs combined their efforts to police the campus grounds and clean it of all litter.

Campus Briefs

Sondra Wilson, Wilmington College sophomore, was recently named winner of two separate beauty contests.

Named Miss Rebel in the Carolina Beach Miss Rebel Pageant, Sondra received a $150 scholarship. In addition to the scholarship, she will ride on the Carolina Beach float in the parade tomorrow and will represent the Carolina Beach Chamber of Commerce throughout the year.

The Carolina Beach beauty contest was styled after the Miss America Pageant and consisted of four divisions: questions, talent, bathing suit, and evening gown.

Officers of the 82nd Airborne Panther Division from Fayetteville scouted different entries throughout North Carolina and have chosen Sondra to represent them as Miss Panther Division in the Miss 82nd Airborne contest. Already she has received $100 for this award and will have a chance to win $1,000 in cash and scholarships in the Miss 82nd Airborne contest.

Graduating Juniors wishing to order invitations though the college should place their order for cards at Kingoff's Jewelers before April 10.

Archaeologist John Campbell will be on campus April 24 and

25 to lecture and talk informally with students. His visit will constitute the last of the Fine Art Series.

Seventy items by 32 artists, most of them from North Carolina, will go on exhibit in Hoggard Hall next Sunday.

The works, on loan from the Owen Lewis Galleries of Winston-Salem, include all mediums, ranging from sculptures, graphics, and collages to watercolors and oils.

Tryouts for three plays collectively, titled "Theatre: Avant-garde" will be held for all interested persons Thursday and Friday nights of next week at 7:00 in the SRO Theatre.

Approximately a dozen parts will be open in the plays "The Leader" by Eugene Ionesco, Samuel Becket's "Krapp's Last Tape," and "The Sandbox," by Edward Albee.

Those wishing to try out for the plays who can not attend the scheduled tryouts should contact Doug W. Swink for an appointment.

A special call meeting of the Student Council will be held Wednesday night, April 10, to ratify the new constitution.

SRO Presents 'The Uprooted'

The Wilmington College Theatre will present the one-act play, "The Uprooted", at the annual meeting of the Traveler's Aid of Wilmington at 8:00 on Tuesday, April 9. The performance of the play and the meeting will take place in the SRO Theatre.

"The Uprooted" was written by Basil Beyea for the National Traveler's Aid Association and relates the service rendered to a family and the problems involved. Louise Ambrosiano, Barbara Bradley, and Wayne Robinson form the prologue which serves as an introduction to the actual theme of the play, Martha Parker plays the role of Mrs. Appleton, the caseworker, who is assigned to the Turner family. Sam Garner and Mary Hodgins portray Ben and Bess Turner with Joy Lee Lewis and Carl Sneed as their children, Dot and Neal.

The production is planned along stylistic lines and affords the local theatrical group a change of pace in production. There will be no admission charge and the doors are open to anyone wishing to attend the performance.

"The Uprooted" is directed by Doug W. Swink, professor of dramatic arts at Wilmington College. Serving as his lighting technician will be Sandy Carr.

Engineers Elect Officers, Learn Telstar Functions

Allen Sullivan was elected as the new president of the Engineers Club last month to fill the position vacated by Charles Greer. Moving into Allen's old position of vice-president is Norman Farmer. The other two officers of the club are Richard Douthwaite, secretary, and Harold Sullivan, treasurer.

At the last meeting of the group, a representative from Bell Telephone Company spoke on telstar, its functions and how it works. He illustrated his talk with a model about 20 inches in diameter of the satellite.

At previous meetings the club has visited the Babcock and Wilcox Plant, and been addressed by representatives from both the Saline Water Conversion Plant and Carolina Power and Light.

The club, which holds dinner meetings once a month, is planning its annual banquet at which they will elect new officers and possibly have a spokesman from Ideal Cement as a guest.

Award Winning Artist, Walter Thrift Exhibits Paintings In Hoggard Hall; Exhibition Is Fifth Showing Of His Works

by Randy Johnson

The current showing of the works of Walter Thrift of Virginia Beach and Washington, D. C., gets my vote for the most exciting showing of paintings that has been in Wilmington in recent years. Thanks to the efforts of Claude Howell and his art department the show is hung very nicely. His efforts in bringing works of art to the college establish his department as one of the most important in the school.

One out of every two people who look at one of the works by Walter Thrift immediately make some remarks like "What in the world is it?" or "I could just get some paint and some canvas, and some old rags and do that in thirty minutes." Mr. Thrift would assure his viewers that it is not nearly so easy as all that and that neither does the work have to look like anything to be a work of art.

We don't want a flower to look like a wheelbarrow; we want it to look like a flower. Thus, we want, or should want, a painting to look like what it is . . . a painting. This show points out the very important fact that Walter Thrift's paintings exist as works of art, that they do not over-reach the dimensions of the plastic arts by going into the realm of photography.

Of the thirty paintings exhibited there are several which point up certain characteristics of the work which should not go unmentioned. My favorite, the oil and collage Piers, probably used the simplest design of all with the dominant horizontal and the curve in the left corner providing a perfect balance. Also the color contrasts and subtleties are wonderfully alive. The task of containing such strong elements within the frame of the picture is by no means an easy one, I would think.

Plateau Canyon No. 4 is a good example of visual and tactile texture. The oil and collage indicate the extent of Thrift's skill with the assemblage. It is our objective but abstract. By use of organic color, forms, and texture some resemblance to visual reality is achieved. Homage to Florence has as its subject color; however, the formal elements may not be as well integrated as they are in some of the other works. The watercolor seascapes, Blue Dock and Hampton Roads No. 4, executed earlier than the collages, reflect no doubt Thrift's residence in the Tidewater area of Virginia.

In all of the paintings Walter Thrift conveys by color areas, shapes and textures the mood and tone of a visual experience. The geometric elements are often quite jumbled so that they give the work a meaning in a plane other than the natural appearance of the phenomena.

Students Voice Opinions On Mental Atmosphere

A college is a place of learning. So be it. But every place of learning differs, and the differences entail more than size of enrollment and curriculum. From campus to campus the outstanding variant is mental atmosphere. It is a result of many factors, most of which are indigenous to a specific college.

But no matter what the causes are, it exists and brings with its existence certain psychological benefits and curtailments. Therein lies the basis for this interview. Where in the range of mental atmospheres does Wilmington College lie? What, in the student's opinion, are the psychological aids and restrictions at Wilmington College?

ELMORE SPELL:

The personal relationship between students and teachers creates a favorable atmosphere for learning. The student is not just a face in the crowd. He is an individual. However, the faculty's unwillingness to let students take part in any activities other than those which please the masses, retards school spirit.

MARY C. HODGINS:

It can be safely said that any institution is limited in as much as its student body is limited. So it is here. Wilmington College lacks the "collegiate" atmosphere of being a college. This can be attributed to many things: its youth, lack of outside support, its faculty. But the faults lie, I think, in the students themselves. As long as they continue to overlook the fact that their aim is to receive as many fragments as possible that one day might be pieced together as an education, Wilmington College will remain as unchallenging, uninteresting, and dormant as it now appears.

Granted, an attempt is being made to raise the aesthetic level on campus. But until this becomes a campus movement, we can just sit back and hope that one day Wilmington College will somehow emerge a first rate institution. But before this happens, there must emerge a student body worthy of the best.

WALTER WINTIN:

The atmosphere at Wilmington College is extremely friendly. The local citizens are loyal to Wilmington College, and the faculty is willing and able to help at any and all times. On the other hand, the administration's overbearing dominance on every aspect of student and faculty activities seems not at all conducive to study and teaching.

RITCHIE WATSON:

We have a fair amount of academic freedom, as far as I'm concerned. I have never felt overly restricted. I think the instructors are on the whole very good. There is, however, a preailing sense of idiocy around the campus. You feel inferior; you feel surrounded by academic rejects. Admission standards could be altered in order to give students more pride in where they are going to school.

BARBARA BRADLEY:

An aid is that the students themselves are made to study and dig out information for themselves and to look forward to the future. I can make my own grades without worrying about it. But a restriction is the fact that there is a feeling that the administration is running the college too closely, like a high school; in other words, it is taking responsibility away from the student.

OTIS SEWARD

Wilmington College is a good school scholastically, but it is too much like a high school. Things that are optional at other colleges are made mandatory or are forbidden here. On the whole the teachers are friendly and are anxious to help the student. They care about the student. They are more than willing to help the students who seek their help. This is not found in all colleges.

The question is couched in language quite beyond my level of comprehension, and I decline to answer for fear of making as big a fool of myself as the person who advanced the question.

The Play That Would Not Die!

Once upon a time there was a play that wouldn't die. It went on and on and on. The hero of the play was a handsome, young prince of Parthia named Arsaces. He was in love with the beautiful, young Evanthe. But the mean, old Vardanes who had killed Arsaces' dear father, the king, had imprisoned the handsome young prince and was holding Evanthe for his own.

This made Arsaces very mad at Vardanes and he escaped. When dear Evanthe heard that Arsaces was killed in battle, she was so sorry that she drank poison. (Hers was a defeatist's attitude if ever we've heard one.) When Arsaces (who really didn't die) came back to find his sweet maiden upset, he stabbed himself; and they, with their hands intertwined, went to the great big kingdom in the sky.

They died — but the play didn't. It seemed as though " . . . eternity was scarce enough" — to tell the mighty theme. The theme was told in Wilmington. The theme was told in Chapel Hill. The theme was told in Whiteville. It will be told in Chicago. Two rising musicians will make a musical from it.

The story of the "star-crossed lovers" sobs, "Am I to die . . . to lie numbered with the dead?" "Tis in vain!"

South Exhibits Steel Sculpture In Hoggard Hall

By GENE MARLOWE

The abstract sculpture of Stanley South currently on exhibition in Hoggard Hall constitutes the first one man show of this artist whose works are also on display in the Winston-Salem Gallery of Fine Arts and the Mint Museum.

Mr. South constructs his "sketches in steel" from plastic steel on copper frameworks and materials collected from junkyards.

Perhaps the most striking of his works is "Plexus", large silver coils mounted on two bars which give the composition the human element of having legs. Calling "Plexus", meaning "coiling or winding around", one of his "most abstract and modern in concept" works, Mr. South said it is "mainly a composition of curves and straight lines, a contrast of color and texture."

"First Love," a study in curved and flowing lines, captures the magic of the touch or a tender moment," said Mr. South, pointing out that one of the persons is just a straight line and the body is implied.

Mr. South considers "The Thrust" as his most successful statue in that one can view it from any angle. "Move around it slowly and you'll see lines converge, straight lines forming a tangent, a letter, or a pleasing composition." "The Thrust" symbolizes how the human body can be made into a powerful spring.

"If you want to see realism in these sculptures you can," explained the artist; "if you don't know what it is, you can look at it just as a completeness, a statement of a complete form."

Dramatics Department Begins Amphitheatre

Theatre Alfresco, an amphitheatre constructed after the Greek form, is being built northeast and to the rear of Hoggard Hall by the Dramatics Arts Department under the direction of Doug W. Swink.

Dr. William Randall proposed the idea three years ago when the College was still housed in the Isaac Bear Building.

The site behind Hoggard Hall was chosen for three reasons: it will be located behind the future site of the proposed Fine Arts Building which will house the college theatre and Dramatics Arts Department, the ground has a natural slant which lends itself to the proposed amphitheatre, and the clearing of land as such will from the air help to form a balance to Brooks Field.

Two weeks ago Harry Payne, Chairman of the Building and Grounds Committee of the Board of Trustees, gave his approval to the clearing of underbrush and the job was immediately begun.

Calvin Doss, head of the Engineering Department, and Buck Bronson burned off the dense undergrowth after a two-day rain so that none of the trees would be lost. Albert Jackson cut down the remaining growth with the tractor.

In preparing the site, the "rustic effect" of the "natural beauty of the location" will be preserved. Landscaping with flowering bushes native to this region will be used to decorate the theatre and the surrounding grounds.

The theatre will seat not more than 600 hundred people and will be used by the Department of Dramatic Arts during the Spring and possibly Autumn Quarters. Theatre Alfresco will also be used by the Wilmington College Straw-Hat Theatre, and perhaps for commencement exercises.

In addition to flowering bushes, old railroad ties are also needed for the construction of the theatre.

The only requirement placed upon the Dramatic Arts Department in the building of Theatre Alfresco is that it not be an added expense to the college.

The Circle K and Collegiate Civitan clubs have taken on the project of helping the Dramatic Arts Department clear the area of the future amphitheatre.

After the theatre's completion, Mr. Swink says he hopes to present a pageant centering around Rose O'Neil Greenhowe and Fort Fisher as the first production.

WC Students In Midst Of Festival Events

Wilmington College will be represented in a number of ways at various events during the Azalea Festival.

The festival began for the college last night with the dance and party in the Pub for the Queen's Court. Approximately 150 college students were on hand to host the Queen and her court. Two musical groups, the Jetty Jumpers and the Huntsmen of Wake Forest, performed.

Ronnie Staton was general chairman of the event, and Barbara Black and Faye Barnes were in charge of the decorations.

Several floats in tomorrow's parade will carry college students.

Sondra Wilson will ride the Carolina Beach Float as "Miss Rebel" of 1963.

The Sealest float will carry four girls from our May Court: Memory Farrar, Sarah Avery, Martha Jay Staton, and Nancy Bradshaw.

Margie Smith, Mary Henderson, Jack Loftus, and Nat Bost will ride on the float of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Freshmen student nurses, Melva Harris and Jean Campbell, who have classes at the college several days a week, will be on the James Walker School of Nursing float.

May Queen Judy Matthews will ride on the Queen's Float. Judy, as a member of the Queen's Court, will be in the Queen's entourage as they visit and take part in the various events of the festival.

Cottage Lane will have the paintings and drawings of many members of the college in their exhibit when they open this morning. Having entered their works in the show are Claude Howell, Peggy Jo Worrell, Faye Barnes, Emily Codington, Nancy McIntyre, Bebe Bloomer, Steve Mintz, Robert Autry, Ray Oxendine, Louise Lanier, Catherine Knox, Geraldine McGinnis, Betty Bickford, Kenneth Stanley, Jane Funston, and others.

Students Welcome Visiting Legislators

Ten bus loads of North Carolina State Legislators visited the campus yesterday after holding a regular legislative meeting on the Battleship North Carolina and touring a few places of interest.

The law makers, invited to Wilmington by the City Council, were escorted formally around the campus by 25 coeds.

At the Seahawk Honor Assembly, Ronnie Staton appealed to the students to turn out en masse and show the legislators that the students of the college want a four-year institution.

Last Tuesday the Circle K and Collegiate Civitan clubs combined their efforts to police the campus grounds and clean it of all litter.

Campus Briefs

Sondra Wilson, Wilmington College sophomore, was recently named winner of two separate beauty contests.

Named Miss Rebel in the Carolina Beach Miss Rebel Pageant, Sondra received a $150 scholarship. In addition to the scholarship, she will ride on the Carolina Beach float in the parade tomorrow and will represent the Carolina Beach Chamber of Commerce throughout the year.

The Carolina Beach beauty contest was styled after the Miss America Pageant and consisted of four divisions: questions, talent, bathing suit, and evening gown.

Officers of the 82nd Airborne Panther Division from Fayetteville scouted different entries throughout North Carolina and have chosen Sondra to represent them as Miss Panther Division in the Miss 82nd Airborne contest. Already she has received $100 for this award and will have a chance to win $1,000 in cash and scholarships in the Miss 82nd Airborne contest.

Graduating Juniors wishing to order invitations though the college should place their order for cards at Kingoff's Jewelers before April 10.

Archaeologist John Campbell will be on campus April 24 and

25 to lecture and talk informally with students. His visit will constitute the last of the Fine Art Series.

Seventy items by 32 artists, most of them from North Carolina, will go on exhibit in Hoggard Hall next Sunday.

The works, on loan from the Owen Lewis Galleries of Winston-Salem, include all mediums, ranging from sculptures, graphics, and collages to watercolors and oils.

Tryouts for three plays collectively titled "Theatre: Avant-garde" will be held for all interested persons Thursday and Friday nights of next week at 7:00 in the SRO Theatre.

Approximately a dozen parts will be open in the plays "The Leader" by Eugene Ionesco, Samuel Beckett's "Krapp's Last Tape," and "The Sandbox," by Edward Albee.

Those wishing to try out for the plays who can not attend the scheduled tryouts should contact Doug W. Swink for an appointment.

A special call meeting of the Student Council will be held Wednesday night, April 10, to ratify the new constitution.

SRO Presents 'The Uprooted'

The Wilmington College Theatre will present the one-act play, "The Uprooted", at the annual meeting of the Traveler's Aid of Wilmington at 8:00 on Tuesday, April 9. The performance of the play and the meeting will take place in the SRO Theatre.

"The Uprooted" was written by Basil Beyea for the National Traveler's Aid Association and relates the service rendered to a family and the problems involved. Louise Ambrosiano, Barbara Bradley, and Wayne Robinson form the prologue which serves as an introduction to the actual theme of the play. Martha Parker plays the role of Mrs. Appleton, the caseworker, who is assigned to the Turner family. Sam Garner and Mary Hodgins portray Ben and Bess Turner with Joy Lee Lewis and Carl Sneed as their children, Dot and Neal.

The production is planned along stylistic lines and affords the local theatrical group a change of pace in production. There will be no admission charge and the doors are open to anyone wishing to attend the performance.

"The Uprooted" is directed by Doug W. Swink, professor of dramatic arts at Wilmington College. Serving as his lighting technician will be Sandy Carr.

Baseball Story Spotlights Flea, Whitey, Sam, Butch

(Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles on the feature players of the Seahawk baseball team.)

With baseball activity already well underway at Wilmington College, as evidenced by the exhibition games staged at Brooks' Field during the past few weeks, the Seahawk features four of the Seahawks' starting line-up: Sam Page, Sterling "Flea" Coward, George "Whitey" Hunsucker, and Butch Watts.

As a native of Wilmington as well as a returnee from last years in the national tournament with a .391 average and earned All-Tournament honors and honorable mention on the Junior College All-America team. His 12 hits in five games is a record for NJCAA tournament play.

Whitey Hunsucker, a 5-10, 180 pound freshman, hails from Asheboro, N. C., where he played high school baseball for three years. His All-Conference performance led the Asheboro High School team to the conference championship for two consecutive years.

The Seahawks are looking forward to Sam's strong pitching in their quest for another trip to the national tournament in Grand Junction, Colorado, this year.

Butch Watts is the Seahawks' right fielder. Also a native of Wilmington, Butch played for NHHS and Post 10 before joining the Seahawks this year.

Being a year younger than Flea, Butch has pretty much followed in his footsteps playing on many of the same teams toyear's Seahawk baseball squad, Flea is no stranger to Wilmington College fans who thrilled to his feats last year as he helped the Seahawks attain national prominence.

Beginning his baseball career as a Little Leaguer, Flea got his nickname because he was the smallest boy on the squad. "The name just seemed to stick," he quipped. He played for Sunset Junior High School before moving up to NHHS where he competed for the Wildcats. His .359 batting average led the Wildcats and earned him the Most Valuable Player and Eastern All-Conference awards.

Flea continued his avid interest in baseball by playing for American Legion Post 10 and semi-pro baseball. His .310 average sparked Post 10 to the State Championship.

But last year he outdid himself as he led the Seahawk slugger. Whitey also played legion baseball and sparked his squad to the conference championship in that league, too. His nine home runs led his semi-pro team last summer. Whitey is currently holding down the "hot corner" for the Seahawks.

Sam Page is a 6-0, 196 pound sophomore from Woodruff, S. C., where he played high school baseball for four years; and his brilliant pitching helped capture two state championships and a near miss in a third try. His 16-2 overall record in high school earned him the Most Valuable Player award.

Like Flea and Whitey, Sam pursued his baseball career under the auspices of the American Legion where he posted an 8-0 record. After graduation from Woodruff High School, he entered Clemson College and hung up a 4-1 record before transferring to Wilmington College last year.

gether. His .366 batting average sparked Post 10 to the State Championship in 1960 and 1962 and earned him All-State and Most Valuable Player honors last summer.

All four feature players can boast ample experience and ability in their chosen sport and have expressed their confidence in their team's doing an excellent job this season. They have all won honors for their baseball prowess and are anxious to display their talents for the Seahawk cause.

SUPPORT THE SEAHAWK BASEBALL TEAM

Seahawks To Take On Colby

Wilmington College's baseball squad will take the field against Colby College of Waterville, Maine, this afternoon at 2:30 p.m. at Brooks Field.

The Seahawks, fresh from their two victories over Williams College last Friday and Saturday, now hold a 3-4 mark in their exhibition schedule thus far this season.

Off to a slow start due to the extended basketball season, the Seahawk nine fell victim to the Camp Lejeune Marines in two games after winning the opener of the three-game series in Jacksonville.

Later the Purdue Boilermakers move in to take two from Coach Brooks' charges during their annual spring training jaunt in Dixie. In the first game, played at Camp Lejeune, Purdue took advantage of Seahawk errors and below average pitching to capture their first win over Wilmington College.

The next day the Seahawks played host to the Boilermakers at Brooks' Field. In this game Wilmington College led during most of the play only to bow in the ninth inning to a late Purdue rally.

In the Williams College encounters the Hawks combined fine hitting and good pitching to capture the two victories. The second game last Saturday saw the Seahawks bang out 18 hits off three pitchers while the four Wilmington hurlers gave up only eight hits. Sam Page got credit for the win bringing his total thus far this spring to 2-1.

With the Hawk hurlers in good form, as evidenced by their victories over Williams, Coach Brooks' charges can look forward to a successful exhibition season this spring.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

With the exception of baseball spring athletics at Wilmington College are getting off to a slow start. The spring quarter is already well underway, and there is almost no activity from the golf and tennis teams.

Granted that these sports are in their organizational stages, but how long does it take to organize a team for these activities? The Seahawk golf team has been lolling in the doldrums of inactivity. Ricky Berman and his boys have been practicing regularly, but there has been no competition presented as of this writing. We sincerely hope that this year's squad will not go the way of last year's team which played only two matches in intercollegiate competition.

The Seahawks have too many good golfers to allow them to lie idle when there is so much competition available. We keep hearing promises from the golfers about an upcoming match with the faculty which as yet has failed to materialize due to the inability of the members of the faculty team to find a time which is mutually agreeable to all concerned. First one thing and then another has come up to postpone the match. The situation should and could be remedied by a couple of keenly competitive matches in the near future.

Tennis

The tennis team finds itself in much the same predicament at the present. Much talk and little action on the part of the netmen is resulting in sagging student interest. Of course it is much harder to find opponents for tennis than for golf, and in this respect we can sympathize with the squad members to a certain extent.

However, along the lines of organization the tennis team is lagging far behind the more active golfers. Perhaps the lack of promised competition is dulling their enthusiasm to get under way.

Bright Side

Nevertheless things are not as dull as they might appear to be. Ricky claims that his team is as ready as can be and that he has talked with Coach Brooks who has set up a match with Louisburg next Tuesday. The tennis team also will play the Hurricanes that afternoon.

Thus it seems that there is some life in the minor athletic program after all. With golf and tennis matches scheduled with Louisburg and Chowan and possibly some of the bigger schools in the Carolinas the picture begins to brighten somewhat. With this starter it is hoped that the schedule will not stop there.

After all, a glance at the baseball schedule will indicate how many games are scheduled. It might be asked why some of these schools couldn't field tennis and golf teams as well.

Tennis Captain

Ronnie Staton

Tennis Team To Debut Tuesday

The 1963 Hawk tennis team makes its debut here Tuesday afternoon on the Robert Strange courts against Louisburg.

This year's team, probably the strongest ever, has all new talent with the exception of one face. Bill Lanier, a sophomore returnee from last year's squad, will hold one of the top four spots along with Jack Loftus, Ronnie Staton, and W. C. Ward.

Loftus, a freshman from Alexandria, Virginia, is slated to be the top contender for the number one spot on the Wilmington court. He swings a tricky racket and is experienced from playing in Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D. C., tournaments.

Staton and Ward are both good players and are highly aggressive. Ronnie is a Wilmingtonian who gained his experience at N. C. State. W. C., whose father is in the service at Jacksonville, has played tennis all over including three years on the Princess Anne High School team at Virginia Beach, Virginia.

The Hawk team has been plagued by the lack of time for practicing and the lack of a coach. At a meeting last Monday, Walter Biggs, tennis team adviser, set up an arbitrary ladder of the players from which the starting six will be taken.

The Nation's Outstanding Player

Returning home with the esteemed title of Most Outstanding Junior College basketball player in the Nation, Gene Bogash received a petition signed by over 400 students at WC to retire his jersey. On the same program Coach Bill Brooks received a trophy.

Beginning Sculptor, Stanley South Exhibits His "Sculptures In Steel" In His First One Man Showing

sions the outline of a small child listening to the stomach of his pregnant mother. "The Lesson" is a child and his father. The child is reaching out for his father's spear, a male symbol, as is his father's broad chest and narrow waist.

The male symbol is used again in "Coalescence." The straight lines symbolize the male, while the curved lines portray the feminine form. "Coalescence", which means "when two forms move together into one", might also be termed "the dancers," or "the embrace."

Any of these works could have a multitude of meanings to any number of people; one which Mr. South says a lady immediately saw as "Diana and the hounds" is the "Invincible Spirit." This work, which the sculptor meant to be more symbolic of an idea rather than realistic, shows a struggle between opposing forces, perhaps one of them the untamable spirit of man.

"Casting" is somewhat different from most of the other statues in the exhibit in that it is meant to be viewed from only one angle. A realistic work, a man throwing out a net is easily discernable.

Mr. South is more widely known in this area as the archaeologist of Brunswick Town. Since there is no safe place at Brunswick Town, the college lets Mr. South use a small office in the Library Building for storing his records and drawings.

A graduate of Appalachian State and UNC, Mr. South has also worked as a teacher and a professional photographer. He still uses his photography to "try to capture some of the spirit of this area."

Mr. South, whose works will remain on display throughout most of this month, will have another one man show at Appalachian April 26 in connection with their Fine Arts Festival.

Wizard Of Oz Is The Theme Of WC Float

During the Azalea Festival Parade on Saturday, April 6, 1963, Wilmington College will make its presence felt by its entry, a beautifully designed, colorfully bright float.

The theme of the float is THE WIZARD OF OZ, and it is correlated to the theme of the entire parade, FAIRYLAND FANTASY.

The float, which was designed by Emily Codington, an art student here at Wilmington College, has a hill at the back on which is situated the World of Oz. A "yellow brick road" leads down the "mountain" to the front of the float where the Lion, Scarecrow, the Tin Man, and Dorothy are standing.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cline, who are official float makers, are constructing the float in Newton. Their talents in addition to Miss Codington's design are sure to produce a beautiful product.

The costumes for the float have been designed by Faye

Students Voice Opinion On WC's Improvements

Whether one is enamored with Wilmington College or highly critical of it, he must admit with reason that it has made considerable improvements this year. Various improvements originate from various sources and are oriented for various reasons, but the appropriate judges of them are the recipients, the students of Wilmington College. They should be the most objective because they have no secondary motive other than the betterment of themselves through the improvement of Wilmington College.

Thinking on a large scale, many students, Candy Speer, for instance, naturally felt that the planning and achieving of a four-year status is the supreme accomplishment.

Roger Fowler agreed that this is the biggest step forward for our College.

Gray Bass feels that the rise in school spirit has been important and that more people are exhibiting interest in the college.

Martha Jay Staton concurred and added that this new spirit has caused the attitude of the college to change, that people have taken a greater interest in activities.

According to Robert Warshawsky, this spirit is especially felt in the sophomore class; although there is not physical improvement on campus, the atmosphere has settled and added to this attitude.

Eston Brinkly believes that the college has progressed all around in spite of the trouble with the student government.

Acie Kinlaw said, however, that the Student Council is the best improvement because it is becoming what it used to be and is progressing. To him Mr. Frank Allen's contribution as dean of students has been outstanding.

It was gratifying to hear Bob Bowden say that the greatest step forward this year has been this newspaper; it makes you think, not enough, perhaps. Bowden concluded by saying that as long as the newspaper doesn't become radical, it will be one of the greatest things that the students have had this year.

Mrs. Betty Mac Millan commented similarly by saying it is very desirable for the students to have the newspaper available and that the newspaper has been doing a fine job. Furthermore, Mrs. MacMillan felt that the most spectacular improvement was the Fine Arts Week series.

Her opinion is held by many and was the answer most frequently given in the course of this interview.

Gussie Littleton stated that Fine Arts Week has done a marvelous job in giving the school a mature atmosphere and that the individual programs have been very good.

The variety of these programs appealed to Rowena Skipper, and also the fact that Fine Arts Week brought a different type of activity to Wilmington College.

Betty Lou Collins believed that having an improved cultural atmosphere due to Fine Arts Week and the many splendid Art exhibits in Hoggard Hall are indicative of improved social and intellectual atmosphere.

Fine Arts Week was wonderful, but it is over, and according to Sarah Burgess the college needs more things like the art exhibits to make this new cultural atmosphere a welcomed permanent addition to the Wilmington area as well as Wilmington College.

Sandy Carr summed up the two major improvements, felt by the subjects of our interview, by saying that Fine Arts Week and the lectures have improved the cultural atmosphere and education, have aided student relations, and have shown that there is a real and urgent need for more.

Furthermore, the nearly realized plans of Wilmington's becoming a four-year institution has spurred things on at the college and has given it a sensation of moving forward.

Literary Magazine Of The College Is A Contribution To Student Creative Writing

By LOUISE AMBROSIO

Write! Write what you feel and let your writing be you — not pseudo-Hemingway or pseudo-Faulkner.

Writing is a mode of communication. It is a manner of rendering specific one's ideas, emotions, opinions, philosophies. Anyone who has any inclination at all to express himself creatively should not hesitate because of fear of criticism.

Now you have written it. You like it. But there still is not a complete satisfaction. Just as there is an irrepressible desire to share emotions and ideas, there is an equal desire to share the product of these emotions and ideas, your writings. At this point most inexperienced writers are halted because they do not have the opportunity to have their works published.

The students of WC are very fortunate in that they are given this opportunity through the annual literary magazine, With Pen In Hand, in which student writings are published.

Prose, poetry, short stories, essays, and plays will be considered for publication. However, April 18 is the deadline for material to be turned in to the co-editors, Beth Fineberg and Randy Johnson.

The Pen Pushers hope to have With Pen In Hand published by May 1. Members and the circulation staff, Carol Fladd and Fred Newber, will have copies which they will sell for 50 cents each.

If you are interested in seeing something that you have written published without paying the usual prices for such an effort, then you now have the occasion to put your writings in print!

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

VOTE ON CONSTITUTION TODAY

Committee Plans New Document For Government

Many years' work at colleges in several States and more than half a year's work at this campus have culminated in the constitution offered to the Student Body this morning for a vote, pro or con.

The idea for revision originated last fall, and Ronnie Staton, one of the first to jump on the idea and show enthusiasm for a new constitution, was appointed by Nat Bost to head a committee to draw up plans for the structure of a new student government.

Early this year, Staton sent more than thirty letters off to colleges throughout several States asking for copies of their constitution, information on their student council setup, and any advice they might have to offer.

Two-thirds of the colleges responded; after reading through the constitutions of twenty colleges, Staton chose the constitution of Elon College to use as a base for the one being voted on today.

Elon's constitution is the same as UNC's, adapted for a smaller college; the constitution of UNC was adapted from that of the Federal Government.

Staton added the idea for an honor system using ideas from information received from the University of Virginia, and he used suggestions received from such colleges as Duke, Davidson, and Atlantic Christian College.

Taking his work before his Committee for the Revision of the Constitution, composed of Nat Bost, Jack Mason, Scott McKinnon, Mike West, Hugh Pischal, and Tim Chappell, Staton gained approval for his adapted structure of the Elon Constitution.

Staton's committee made several suggestions which were used, such as a reduction from two honor boards to one and the added representatives from the interclub council and the publications committee.

Changeover nears completion as Mike West, Dean J. M. Crews, and Ronnie Staton examine the final form of the constitution.

Ten Points of New Constitution Challenged At Monday's Student Council Meeting

Student Council members met for three hours Monday night to debate upon a ten point bill calling for the constitution to be sent back to the Revision Committee.

Kay Wells introduced the bill to the council and Judy Campbell seconded the measure. After some debate and a recess to determine whether or not the action was constitutionally valid, it was approved with a change in wording.

The bill came as a result of the fact that the new constitution was only available to the council members for half a day, many of them not aware of it, before last week's meeting at which the new constitution was ratified. The members opposing the new constitution at this week's meeting had been unable to read the constitution before it was ratified last week and had found several faulty points upon a more thorough investigation.

This fact was proved by the notable change in feeling of several of the council members toward the constitution, such as Kay and Judy who had previously voted in favor of the constitution.

The ten points that were thought to need changing were brought to the floor by three speakers, Ed Herring, Sondra Wilson, and Mike West.

Some of these ten points of change or clarification suggested by these students for the new constitution are listed on page 2.

Also speaking in the affirmative for the added changes to the new constitution was John Abbott.

Those speaking against rescinding the new constitution were Jack Mason, Bob Bowden, Robert Rich, Randy Johnson, and Ronnie Staton.

In a final vote on the matter, the ten points in question were defeated by a vote of 13 to 7.

New Constitution Anticipates Change to Four-Year College

Moving up to four-year status means change, and an obvious area of change will be the student government.

The first step to bring the needed change to a student government is to change the rules under which it operates; our college council works with a two-year college student government constitution.

"This (the constitution being voted on today) will give us the organization and mechanics we will need for four year," said Ronnie Staton, head of the Committee for the Revision of the Constitution.

Besides provided the structure for stepping into a government with offices for four classes over the next two years, perhaps the biggest and most needed change, there are several other areas where the new constitutions contrasts with the old one.

President's Power

One of the most notable areas of change is the position of president, "he will have more power," said Staton.

At the same time the president gains more authority, the vice-president will move from the position it now holds of being barely indistinguishable in a regular council meeting from any other member of the congress to the speaker of the Senate. In this capacity the vice-president of the Student Body will preside over all council meetings, a function now performed by the president.

Another strikingly noticeable change is the elimination of club representatives from the main body of the Student Council. Instead of a representative from each separate club attending council meetings, the clubs will send their representatives to an Interclub Council from which a single representative will be sent to the Senate.

Senate

The Senate itself will be composed of the various class presidents, vice-presidents, and secretaries plus five senators from each class. At full strength the Senate will contain thirty-four members.

Committees working close with the President of the Student Body will be the Dance Committee, composed of 12 students; the Fine Arts Committee, made up of three students and three faculty members recommended by those students; and, a Student Orientation Committee of 16 members. The members of all these committees will be chosen by the president.

Budgets

The addition of the preparation and submission to the Senate for approval of a joint budget from the Fledgling Seahawk, and WILC, will come under a Publications Committee composed of two representatives from each of the organizations.

The Judicial Council will be composed of two members elected by and from the men students, two members elected by and from the women students, and one member elected by and from the Student Body at large.

If the constitution is passed in the general election today, "The Student Government Association of Wilmington College" will be elected during the election of the second Thursday in May.

Theatre of the Absurd Dares Man to Think

"Theatre: Avante-garde" offers to the students and public an entirely new form of entertainment than SRO has ever presented before—the theatre of the absurd, an exciting new view of life that dares man to risk a peek at it—only his values and conventions will be at stake.

There is quite a bit of discussion among today's critics as to whether this new means of communication on the stage is to be the foundation for a new era in the dramatic arts or just a fad. Whatever their decision or the eventual outcome, the impression it leaves on those who understand but just a fraction of the message it seeks to convey will cause those perhaps to be unable to look upon some of societies' institutions and life's happenings without feeling a grim, but sure sense of humor.

The play itself consists of three small plays, one act each, by the leading contemporary playwrights in the field and directed by Doug Swink with the exception of one which is directed by Martha Parker.

Martha Parker, Mary C. Hodgins, Sandy Carr, and Robert Autry star in Edward Albee's "The Sandbox." The audience of this play can come prepared for Albee's masterfully delivered "surrealist jolt."

Doug Swink is the lone member of the cast of Sam Beckett's "Krapp's Last Tape", a portrait of the loneliness of an aged and darkened mind.

Ionesco's "The Leader" features Louise Ambrosiano, Ed Herring, Barbara Bradley, Sam Garner, Bob Bowden, and Gene Marlowe.

Avante-garde comes to the campus with its own special type of humor. From bottom to top: Louise Ambrosiano, Martha Parker, Doug Swink, Bob Bowden, and Gene Marlowe.

Campus Briefs

Richie Watson and Pat Paxton have been awarded scholarships of $200 and $300 respectively to Carolina.

Next on the agenda for shows on exhibit in Hoggard Hall is the annual spring show of student paintings. The student show will follow the conclusion of the North Carolina exhibit in May.

Dr. Frank Allen, local psychiatrist, has accepted an invitation from the Panmathians to speak here. Plans are underway for a topic and date.

With Pen In Hand, the Pen Pusher publication, is scheduled to come out the middle of next month.

The Fledgling staff successfully met all its deadlines and the annual is due to arrive on Campus May 1. Fledglings may be picked up in the book store upon arrival.

The cost of the annual is absorbed in the activities fee; students having only paid the activity fee for two quarters may obtain a Fledgling for $1.50 and those having paid an activity fee for only one quarter must pay $3.00 for the book.

Dean J. Marshall Crews slammed three homers during the first game featuring the faculty versus the baseball team. Dean Crews has played semi-pro baseball and served four years on the team of George Peabody College. A faculty-student game is slated for tomorrow afternoon and the games will be played on the average of once a week.

- Elections -

1. Ratification of new constitution shall be held Thursday, April 25th, 1963, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

2. If the new constitution is approved by the students in Section 4 (Article VII) above shall file a statement announcing their intention to run for a particular office. This statement shall be filed with the chairman of the Board of Elections and shall be filed on or before the last Monday in April (April 29th). These filing statements shall contain the signature of the registrar or academic dean of Wilmington College approving the students eligibility." Article VII, Section 4.

Tim Chappell
Chairman, Board of Election

Vote NO For New Constitution

Editorial Note: A number of students tried to persuade the Student Council to make these needed changes before the election today but failed to get sufficient support.

We urge you NOT to vote for the new constitution today. Too many of the points are not clear, too broad, and incomplete. Be aware of the following points before you make your final decision.

1. Article VIII, Section 5 states, "It shall be the duty and responsibility of every student at Wilmington College to abide by the Campus Code, namely to conduct herself or himself as a lady or gentleman at all times, and insofar as possible to see that his fellow students do likewise."

There will be a Judicial Committee to prosecute any student they feel is not abiding by the Campus Code.

We question the words, "at all times" and suggest that this is an invasion on the student's personal life. The student should be required to follow this code only when he is on campus or taking part in college sponsored activities.

2. Article IV, Section 7 states, "There shall be a publications committee . . . whose duty shall be to handle all matters affecting the publications. . ."

This clause is unrestrictive and can be interpreted to suit the needs and desires of the interpreter. We feel that this is an infringement on the independence of the three organizations — the SEAHAWK, the FLEDGLING, and WILC.

3. Article VII, Section 6 states, "The candidates for any elective offices in the Student Body shall not be on scholastic probation at the time of their election and shall not have been found guilty of violating the Campus Code during a period of one year prior to their election.

This means that a person may be judged for eligibility on one quarter's work. We believe that a student should be judged on his overall average.

Also, we believe that a Freshman with less than three quarters' work completed should be required to have a 1.7 overall average, rather than a 2.0 overall average. Our reasoning is based on the fact that freshmen in their period of adjustment do not do their best work.

4. Article IX states, "The Student Senate shall have the power to impeach any officer elected by the Student Body."

This makes no provision for the impeachment of class officers and senators who are elected by their respective classes rather than by the entire student body.

Finally, we feel that a 3/5 majority is too small to ratify such a significant document. We fail to understand why this number was chosen since it allows for 40% dissention.

Editorials

Was This Action Just?

If the student council ever let those persons down who put enough trust in them to vote them into office, they did last Thursday night.

Many members of the council voted in favor of a constitution that they had not even read. It is certainly not inconceivable that some of the members had not had the opportunity to evaluate the provisions since the final copy was not made available to them until the afternoon before the meeting. There were several who admitted not having seen the constitution until the night on which ratification was to be decided.

Requests made that members be given more time to study the constitution were politely ignored, and some of the committee members who planned the new constitution acted as if it were a personal effort when dissenting ideas were voiced.

If the student council is to uphold its high standards, the attitude of indifference to a matter as vital as the ratification of the constitution must change.

It appeared that the majority was more interested in getting the motion entailing the constitution passed and out of the way than in allowing ample time for thought and criticism on the matter at hand.

It is a shame that more students were not willing to exert a little more energy in perfecting the new constitution under which we may be governed for an indefinite amount of time.

Good Leadership Depends on You

We want to emphasize to YOU the importance of the Student Body elections that you will soon face.

Whether or not you participate in the Student Council does not exempt you from your responsibility to this organization.

Wilmington College needs leadership — good, strong, determined, and rational leadership. Our most pressing problem is that we have too many followers. We must have someone not afraid to fight for those things desired by himself and by the students.

You are guilty of your unenlivened atmosphere if you indifferently mark your ballot for a candidate who does not have the potential to hold office.

You deserve a dead campus if you let a candidate's personal appearance and popularity solely control your pen. This is why a student council may get nothing important accomplished all year long.

You are voting for your own personal misery and dissatisfaction with your college life when you apathetically vote for those who walk into and out of council meetings without ever saying a word, ever expressing their ideas, or offering solution on problems confronting the council.

It is by your fault and to your own disadvantage when your "leaders" are those students interested only in seeing their pictures in the yearbook.

If we earnestly desire improvement in our college, we must use more thought and discretion in marking our ballots. And don't underestimate the influence of a strong student council. It can be extremely powerful in gaining students' rights and activities.

We do not need students in our council who are there only for personal recognition.

Nor can we tolerate any member who is too intimidated to pursue necessary ends for his fellow classmate.

We need leaders. And it is up to us to find them and to elect them. By paying close attention to the different campaigns and platforms, and more importantly, by talking with the candidates; we can make sure that the most capable and willing achieve their goal.

We hope that you will recognize the significance of a strong and active student council and of your personal responsibility in making accurate choices.

Letters To Editor

April 22, 1963

Dear Editor,

Just about a month and a half ago today, it was announced that the Wilmington College basketball team, 1962-63 Region 10 champions, would compete in the NJCAA basketball tournament at Hutchinson, Kansas. The unexpected decision surprised most people including the players themselves.

Nevertheless, the delayed decision did not effect two energetic gentlemen unknown to the Wilmington College campus who were responsible for conveying the play-by-play broadcast of the Seahawk tournament games some 1200 miles into southeastern North Carolina and to the residents and students in Wilmington.

Local Interest Stimulated

Mr. Hod Huminston of radio station KWHK in Hutchinson, Kansas, is responsible for initially stimulating local interest through a long-distance inquiry to Mr. Robert J. Hurley, station manager of radio station WMFD here in Wilmington. Due to the lack of sponsors and time for preparation, it was thought that the Seahawk games could not be broadcast. But thanks to the efforts of Mr. Huminston and Mr. Tom Dannaher of WMFD, we were able to follow our team and be rooters at least throughout most of the action.

Although the two gentlemen work for commercial organizations, we recognize that, contrary to what some people believe, a monetary gain would have been the least likely reason for their action. We are familiar enough with the full particulars involved to know that one would not walk around the block on a sunny day for the earnings derived from those four broadcasts.

We point this out to show our awareness of the fact that the material rewards gained might not have made their effort worthwhile. However, I do not believe it is necessary to remind them of Wilmington's reception to the broadcasts this year as well as last. I would seriously doubt that any out of state event has attracted the interest of the area more than the WC games at the national tournament.

Businessmen Cooperate

Also, all the effort put forth would have been in vain without the cooperation of local businessmen who provided the necessary financial support. The only possible means for transmitting the broadcasts at that distance was by long distance telephone. You can well imagine the cost of that telephone connection for about seven hours plus the expense of an announcer, not to mention the numerous calls required before and after the completion of the broadcast. Twenty sponsors were necessary to cover the expense of the broadcasts and we would like very much to mention each sponsor in this letter, but, because of the number, we have neither the time nor space. It is significant to note that even our Student Congress came to the rescue at one point during the tournament to donate money from the Student Activity Fund to help sponsor the broadcast of one of the games.

Team Makes Good Impression

Special mention of Mr. Huminston's presentation of the Wilmington games could not be overlooked. His keen accounts of the tournament play were indeed poignant. The refreshing manner of description made the games even more spirited and impressive. In a letter to WMFD, Mr. Huminston praised the Wilmington College team for its fine performance and excellent behavior during their week stay in Hutchinson. We acknowledge his compliments. For we know and are proud of the fact that not a finer group of young men could be found anywhere, but we also know that their behavior in Kansas can be partly attributed to the warm, friendly manner in which the people of Hutchinson treated them.

On behalf of the students, the people of Wilmington, and Wilmington College, we thank Mr. Huminston for his interests and express our sincere appreciation to him. We would like to use all of our oratorical resources to praise the two radio stations, Mr. Dannaher, and, especially the sponsors for their contributions and efforts throughout the last two basketball seasons, and tournaments. We only hope that these people remember the enthusiastic acceptance the broadcasts have received not only from the students, but from the people of Wilmington and those throughout the area. This is an instance when the over worked and under fed adjective APATHETIC can not apply and may be joyfully washed down the drain. Our "hats off" to you conscientious people for your community support and civic responsibility which we feel is of paramount importance to the growth of both the city and Wilmington College.

—Dick Caravati
Sports Dept., "The Seahawk"

Dear Editor,

We believe that the new constitution in its present form is an excellent document. We think that it provides the structure necessary to establish and perpetuate a dynamic and effective student government.

Reasons for voting for the new constitution are:

A. It provides a basic structure that will last throughout the years.

B. It has excellent organization with checks and balances very similar to our Federal Constitution.

C. It initiates an honor system in the form of the campus code, namely each student is expected to behave as a lady or gentleman at all times, and insofar as possible to see that his fellow students do likewise.

D. It gives the student body the very same power through the right of petition that the Student Senate has.

E. It makes sure that only qualified students are able to run for office by establishing a reasonable minimum grade average.

F. It makes the Student Senate a truly representative body.

G. It gives the students through their representative the power to decide who shall receive money from the Student Senate fund and how much each organization shall spend.

H. It provides for a four year class structure.

I. It gives the President of the Student Body the power to be very effective, but restricts him from being too powerful.

J. It gives the students the power to impeach any officer guilty of mis-conduct or non-performance of duty.

K. It gives all chartered clubs representation through the interclub council.

L. It makes amendments to the constitution possible when necessary.

We hope you the students will consider these facts and vote YES for the new constitution.

Yours truly,

Scott McKinnon	Millie Stone
Ronnie Staton	Hugh Paschal
Judy Matthews	Larry Cheek

General Assembly Visits Wilmington College

Recently the General Assembly of North Carolina paid a visit to Wilmington. They held a session aboard the USS North Carolina, our battleship memorial. Included on their one-day itinerary was a visit to Wilmington College. About 5:30 p.m. that afternoon an entourage of chartered busses bearing the Representatives and members of their families drove into the College parking lot.

As each group alighted from the bus they were welcomed by hostesses who guided the visitors throughout their tour.

The tour excluded the greater part of the college campus and was restricted to the ground floor of Hoggard Hall. It did, however, provide a fairly good cross section impression since they were able to see two labs, some classrooms, the S. R. O. Theatre, and the art exhibit.

It is hoped that even this brief exposure to the Wilmington College campus gave added impetus to the bill that will make it a four-year institution.

Amphitheatre, Park Progress As Plans Continue Steadily

Amphitheatre

If during the last six months you happened to see a rather motley group of young men bearing tools that resembled the axe of the Mikado's executioner, don't panic. They weren't the Jets heading for a "rumble." It was our own Wilmington College boys performing a service for mankind (at Wilmington College, that is).

The Theatre Alfresco

Due to their efforts and those of Mr. Doug Swink, Wilmington College will soon be the proud possessors of an amphitheatre, the official title of which will be The Theatre Alfresco.

Since the beginning of this quarter, Mr. Swink's stage craft class with the help of Mr. Calvin Doss, Westley Ward, and Bob Bowden, have been clearing the land at the lefthand corner of the campus. And for one day the Collegiate Civitan and Circle K Clubs pitched in with a helping hand.

Project Progresses Rapidly

There are big plans for those acres of land and with time and a lot of hard work they will soon be realized. The work is progressing rapidly due to the recent spell of good weather and so far they are ahead of schedule. The amphitheatre is expected to be completed and ready for play production by early this summer.

When finished, it will be duly dubbed The Theatre Alfresco.

Alfresco is an Italian word meaning "in the open air." What could be more appropriate?

Plans Include Park Area

The amphitheatre itself will occupy relatively little space. However, on either side of the amphitheatre, three-quarters of an acre of land is being cleared in anticipation of a proposed park area which will offer students a pleasant place to walk or sit in blessed quiet.

How beautiful this park area is and how much comfort it will afford depends largely on how much the individuals and clubs of the student body contribute to its beautification.

Project Depends on Donations of Time and Money

The whole project has been allowed by the administration on the condition that the College would not have to expend any money toward it. Many things are needed: bird baths, cement benches, urns for the tree stumps. Railroad ties are necessary to build up the area for the seats of the amphitheatre.

Therefore, it is hoped that people will devote time, money or both, also, that the service clubs will offer to be responsible for the upkeep of the park. Perhaps, someday, with their help, Wilmington College can have a sort of "arborium" somewhat like Chapel Hill's.

Biology Department Considers Nature Trail

Still in the dream stage of development is a trail that will lead off from the park. The trail will be bordered by flora native to North Carolina and the Wilmington area. This "nature trail" will end in about ten acres of land which will be reserved for the Biology department for field trips and observational study. This, too, is a plan without any financial backing and depends on the contributions of generous people.

Fun, Fun, Fun

Sure it is a lot of hard work. But as Mr. Swink says, "This kind of work separates the men from the boys—it's hard labor."

As for the boys, they keep asking—"Are you sure this is part of Kennedy's physical fitness program?"

Snakes Provide Moment of Interest

An interesting sidelight to this project is that it has indirectly contributed to the specimens of the Biology department. A pygmy rattlesnake was found when Mr. Swink, nearly stepped on the poor creature. He (the snake) was placed in a paper sack and to the accompaniment of the screams of its porter, Mary C. Hodgkin, was brought to the lab. On another occasion a cotton-mouth moccasin was rudely removed from his abode to meet the fate of his comrade.

I KNEW A POET

I knew a poet
he was a friend of a friend of mine
Together we made the circle of hate, brains, and love.

Love amused each of them diverted each from hate a time delivered them from brains a time but love became pale to the poet;
The scholar leered at love's ideas and of the passion of clashing souls said loins were love's one harbor Love stayed—a time—then sickened.

She found with simplicity—the soul
And the poet and the scholar
Ate each other up with hate and brains—and regurgitated nothing—

But we politely listen—nod—

Seahawks To Encounter N.C. State 'Wolflets' Here

The N. C. State frosh will invade the Wilmington College campus at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon as the Hawks baseball team takes on the Wolfpack rookies in their ninth regular season game.

Brooks Field will be the scene of today's encounter as the Wilmington College team plays the State team in their only meeting of the season.

The Hawks, fresh from their Tuesday game with Edwards Military Institute, have improved rapidly according to menter Bill Brooks as they seek to better their overall 13-6 record of last year. Big Sam Page or left-hander Ed Lemon will draw the mound duties for Wilmington while Coach Jimmy Edwards has designated prep stand-out Mangus Halderson as the tentative starter for his State team.

The surging Hawks, who have won their last three outings, whipped Fort Bragg twice in Saturday's double-header and downed E.M.I. here Tuesday in a rained-marred game to record their fifth win against three defeats. Wilmington used 17 hits in the first game and 14 in the second game against the servicemen at Fayetteville to support lanky Jim Braxton in his initial win of the season while right-handed Sam Page added a second win to his record in relief of Harold Criddle.

Against Edwards, righthander Wray Ware allowed only four hits as the Seahawks whipped the Cadets 15-1. Ware exhibited his best form of the season in striking out eight while walking two.

Tom Cole continued his hot batting streak with a single and a double to bring home four runs for the Seahawks. Butch Watts collected three singles in raising his .300 plus average.

Wilmington took advantage of 10 walks and five E.M.I. errors to win the Brooks Field contest. Edwards' starting pitcher Donald Flyer was credited with his second loss of the season while the cadets record went to 3-4 for the year.

The Seahawks have benefited from the strong pitching of its mound staff at times this year. Braxton, Page, Ware, Ed Lemon, and Percy Wood have all produced excellent performances at least once in the early season. The warm weather has restricted injuries, especially sore arms, to a minimum.

Following this afternoon's encounter, Wilmington will meet Virginia's Ferrum Junior College Saturday afternoon at 2:30 on the home field. A late addition to the WC schedule is two games with the Deacons of Wake Forest. The first game will be played at Winston-Salem on Monday afternoon and the second game here at home on May 18, the next to last game of the season. Also next week, the WC baseballers take on the North Carolina frosh here next Friday and the Hurricanes from Louisiana Saturday on their campus.

Students and Wilmingtonians are taking advantage of the bleachers which have been erected at Brooks Field on campus. The bleachers which were furnished by the City of Wilmington seat 400 people and are located behind the first base line.

Hawk Linksmen Win First Two

Wilmington College's golf squad opened up its 1963 schedule at Wilmington's Municipal Golf Course Friday, April 12, by blanking Chowan College 27-0.

Ricky Berman, captain of the Seahawk golfers, led his team to victory by posting the low round of the day at 74. Close behind with 76's were Jack Harrell and Andy Gemmell and Roger Fowler chalked up a 77 round. Slots five and six were forfeited to the Seahawks when the Chowan entries in these positions failed to appear. Harry Buzzell and Will Gemmell picked up the forfeit victories.

In the singles competition Berman's 39-35-74 defeated Bob Baucom, Chowan's number one man, 3-0; Jack Harrell's 39-37-76 dropped Chowan's Bob Evans 44-42-86, 3-0; Wilmington College's number three man, Roger Fowler's 39-38-77, blanked Hayes Barr's 46-46-92, 3-0; and Andy Gemmell's 40-36-76 stopped Ray Smith's 50-47-97, 3-0.

LOUISBURG—

Sparked by Roger Fowler's one-under-par 34-35-69 and Andy Gemmell's 37-35-72, the Seahawk golfers, in their second game of the season downed Louisville College, 21½-5½, Monday.

Fowler and Gemmell captured both their singles and team matches winning 9-0. Ricky Berman posted a 36-38-74 for Wilmington College, Jack Harrell a 37-40-77, Will Gemmell a 46-39-85, and Harry Buzzell a 43-43-86.

In the team matches Berman and Harrell tied Billy Mangum and Fred Kissinger, 4½-4½; Fowler and Andy Gemmell dropped Wayne King and Cy Coiner, 9-0; Will Gemmell and Buzzell defeated Walt Daves and Fred Sorrell, 8-1.

Mangum's 35-38-73 was low score for Louisville.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

Earlier in the 1962-63 school year it was revealed that Louisburg and Chowan Colleges were knowingly competing with ineligible basketball players on their squads. Both schools recognized the consequences of this action but made their decision anyway. As a result Wilmington College is automatically entitled to represent the Virginia-Carolina Junior College Conference in ALL NJCAA competition.

About the only condition to this license is the requirement that the Seahawks themselves refrain from employing the services of any ineligible players. Failure to comply with this condition would automatically put Wilmington College in the same situation as Louisburg and Chowan.

But what constitutes ineligibility? First and perhaps foremost since it affects most players is the transfer ruling. This ruling forbids an athlete to compete on behalf of a college to which he has transferred for a period of one year after the date of his transfer. Secondly, a player must have satisfactorily completed ten quarter hours of work during the previous quarter. Thirdly, an athlete must be at the time of his participation carrying a minimum of twelve quarter hours to be eligible to compete in college athletics. There may be others but these are the most important ones affecting the schools in the Virginia-Carolina Conference.

Wilmington College has narrowly escaped becoming a victim of the NJCAA ineligibility rules. Only several days before the proposed competition against Chowan on April 12, was it discovered that many of the Seahawk golfers and tennis players were ineligible to compete.

Hardest hit was the 'Hawk tennis team. All but four of the net men were declared ineligible. This action will almost assuredly spell doom for Wilmington College's tennis team this year. Those members declared ineligible are: Larry Cheek, Herbert Lee Davis, Ray Fraley, Bill Lanier, Ronnie Staton, and Bill Ward. The only members still eligible to compete are: Dick Caravati, Jack Loftus, Robert Rich, and David Watson.

Also greatly affected by the discovery, the 'Hawk golf team will still, however, be able to field a strong squad as evidenced by the 27-0 trouncing they handed Chowan on April 12.

Of the four golfers affected by the ruling only one—Julian Taylor—was ranked among the top six. Fred Holloman, Scott McKinnon, and Gaylord Randolph were the other golfers affected. Ricky Berman, Jack Harrell, Roger Fowler, Will Gemmell, Andy Gemmell, Mike Hebron, and Harry Buzzell are the remaining members of the squad.

Wilmington College Netmen Cancel Season To Avoid Being Ineligible In NJCAA Play

The 1963 Wilmington College tennis team has cancelled its entire schedule of matches this season because all but four of its players are ineligible to compete under the rules of the National Junior College Athletic Association.

In checking with the Registrar's office, Seahawk Athletic Director Bill Brooks discovered that all of the tennis players with the exception of the top player, Jack Loftus, and three others could not compete in NJCAA competition because they would violate a rule stating that a transfer student must have attended his school for one year, or three quarters in Wilmington's case, before he may play for that school in conference competition of any type.

Most of the players on the tennis team are not only transfer students but entered the college in September of 1962. Thus, these players are only in their third quarter of attendance at WC and would have to complete this quarter before becoming eligible.

Actually, an infraction of that rule or any other rule would not effect the tennis team as much as it would this year's baseball team or next season's basketball team. In tennis, the conferences does not promote tournaments nor is there any regional or national tournaments held by the NJCAA like in baseball and basketball. The rule violation would restrict the baseball and basketball teams from playing in the national tournaments of which they are frequent participants.

The baseball team won the NJCAA tournament in 1961 and was second in 1962. The Hawk basketball team returned recently from Hutchinson, Kansas, where they lost in semi-finals of the 1962-63 National Tournament. Thus, the Athletic Department is careful in not hindering these teams from participating in national competition.

Also, the WC golf team had four players who were casualties of the transfer rule. However, the team will continue with its arranged schedule since most of the golfers were not affected by the rule, especially those at the "top of the ladder."

Four 'Hawks Strengthen WC Baseball Attack

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles on the Seahawk baseball feature players.

With the exhibition season completed and regular season play already well under way "The Seahawk" spotlights four more Wilmington College baseball players. The players who get the nod in this edition are: Steve Coley, Harold Criddle, Jerry Hooks, and Percy Wood.

Steve Coley

A 5-10, 170-pound sophomore, Steve Coley hails from Landrum, S. C., where he was a four-letterman at Landrum High School. Steve excelled in football, basketball, track, and baseball during his high school career picking up Most Valuable Player awards in football and baseball while earning All-Conference honors in basketball. His .420 batting average in high school helped earn him one MVP award.

Not content to let summer vacation halt his baseball activity Steve played for the Inman American Legion post where his astounding .614 batting average was the highest in the state. Last year Steve labored on behalf of the Seahawks and his .359 batting average sparked Wilmington College to the finals of the NJCAA baseball tournament in Grand Junction, Colorado.

Harold Criddle

Harold Criddle, a 5-10, 180-pound freshman pitcher, is a native of Elkton, Md. As an athlete at Elkton High School Harold participated in football and baseball but it was in the spring that he showed his true talents.

As a high school pitcher Harold was elected to his conference's All-Star team in each of his three years after averaging fifteen strike-outs per game. He also played for his hometown American Legion post where he chalked up a 4-2 record including a no-hit game. "That was the big thrill of my career," he claimed.

Jerry Hooks

Jerry Hooks is a 5-8, 155-pound sophomore infielder from Kenly, N. C. Playing for Nahant

High School for four years Jerry's .300 plus batting average sparked his team to the conference championship each year. In his senior year Jerry was elected the Most Athletic Senior in his class after Nahant won fourth place in the state Class A baseball tournament.

Baseball has occupied Jerry's summers also. For the past three years he has played semi-pro baseball after the end of the high school season. Last year his team won the league championship while Jerry boasted a .333 batting average.

Percy Wood

Percy Wood, a 5-9, 165-pound sophomore pitcher, comes to Wilmington College from Charlottesville, Va., where he played both baseball and football.

As a four year letterman in the national pastime for Lane High School, Percy chalked up a 16-5 record as a pitcher and a .347 batting average as an outfielder. His outstanding play sparked Lane High School to the conference title in his junior year.

Beside being the winningest pitcher on the team Percy racked up a no-hitter during his high school career. Because of his excellent record and fierce determination not only on the baseball field as well, Percy received three Most Valuable Player awards—two in baseball and one in recognition of his prowess on the gridiron.

Fowler, Hebron Spark Seahawk Links Team

the first in a series spotlighting members of the Seahawk golf team.

With two matches already under their belts and others scheduled for the near future the Wilmington College golfers have already bettered their last year's mark. "The Seahawk" features two of the top Wilmington College golfers in this issue: Roger Fowler and Mike Hebron.

Roger Fowler's is a familiar face around the area's amateur golf tournaments. The 5-9, 140-pound freshman is a native of Wilmington and practices his specialty at the Pine Valley Country Club's course.

An avid amateur golfer and one of the top men on last year's New Hanover High School squad, at 19 Roger already has several tournament trophies to display. His consistent shooting has earned him not only a high school letter and a berth on the Seahawk squad but also the Exchange Club Jr. Champion title, the 1960 Pine Valley First Flight Jr. Championship, and the 1961 Runner-up for the Pine Valley Club Championship. Roger has also claimed five other flight championships during his golfing career.

Golf, however, seems to hold little space in Roger's future. His plans at present are to transfer to North Carolina State College where he will major in chemical engineering.

Mike Hebron has been referred to as an "all 'round athlete." The 5-10, 155-pound native of Bayside, N. Y., a suburb of New York City, has displayed outstanding performances in football, basketball, baseball, and track in addition to golf.

Engineer's Club Drops Faculty In First Game

The Wilmington College faculty meets the Engineer's Club in their second game of the 1963 Intramural Softball League at 3:30 this afternoon at Wallace Park. The sight of the game has been changed from Hugh MacRae Park to Wallace Park until the intramural fields on campus are ready. Wallace Park is located on the south side of Market Street between Market and Metts Streets.

The two teams opened the schedule of the six-team league last Thursday as the Engineers survived a late inning rally by the hard hitting faculty team to squeak out their first win of the season, 18-17.

An alumnus of Holy Cross High School in Bayside, Mike won a position on all the major athletic teams. But it was mainly away from school, in service sponsored organizations, that he made a name for himself. As a basketball player Mike helped the Knights Of Columbus's Squires to the city, state, and Eastern United States titles. He was also a member of the city-champion Police Athletic League basketball team. Mike's Boy's Club squad was Queens champs. As a member of the Catholic Youth Organization for five years Mike helped his team to one city and two Queens titles.

In the field of golf Mike participated in almost all of the city elimination match play tournaments. An amateur "tour" sponsored by such organizations as the Department of Parks, "New York Journal-American," Chamber of Commerce as well as many other youth-minded groups gave Mike a start on his golfing career.

Mike plans to complete his education at Wilmington College with a major in Social Sciences and a minor in Physical Education in preparation for a coaching career.

Mike Hebron and Roger Fowler line up a putt in a recent in a recent practice round at "Munl." Fowler's 69 led the Hawks to victory over Louisburg.

On duty with Karen at the North Carolina travel exhibit is Miss Betty Lawhon of Rutherfordton, "Miss Variety Vacationland" and the Rhododendron Queen.

The show, which began April 19 with Princess Grace and Prince Ranier of Monaco as guests of honor, will end this Sunday.

Karen, who has been participating in the Tour-arama programs of the Southeastern North Carolina Development Association this spring, was presented with a charm bracelet from the group on the eve of her departure for Philadelphia.

Swing Into Orbit To The Music Of The Jetty Jumpers At The May Dance

The Jetty Jumpers will swing into orbit Saturday night, May 4, at the college May Dance.

The band, the same that performed at the Azalea Dance, will play from 9:00 p.m. till 1:00 a.m.

During the dance, May Queen Judy Matthews, Maid of Honor Pat Beasley, and the Court, Sara Avery, Martha Jay Staton, Memory Farrar, and Nancy Bradshaw will be presented.

The pub will be open for refreshments. Dress for the occasion is semi-formal.

Ronnie Staton, chairman and coordinator of the dance, stated that "rules that prohibit drinking on campus will be strictly enforced."

Mentioning that the rule forbidding drinking on campus is both a school and State law, Staton said there has been "a flagrant violation in the past of the rule, and all violators will be subject to action by both the student government and the administration."

ADMINISTRATION STATES STAND

Through Fred Allen the administration has voiced itself as standing neither for or against the new constitution. Instead they have left the decision entirely up to the students; "if this is what you want (the new constitution), we'll back you all the way," said Mr. Allen.

Students Oppose Constitution At Special Council Session

Thursday's special call session of the Student Council manifested two results: the ratification of the new constitution by that organization and the rise of determined opposition by certain members to parts of the new constitution.

Under Section Seven of the Powers of the Senate, the clause stating: "There shall be a Publications Committee composed of two representatives from each publication; including Radio Station WILC, The Fledgling and the Seahawk.

"Its duty shall be to handle all matters affecting the publications and to prepare a publications budget for submission to the Student Senate," drew heavy and sharp fire from members of the Seahawk and several other council members.

The section was strongly opposed on the grounds that the wording, "all matters", was vague and that with the indefinite wording and ultimate financial control of the paper, as had been intimated outside of the council by one of the council's leading members.

The second matter to bring opposition was Section Six of Article VII which said that the President of the Student Body shall be a member of either the rising Junior or Senior Class.

It was charged that there was no reason for the change in wording from "Highest rising undergraduate class" for the president to rising "Junior and Senior Classes" for the vice-president and secretary unless it be to limit those offices next year strictly to 100 Junior students — 50% of whom would probably be ineligible because of the high academic requirements for running.

Robert Rich, Sondra Wilson, Randy Johnson, and Gene Marlowe spoke in favor of having the wording changed to "two highest undergraduate classes," and Wally West clarified Bob Bowden's amendment to have the constitution changed thus.

In the middle of debate, Ronnie Staton attempted to halt further debate and have the constitution immediately ratified as it was, but was unsuccessful and the wording of that section was changing to include rising Sophomores in this year's election for the number two and three spots in the Student Council of next fall.

At this time, the council had been in session for some time and the majority of members were strongly in favor of adjourning with ratifying the constitution as it stood with one change.

Ed Herring spoke out against immediate ratification of the constitution with its several undecided points of disagreement saying, "The future of the Student Body is important enough to spend enough time on a few more meetings."

Those still dissatisfied with the constitution were disappointed when the council went ahead and both ratified the constitution and adjourned in the same move.

Last Friday, Barbara Ann Hixon was presented with the Chemical Rubber Co. Physics Award.

The award included a book, the "Handbook of Chemistry and Physics."

Various Programs Listed As Objectives By Paschal, Campbell, Culbreth, Loftus

Working closely beside the Student Body President next year and also individually, the main leaders of the Student Body and the two classes have a number of programs and ideas they plan to initiate.

Hugh Paschal, newly elected vice-president of the Student Body, goes into office with an eight-pronged program.

First in his program is to lead student influence in pressing for immediate erection of a gymnasium on the campus. Another physical change to the campus he plans to work for is the blacktopping of the present roadways leading to the parking lots.

He stressed that in these plans as in others, "we must work hand in hand with the administration."

Also included in his platform for next year is the support of the revised constitution, budgeting the publications, working to expand the curriculum to meet the expressed needs of the students, and "simplification of the present rules of procedure employed by the Student Council."

The platform also covers an "investigation into the possibility of lowering the prices" in the cafeteria. "I think that the cafeteria can continue to gross its present earnings if not increase them by the added volume of business created by the lowering of prices," said Paschal.

Paschal promised to "earnestly solicit (the students') suggestions and requests regarding my responsibility" to them.

Following the election, Paschal expressed his "appreciation to the voters for putting their faith in" him. "I promise to fulfill all the promises I made in the campaign."

Judy Campbell, next year's Student Body Secretary-Treasurer, listed three main things she especially hopes to work toward next year.

Miss Campbell's platform covers working for more money for the Fine Arts and Dance Committees, and a girls service club similar to those that now exist in the college for the men students.

"I will judge each issue on its merits and make every effort to work in the best interest of the students and the school," stated the rising Junior Classes' President, Steve Culbreth.

"One of our most evident shortcomings is the lack of school spirit," said Culbreth, (Continued on Page 8)

WC Student Body Elects '63-64 Council Officers

Experienced Leaders To Head Government

Returning leaders of the Student Congress took the three top positions in the council in the spring elections while the majority of other posts were filled by newcomers.

In the Student Body elections Ronnie Staton won the presidential race. Hugh Paschal was elected vice-president and Judy Campbell, secretary-treasurer.

Steve Culbreth and Evelyn Adkins, newcomers to the Student Government, became the new president and vice-president of the Junior Class. Kay Wells, outgoing Student Body Secretary, will serve as secretary-treasurer for the Junior Class next year.

One member of the present congress, Randy Johnson, will return to the congress as a senator of the Junior Class. The other members of the Junior Class Senate are Madeline Brite, Sarah Burgess, Barbara Fulford, and Charlotte Taylor.

Jack Loftus and Bobby Eakins, both beginners in WILCO student government, were elected to the positions of President and Vice-President of the Sophomore Class respectively. Faye Barnes, secretary-treasurer-elect of next year's Sophomore Class served as representative this year.

Exercising the judicial powers of the Student Council next year will be Barbara Bradley, representative from the Student Body-at-large; Billy Shipman and Jon Wooten, men judges; and Memory Farrar and Sandra Lennon, women judicial representatives.

Staton Succeeds In Race For Top Congress Post

"We have a great challenge before us, and how well we meet this challenge will depend upon the co-operation of the entire student body," stated the president-elect of the Student Body, Ronnie Staton, upon election.

"I know that we are capable of doing an outstanding job for our school and community, and I am looking forward to working with the officers of the Student Government Association," continued Staton, adding his thanks to the students for giving him the opportunity to serve in the position.

Cannot Remain Static

In his campaign Staton stressed the point that WC must either "progress or retrogress," that it is impossible for either a culture or school to remain static.

Among the points Staton listed as his objectives for the coming year is to provide the continuous leadership that the student government will require.

Staton mentioned the need for a budget for the student council in order for the various committees of the government to map their entire year's work and "plan according to their financial status."

Sponsor Name Band

Under the social and intellectual aspects of the council Staton hopes to work toward the attaining of at least one dance with a name band performing and the "further development of the Fine Arts Program."

Mentioning that "next year the campus will have suitable facilities for both intramural football and softball," Staton said he "will do everything in my power" to give added impetus to the intramural program.

Establish Fraternities, Sororities

As the last of his specific objectives for next year, Staton says he intends to "make a very thorough study of the possibilities of having fraternities and sororities, either national or localized, chartered on our campus."

"The establishment of fraternities and sororities would not only enhance the image of WC, but would also make our stay here more enjoyable."

Library Wall Holds Donated Thrift Canvas

"Plateau Canyon No. 4" by Walter Thrift is now on permanent display on the north wall of the library.

The $500 gift presented to the college by a foundation in Virginia marks the first of the college's own collection of paintings done by a noted artist.

Exhibited twice in Winston-Salem and once here in Thrift's one-man show, the canvas is done in the medium of oil and collage.

Editorials

All editorials that appear in THE SEAHAWK are written by the editor and reflect her own personal ideas unless otherwise signed.

IT'S BEEN A GOOD YEAR

It has been a good year at Wilmington College, the most obvious reason lying within the students themselves and in their general attitudes toward the college.

Students have exhibited spirit and pride, indispensable factors for progress, in Wilmington College this year and have participated (although inconsistently) to a greater degree in college-sponsored activities.

School spirit was evidenced this year when many moved rather energetically to the bleachers in Brogden Hall to support our team and when some few devotedly followed our basketball team to the National tournament in Kansas.

When there are petitions, one might expect to find impatient gatherings advocating action and Wilmington College has witnessed two very strong petitions this year. The most recent petition was an encouraging effort and drive on the part of students to know the cause for the delay of action on the Higher Education Bill (which would, if passed, affirm WC's four year status.)

Student Council meetings this year have been less quiet and less inert than in past years. Unanimous, indifferent decisions have bowed to split, angered conclusions. But is it not better to have a few hurt feelings and to accomplish one's ends rather than to constantly and unattentatively agree and to remain still?

People outside of the Student Congress have been more aware of what is happening inside (as only they should be if they expect to be well represented.)

This was proven when the student body voted against a constitution overwhelmingly favored by their representatives. By doing so, these students were instrumental in getting a more perfect and explicit constitution—one which will enable the student to have more independence.

Far superior to the Freshman campaigns at the beginning of this school year and the Student Body Elections in 1962, the campaigns this year were better organized, more serious, and more dynamic. The best aspect, however, of the recent election was that candidates seeking office had definite issues to present to the voters.

Fine Arts Week received a tremendous ovation from students as well as from faculty members and citizens of Wilmington. Because of this particular project, we made our most significant steps towards cultural development; and through the concerted efforts of the Fine Arts Committee and the Art Department, aesthetic development has kept a lively pace.

Students' response to the newspaper this year has been indicated by their reading it more thoroughly, by their suggesting criticisms, and by their writing letters and editorials to publicly express their opinions.

Wilmington College has, for the past year, been experiencing severe growing pains conducive to protest and discontent. Still, this is what has made our year worthwhile. We have, in some degree, shown that we are ready and impatient for growth and progress's promises.

Yes, it has been a good year, and, needless to say, it could have been better and will be better because of our newly acquired status. But at least, the students have not been adamant and a college has not remained stagnant.

A WORD OF THANKS

In this final issue of the 1963-'64 Seahawk, we wish to thank and to recognize several persons closely associated with and instrumental in this publication.

Our deepest gratitude is extended to Mr. "Pete" Hicks and his staff at Carolina Printing Company, the organization solely responsible for the printing of the Seahawk. Their co-operation and advice has been indispensable as have their extra hours of overtime in meeting deadlines.

For the aid and assistance of Thomas Lupton, our advisor, we are appreciative and feel that his attitude has contributed to the staff's free and independent stands on controversial issues.

We are indebted to all of our advertisers and hope that their patronage of our college will continue and will continue to be profitable to them.

Also, we wish to mention the engravers at Southeastern Engraving Company of the Star-News Newspapers and to thank them and Browning's Photo Center for their special favors and fine work that they have done for the Seahawk during the past year.

Insights

By RANDY JOHNSON

On his television show last Tuesday night Dr. Albert Burke conducted a Probe which he entitled "The Ignorant and the Free." I feel that the text of this Probe should be examined by every citizen of the United States, especially the students, and particularly the educators. What Dr. Burke was trying to convey was truth; he was educating the American public. I am grateful that one program such as this can do so much to offset the poor and one-sided ones. Dr. Burke was not speaking absolutely, but he was pleading for the impartial education of Americans. We are so prone to condemn other people and other nations on the grounds of values that we do not understand (and on the word of narrow and prejudiced individuals.) To prevent such condemnations, impartial presentation of facts is indispensable.

Dr. Burke described education in the light of the etymology of the word "intelligence". That word derives from two Latin words, inter and legere, which, when used together, mean "to choose between". Unless students are allowed to "choose between" they have faint hope of ever being educated. In my opinion an educator today must consciously make that choosing a paramount value which he justifies his existence as an educator.

A New Wilco?

The promotion of Wilmington College to a four-year status by no means indicates that it will be a progressive institution. In terms of the number of students and size of the plant material progress may be noted, but there is another kind of progress. In an area like this where conservative political views dominate there is a chance that true progressive thought and action will be impeded. It is the duty and challenge of this college to lead in these areas.

The kind of education described by Dr. Albert Burke must be unequivocally provided and supported at Wilmington College in the future. It is a difficult thing, however, for Americans to present both sides of every situation, and it will probably be hard for a faculty and administration to be completely "liberal and progressive".

I am sure that there are a great number of people who think of the four year status as an opportunity for many more students to receive an education. But it is intensely galling for some "prominent citizens" to dwell in glowing terms of how much business the college will bring to the area. When you ask "what about all those students . . . ?" there is always that "Yes, but the money it will bring into Wilmington . . . ?". Well, I think the recent Conservation and Development report showed that much more than a four year college will be needed to get the Wilmington economy on a sound and realistic footing. Regardless of how much talk and just plain talk there is down town about how good everything is there must be more than lip service given to good education at Wilmington College.

Advice

It makes good sense to a businessman to cut his costs as much as possible. However, it seems a deliberate attempt to keep certain groups of this SINKLAND society "in its place" when a group in our fair city tries to convince an industrial firm that it should not pay its workers above a certain amount. A group such as this is a detriment to true progress rather than a spur. This sort of group, as long as it retains the character which would precipitate action such as that example mentioned above, should have nothing to do with an institution whose duty it is to create an atmosphere of sound values in today's students. It is obvious that such a group is here for nothing but its own gain. It would not hesitate one second to force a teacher into a precarious position because he was a threat to that gain or its status. If a teacher had the courage to present say impartial comment on wages which are just in the light of present needs, he justly might "be in trouble." I firmly hope that this situation will not become an eventuality.

Teacher Establishes Rapport with Class

Larry Ingle, A Man Who Sets Out To Impart Truth

(Editorial Note: The Seahawk staff takes pride in featuring Larry Ingle, Assistant Professor of Social Sciences, who has established a reputation of quality leadership and instruction during his two years at Wilmington College.)

"The profit of studying history lies in something else than in a dead knowledge of what happens to have happened." — George Santayana

This quotation may be seen taped on the door of Room L-212, Mr. Larry Ingle's office. A realization of the matter of this quote may be found in every student of Larry Ingle's.

One day last fall in an SS-114 class a teacher was lecturing on the growth of American industrialism around the turn of the century. He explained the control held by the "robber barons" over most of the country and gave instances of the double standard of morality by which the industrialists lived. A student in the class who seemed unable to wait any longer to ask a question raised his hand. He said, "What's wrong with that double standard; it deals with two different things?"

Student's Decision

The teacher answered, "You will have to decide for yourself what is right or wrong about it." He was grinning. He evidently was quite pleased that someone in the class had found himself in a position where he had to use his mind to evaluate a situation. The teacher made no attempt to evaluate it for him; the student could choose to choose if he wished.

The student is one of many group for reference points to some semblance of certitude, but the teacher is one of few who can make available the reference points to those who grope. His name is Larry Ingle.

In an age in which prejudice and narrow-mindedness based on ignorance is a dire threat to man's existence, the man who sets out to impart truth shoulders a heavy responsibility. But only the man who is willing to do so can be called a teacher.

Larry Ingle is a teacher. In every class he has taught at this college it has been obvious that he saw truth not only as not telling falsehoods but as telling the whole truth, the whole story. For the student this is the all-important aspect he must have in his teacher. Mr. Ingle gives no crippled information; he gives and interprets it all. He does more than tell you that World War I was financed through war bond sales; he tells you about the extreme measures taken to coerce American citizens to buy bonds. When he relates this fact that student in the back row has no choice but to look objectively at our entire system, no choice but to ask himself why it was this way. If he will admit the facts he will have a very difficult time being narrow-minded in his questioning. And, most encouragingly, he questions.

Dedicated to Profession

Larry Ingle epitomizes the term, engagement. He is a man who is involved and dedicated to his profession. At the second he steps through a classroom door he communicates his involvement to the class. A student can sense that this teacher is going to act, is going to do something. The drive and excitement about the man immediately generates a rapport with the class, which knows it is there on serious business. He may shut the door with a bang, charge the lecture (or if it isn't there charge into another room for it), slap his notes down on it, and then laugh for a minute over an ominously impending quiz.

Dearly Beloved

There is no student present that day who doubts for a moment that he will be lectured to in no uncertain terms. Usually by thirty-one minutes after the hour there is already furious note-taking with heads bent over desk tops. Mr. Ingle will make a point; the writing will continue. But, when the words, "But that's not all, dearly beloved!" come out all the heads pop up. In Mr. Ingle's class history is news. The heads pop up all the time. For this man history is not stale textbooks or dry lectures; it is adventure, personality, and revelation. History for him is alive; it is man and people, not expired events and presidents with dates after their names. No one dozes off in his class.

Today, when students seem capable of no directed action and are attending classes in droves to learn how to make more money than their fathers, there is a strong need for Larry Ingle and those like him. Perceptive commentators bemoan youth's obvious lack of values, morality, and responsibility. Without a doubt we are a most materialistic generation. But, I maintain, there is hope for us as long as a man like Larry Ingle can teach. While his kind is there to show us the values that have been and the false values that are, there is a good chance that we will not be vegetated by the time we are twenty-five.

Mr. Ingle has said countless times that "You will only have a hard time in this class if you refuse to think." The kind of students unfortunately refuse to think but most of his students do not refuse. The kind of thought that Ingle provokes is a chief distinction between his class and the majority. The result of thought in his class is a conscious realization of concepts upon which the whole human condition rests.

Inward Reflections

This is different than the often logic-bound thinking which is taken for granted in many courses.

The vitality and sense of humor which also characterize Larry Ingle's teaching are part of a broad pattern which helps to convey the alternatives from which true learning is composed. These choices also imply values, to which Larry Ingle so often alludes. Perhaps the greatest of those values is that the choice must always be there for each student to make.

Marked by Individualism

An individualistic person Larry Ingle does not strike a selfish pose; he stands out, but his individualism is such because of his convictions. He is very conscious of hypocrisy and sham does not hold up very long under his inquiry. With history he glosses over nothing. He reads continuously and possesses a powerful knowledge of his field. When he talks one hears and respects. One also has faith in this man.

The constant "why this and why that" and the often poignant questions like "Do you mean a president did something like that?" are a testament to Larry Ingle's teaching. There is really little need for this tribute. He receives a tribute each time a student asks him a question. He receives the highest praise each time a student comes to him asking to borrow a book because "I'd like to read it."

The quotation on the door of Larry Ingle's office is indicative of his depth as a man. There is more to history than "dead knowledge" and there is more to this teacher than "H. LARRY INGLE: ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, SOCIAL SCIENCES, B.A., M.A."

Teachers To Leave WC; New Ones Join Faculty

The students aren't the only people who come and go every year. A few of this year's teachers will not be returning to the college next year.

Mrs. Julia Everette's husband has been offered a job in another city and so Wilmington College will lose an assistant professor.

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Freeman, the librarian, will not be here next year.

Mr. Larry Ingle has been accepted at the University of Wisconsin, which is noted for its history department. He plans to study there for his Ph.D.

Leave of Absence

An assistant librarian, Miss Linda Lee Hines, is going to the University of North Carolina for a year during which she will have a leave of absence to obtain her master's degree.

Also granted a leave of absence is Mrs. Elizabeth A. Pear-sall, instructor in English, who will be going back to school to obtain her master's degree.

Some others who will be going away, but only for three months to attend summer sessions are Dean J. Marshall Crews, Walter C. Biggs, and Fred Toney, Jr., who will be attending N. C. State. Calvin L.

Doss, Richard G. Stone, Jr., and Carl Gay will be at the University of North Carolina. Thomas R. Lupton will be at Texas A&M, and Thomas E. Gay, Jr., will attend the University of Virginia.

New Teachers

Don't worry. They will be back fall quarter and with them will be some new faces that have been added to the growing faculty of Wilmington College. In the Chemistry department will be Dr. de Louche from Georgia Peabody College. Then in the Modern Language Department there will be a professor from the University of Maine, Dr. Lloyd Bishop. Next year with the beginning of the new Philosophy department, Dr. B. Frank Hall will be added to the faculty. E. M. West, who will obtain his Ph.D. in August from Duke University will be the new faculty member of the Business Administration department.

Still in the workings and not yet completed is the hiring of new professors for the Biology, English, History, Math, Music, and Art departments. This involves minor details only, and for all intents and purposes it can be said that the departments will have additional faculty members.

WILC, Student Broadcasting System, Hopes To Broadcast On Air 63-64

One of the greatest struggles for existence at Wilmington College has been with the WILC Student Broadcasting system here. Their main trouble is money—they don't have any—to speak of that is.

The little bit of money that is appropriated to them goes to trying to keep the station broadcasting. This means that most of the equipment is second hand and new equipment is bought only in dire necessities. All the records are donations and so top quality stuff is hard to come by.

Well, WILC isn't giving up. Instead, it is trying to build up to a point of broadcasting on the air. Next year they hope to be on a budget and to have enough money so as to be able to take care of their own equipment. Donations of any type from money to people's time will be gladly accepted and appreciated.

The members of WILC are also trying to obtain scholarships for the executive staff members. In this way they hope to provide added incentive for people interested in becoming announcers and possibly members of the executive staff.

Essentially, however, the students must realize that WILC is for the students and therefore must progress with the school.

S. R. O. Theatre Plays Stirring Avant-Garde

By BETH FINEBERG

Review: "The Sandbox" by Edward Albee. "The Leader" by Eugene Ionesco. Directed by Doug W. Swink. "Krapp's Last Tape" by Samuel Beckett. Directed by Martha Parker. Technical consultant, Calvin Doss; master electrician, Sandy Carr; assistant electrician, Randy Gardner; music recordings, William F. Adcock; Props, Joanne Starnes; scenery, Drama Department. Wilmington College Theatre, May 16, 8 p.m.

Theatre Avant-Garde

Tonight at the S.R.O. Theatre the audience met a manifestation of the theater new to Wilmington—Theatre Avant-Garde. This evening was not the first time the Theatre Avant-Garde has puzzled an audience. Many critics call it Anti-Theater. But the "Theatre of the Absurd" is gaining wider popularity; therefore, it deserves an attempt at understanding.

Theatre Avant-Garde is Anti-Theater only as far as it disregards traditional ideas of drama and has found acceptance by the general public a difficulty. Today's avant-garde seems to alienate the whole bourgeois majority of our population.

Man's Existence

Theatre Avant-Garde merely tries to reveal life implicitly, not explicitly. It searches for the meaning of man's existence.

Albee, Beckett, and Ionesco are among the foremost playwrights. As poets, they use symbolism to imply; and images, rhythm, tone color, and connotation to tell directly. As playwrights they are unconventional. Rather than traditionalized plots, these men use intensity and emotional states to sustain suspense and provide unity. They mingle tragedy and comedy.

"The Sandbox"

In "The Sandbox" the comedy only emphasizes the tragedy of our condition with a surrealistic jolt. Albee believes that most people are no good. They are absurd cartoons incapable of communication. Sandy Carr portrays Daddy, who was dominated by his bossy wife, with fine control. Mary C. Hodgins ably but unevenly showed the expected lip service to conventional sorrow given by totally self-centered Mommy. There seems to be a hopeless gulf among people.

But Albee does have hope as put forth by Grandma. Martha Parker presented with discernment and sensitivity the old lady who symbolized her dying by burying herself with sand. Grandma was bowed by the indifference of her fellow creatures, but had dignity, for she cranked but fearlessly accepted reality. When the young man (tolerably played by Robert Autry) revealed himself as the angel of death, her calm surrender to him showed the insignificance of a human life ended.

"Krapp's Last Tape"

With "Krapp's Last Tape" Beckett carried on a sense of newness that marked the innovation that "Waiting For Godot" brought to a stagnant theater. Doug W. Swink gave a splendid interpretation of mankind which has "... nothing to look backward to with pride / And nothing to look forward to with hope ..." (Robert Frost). In this play in which "nothing happens", interest was to be maintained by action.

Mr. Swink sometimes failed to sustain interest by his pantomime which displayed futility and isolation.

However, the tragicomic situation of "Krapp's Last Tape" was quite evident. Beckett's "The Leader"

"The Leader" by Ionesco salutes man praise of political leaders. Also Ionesco makes men anonymous. Sam Garner (The Announcer) served without enough variety of inflection as the liaison can or a type of Greek chorus between The Leader and his people. Gene Marlowe (The Young Lover), Bob Bowden (The Admirer), and Barbara Bradley (The Girl Admirer) rendered passable performances as the adoring crowd. Louise Ambrosiano (The Girl Friend) best delivered the exuberant vapidity of human relationships and communication. The fact that the Leader (Ed Herring) had no head did nothing to discourage the mindless hysteria of his followers.

Ionesco presents men as puppets moving and speaking meaninglessly. His caricatures envision us as useless, vain, and cruel humor gives relief and illuminates the attitude that man is a subject for laughter because he suffers alone. To give himself the illusion that he has experienced life, Krapp or his tape talks. Without talk Krapp would feel annihilated. But Krapp is aware of his plight, for he and his tape join in laughter at the idealism of his youth.

Krapp is an animal. The very voluptuousness of the banana business supports this point. His situation is without remedy, for the old man and the young one of thirty-nine are one in their hopelessness. The connotation of the name "Krapp" is obvious. His world (and ours?) has no spiritual values. Man is trapped within the limitations of bodily functions.

stupid. Ionesco's comedy destroys human dignity. Nevertheless he protests the predicament of the social animal. Conformity defeats uniqueness. The spiritual is lost in the pursuit of the tangible. Although this playwright seemingly produces an unreal world, reality is rooted in the unreal.

The S.R.O. Theatre offered a stimulating and exciting evening by its performance of avant-garde drama. Ionesco says, "To go beyond that twilight land that is neither life nor theater, we must exaggerate... beyond the bounds of the true or the likely in order to arrive at something that is truer than life itself; the amplified and theatrical image of life which strikes deep below the surface of reality".

Art Students Of WC Exhibit Sampling Of Year's Work In 5th Annual Show

The exhibit in Hoggard Hall this month is a show of the work done this year by the students of Claude Howell's Art Department. Each student has done many works and those exhibited are a sampling of his year's work. This is the fifth annual Student Exhibition.

Design Problems

There are many media represented in the show and an almost limitless variety of techniques are used. Many of the works are problems for design classes. These call for a concentration of effort and use of the senses which keeps the design students busy for hours on end. There is always someone in the Art Department working on a problem.

Life Drawing

There are the life drawings which are quite well matted and according to Claude Howell they are the best life drawings he has ever had. During the year at the Wednesday night life classes, Howell has asked the students to bring something new with which to draw each time. Everything from Magic Marker to chalk was used.

There are also the paintings from the painting classes. Ray Oxendine's painting, Trees, won an honorable mention in the recent first Lower Cape Fear Exhibition. The oils reflect the hard work that is going on in the painting classes.

Some of the students exhibiting in Hoggard Hall have also exhibited in the Cottage Lane Show during the Azalea Festival.

Exhibitors

The students exhibiting in Hoggard Hall are: Ray Oxendine, Lloyd Robuck, Nancy McIntyre, Faye Barnes, John Lindner, Peggy Jo Worrell, Emily Coddington, Steve Mintz, Maria Rocab, Dot Weathersbee, Jessie Gray, Helen Ward, Lilly Bloodworth, Betty Bickford, Hilda Echols, Bebe Blomme, Robert Autry, Helen Traister, Rachel MacRae, Louise Lanier, Marty Mabry, Sara Cotten, Mary Funston, Katherine Knox.

What We Need Around Here Is

By LOUISE AMBROSIANO
Many, many, many more books (in particular, reference books) in the library. The library at present is simply inadequate for the need of a college—especially a four year college.

A more convenient bus schedule. As it is now, one has to wait forty-five minutes after a class to get a bus. This experience gets awfully exasperating.

A comfortable, quiet, student lounge. Where a student could lie down and rest during breaks if he weren't feeling exactly up to par, but didn't want to miss class by going home. (One for the girls and one for the boys, of course.)

Stone benches on the campus grounds. Literally "a place in the sun". After hours in classrooms and the library, the inside of a building is depressing to say the least. (—especially in the fall and spring.)

A quiet, cozy place to study. The library is somewhat quiet, but is definitely not cozy. The student lounge is neither cozy nor quiet.

Educational movies that are more adult, up-to-date, and in better condition. The purpose of such movies is lost unless these conditions are met.

A language lab for the language department. It is sad that the high school has one and we don't. A language lab is a very essential part of learning to be fluent in a language.

More paintings, some soft chairs, drapes—anything to soften the atmosphere of the library. It has the cold, sterile look of a mausoleum.

A Fine Arts building—FAST! Using tile walls as art galleries is a bit ridiculous and contrived and certainly doesn't add much to the paintings exhibited. And how long can the drama department be expected to put on plays in a classroom with the smallest stage in existence.

An infirmary—not a general hospital—just an infirmary appropriate to our needs. Like for right after exams.

Smaller rooms apart from or connected to the library where one, two, or three people can talk or study in privacy. It's done in other schools and is wonderful for study.

Guide lights at the entrance to the college. Dr. Hoggard can attest to the necessity of that. The absence of such lights is a hazard at night because of the ditches.

Ivy—! What is a college without ivy growing gracefully up the walls? Hedges and bushes would break the flat, bare area of the campus.

A larger publications room with more equipment. The present publications room is much too small for both the Fledgling staff and Seahawk staff. Furthermore, there is only one filing cabinet two tables and one typewriter for both of the staffs. This situation slows up work and causes a lot of wasted motion.

A psychology lab for that department. A psychology course without a lab is simply incomplete and does not serve its full purpose.

A lecture hall for public lectures. Holding lectures in a classroom crudely serves the purpose.

The ideal thing would be to have a large hall exclusively for lectures with comfortable chairs and appropriate equipment such as a movie screen, etc.

A separate theater building for plays, like the Playmaker's Theatre at the University of North Carolina. Not in the Fine arts building. This won't be in the near future, of course, but not too far in the future either, 'tis hoped.

A special room set aside for the student government and student council affairs and activities. With whatever equipment is appropriate to their needs.

Lockers—This is not as silly as it may sound. We will be a four-year college, but we won't have dorms. For those of us who have classes interspersed throughout the day, and don't have cars, there is nothing to do but carry our load of books around with us all day or take a chance and leave them somewhere. The lockers could be put in the "pub" and could be rented to cover the cost.

A safer method for clearing brush than rapid oxidation. We are getting rid of a lot of trees that way, too.

Added eating facilities. It is ridiculous that the only place to eat for a mile around is that one very small and hardly adequate "cafeteria - snackbar" layout.

A marching band. Everybody talks about school spirit and nobody does anything about it. A marching band would be a very demonstrative step forward.

A small student lounge in every building. The emphasis here is not to have a student lounge but to have a small one in every building. It would definitely be used and appreciated.

A faster method for obtaining textbooks at the beginning of every quarter. There is nothing more frustrating or exasperating than to wait an hour or two in line while one poor woman has to go through the same slow ritual with every student.

A greater variety and more stock of school supplies. A student should be able to purchase any object needed for school there, and not have to resort to a downtown store all the time because the school store doesn't have it.

Sundrops. In all seriousness—Sundrops. They are very popular drinks, and students have requested that they be sold on campus.

A school printing shop. This will take a few years to ever be realized. But it is something to plan for. Something that would be worthwhile and purposeful.

A record library. One could request a record, take it to a soundproof booth and thereby incorporate learning and enjoyment. Records of plays, operas, monologues, and language records, for instance, would be included in the library.

A publicity manager for the college. Someone with his own office whose sole responsibility is the publicity and public relations of Wilmington College.

The preceding list is not a criticism nor a condemnation. It is just a list of things to be considered as needs and helps for the growing student body of a growing college.

"A Grand Year for Singing"

Wilmington College Chorus Presents Musical Enjoyment Throughout Year

That it has been a "grand year for singing" can not be doubted by the members of the Wilmington College Chorus. Under the direction of Loyd Hudson, the chorus has done much to provide musical enjoyment for the people of Wilmington as well as the college community. A glimpse at the year's activities show that this is true.

Their frequent appearances at such civic clubs as Rotary and Kiwanis during fall quarter led to return appearances.

Appear on TV and Radio
Because of their versatility and professional quality, the chorus has provided entertainment on radio and television throughout the year, making appearances on Variety Showcase and the Wilmington College Show.

The highlight of the musical season came when the chorus members donned their green blazers and climbed aboard a bus, thus beginning their Spring tour. With Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man" as a theme the chorus performed for students at assemblies at Bolivia, Shalotte, Wallace - Rose Hill, Dixon, Jacksonville, and Burgaw, sometimes making as many as three performances in one day.

Concert Features Favorites
A Grand Night For Singing, or their Spring Concert gave the students and public an opportunity to hear such tunes as "Let A Smile Be Your Umbrella", "Dixie", "Zip - A - Dee Doo Dah", "When The Red, Red Robin Comes Bob, Bob Bobbing Along", music from the "Music Man" and the finale from "Faust".

The chorus has two appearances remaining on their agenda this year. For Baccalaureate they will sing a musical arrangement entitled "The Ten Commandments", featuring bass soloist Jerry Ely. For graduation exercises the chorus will sing "Climb Every Mountain."

Top Twelve Excel
In addition to the full chorus consisting of 25 voices, the Top Twelve, as Mr. Hudson calls them, make many appearances during the year. Civic groups, television appearances, dinner meetings and commencement exercises all find the Top Twelve willing and ready to perform. Members of the group are Marcia Garner, Elaine Gregory, Jo Ann Legwin, Margie Smith, Sandy Gibbs, Barbara Bradley, Wally West, Jerry Ely, Sam L. Garner, Carl Sneed, and Wayne Robinson. Glenda Lennon serves as accompanist for both groups.

Seahawks Take Three; Win Region 10 Crown

Wilmington College's Seahawks combined 16 hits and six walks to defeat the Wingate Bulldogs, 11-6, in the final game of the National Junior College regional playoffs at Brevard and advance to the NJCAA tournament at Grand Junction, Colo.

In their first two games of the Region 10 playoffs, Wilmington defeated Hiwassee, Tenn., 7-4, and nipped Wingate for the first time, 8-6.

Cole Leads at Plate

Tom Cole was the top batter during the three-day tournament with seven hits for 13 trips to the plate. Bill Harris was second with six hits. The Hawks had a total of 39 hits in the three games played.

Jim Braxton's three and one-third innings of shutout pitching in relief of Percy Wood stopped the Wingate offensive attack to give Wilmington its eighth straight win and push their season record to 17-4. Wood was the winning pitcher, fanning two and walking three. Braxton struck out four and walked three batters. Wingate's Bob Lackey was charged with the loss.

Cole, Harris, and Whitey Hunsucker led the assault for the Hawks in the third game as they collected three hits. After Cole doubled off of Wingate's Wes McIntire, leftfielder Steve Coley smashed a 365-foot home run over the centerfield hedge to account for two runs. Hunsucker matched Coley with a 365-footer over the left centerfield fence to account for the third run in the top of the eighth inning.

Sam Gets Sixth

In the first game of the playoffs, righthander Sam Page chalked up his sixth win of the season without a defeat in leading the Hawks in their win over the Hiwassee, Tenn., club.

Harris, Cole, Bob Shipp, and Flea Coward each collected two safeties in leading Wilmington's seven run assault. Cole drove in three of the seven runs on two singles.

Page got off to a rocky start in the first inning. After allowing six consecutive singles, he settled down to space six more hits throughout the contest and strike out 12 batters to blank the Tennessee team the remainder of the contest.

Shipp Homers

In the second game, Wilmington Shipp saved the day with a three-run, 10th-inning homer to bring the Hawks from behind to slide by Wingate and put Wilmington in the finals of the double elimination event.

Shipp's ace was the third four-bagger of the game for the WC team. Shortstop Harris and pitcher Wray Ware also smacked home runs for the winners. Ware slammed a 335-foot homer over the left field hedge to tie the score in the fourth inning and Harris followed with a 350-foot clout to right center.

The Seahawks were behind constantly throughout the game as the hard-hitting Bulldogs outhit the winners 13-11. Wingate rocked Ware for nine singles and two doubles before Sam Page relieved him in the ninth inning. Page was lifted in favor of big Jim Braxton in the 10th after giving up two hits, and Braxton received credit for the win, his second in two decisions.

These three wins provided the passport for Wilmington to the NJCAA national tournament next week.

Golfers Undefeated In Conference Play

The Wilmington College golf team has closed out its 1963 schedule undefeated in conference play and holder of the Virginia-Carolina Conference title.

The Seahawk linksmen, whose only defeats were at the hands of the University of North Carolina and East Carolina — both non-conference teams — ended the season with a 4-0 conference record and 4-2 overall.

In the conference the Hawks whipped Louisburg and Chowan twice to better their 2-0 conference record of last year.

Of the six matches this season, Roger Fowler was medalist once and Ricky Berman was low man three times.

Berman finished the season with an overall 75.5 average, Fowler with a 76.

Veteran Golfers Lead College To Va.-Car. Conference Title

Editor's Note: This is the last article in the series on the featured Seahawk golfers.

Wilmington College's golf team, victorious in four of its six outings this spring, boasts some of the finest amateur talent in the area. The Seahawk's spotlight shines on six of the golfers who have led the Seahawk linksmen to the Virginia-Carolinas Conference championship this year.

Ricky Berman, the 5-9, 140-pound sophomore captain of the team, is a native of Wilmington. Widely acclaimed as one of the foremost young amateurs in the state, Ricky boasts an impressive array of accomplishments. In 1956 and 1957 he copped the Chestnut Junior High School championship. Then he moved on to New Hanover High School where he lettered for three years and captained the team as a senior. Ricky's many titles include: first flight winner in the 1959 City Open, Pine Valley Junior Championship in 1960, runner-up for the city championship in 1961, City Champion in 1962, and first flight runner-up in the State Junior Championship.

Despite his outstanding accomplishments in the golfing world, Ricky plans to study for a degree in the biological sciences at East Carolina College when he transfers there next year.

Jack Also Impressive

Jack Harrell is another product of Wilmington and NHHS. The 5-7, 135-pound sophomore, number two man on the Seahawk squad, is equally as well regarded in golfing circles as Ricky. Both boys' careers have closely paralleled since their high school days. Like Ricky Jack has also chalked up an impressive string of achievements. He was the number three man on the NHHS State Championship team in 1959 placing seventh in the state-wide tournament. Jack has been the runner-up for first flight honors in the city championship and has also placed as high as third in the championship flight.

The Gemmell brothers, Andy and Will, are also NHHS graduates. Playing out of the Cape Fear Country Club both boys (19-year-old sophomores) have put together excellent records. Andy, who shoots between 78 and 80, laid claim to the Cape Fear Junior Championship in 1959 and Will was the 1954 second flight winner in the Muni Club Championship, CFCC first flight runner-up in 1959, and CFCC junior flight winner in 1960.

Both boys plan to continue their education at the University of North Carolina where they will study business administration.

Jim Has Only Ace

Jim Moseley, the 6-1, 143-pound freshman golfer, claims the distinction of being the only Seahawk golfer to have a hole-in-one to his credit. He too was a member of the NHHS State Championship team.

Harry Buzzell, a 6-2, 170-pound sophomore from Presque Isle, Me., rounds out this year's team. As a high school athlete Harry excelled in four sports. He tallied three letters in basketball as he sparked his team to tournament competition; two letters in baseball in which he played center field and batted over .300; and two letters in track for the broad jump. In addition he played in the Maine Schoolboy Golf Tournament.

All of the golfers have done a fine job in representing Wilmington College this year and breathing new life into the golfing program at the college.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

It seems that each year about late May a certain uneasy sentimentality and vague sense of nostalgia settles over a select group of the population known as students. The most significant result of this phenomenon is an almost uncontrollable desire to reminisce. We must admit that we too have fallen victim to this strange but delightful illness.

Yes, it has been a good year. In its last year as a junior college Wilmington College has indeed shown that it is ready in every way to accept the duties and responsibilities of a senior institution. The college took on an air of maturity in the past year that it had never quite possessed before. A deeper interest and desire to participate in the affairs of the school was displayed by an aroused student body. Under the leadership of the student and administrative officers Wilmington College moved into its own.

The college, already established as a powerhouse in junior college athletics, proved it once again by capturing regional honors in both basketball and baseball for the second year in a row. Once again the Seahawk cagers saw action in the NJCAA tournament and, after keeping everyone on the edge of their seats with heart-stopping overtime games, walked away with sixth place.

And fans all over the country came to realize what Seahawk supporters already knew: Gene Bogash is the best junior college basketball player in the nation. It is more than appropriate that no other Seahawk basketball player will ever wear number 40.

Only last week the Seahawk nine clinched their fifth consecutive Region 10 baseball title and the right to take another crack at winning the national championship which they captured in 1961.

The Wilmington College intramural athletic program got off to a gratifying start this year thanks to the hard work and sincere interest displayed by the faculty members and the clubs on campus. We are looking forward to seeing this program grow and expand to other fields of competition next year as the experience gained from this year's endeavors is put into practice.

Golf boomed at Wilmington College this year as the caliber and amount of competition increased. A great deal of tribute should go to Mr. Allen and Coach Brooks for seeing to it that the team was able to compete under such excellent circumstances.

Athletically as well as otherwise the 1962-63 term has been a tremendous success and it is not over yet. The baseball team still has to compete in the national tournament and there is even some talk of sending the golf team to Indiana to represent the Virginia-Carolinas Conference in the NJCAA golf tourney.

As this year has been successful so next year promises to be. The four-year status of Wilmington College will broaden its horizons in many ways. Seahawk fans will undoubtedly witness even stiffer competition in all sports next year and the experience gained this year will prove valuable.

The 1962-63 editions of the basketball and baseball teams have done extremely well especially when one considers that they were composed mainly of new and inexperienced freshmen. And it was on these boys that the brunt of the load fell. How well they acquitted themselves is in the record books in black and white, sixth in the nation in basketball and another Region 10 crown in baseball. We think this is a pretty good showing for any school and it is on this record that we base our hopes for next year.

Seahawk Mentor Guided By Fate

Fate has played a major role in the career of Coach William J. Brooks. In fact it was only fate that guided him to a coaching career rather than one in engineering.

Coach Brooks' intriguing career began in high school in Wilson, where he won All-State honors as a high school quarterback. After graduation he attended Wake Forest College where he studied engineering and played football. But during the 1941-42 season he sustained a leg injury which was to eventually change the whole pattern of his life.

Marries at Low Point

The death of his father, the injury preventing his participation in football, and the war caused him to leave Wake Forest to work for an engineering concern. Because of his injury he was repeatedly turned down by the services and in 1943 at the low point of his career he met and married Margaret Bunch.

At that point things began to brighten for him. The injury healed and he was accepted into the Air Force in 1944 and became an aviation student at Oklahoma A&M. After completion of his training there he was scheduled to become an aviation cadet. But because the end of the war was in sight and the quotas were full he became an "on-the-line trainee" at Enid Air Force Base.

as a player-manager for a semi-pro baseball team in Nova Scotia he guided his team to three championships in five years from 1949 to 1954.

In 1951 Mr. and Mrs. Brooks came to Wilmington from Miami where he had completed most of his work toward his M.A. degree. On the faculty at New Hanover High School he was passing coach for the football team and instructed Sonny Jurgensen. As baseball coach at NHHS he guided the Wildcats to two consecutive championships in 1952 and 1953.

Leaves NHHS

Leaving NHHS entirely in 1954 he introduced the Seahawks to baseball in the then large and powerful Virginia-Carolinas Conference. The young and inexperienced teams faced rough sledding for a few seasons until the 1957-58 campaign in which the Seahawk cagers sported a 10-8 record to capture second place in the conference and the baseball team took the conference title it has held ever since.

Coach Brooks has kept the balls rolling, both basketballs and baseballs, with five consecutive conference titles and two tournament championships as well as three second place finishes in the Virginia-Carolinas Conference basketball competition.

Rookies Boost Seahawks To National Prominence

Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of articles about the featured players on the Seahawk baseball squad.

For the fifth year in a row the Wilmington College baseball team will journey to the National Junior College Athletic Association's baseball tournament held in Grand Junction, Colo. This edition of The Seahawk focuses attention on six more players who have been instrumental in guiding the Hawks to another Region 10 title.

Towering Jim Braxton whose 6-6, 220-pound frame gives him the distinction of being the biggest man on the team hails from Winterville, where he earned All-State honors as a high school pitcher. A star performer on the hardwood as well as the baseball diamond, his 23 points per game scoring average earned him All-Conference recognition for three straight years.

Because of ineligibility rules Jim was unable to play baseball last season but with the baseball season he was ready to go and has performed admirably this year.

Westley Hall, the 5-8, 190-pound freshman catcher, is a native of Charlottesville, Va., and Lane High School. In high school Westley excelled in football and baseball. His rugged play on the gridiron earned him the best defensive lineman award. In two years of high school baseball and three years of America Legion competition he never hit less than .300.

Westley plans to continue his education at Wilmington College in secondary education majoring in history.

Lost to Post 10

Larry Honeycutt, the Hawks' right fielder, comes to Wilmington College by way of Raleigh and Needham Broughton High School. Larry also specialized in football and baseball in high school. He earned three letters in football and quarterbacked his team to the state championship in his senior year. As a baseball player he also totaled three letters and his .340 batting average help him collect a Most Valuable Player award. Also playing Legion ball for three years he guided his team to the State Semi-finals before being defeated by Wilmington's Post 10 outfit.

Has Hard-Luck

Eddie Lemon, the hard-luck kid of the Seahawks, is currently in the process of recovering from a recent appendectomy and will probably see only limited action in the NJCAA tourney. Eddie played baseball for three years and football for two years while in high school. His fine gridiron play earned him the title "Mr. Touchdown" at NHHS and his pitching boosted the Wildcats to the Eastern Conference championship. He displays an 18-3 record for three years with Wilmington's Post 10 crew, the defending State Champs.

Is Number One

Glenn Mills, the Hawks' number one man behind the plate, like Eddie is also a product of NHHS's Eastern Conference championship team. His astute handling of pitchers and his .341 batting average helped boost the American Legion Post 10 team to the State Championship in 1960 and 1962.

Glenn plans to continue his education at Wilmington College majoring in physical education and minoring in Spanish.

Jackie Smith, the 6-2, 185-pound native of Woodruff, S.C., was a four-letter man in high school. His skill on the gridiron helped Woodruff High School to the state playoffs in his junior year. He also played on the team which went to the state playoffs in basketball in his junior and senior years. In high school baseball Jackie played on two state champion teams and one near miss. His American Legion post's team went to the state finals in two of his three years on the team.

Jackie's educational plans include the study of business at the University of South Carolina.

Wilmington College Nine Readies For National Tournament Next Week In Colo.

The Wilmington College baseballers, winners of the Virginia-Carolinas Conference title, won the Region 10 playoff at Brevard last week and will represent the region for the fifth consecutive year in the National Junior College baseball tournament beginning on May 30 at Grand Junction, Colo.

To date, the Hawks' record is 17-4 (including the playoff games) compared to last year's 13-6 mark.

Wilmington College won the National championship in 1961 and lost out in the finals of the 1962 tournament to place second in the country.

Last year's fine team walked away with the honors at the double-elimination Colorado event. Hawks' second baseman Flea Coward, outfielder Ronnie Smith, and pitcher Lou Howard were selected to the All-Tournament team. In addition, Smith was named the "Player Most Likely to Succeed in Professional Baseball." He set a new tournament record with 13 runs-batted-in for the event and was voted the tournament's most valuable player. He has since signed a bonus contract with the Houston Colts of the National League.

Flea (Sterling) Coward tied an old tourney mark when he batted out five straight hits in one game. Also, Coward was named as an honorable mention All-American by the National Junior College Athletic Association. The Wilmington star got ten hits in the six games of the tournament. Lou Howard was also named to the second-team All-American squad.

Coward is a member of this year's squad and this season has shown that the Hawks have a number of Smiths and Howards on this year's squad.

Betty Lou Collins presents Coach Brooks with a trophy from the students in recognition for his outstanding contributions to Wilmington College.

While at Enid he played baseball and basketball for the "Enid Airmen" sparking them to second place in the nation in basketball and the national championship in baseball.

Gets His Degree

After the war Coach Brooks left the Air Force and tried to enroll at North Carolina State College to resume his education in engineering. However, the overcrowded conditions resulting from the war forced him to enroll at Atlantic Christian College where he obtained his A.B. in 1948.

While at Atlantic Christian he played baseball and basketball and semi-pro baseball in the Coastal Plain League.

Upon receipt of his degree he began teaching school and coaching football, baseball, and basketball in Cole Run during the school term for two years. Also Wilmington College teams have participated in four National Junior College Athletic Association baseball tournaments and two basketball tournaments. In competition with the best junior colleges in the nation Coach Brooks' charges have captured tenth and sixth place finishes in basketball and fourth and second places in baseball; in 1961 the Seahawks won the NJCAA baseball championship at Grand Junction, Colorado.

Coach Bill Brooks' devotion and dedication to the high ideals of the sports he coaches has earned him the respect and admiration of both players and coaches alike. An insight into the esteem in which he is held by the students and administration of Wilmington College as well as the people of Wilmington was seen last year when the new baseball field on the campus was dedicated Brooks' Field.

saying that he intends to work for such programs as the intramural sports and a better student council which will further school spirit.

Jack Loftus, newly elected Sophomore Class President, stressed in his campaign that the Sophomore Class has failed to take its part in college affairs due to lack of leadership, and that he will see that the class takes the lead it should.

The day after elections Loftus held a meeting of several members of the Sophomore Class, including the Sophomore Vice-President, Bobby Eakins, and Sophomore Secretary-Treasurer, Faye Barnes, to begin carrying out plans for next year. Discussed at the meeting were ways to get money and the problems connected therein, and how to get the class as a whole an active part of the government."

At the meeting Loftus said, "I think we're in the position to challenge any class to see if they can do more than we can."

Next year's three vice-presidents: Evelyn Adkins, Junior Class; Hugh Paschal, Student Body; and Bobby Eakins, Sophomore Class.

Publication Medias Announce Editors

Billy Lewis will serve as next year's Fledgling editor-in-chief, and Gene Marlowe will be the '63-'64 editor-in-chief of The Seahawk.

"The task standing before me to supervise the construction of the 1964 Annual is a great one," said Lewis. "I do, however, feel that with a carefully selected staff and close cooperation, the task may be accomplished."

Praises Annual

Speaking in praise of the annual recently published and distributed, Lewis said, "The 1963 Fledgling represents many hard hours of labor on the part of the Fledgling Staff. I am very proud of this year's book and feel that every ounce of effort put into it was very worthwhile."

Having already appointed his assistant editor, Mike Cavanaugh, who will be a Freshman next year, Lewis called for volunteers willing to work on the staff next year to contact either himself or the advisor, Gerald S. Rossetti.

Avoids Repetition

"Each year the task of producing a yearbook becomes more difficult," said Lewis. "Repetition is hard to avoid. The job we have is to make a book without while improving at the same time."

Saying that the newspaper, as the main communications media on campus, is responsible for any ignorance among the students on campus, is responsible for any ignorance among the students concerning events or conditions of the college," Marlowe stated that The Seahawk will work to present thorough and comprehensive reports of news and sports, and to voice both the opinions of the staff and the students through the editorial page.

Two Editors Return

Gene and his competitor were interviewed by the Publications and Scholarship Board of the college preceding a recommendation speech by this year's editor, Sondra Wilson.

Louise Ambrosiano will return to the Seahawk staff next year as feature editor, one of the four main positions to be filled. Hugh Paschal plans to resume his job as sports editor.

Journalists Wanted

Those persons interested in journalism and working on the Seahawk next year should contact Gene or the Seahawk advisor, Thomas Lupton.

Swiss, German Natives Visit Campus; Schools In Various Countries Differ

Over the recent past weeks several foreign visitors have been on campus.

The most recent was Peter Brem of Switzerland who arrived at the college last Friday with the visiting Board of Higher Education.

Brem, a house guest in Raleigh for a month of one of the members of the board, is in this country as a member of the Experiments in International Living Program.

Pointing out striking differences between the colleges in his country and WC, Brem mentioned that in Switzerland the colleges had no public speaking classes, no student newspapers, and no language labs or foreign magazines.

Annagritt Kilby, the wife of an army officer stationed in Germany and now living here, visited the German classes at the college recently.

Miss Kilby, a native of the region around Hanover, Germany, had only been in America for a week at the time of her visit to Ethel Murray's class, where she spoke informally in German with the students.

College Staff Has Increase Of Instructors

Editor's note: Due to the large number of new teachers and the impossibility of covering them all in one issue, we are splitting them up over more than one paper.

This year 25 new instructors have joined the staff of faculty members as a result of the upgrading of the College to a four-year status.

Covered in this issue of the Seahawk are Frank Honey, E.M. West, Thomas Allen, Barbara Ann Moser, Dr. Will Scott DeLoach, Dr. Amelie Blyth, Dr. Hildelisa Hernandez, and Dr. Vincente Nestor Hernandez.

Dr. W. S. DeLoach, Associate Professor of Chemistry, grew up in Birmingham, Alabama, and received his bachelor and masters degrees from Howard College in the same state. Dr. DeLoach earned his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago.

"Wilmington College should have a good future," said Dr. DeLoach. "It is clear and evident that a good job has been done in the Chemistry Department in the past years."

In his spare time, Dr. DeLoach enjoys spectator sports and bridge.

A native of Illinois, Dr. Amelie Blyth, Associate Professor of Biology, has seen much of the States and Europe. She did undergraduate study at Ohio State College and graduate work at the University of California at Davis.

On a fellowship, Dr. Blyth studied horticulture in England near Canterbury. She has taught across country from the Uni-

Governor Sanford Appoints 12 Trustees To Serve College

Governor Terry Sanford recently appointed 12 persons to serve on the board of trustees of Wilmington College, as provided for and in accordance with Legislation passed last year by the 1963 General Assembly in Raleigh, N. C., which raised the status of the College from junior to senior college level.

Of the 12 persons named, eight of them have previously served and four of them are new.

New members of the board of trustees and the dates their terms will expire are:

James Millard Smith, a native of Black Creek, is a partner in the M. L. Lanier General Merchandise in Chinquapin. A graduate of Black Creek public schools and Wake Forest College, Smith is a member of the Ruritan Club, on the Board of trustees at Duplin General Hospital, and is a school board member of the East Duplin School in Beulaville. June 30, 1967.

Mrs. Cyrus D. Hogue, Jr., Wilmington housewife, is corresponding secretary of St. John's Art Gallery board of directors, a former president of the Junior League of Wilmington.

National Science Foundation Awards Crews Research Grant

Dean J. Marshall Crews has received a grant of $2,000 from the National Science Foundation for research of thermal stress in man.

The study, which Dean Crews says, to his knowledge, is the first formal Wilmington College research program, will try to determine the effects of environmental factors such as temperature, wind velocity, and other influences on man's heat loss.

The work is a continuation of study Dean Crews began this summer while studying at North Carolina State College.

John Dempsey will aid the Dean by helping to record the readings from the research station set up behind Hoggard Hall.

Explaining the value and aims of the study, Dean Crews said, "We hope to be able to say how much a man working will lose in body heat through sweating, radiation, and convection under certain temperatures, humidity, and wind velocity."

"We are also trying to find instruments that will measure this more readily than it's been done before."

Dean Crews said that it was hoped that a way could be found to take all these factors into one measurement as to how many calories would be burned up and how much food would be needed to maintain the work the body was doing.

In Raleigh, where parts of the same study are being conducted, experiments are being made to try to find the recovery rate of a person after exercise, such as their return to normal heart beat.

These studies will also attempt to determine the relationship between skin temperature and heart beat.

Dean Crews and his assistant will be working at the research station throughout the year. The Dean expressed his hope that this will be the first of many such research programs the College will engage in.

SRO-Thalians Merge, Present "Teahouse of August Moon"

Wilmington College's SRO Theatre has combined with the Thalian Association to present jointly five stage plays during the coming year, the first of which will be John Patrick's "Teahouse of the August Moon" on October 24, 25, and 26 in Thalian Hall, under the direction of Doug W. Swink, head of the Dramatic Arts Department.

Of great historic interest, the merger marks the joining together of the youngest senior college theater in the state with the oldest little theatre in the United States.

WILC Begins Second Season Broadcasting

The idea of organizing a radio station at Wilmington College was conceived by Al Shew and Tommy Landen in the fall of 1961 and, with approval, was executed early in December by Frank Rogers, Oliver Vestal, Barbara Bradley, Ed Mauney, and Jimmy Cooke. The equipment that W.I.L.C. could claim as its own consisted of one deck and one turn table.

Celebrating its first anniversary last Dec. 3, W.I.L.C. has now expanded and become a recognized part of Wilmington College's extra curricular activities. The station now operates with some of the most modern equipment that can be found and has truly grown since its beginning only a little over a year ago.

The station presents "The Wilmington College Show" on radio W.K.L.M. every Monday and Thursday at 4:00 p.m. This program is designed to build school spirit, arouse public interest, and aid the student-station's growth. The "Wilmington College Show" offers to the public an informative fifteen minutes of campus news.

The radio station, located in the Student Services building, starts its broadcasting day at 8:00 a.m. and signs off at 5:00 p.m. The playing of music most desired by the students is the primary interest of the staff of announcers.

A 1954 smash comedy - hit, "Teahouse of the August Moon" made a clean sweep of every major theatrical award presented during the '54 season. Winner of the Pulitzer Prize, the New York Drama Critic's Circle Award, the Antionette Perry Award, the Donaldson Award, the Aegis Theatre Club Award as the best play of the season, it became the most honored play in Broadway's history since "South Pacific."

Saturday Review critic stated, "No plea for tolerance between peoples . . . has ever been less didactic or more persuasive" and proclaimed the play "sensational."

"Teahouse," a satire on the American military in its occupation of Okinawa, combines the logic of the West with the customs of the East to provide its viewers with an evening of what Saturday Review has again labeled "uproarious fun."

Included in the cast are Sakini, Ray Tolley; Sgt. Gregovich, Richard Gerrish; Col. Purdy, Sam Garner; Capt. Fisby, Wally Warr; Old Woman, Laura Coley; Daughter, Rosemary S. Green; Daughter's two children, Evelyn H. Anderson, John W. Bulluck; Mr. Hokaida, Robert Autry; Mr. Omura, Mike Alper; Mr. Sumata, William Lucas; Sumata's father, not announced; Mr. Seiko, Ray Oxendine; Miss Higa Jiga, Jay Fisher; Mr. Keora, Wayne Robinson; Mr. Oshiva, Albert Corbett; Barbara Bradley, Sue McDonald, and Nancy Backus will be seen as the members of the Ladies' League For Democratic Action, while Winnie Healy plays the role of Lotus Blossom, with Sandy Carr on stage as Capt. McLean.

Technical director for "Teahouse" will be announced later. Ann Robinson will serve as stage manager; Jack Lane as poster designer; Mary C. Hodgkin and John Powell, publicity; and the Stagecrafters class will help construct scenery. Any students interested in working backstage with the production are asked to contact Mr. Swink.

John Dempsey, assistant to Dean Crews, records readings from the research station behind Hoggard Hall.

EDITORIALS:

WHAT'S IT TO YOU?

The College is facing another election within the next few weeks, and let us hope that in one respect it will resemble the general elections at the close of last year. Though last year's Sophomore and Junior elections were a pretty sorry show, in that many instances a nomination assured victory due to a lack of candidates. It was certainly not a bad contest in one aspect: there were issues involved.

In most cases a school election is synonymous with a popularity contest; there is simply nothing else to base a vote on other than popularity. Of course, there is popularity involved in any election, but it is best when this popularity is founded upon the platform of the candidate and not so much the candidate himself. Last year's general election was anything other than an apathetic contest to see who had the most friends, which set it apart from other elections at this college.

A strong and active student government needs leaders of convictions who realize they were voted into office because the students expect and want them to carry out those convictions. If the Freshman Class will give us such men in their upcoming elections, rather than the most popular fellow from the best represented high school here at college, the first step toward a successful student government will be completed: that of forming a government of people who have responsibilities and are aware of them.

AND AFTER COLLEGE?

College students are forever being told that the future lies in their hands and that the job of bringing about a better world will someday be theirs. Paradoxically, the very people who tell us this are often unwilling to let youth take over until it has been molded into their own image and the "better" world we get turns out simply to be a succession of the old one. Nevertheless, the fact that tomorrow is ours is true . . . if we are able to substantiate our claims to it when it comes.

Both the world and ideas are changing; the old order is going out by mere virtue of the fact that new truths and ways are proving more efficient than those of the past. To be the leaders of tomorrow, today's youth must resist the will of today's leaders unless they intend to be a minority of throwbacks in a few decades. We are not advocating here rebellion, unless the twig that refuses to be bent is a rebel.

Where are we to assure ourselves of our demand to the future? How are we to guarantee ourselves this? Here, in college, by thinking for ourselves in such a manner that we will live by and build our characters around our thoughts.

It is quite obvious that the purpose of college is something more than to prepare to make a buck; if that were so, trade schools would be much more prevalent than they are today, and there would be considerably less liberal art courses. We believe that the "extra" purpose of college is to initiate thought; not simply to throw a few bombs and slaughter a sacred cow or two, but to give the student the opportunity to build a broad and deep foundation for individual creative thought and speculation, a foundation on which he can build his own philosophy and approach life with a greater awareness.

Will this part of a college education last if it is achieved? Does this essential element of learning which is meant to enable man to utilize to the greatest possibility the faculty with which humanity has become slightly different from the rest of the animal kingdom endure following graduation?

After we are out of college and working there is not as much time or incentive to think; furthermore, saying and living by what one thinks becomes financially disadvantageous—unless you accept the boundaries and limitation both consciously and unconsciously placed on talk and actions, and thus thought, by the social and economic environment—which really isn't thinking at all.

For most of us here in college this is the first and last opportunity we will ever have to engage in honest, individual, and constructive thought, to arrive at ideas around which we might possibly shape our own lives to some extent rather than conform to and be controlled by someone else, be it our individual future bosses or the public. For many of us this is our one chance to discover what thought really is and its value before we become the "yes-men" and the organizational men that we shall have to be to insure our personal economic survival.

Insights

The newspapers of most large colleges take pride in those fancy cigarette ads they sport. This year, this newspaper was looking forward to a few of those hands with the Marlboro taton and Lucky Strike contests. However, the cigarette manufacturers are seriously considering a new policy of not advertising in college papers and of not using college athletes in their ads.

This announcement was made by the Tobacco Institute and confirmed by Reynolds Tobacco Company and Brown and Williamson Tobacco this summer. Liggett and Myers is also seriously considering the move.

The president of Pail Mall in the New York Times said this step is being taken to "keep youngsters from getting the idea that smoking is grownup and the thing to do."

The National Advertising Service, which will suffer a considerable loss of business now, claims that the real reason for the move is because of "certain organizations and anti-cigarette forces" which subject the cigarette companies to "unrelenting pressure."

Whatever the reasons, it will be interesting to watch and see if the majority of manufacturers go through with this little bit of apparent partial suicide.

Those wishing to voice their comments in the Seahawk should get their letter or material in as soon as possible after an issue has come out. This is because the staff is hot on the next paper immediately after one comes out, since we have about a week to shape up a paper before sending it to the printer.

THOUGHT MAKES A NOISE

College papers, especially those from the larger institutions, are usually considered as being radical in both their manner and content as compared with the various local commercial papers. Commercial newspapers, to a degree, must of necessity tread softly and over as few toes as possible or fold for having offended too many readers. College journalists of any merit, on the other hand, while operating with the same tact and diplomacy which decency compels, are not forced to weigh their views with those of the majority of the public, or a sizeable segment of it, and make amendments, thereto; they are generally known for "saying what they think." We think this is true not only of those in college working on a newspaper, but of all the students.

We urge you to speak out; we invite you to use the facilities of this newspaper to express through your letters both your opinions and criticisms. And we expect and hope some of these opinions will dissent with our own; a college where one line of thought is accepted or voiced gives evidence either to an appalling indifference or witlessness.

Our objective is not only to give a thorough and comprehensive reportage of news and to express our own opinions, but also to stimulate thought among the student body and encourage you to offer these thoughts in the newspaper. A newspaper, more than being an entertaining collection of facts, should kindle ideas among its readers, and we shall endeavor to do this through our features and columns.

In addition to this, we believe we owe the students, as well as ourselves, a certain honesty—we will neither be forced or influenced to take or refuse a stand or story. We will say so when we see something we think to be unfair or deserving correction regardless of who accepts or condones it. After evaluating and considering all evidence and advice offered us and at our disposal, we will write a newspaper using our own judgment and knowledge.

Students Show Apathy Toward World Events

By JACK LOFTUS

In June of this year President Kennedy gave an address before the graduating class of American University in Washington, D. C. Here for the first time the President announced that the United States and Great Britain were sending delegates to Moscow in an earnest attempt to reach a solution on the nuclear test ban talks. Berlin, Cuba, and the racial problems were also mentioned in their relationship to the maintenance of peace. When the President mentioned this he was speaking before college students, for well he realized that such a task is not an easy one and the key lies in the field of education.

There is no reason why these remarks cannot be received and studied by Wilmington College students as well. Such an issue as the ratification of the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty which could well become an important step away from the road to thermo-nuclear disaster certainly merits our careful attention. The President then went one step further in a national address in which he asked us to study and debate this treaty. However, let us not limit ourselves to the study and debate of this issue only. It would indeed be interesting to know how some of our students feel on such matters.

The fact that the Wilmington College student is retentive and can express himself well upon such issues cannot be denied. I believe what is lacking is a place wherein he may express himself and enter into debate with others on these issues.

The Pub is a place for music, lunch, cards, and relaxation. In the library one can in semi-quiet do his studies. The classroom is a place for uninterrupted concentration and learning. It is, therefore, quite simple to see that questions such as integration, religion, war, and peace have no room in any of these places.

Such subversive topics must eventually creep into these sacred areas. Perhaps a debating club would be a beginning in the revival of such topics in the College. Where there is education, there must be thought, and if there is no room for one, there is no room for the other. Education leads to clear thinking and from there to debate. Such issues as maintaining the peace in our time as a safeguard against war in the future will take education, thought, and debate.

Printmakers Exhibit

Virginia Ingram, Susan Moore, Ann Carter Pollard, Anne Kesler Shields, and Mary Goslem, five Winston-Salem Printmakers, are now exhibiting their art in Hogarth Hall, where it will remain until October 1.

The five North Carolina printmakers all studied woodcutting under Helen Trush, head of the Art Department at Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. Regular exhibitors at the Winston-Salem Gallery of Fine Arts, these artists represent one of the oldest forms of graphic art.

"The wood, the paper, and the colors kindle my thoughts and feelings and through these I have the joy of exploring a variety of new and exciting relationships. I do not impose the image onto the block, but allow the image to develop in relationship to the surface of the wood, the paper and the colors . . . I have an intensified feeling of being united with nature," stated Miss Goslem when commenting on the woodcut as an art form.

Constitution Is WC Basis

With the anticipation of the change of status of Wilmington College to a four-year institution, there arose a need for revision in the student government. This entailed a new constitution. This, together with the fact that many complaints were made about the inefficiency of the old constitution, resulted in the naming of a committee to lay the groundwork for the new constitution.

In the spring of 1963 the new constitution was submitted to the student body for approval. A large agitation group advocated further revisions. Due to this faction the first submission of the new constitution was defeated by a sixty per cent negative vote. The constitution was returned to committee, further revised, and resubmitted. With an eighty-three per cent affirmative vote the new constitution was passed by the student body and immediately went into effect.

Besides providing the structure for stepping into a government with offices for a four-year college, there were several other areas in which the new constitution contrasted with the old one.

Both the presidential and vice presidential powers were increased to include more authority in their respective capacities. For instance, the vice-president now sits as speaker of the senate.

The Inter-Club Council replaces direct representation of every club in the senate by its one collective representative.

The senate has been notably enlarged to include the various class presidents, vice-presidents, and secretaries, plus five senators from each class.

The new constitution is intended to be a more adequate, effective, and serviceable plan for Wilmington College as an educational institution in the infancy of its four-year status.

Future Plans and Objectives

Last year after his election to the presidency, Ronnie Staton made this statement: "We have a great challenge before us, and how well we meet the challenge will depend upon the co-operation of the entire student body. I know that we are capable of doing an outstanding job for our school and community, and I am looking forward to working with the officers of the student government."

Among the points Staton listed as his objectives for the coming year is to provide the continuous leadership that the student government will require.

Contained in these plans is the acquisition of a name band or group for the entertainment of the students and community. The planned fewer dances, with a higher caliber of entertainment, are highly dependent upon the budget of the Student Senate. Later in the year there will be a study made concerning the possibility of organizing fraternities and sororities on the local level.

All chairmen have been appointed except for the Dance Committee, the Fine Arts committee, and the Inter-Club Council which must first be organized. Also to be organized is a special committee for the telephone directory.

Proceedings for Freshman elections will begin with a freshman assembly on the 23rd or 24th of September for the purpose of explaining filing and election procedures. If more than two people are running for an office, a primary will be held on the first Thursday in October. Then on October 10, the second Thursday in October, the actual Freshman elections will be held.

"I am very pleased with the success of this year's orientation program," said Ronnie Staton, "and the prospects of the coming year."

Senate Governs WC

The Student Senate of Wilmington College is comprised of three branches: legislative, executive, and judicial. Each represents a different aspect of the student's general welfare.

President

The president, vice-president, and secretary of the Student Senate compose the executive branch. Ronnie Staton as president appoints chairmen of all the committees upon recommendation of the Student Senate, and serves as ex-officio of all standing committees and boards. He also has the power to veto the acts of the Student Senate, issue orders to the standing committees, require reports from them, and establish committees subsidiary to him. In his capacity he presides at meetings of the student body and represents the student body in all official functions.

Vice-President

In the position of vice-president, Hugh Paschal acts as the speaker of the senate and takes over in the event of the absence or incapacity of the president.

In charge of the paper work for the executive branch is Judy Campbell, secretary-treasurer.

Senate Powers

The major powers of the Student Senate of Wilmington College are invested in the legislative branch. Primarily it makes all the laws necessary and proper to promote the general welfare of the Student Body. It must also allocate the funds appropriated for student activities. The legislative branch has as its powers of check the right to over-ride a presidential veto by two-thirds majority of those voting and to ratify or reject by a majority vote all appointments made by the president.

Class Officers

Representing the Publications Committee as senator is Mike West. Yet to be elected are the Freshman Class officers and the representative of the Inter-Club council.

Judicial Powers

Exercising the judicial powers of the Student Senate are Barbara Bradley, representing the student body at large; Billy Shipman and Jon Wooten, male judicial representatives; Memory Farrar and Sandra Lennon, women judicial representatives.

There are only three judicial powers, these being to rule on the constitutionality of an act of the senate, to interpret the constitution, and to rule on behavior problems brought before them.

Major Committees

Six major committees are included in the executive branch. Conducting and supervising all student elections will be the Board of Elections headed by Mike West. The Dance Committee, which will handle the affairs for all dances including decor and conduct, at present has no chairman. Also awaiting appointment of a chairman is the Fine Arts committee, which is responsible for all Fine Arts programs conducted at the College.

The Student Orientation Committee, chaired by Steve Culbreth, has already completed its conduction of the orientation program.

One representative from each club will be elected to form the Inter-Club Council which will coordinate intra-mural sports and activities.

The Publications Committee headed by Mike West will coordinate all publicity matter from the Seahawk, the Fledgling and WILC.

Student Powers

The student body is in turn granted certain protective powers. It may initiate any act within the power of the Student Senate by a petition of ten per cent of the student body. It may also call for a ballot on any act of the Student Senate under the same conditions.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

The school term 1963-64 is destined to reveal a period of transition at Wilmington College. As we cast aside our former role as a junior college to assume that of a four-year institution we must of necessity confront a host of problems that will tax the reasoning powers of even our most skilled administrators. While many of these problems have already been met and successfully solved several questions still loom. Some of the most perplexing, though temporary, problems lie in the field of athletics.

What can the Seahawk fan expect this year? How will two of the best junior college teams in the nation fare as they move up into more advanced competition? Who will be the competition? These and many other questions are being asked. Let's take a close look at the situation in an effort to attempt an answer.

Competition

A major factor in the outcome of this or any other season is the schedule the team must play. Wilmington College finds itself in a peculiar situation. The varsity squad of even a three-year school cannot play a junior college or a freshman team except under exhibition conditions. Add to this the fact that most four-year schools are booked solid or have no desire to compete against such a team as the Seahawks and one comes up with quite a problem. One cannot blame the larger schools for this situation for their schedules are often made out several years in advance. And, of course, they have nothing to gain by beating a three-year school whereas a defeat or even a narrow victory might prove embarrassing.

Nevertheless, much has already been done in securing a basketball schedule. Frederick, Campbell, Atlantic Christian, Wesleyan, Pembroke, and Georgia Southern have already been lined up. Coach Brooks assures us that already 14 or more games have been scheduled in addition to the Christmas Tournament at Camp Lejeune.

It has been mentioned as a possibility that freshman teams might be formed to help alleviate some of the scheduling problems. If this comes about many opponents of the past few seasons might once again do battle with the Seahawks.

Basketball

Highly regarded as one of the top junior college teams in the nation last year the Seahawks are certain to face stiff competition in the four-year ranks. However, the cagemen find themselves in good shape with most of the starters from last year's squad returning. In addition Al Thiry and Larry Edens, stars of yesteryear, return to the 'Hawk lineup to take up the slack left by the loss of All-American Gene Bogash.

Questions still crop up. Will the brilliant crop of freshmen succumb to the "sophomore jinx?" Can the highly touted 'Hawks improve their unspectacular record during regular season play? Of course these and other queries can only be answered as the season progresses. However, we believe that the answers will favor the Seahawks. We think that during the pressure packed days of last February the 'Hawks found themselves and that this experience will carry over into this season.

Baseball

As in basketball the Seahawk nine finds itself in good shape this year. Fortunately the squad lost only one starter from last year's NJCAA championship crew. The presence of an extremely strong and experienced bench is bound to aid the 'Hawk attack. Wilmington College, having produced so many outstanding teams, is well known throughout the area as a Mecca for good baseball players. This year's crop adds emphasis to this fact.

Golf

The addition of a junior year to the curriculum makes it possible for the 'Hawks' linksmen to maintain the team that won last year's Virginia-Carolinas Conference crown. Wilmington College can expect to be able to draw from the cream of the crop of the young amateur golfers in the area. The return of last year's captain, Ricky Berman, as well as the number two man, Jack Harrell, commonly referred to as "the gold dust twins," promises continued success for the 'Hawk golfers.

Tennis

The situation regarding tennis is at present doubtful. Interest in the sport must be determined and an adequate place to play must be found before a team can be composed. Because of ineligibility rulings a net team was not formed last season. However, if interest displayed last year is in any way indicative of this year's interest the 'Hawks will have little trouble fielding a team.

"It looks like it's gonna be a good year!"

Coach Allen poses during registration duties.

E. Allen Joins 'Hawk Staff

Expansion has come to Wilmington College. Everywhere there is evidence of the school's new growth. The athletic department is no exception. An influx of athletes hoping for positions on Seahawk teams has made necessary the addition of an assistant to Coach Brooks. He is Thomas Earl Allen.

Coach Allen is a native of Wilmington and a former athlete at New Hanover High School where he was the second baseman for the school's first state championship baseball team. His interest in athletics led him to Wilmington College where he studied under Coach Brooks and played on the first Seahawk baseball squad.

After completing two years here he went to the University of North Carolina where he majored in physical education in preparation for a coaching career.

Upon graduation from the University he accepted a position there as an instructor while he continued his education for a masters degree in education. After receiving his MEd degree Coach Allen accepted a position at Robins, N. C., where he coached baseball compiling an admirable record for two seasons before returning to his alma mater as a coach.

It is expected that Coach Allen will become the coordinator of the expanding intramural program at the College by organizing schedules and securing officials and playing locations for the sports. In the spring he will assist Coach Brooks in the Seahawk baseball campaign.

Confidence Seems Byword, 'Hawks Begin Preparations

By TOMMY SKIPPER

Confidence seems to be the byword as the young Seahawk athletic department prepares to spread its wings for the 1963-1964 season—its first as a four-year institution.

Little recruiting was necessary during the summer months as most of last year's team members returned to fight for the "Green and Gold," with an abundance of new boys striving to join their ranks.

It has been reported that six of last year's key courtmen will reappear along with four boys from the 1961-1962 squad and about eight new boys who are seeking berths on the team. In addition, two players which were ineligible to compete last season will be able to participate this year.

Thus far about 20 boys are expected out for the team when practice begins around October 15 for a schedule that at present contains 14 games plus a three game Christmas tournament. Coach Brooks claims the schedule is by no means complete and that new teams are being constantly added to the ever-growing schedule.

It has also been announced that the possibility of fielding two teams is being considered. Though freshmen are eligible for the varsity it might eventually be possible for a freshman or junior varsity squad to be formed to play junior colleges and other frosh teams.

Though still only being considered, the idea seems to have merit and before long may become a reality.

With good student support and lots of school spirit it is conceivable that the young Seahawks may climb to startling heights on the basketball court and the baseball diamond in the tradition of the past few years.

Intramurals Spurred On

Intramural athletics are taking on a new look this year. The athletic department at Wilmington College, spurred on by increased student interest in the program, has taken definite steps toward the organization of leagues in at least two sports.

Coach Earl Allen, director of the school's intramural program expects to have a touch football league in the near future. Speculation has it that at least three or more organizations on campus will submit teams. These will be joined, of course, by several "independent" teams comprised of non-affiliated members of the student body.

At present only touch football and softball are being considered for the program. Because Brogren Hall is about the only site available and it is almost continuously in use it would be impractical to attempt to play intramural basketball there. "Basketball will have to wait until the completion of the new gymnasium here at the College," reports Coach Allen. "To be really effective an intramural program must be done right and that's what we're going to do here," he continued.

There will be a meeting of all persons interested in intramural athletics in the near future. The exact time and location will be announced in advance. Coach Allen expects to have a large turnout at the meeting so that the program can be set up quickly with the teams swinging into action as soon as possible.

Dr. Blyth's interests include athletics, sailing, and biology.

Among those leaving Cuba in 1961 were Dr. and Dr. Hernandez, Instructors in Mathematics. Mr. and Mrs. Hernandez say that conditions in Cuba were terrible when they left.

They both received their Ph. D.'s in mathematics and physics at the University of Havana and then taught in their home town Santa Clara University.

After leaving Cuba, they had to learn to speak English by experience. They taught at North Carolina State College before coming here.

Besides liking math and physics, their time is wrapped up in two sets of twins which are separated by a single girl. The girl twins are 11, the solitary is 8, and the boy-girl twin set are 2½. They hope to stay and grow with the College.

Frank K. Honey, Instructor of Music, did both his undergraduate and masters work at Yale University. Before coming to Wilmington, Honey taught at Choate Prep School in Connecticut and Central Connecticut State Teachers' College.

Both a performing musician and a teacher, Honey is Minister of Music at St. Andrews Covenant Church.

Commenting on Wilmington College, Honey said, "Everyone can see that the College is in its embryonic state, and what we do now will influence the future of Southeastern North Carolina. I'd like to make a prediction," he said. "In twenty years this College will have ten thousand students and there is no reason why we can't grow to be one of the best colleges in the state."

Barbara Ann Moser, Instructor of Mathematics, having received her masters from East Carolina, spent most of her life in Greensboro. She also taught one year in Kinston.

Miss Moser's plans for the future are comprised of teaching here at Wilmington College and obtaining her Ph.D. Besides her students, Miss Moser's interest includes sports, particularly tennis, bowling, and softball.

A Wilmington College graduate, Thomas Allen, Instructor of Physical Education, studied at the University of North Carolina after leaving the Isaac Bear Building. While working on his masters, he taught at UNC.

Allen taught for two years at Robbins, N.C. Allen, who is glad to be home, for there is no better place," likes to spend his spare time on the golf course.

E. M. West, Associate Professor of Business Administration, returned to college after a 20-year career with Sears, Roebuck and Company and obtained a masters from East Carolina.

West is originally from southeastern Virginia and did his undergraduate work at VPI. He has completed the work required for his Ph.D. through Duke, but has yet to write his thesis.

After having lived many places while working with Sears, West, a father of two children, states that he likes Wilmington and the College very much.

One Man's Opinion

By SAM GARNER

The old and the new make a pretty good combination. In this case, the old is Thalian Hall—located on Princess Street, the Playhouse of the Thalian Association which is America's oldest little theatre group founded in 1788. The new is the Wilmington College Theatre, under the direction of Doug Swink.

The old and the new have combined to bring what is good theatre to Wilmington. These two forces will work together and bring to Wilmington five plays this season. The casts of these plays will be made up of the community, the Thaliens, and the Wilmington College Players.

The first play chosen for presentation is "The Teahouse of the August Moon." This play was a smash hit on Broadway and a very good selection as an opening play for the season. Several large cast plays have been chosen for presentation this year and this leaves places open for all those interested in working on or off the stage.

Tryouts for these plays are open to all persons in the community and to Wilmington College students. Why not go to Thalian Hall the next time tryouts are announced for a play and mark the dates October 24, 25, and 26 on your calendar for "Teahouse of the August Moon."

If you have any extra time, it would be worth your while to go to Hoggard Hall and enjoy the exhibit of five Winston-Salem Printmakers. Mr. Howell and the Wilmington College Art Department should be congratulated on the work that they do in bringing such interesting art exhibits to the College.

The exhibit is changed every month and this offers the students an opportunity to enjoy many different and varied works of art during the year. Make it a point to get in the habit of looking at the art exhibits each month; they are all very interesting and entertaining.

"Music hath charm." The Wilmington College Chorus, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, has started the year off in the right direction. The chorus is one of the largest there has ever been and has begun to work already.

Meeting for the first time on Wednesday, Sept. 11, the chorus, to quote Jay Frances Fisher, "sounded very good!" The Wilmington College chorus does much to promote the school by singing at various civic groups in Wilmington, on television and radio, and by going on tour in the spring of the year.

The first few days of this quarter are over, how interesting to observe so many different groups of people at work at such an early date.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

October 4, 1963

Dr. John T. Hoggard lifts the first shovel of earth in groundbreaking ceremonies for the new gymnasium-auditorium, which were held here last week. Dr. Hoggard is chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Hoggard Heads New College Board, Ground Broken For Gym-Auditorium

Dr. John T. Hoggard was recently named chairman of the College Board of Trustees. Hoggard, who served as the second president of Wilmington College, will be succeeding himself as Chairman of the Board.

Other officers include Bradford L. Tillery, vice-chairman; Mrs. Cyrus D. Hogue, Jr., secretary; and Harry E. Payne, treasurer.

The new board, named earlier this month by Governor Terry

Sanford, was sworn in by Foster Edwards, clerk of Superior Court.

Dr. Hoggard shoveled the first dirt, to break ground for the new physical education - auditorium building. Construction on the new building will begin soon.

After groundbreaking ceremonies, the newly - appointed board, as their first official act, considered the minutes of the College Executive Committee meeting of September 12.

Dr. William M. Randall, college president, told members of the committee that the College must submit to the state property division by Nov. 1, 1963, requests for funds for capital improvements planned for the next biennium of 1965-67.

The committee at that time decided to request funds for the following capital improvements; addition to the library, chemistry-physics building, demonstration high school, campus planning, roads and parking, demonstration elementary school, and alterations to existing buildings. Action was then taken on the committee proposals.

Students Powerless Against State, Unable To Draw Up Budgets

Ronnie Staton, president of the Student Body, told the Senate in his introductory address that the students would not have the power to draw up their own budgets this year as is provided for in the constitution.

According to the constitution passed by the students last year which received the voiced support of the administration, the various organizations such as WILC, SRO, Seahawk, Fledgling, and the clubs and committees were to present their budget for approval to the Senate.

During the summer, the administration drew up the budgets of the organizations for this year and has left the organizations themselves powerless to do so.

Staton explained that the reason for the administration's action as being the result of our changeover to a four-year institution. The state passed the final bill of approval late in the summer and required that the college submit a budget of its student activities before college began its fall term. This meant that the administration itself would have to draw up the budget over the summer.

The Senate has a sum of only $500 to allocate to trips, clubs, and Fine Arts Week. In addition to this, WILC and the Seahawk have stated that the funds appropriated to them by the administration for the following year are inadequate. The radio station received only $100, several times less than what it intended to ask for. However, equipment and repair bills for WILC will be taken from the General Fund.

The newspaper, presented with its budget at the beginning of the year, had already unsuccessfully attempted to get the additional necessary funds. "The budget has been approved by the state and we can't do anything about it," Staton told the assembled Senate members.

"We are anticipating more money for the winter and spring quarter, and if enrollment remains high we may have more money," said Staton; but he warned the organizations not to depend on such funds and to work with what has been given them.

The president of the Student Body expressed his disappointment with the situation, saying that he accepted any of the responsibility for the development which may be his. It is planned to submit budgets this spring rather than wait until next fall to prevent a recurrence of such events.

Hernandez Speaks To Panmathians, Tells How Family Fled From Cuba

"At the time that we left Cuba it was very hard to do anything; they watched us from minute to minute . . . The next door neighbor's seven-year-old kid was sent up on the roof to spy on us. . . . If we hadn't left the country our children would probably be communist today."

These were only a few of the reasons that Drs. Vincente and Hildelisa Hernandez gave at the first meeting of the Panmathians Society for their escape from Cuba.

Dr. and Dr. Hernandez, both Instructors of Mathematics at the College and holders of Doctorates in Science, addressed the coed club on "Cuba in Retrospect."

"Before Castro we could live the same standard of life you live here," said Mrs. Hernandez. "Since Castro, most of those things, such as electric appliances, refrigerators, televisions, have disappeared. They took all the furniture, appliances and sent them to Russia."

"The medicine sent to Cuba last Christmas was immediately put on a boat for Russia. The Cubans don't have food or medicine; most of the children are walking barefooted."

Speaking along the same line, Dr. Hernandez said, "If Russia is as powerful a country as they say, why do they have to take all the produce from a poor country like Cuba? I think the reason is that all the factories in Russia are war factories."

Staton, Pascal Protest "Gag Law" At UNC

Ronnie Staton, president of the Student Body, and Hugh Paschal, vice-president of the Student Body, went to Chapel Hill last Saturday to attend a rally sponsored by the student body of the University of North Carolina to protest the Red Speaker Ban or "Gag" Law recently enacted by the North Carolina Senate, in Raleigh.

The object of the demonstration was to protest the ban to the point of urging an immediate repeal. There was, however, a general feeling that the law might not be repealed because of the risk of political suicide to any Assembly member who tries to revoke the law, since political opponents would brand him as a Communist sympathizer, stated Paschal.

The representation of Wilmington College at this rally and the participation in the protest marks a developing trend in that Wilmington College, one of its newest members, is being recognized as a college throughout the state, and will continue to concern itself with such matters which affect its proper presentation or administration of education.

Howell Wins Award

Claude Howell, head of the Art Department at Wilmington College, and Howard Thomas of Athens, Ga., shared top honors in the Semi-Annual 5 State Art Competition at the Gallery of Fine Arts in Winston-Salem recently.

Dr. Hernandez left the university where he taught and went to join Castro in the mountains during the early days of the revolution.

"I think I have never worked harder in my life than when I worked with Castro," he said. "But those in the army were the first to see the situation."

Hernandez said Castro didn't turn to Russia until after he began arguing with the U.S. because of some left-leaning ideas he had. "We knew Castro in the university from 1944, and at that time he was not a communist."

When Dr. Hernandez tried to leave the army after Castro was in power, he was put in jail. He told them that he would be of more use as a professor; and they agreed to let him return to teaching, but he had to remain in his uniform.

Dr. Hernandez said that the Bay of Pigs was the worst place they could have chosen for the invasion and gave several other reasons why it failed. "After the Bay of Pigs we decided it would be a long time before Castro would be thrown out, so we decided."

Oxendine, West, Bryan Head Senate Appointments

The Senate has approved the appointment of three committee chairmen forwarded to them by Ronnie Staton, president of the Student Body.

The new committee heads are: Bill Bryan, chairman of the Dance Committee; Ray Oxendine, chairman of Fine Arts; and Nancy West, chairman of the Telephone Directory.

At the same time, Staton suggested to the Senate that it nominate and appoint a representative from its ranks to deliver before the Student Affairs Committee of the faculty for their consideration judgments passed on students tried by the Judicial Committee.

Steve Culbreth, president of the Junior Class, was chosen to serve in this capacity.

Staton also made the motion that a rule be put into the procedure stating that the agendas for meetings of the Senate and copies of bills to be presented at those meetings be posted on the bulletin board opposite the office in the lobby of the Library Building on the Thursday preceding a meeting. The idea was adopted unanimously by the Senate.

Artists Schedule Campus Meet Here

Associated Artists of North Carolina will meet Sunday, Oct. 6, at 3:00 p.m. here at the College.

This meeting which is open to the public will mark the beginning of activities for the Fine Arts Committee, according to the newly-elected chairman Ray Oxendine.

An address by Gilbert Carpenter, new head of the Art Department at UNC at Greensboro, will highlight the meeting. All AANC members and any college students interested in art are urged to attend this meeting at which the new members to the Board of Directors will be elected. A reception and preview of the open exhibition will follow.

The fourth annual exhibition will be open here Oct. 6 - Nov. 3. Each AANC member may send one work; all works will be exhibited. Entries will be received through Oct. 4 and should be delivered to Claude Howell, Wilmington College Art Department. Work should be delivered by hand whenever possible.

The exhibition is intended to give every member of AANC an opportunity to display his work, and also to afford regular members the opportunity to become exhibiting member candidates.

Carpenter, speaker at the meeting, will jury the show to select regular members for 1963.

If the free world falls, it will be not because of the communists or any other group who gnawed at its edges, but because of its own leaders who lost faith in freedom and betrayed it piecemeal as has the North Carolina General Assembly.

Intramural Football

Teams square off in practice session to learn rules for new intramural football league.

New Instructors' Interests, Ideas, Future Plans Vary

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of three articles on the new instructors at the College.

This year 25 new instructors have joined the staff of faculty members as a result of the upgrading of the College to a four-year status.

Covered in this issue of the Seahawks are Thomas V. Moseley, Dr. Lloyd Bishop, Carolyn Murray, Eugene Williams, Becky Jon Hayward, Nancy Kent Kendall, and Marguerite Fogleman.

Becky Jon Hayward, Instructor of English, who comes from UNCG and Duke, plays golf, reads, and listens to folk music.

Miss Hayward plans to go to either New York University or the University of California to get her Ph.D. in American Literature.

"I really think the growth here is impressive; it will be one of the best colleges in the state if it continues," she concluded.

Nancy Kent Kendall, Instructor of English, graduated from Gettysburg College and Chapel Hill.

Miss Kendall, who likes debating, also likes any kind of sports.

"I'm trying to get over to Europe to study," said Miss Kendall, "but if not, I'll go on and get a Ph.D. in Renaissance Literature at the University of Wisconsin."

Mrs. Marguerite Fogleman, Assistant Librarian and Acting Librarian, worked two years in the reference and cataloging at the Wilmington Public Library.

Mrs. Fogleman, who came to Wilmington four years ago, graduated from Louisiana State University.

Mrs. Fogleman said she is "here to try to build up the library; and with faculty help, which is important, we hope to build toward the type of library students need."

Dr. Lloyd Bishop, Associate Professor of French, voiced his hope that WC will move away from its conservative past into a more liberally minded future.

Bishop, who comes from Portland, Me., did his undergraduate work at Bowden College and received his Ph.D. from Columbia. Bishop and his wife, who have two children, enjoy tennis, chess, and records.

"I'm impressed by what the school has done," said Carolyn Murray, Instructor of Social Sciences. "It has solid potential for the future and affords the people of this area a tremendous opportunity."

Miss Murray received her masters from UNC and her undergraduate work at Duke, where her father is the football coach. Miss Murray, a native of Durham, enjoys golf, reading, and swimming.

Eugene Williams, Instructor of Modern Languages, graduated from Wilmington College in 1958 and later graduated from East Carolina. He taught high school in Annapolis, Md., and attended school for one year in San Francisco on a NDEA government scholarship.

This summer at UNC, Williams did all his work for his masters except his thesis.

A native of Wilmington, he is married to a Canadian; he and his wife have three boys.

"I've been pleased with the co-operation of the different department heads in building up the library," said Thomas V. Moseley, Assistant Professor of Science.

Moseley did his undergraduate work at East Carolina and obtained his masters from UNC; he is now working on his Ph.D. at Carolina.

Moseley is married and has four children; his hobbies are reading and sports.

Stephenson And Thiry Return-Spark 'Hawks

The Seahawks are indeed fortunate this year to welcome back into the fold four former cage stars who return to once again join Coach Bill Brooks' charges. This issue of The Seahawk throws the spotlight on two of these players, Phil Stephenson and Al Thiry.

Phil is a native of Wilmington and a former NHHS star in basketball and baseball. In 1959 his outstanding play led the Wildcats to the state championship in baseball. The next year saw his back court prowess spark the 'Cats to the state title in basketball and earn him a berth on the East-West All-Star team.

After high school Phil donated his skills to the 'Hawks. He played on the 1961 Seahawk baseball team which won the NJCAA tournament in Grand Junction, Colorado. His junior college eligibility used up, Phil spent the winter quarter of last year at Appalachian College but with four-year status he returned to his alma mater and the Seahawks.

Al Thiry, the 6-6, 190-pound native of Charleroi, Pa., also returns to the Seahawk lineup after a year's absence. His inspired play in 1962 earned him All-Conference honors; he also sparked the Seahawks to the NJCAA basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., where he scored 78 points in four games.

The towering Thiry was no stranger to the hardwood before coming to Wilmington College in 1960. As a standout at Charleroi High School, near Pittsburgh, Al helped his team to two Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League (WPIAL) titles and one runner-up. He also led his team to one Western Pennsylvania title and a runner-up position. His 22 points per game scoring average earned him All-State honors as a senior.

Both boys have high hopes for this season's Seahawks. Recalling past glory they predict the same for this year.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL

Sports Editor

Intramurals are getting off to a good start. Already several independent teams have been organized and are readying themselves for the season. Everyone interested in touch football is seeking membership and spirits are high.

Last Thursday afternoon two teams met for a practice session for themselves and the referees. The scrimmage was made necessary because of the rules which have been adopted. And what rules they are!

Style

Coach Allen has adopted the style of play used in the intramural program at the University of North Carolina. These rules change the entire complexion of the old familiar game. Touch football as played at Wilmington College will be a combination of football, soccer, and basketball. The only resemblance lies in the fact that the teams use a football and run in a series of downs—six to be exact. As in basketball there can be no bodily contact which rules out blocking. Likewise no cleats are allowed, only tennis shoes.

The game itself is wide open. Passes may be thrown from anyone to anyone from anywhere on the field. This rule promises some excitement. There will be no first downs every ten yards. The teams get six downs to make the field. Play is divided up into two 20-minute halves. If by chance the game ends in a tie the ball is placed on the 50-yard line and each team is given two chances to move the ball. After four plays the victory goes to the team who has managed to get the ball on his opponent's side of the field.

Rules such as these and others equally intriguing are bound to make the games wide open affairs with plenty of action. It promises to be interesting not only for the players but for the spectators as well.

Unfortunate

The only unfortunate aspect of the newly-formed league is the fact that the originators of intramural athletics at Wilmington College, the Collegiate Civitan and Circle K Clubs, might find it impossible to field teams. Because of the tremendous turnover in each club's membership yearly and the time involved in reactivating in the fall these clubs are finding it difficult if not impossible to muster a team capable of participating in such a well organized league.

The only solution to the problem as we see it is to allow each team to replace members of their roster with new talent, provided that no player be allowed to change teams and the total number of players on each team never exceed the specified limit. In this way the clubs on campus would be able to make use of the freshman and transfer students who as yet are not affiliated with a campus organization. Such an arrangement would also not necessarily doom a hastily formed team with a lack of talent to the bottom of the standings.

Praise

Nevertheless, this column has nothing but praise for the intramural program here at the College. We also congratulate Coach Allen on an excellent organization of the varied aspects which go into the forming of such a league. We are confident that the program will run smoothly and successfully.

An old theatre breathes an old man's breath of dust. It winces as feet walk inside the door. The building is hiding its face like an aged chorus girl whose make-up cracks in the lines of her face. It shivers and sucks up its breath as the infant lights are born into the world that is a stage. Black darkness silhouettes the wide, low rectangle face of the stage. "You are really quite small," the newborn light is quick to say. "I've filled you up in no time." "Upstart!" bellows the box-world. "I am parts. Parts that dream, and parts that see the dream." It is quite right, you know.

Panmathians Hear About Cuban Situation

cided to try to escape," said his wife.

Hernandez was the first to leave; he escaped in a fishing boat with the president of his university. They were picked up off Miami by a submarine.

Mrs. Hernandez, who was expecting a child when her husband escaped and therefore could not leave with him, later forged passports for both herself and her children and fled by plane.

In the university where he taught, the president of the student body left to join the forces of the counter-revolution then organizing against Castro in the mountains. Hernandez warned him not to go before he left because "he needed the support of the country people who were at that time with Castro."

A month later the president of the student body was captured by Castro's men. The professors of the university were made to sign a paper stating that he should be executed. Some of his own classmates went to see him shot and were later seen driving his car around the campus.

Some of the things Mr. and Mrs. Hernandez commented on and answered questions concerning were:

On the chances of Russia starting a world war — "The Russians don't want to fight because they will lose everything, but this way they are winning."

The prospects of Castro getting help from Red China — "China cannot help anybody, they need help."

Che Guavara — "He is very intelligent and very brave . . . I would like to see him hanging."

The chances of overthrowing Castro — "Every day the situation will get worse and worse and the people in the mountains will grow; but it will take time, perhaps a long time."

"Now we are a pawn in the game, and they — the United States and Russia — will play the pawn the way they want to."

Mrs. Hernandez was asked if they would return to Cuba in "perhaps twenty years" if Castro was overthrown. She smiled and replied, "Do you think that 20 years after I'll go back? . . . maybe to visit."

The Panmathian Society is open to both male and female students. All interested persons are invited to join. The lectures sponsored by the club are open to the public.

Senate Abolishes Prayer

A move to replace devotions and prayers in the Student Senate assemblies with a moment of silent meditation was successfully presented to the legislative group in its initial meeting last week.

The change came as members of the Senate were voting on their procedure for the coming year. Objections were raised over the continuance of the practice of having a devotion read followed by an oral prayer delivered by the secretary of the student body as has been the custom in previous meetings.

The motion to have the devotion and prayer removed from Senate procedure as being sectarian, "offensive", and "discriminatory" was introduced by Sandy Wright and Gene Marlowe.

Wright claimed that the devotions in the past had proved to some to be "dogmatic or against their philosophy or belief." He noted that the prayers were objectionable to "Jews, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, deists, atheists, agnostics, and others."

An alternative procedure of "one moment of silent meditation" was suggested, to be ended by the single statement of "amen" by the speaker of the Senate, Hugh Paschal.

On a roll call vote, the motion to abolish oral prayer and devotion received eight votes in its favor. John Loftus and Kent Meadows were the only members voting against the motion. Four members of the Senate abstained from voting.

Soph. Class Holds Meeting Of Officers

Thursday, Sept. 27, there was a meeting of the officers and senators of the Sophomore class. Thomas Gay agreed to be the class advisor, and will work with the class in the coming year.

Items discussed were: A Class Project Committee — Its purpose will be to investigate various suggestions for a class project.

A Dance Committee — The Sophomore class would like to sponsor one of the five college dances. Anyone in the class who can play a musical instrument please contact any class officer. The purpose of these activities will be to raise money for the class project.

An Intramural Committee — The chairman of this committee is Kent Meadows. The purpose of this committee is to promote sports activities within the class.

Anyone interested in serving on any of these committees please contact Faye Barnes, Pat Beasley, Bobby Eakins, or Jack Loftus.

Test-ban Treaty Evokes Wide Opinions From Students

What, in your opinion, will be the effect and the consequences of the partial test-ban treaty, now that it has been ratified by the governments of both the United States and Russia and signed by most of the other nations of the world?

Jennifer Davis

I feel the new test-ban treaty will prove to be a relief to world tensions and the threat of atomic wars. Russia's willingness to agree to the ban is an indication that further steps in the area of a complete ban may soon be taken. Of course, there are doubts in all of our minds of the Soviet Union's honesty in upholding the requirements of the ban, but the risk of war is still lessened sufficiently to make this ban worthwhile.

Steve Culbreth

I feel that the advantages will far out-weigh the risks of the test-ban treaty. The dangerous accumulation of radiation in the atmosphere is the greatest advantage. I can see no further need for the testing of nuclear warheads and bombs. Our present development is probably sufficient and our stockpile has been called more than adequate. Now, perhaps much of the funds previously used for the production of nuclear weapons can be used for social improvements.

Jimmie Hearn

In my opinion, the effect of the partial test-ban treaty will be highly beneficial to all mankind, not only now, but also in the future. How long this treaty will last may be the chief question in everyone's mind, but as I see it now no matter how long it lasts it will tend to draw all nations participating in the treaty into a closer union and by this union help promote world peace.

Ann Bergen

I feel that acceptance of the test-ban treaty is one of the first visible signs of the use of man's intelligence as a rational being in the crisis of the cold war.

Putt Ward

Of course, I hope the effects will be paramount and perhaps this partial test-ban will evolve us into a peaceful co-existence; however, I mistrust the circumstances under which it was made. If it were a political slap at Red China, and I think it was, the ratification does not bear sincerity, and sincerity is what we need. It is a step toward understanding, but treaties are only as good as the sincerity of the countries involved.

Sylvia Cowan

The ultimate consequences can't do any harm, but maybe it will be helpful in the future negotiations.

Johnnie Ann Robinson

The outcome of the partial test-ban treaty is hard to predict. Many of the past treaties have been broken, and no one can say whether this one will be kept or not. However, the effects of the treaty, if kept, will be of benefit to the whole world. I think that all countries involved realize the effects that the tests have in the atmosphere; therefore, will try to keep it, and I hope it will be kept. In centuries past the problems of the world have been solved by a compromise and I feel that only through this compromise will the world solve its problems.

McRae Padgett

A step in the right direction.

Robert Rich

As we have already seen, the effect of the partial test-ban treaty has been pretty popular all around the world. I like the partial test-ban in the fact that it cuts down world tension. I do, however, think that we shall have very serious consequences, if our nation follows the path of our forefathers. In the past, we have been warned by a few smart men, but these have all been laughed at. I am just wondering if this will happen again as it did when we were warned against the possible invasion by Japan in 1941. We have also been warned against the ill effects of this treaty by the man who made our first atomic bomb. We Americans show much apathy in the matters of world affairs and because of this, I feel we will be very sorry for regretting this test-ban treaty in the form that it is in now.

SRO-Thalians Present

"Teahouse Of August Moon"

Oct. 24, 25, 26-Thalian Hall

Smash comedy-hit and Pulitzer Prize winner "Teahouse of the August Moon" is the bill of fare to be presented next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 p.m. in Thalian Hall, marking curtain time for the first Wilmington College production of the 1963-64 season. The stage play, written by John Patrick and based on a novel by Vern Sneider, will be under the direction of Doug W. Swink, head of the college department of Dramatic Arts.

"Teahouse" is the story of the difficulties faced by the American Army in its occupation of Okinawa. The job of selling democracy to the villagers of Tobiki falls on the shoulders of Capt. Fisby, played by Wally Warr. Young, imaginative, poetic—he has failed in every department of the Army he has been assigned to. He comes to Tobiki with high hopes for his first military success, armed with the Army's infallible Plan-B and his interpreter Sakini (Ray Tolley). Fisby begins according to Plan-B—but the people soon convert him.

He even gets used to one of the welcoming gifts of the village—Lotus Blossom (Winnie Healey), a geisha girl. His commanding officer (Sam Garner) views the ensuing events in quite a different light so he sends the Army's efficient analyst (Sandy Carr) down to analyze Fisby. It is soon apparent that "strange things are going on in the village of Tobiki" as the audiences of "Teahouse" will discover.

Brooks Atkinson of the N.Y. Times called "Teahouse" a piece of exotic make believe in a style as intimate as a fairy story... completely captivating", while the N.Y. Mirror called it "a smash hit, rich in comedy... beautifully blends satire, robust comedy, charm and heart. It's a laugh riot."

Students will be admitted by activity cards which will be issued this week.

Calder Defends Red Speaker Ban ...

Smiling Calder assumes a somber air while confronted by indignant college students, who challenged his responsibilities in "silly job."

"And, no by God we don't have to have any atheistic, subversive, criminal communists speaking on this campus." This was Representative Robert Calder of the North Carolina Legislature at the heart of his address to the Panmathian Society meeting of Oct. 10 on the controversial "gag" law.

Calder was one of the key men in getting the bill passed and spoke at the Panmathian meeting in defense of the law which bans communists or their sympathizers, and those who have taken the Fifth Amendment in regard to communism from speaking in state-supported institutions.

Calder began his speech by explaining that the bill had been passed to supplant a 1941 law concerning subversion. "The '63 act spells it out a little more while it doesn't limit it as much," said Calder.

"The reason it came up is that we were getting petitions concerning Reds at Chapel Hill... there had been criticism and talk of the communist activities there. The '41 bill was apparently not being enforced."

Calder backed up his argument of increased Red activity to recruit youths with excerpts from newspaper clippings and a speech by J. Edgar Hoover upon receiving an award from Mutual of Omaha.

Explaining the communist efforts to organize clubs and youth groups on campuses, Calder said that communism thus "catches young people at an impressionable stage... once hooked, it's hard to get rid of."

He described the bill as one of the "most conversal" he has encountered. "Why should we let these subversive, criminal atheists use our activities?" he asked.

"This is the most popular bill I have ever been connected with," he said; "I've heard only one or two who have been critical of it."

"Our aim in this state is for every student in this state who

Four Injured In Auto Accident

Four college students were injured, two critically, two seriously as the car they were in overturned several times in a field off N. C. 132 near U.S. 17 at 5:30 p.m. last Monday, Oct. 14.

Howard M. Anderson, of Star Route, Shallotte, James L. Lancaster of Supply, Thomas F. Gore, also of Supply, and Frank M. Norris of Ocean Drive, S. C., were on their way home after finishing their 4:30 classes when they lost control of the car in which they were traveling.

This accident marks the third such to occur in the month of October for three consecutive years in which Wilmington College students were involved.

Scriptic Society Meets, Elects Garner President

The Scriptic Society held its initial meeting the night of Oct. 11th in the home of Sandra Schwarz.

Presiding was Sam Garner, president, who explained the purpose and objectives of the club. Garner had been elected to his position at an earlier meeting of the old members of the society.

From approximately 20 people present at the meeting, Carol

Fladd was chosen vice-president and Patsy Futches, secretary-treasurer. Garner appointed Bebe Blomme as chairman of a committee to draw up a revised constitution for the organization.

The Scriptic Society is a continuation of the club known last year as the Pen Pushers Club.

At a latter date, editors of the society's publication, Direction, will be named.

The meetings of the club are held once a month in the homes of members. The meetings feature either a guest speaker or presentations by the members of the society of their writings.

Campus Briefs

Two hundred and ninety-eight names appeared on the first failure list for Autumn Quarter, 1963, as was released by the office of the dean. Of this number the Freshman class held the highest percentage.

Dr. William Randall returned Saturday from Appalachian State Teachers College in Boone, N.C., where he attended the monthly meeting of the Board of Higher Education. Usually meeting in Raleigh, N. C., the Board recently decided to hold their following meetings on various college campuses.

The college board of trustees will hold their regularly scheduled meeting on October 22 at which time plans for new buildings will be discussed.

THE SNOB APPEAL...ARE YOU "IN"?

Makers of automobiles, soft drinks, beer, and toilet accessories insult our intelligences daily with their less than subtle appeals through advertisements to the herd instincts and snobbery.

But the business which most actively and insidiously throws its pitch to the college student is that of the clothing manufacturers.

The clothing industry, for the most part, attempts to peddle its goods to college students through one main line of approach: the Snob Appeal. One manufacturer has gone so far as to list distinctions based on dress into two categories: the "Leaders" and the "Fringemen."

In a manufacturer's catalogue entitled "Clothesmanship I", a "Leader" is vaguely defined as one who knows "the more subtle knack of being way out in front—without seeming to be... the high requirements, are more often a matter of taste or inclination..." Judging from the examples they give of what "Leaders" wear—for there is no other way to tell a "Leader"—he is someone who breaks his neck to conform and owns a small mint.

Anything not a "Leader" is a "Fringeman." The "Fringe" is "not recommended... lower strata", anything that is not "in"; the quality of being "in" left mainly to the imagination, except for the fact that those who are "in" dress in certain ways—namely with the manufacturer's brand, and a wide assortment and variety of such.

For instance, the combination all-weather coat such as the London fog style is no longer "in". "Only Fringemen nowadays consider the unlined raincoat as an all-purpose cover-up." WHY? The only reason, besides that "it simply isn't done anymore", is that the manufacturers make more money by selling two coats to one person rather than one coat; but questioning or making any assumptions as to motives is definitely "anti-in", unless it is directed toward the lowly "Fringemen", who are always to be suspected either of ostentation (in an "unapproved" form) or poverty... the last being the more unforgivable of the two.

This obnoxious attempt to guide the manner in which college students dress succeeds in the same way as does all snobberies—racial, religious, class, or otherwise—that is: never question; accept and be accepted.

That only 40 per cent of the Freshmen voted in the last election seems to be indicative that his year, as in the past, a minority of slightly less than half of the students will run the show.

As in the past, also, grumbling will probably be heard later from the other 60 per cent about the clique who are monopolizing everything. But, as was pointed out in a campaign speech last year, it is not the clique who is to blame for their prominence in college activities, but the other members of the school who simply didn't care enough to take on the responsibility themselves, much less cast a simple ballot.

GALLOPING COLLEGIANS...WHOA!

Peering around the towering pines, we come face to face with what has been called "the Collegiate Conception of the Old South." Gone is the blossoming magnolia, Mint Julep, and old lace. In its place is a new South—its foundations: India Madras and English Leather, MG's, and mixed drinks—which represent only a few changes which have taken place on college campuses.

Take dating, for instance. Dating used to be without obligation. Now, the rule says never to accept anything "less sharp" than a scarab bracelet, gold monogrammed disc pin, Brubeck album or guitar. There was even a time, so we've been told, when an evening date wasn't merely a matter of picking your inebriated partner up off the floor, shoving him (or her, as the case may be) in your host's shower, bandaging his skinned knees, taping his glasses together, and then finally driving yourself home.

The idea of hobbies shows marked change. Psychologists say that almost everyone can benefit from collecting stuff, and it is only natural to go through the phase. Wilmington College is no exception. We're always collecting little souvenirs, empty beer cans, dirty laundry, failure slips, class rings, drastic allowance cuts, parental lectures and overdue library books.

Campus dress has undergone drastic change. "Ivy-dress" is a must, and unpinstrippers and non-Weejuners are out. Coed would rather "die" than be caught without a madras purse, or belt, or blouse, or something.

Perhaps, in time, students will realize that Madras isn't practical on rainy days, a cocktail in hand isn't worth a damn when you are out to make a living, the soles eventually wear thin even on Weejuns, some girls are allergic to English Leather, and that shirt hooks just don't fit coat-hangers.

U.S.-Soviet Wheat Deal Ready For Optimism

By JACK LOFTUS

Last Tuesday President Kennedy formally approved the sale of over four million tons of surplus wheat to the Soviet Union for $250 million. This is another in a series of steps designed to better relations between the two countries. It is also well that such a sale be on a cash and carry basis, for well we have seen what happens in dealing with the Soviets on long term credit.

Fire from Goldwater

This decision has and will draw some criticism. Sen. Goldwater, still floundering around with his strings ready to attach onto anything, his ricocheted off the test-ban treaty and onto the wheat deal. However, we cannot hope to have the Soviets accept this wheat sale, or anything else, under the conditions that they withdrew from Germany, get out of Cuba, and in general cease to exist. With an attitude like this man is not going to get anywhere, and both countries will revert back to looking down the barrel of a gun.

Nixon's Criticism

Mr. Nixon's criticism was less vague. He stated that actually the sale will cost the U.S. taxpayer $100 million, because the raise their standard of living and sale would be below the market price. The fact is that we have no market for this surplus wheat; it is just sitting there costing the U.S. taxpayers thousands of dollars a day, and rotting. This situation has existed since the war, and still exists today.

Motive

One motive behind this sale is a means whereby the Government can decrease federal spending. This is the very thing the Republicans have been calling for since 1960, and why they have not supported the tax cut.

U.S. Shovels Now

This sale does not necessarily hand the Soviets the shovel to bury us, but rather lets us do the shoveling. First, the money which the Soviets are paying for this wheat is going into American industry and agriculture, not Soviet missiles. Secondly, even if such sales did noticeably benefit the Soviet Union, this would create a demand for more consumer goods, which is a step toward capitalism.

Violation Possibility

There is the possibility of the Soviets violating the terms of the agreement, but not with Red China because of the serious ideological dispute, and not with Cuba without the U.S. finding out about it.

Gold Outflow

The advantages of such surplus commodity sales supercede all disadvantages. It will reduce the outflow of gold from America, thereby making the dollar more sound. It will lower the cost of storage for this surplus, and help the farmer by strengthening farm prices.

Cuban Crisis

We have taken several steps away from the disastrous positions of both countries at the height of the Cuban crisis. First came the test-ban treaty, then the proposal for a joint expedition to the moon, and now the beginnings of a trade agreement between the two countries. It is only through such joint-positive steps that humanity can emerge from beneath the cloud of war to prosper and live in a peaceful world.

LETTER TO EDITOR

"My You Look Red This Morning or Who's Pouring the Vodka Now?"

I have been around for a little over a score. Yet in these twenty years I have seen many foolish men do many foolish things, but seldom have I seen such folly as was recently exhibited in our old North State. I am referring to the Bill 1395 that was passed during the closing hours of the North Carolina General Assembly. In case you aren't aware of this so called "Speaker Gag Law" pay heed. During the last days of the 1963 session, this Bill was presented before the House in the following unorthodox manner. The Bill was presented to the House without going to committee, there were no written copies given to the representatives, a voice vote was taken and there was no open debate. In essence it was "bulldozed" into existence. The Bill, or infringement as it may more truthfully be called, read somewhat in this manner; no one may speak on the campuses or use the facilities of any State-supported institution unless he agrees to sign the following statement.

1. I am not a member of the Communist Party.
2. I do not advocate the overthrow of the constitution of the United States or the State of North Carolina.
3. I have never pleaded the Fifth Amendment of The Constitution of the United States before any legislative committee, any judicial tribunal, or any executive or administrative board of the United States or any state, with respect to communist or subversive connections or activities.

First of all this is a violation of the Bill of Rights by taking away the freedom of speech. Secondly, it is making a mockery of the Fifth Amendment. A law made to allow a person to refrain from speaking when he feels justified. This law is, in

by Robin Graybeal

Once upon a time there was a big old rabbit who spent all his time sitting on top of a hill. One morning three little mice came tripping by in front of him. Most ungraciously the rabbit reached out, grabbed one of them, banged him on the head until dead, and ate him. Just as he was wiping his mouth a good fairy appeared and said, "I'm warning you. If you do that again I'll turn you into a big, ugly goon." However, by this time, the rabbit, who always took a nap after eating, was asleep.

The next day the two remaining mice came tripping by the front of the hill again. The rabbit thoughtfully considered them, reached out, selected the fatter one, banged him on the head until dead, and ate him. Once again the good fairy materialized and said, "I've warned you once, and I'll warn you again, if you continue this habit of yours I'll turn you into a big, ugly goon." Alas, the rabbit was once again asleep (or pretending to be).

Bright and early the next morning the remaining mouse (who apparently was pretty dense) came tripping along again. Sure enough, the rabbit grabbed him, banged him on the head until dead, and ate him. Once again, POOF! entered the G.F. "I've warned you once, and I've warned you twice and now I'll do it!" And she turned him into a big, ugly goon. Moral: Hare today, Goon tomorrow.

fact, turned around and used as a weapon against him. If this is to be a precedent for proceedings to follow, the Fifth Amendment may as well be thrown to the wind. For as the Bill reads you are in effect guilty until proven innocent.

The students of North Carolina are not alone in the rebellion against this tyranny of speech. The faculty of many of the larger colleges have already shown where they stand, as have many of our own educators.

There isn't much one can do at present, but he would be wise who remembers "Buyer Beware." For when mankind can be silenced for a cause, perhaps mankind had better look again at the cause. When one right can be taken away two and four can surely follow.

We try to refrain from using clichés, but it may be well to hear again those famous misquoted words of Voltaire: "I may not agree with what you say but I would give my life for your right to say it."

Calder, Law Draw Criticism

John Abbott

Mr. Calder was very sure of his opinion; however, he lacked the knowledge to back up his opinion. He used his opinions and jokes to alleviate any pressure caused by questions.

Miss Carolyn Murray

The bill was unnecessary, and it is an insult to the judgment of the men who head up the educational institutions in this state.

Mary C. Hodgins

To hear a representative of North Carolina Assembly feebly attempt to defend a bill that he voted in favor of show only one thing — the legislators in general are intolerant, prejudiced, and a disgrace to the people they represent.

Mr. Page Shaw

Representative Calder is a brave man in trying to defend the gag law. I am surprised to hear him refer to his job as a "silly" one. Perhaps his constituents will relieve him of it at the next election.

Sandy Wright

Mr. Calder made an excellent show of his ability to defend an already lost cause. Except for short outbursts of emotion, it was quite informative in a paradoxical way.

Miss Becky Haywood

Although I am certain that Representative Calder has his reasons for his position on this bill, it seems to me that the bill demonstrates striking lack of faith in the intellectual caliber and judgment of North Carolina's college population, both students and faculty.

Jeanne Walton

He came unprepared to defend adequately the gag law. Moreover, he assumed that we would lack the intelligence to perceive this.

Elmore Spell

I think he was justified because he is there to represent the majority of the people, and the majority of the people want such a bill. However, the bill appears ineffective in comparison with the original bill and does not entail a better method of enforcement.

Associated Artists of N. C. Present Fourth Annual Open Exhibition

One of the nicest things about Wilmington College is the many art exhibits that are held during the year, and the Fourth Annual Open Exhibition of the Associated Artists of North Carolina is one of the best.

Variety is its essence due to the different art media, styles, moods, techniques, and textures. Nearly every taste in art can be appealed to by at least one work.

It is impossible to criticize an art show generally, in particular one of such variety. There is displayed in some works a great deal of imagination and creative use of media and technique. However, some others showed a poor development of technique and lacked both communication and the "something" that is art.

There are five works which are particularly appealing. The sculpture in steel titled "Disseminated" by Ray Gussow . . . stoic, stolid, reaching . . . ; the oil painting, "Saint Marks Square" by Claude Howell . . . intricate, soft, concise . . . ; the brass sculpture "Seriation" by Stanley South . . . rhythmic, ethereal, moves . . . ; casein "Study in Whites" by Randy Macatee . . . porcelain, cold — warmth . . . ; oil painting, "Cabbage Soup" by Barbara J. Knight . . . Bohemia, good wine, green lights

There are many others worth mentioning, but space does not permit it. Nevertheless, you must see for yourself to appreciate them. Then you will know why it is providing a great contribution to the aesthetic atmosphere of Wilmington College.

Merry Men Mount Mannequin

By ED NEWMAN

It isn't often that anyone situates himself on the tower of the Pub.

I was in class when I noticed a lone figure in said position. I asked a fellow observer what the poor idiot was doing way up on that roof.

"Silly, that is not a person; it's a mannequin," she said.

I tried in vain to conceal my disappointment.

Then a delegation of four men began rescuing the misplaced dummy. The leader remained on the lower roof, while the others climbed — ever so carefully — to the foot of the dummy. His attempts being unsuccessful, another man commenced climbing the slate roof. It wasn't long before he was back in his original position, mounted the ladder grudgingly, and began to lower the captured mannequin. Unfortunately, the mannequin's head became separated from his body and fell with disastrous results, despite the feeble efforts of the man on the lower roof to catch it.

Thus, the operation was reported to be only "partly successful." Nevertheless, I commend the members of the rescue party on their splendid efforts and the manner in which they conducted themselves in the face of insurmountable obstacles and open danger. As for the dummy, he never felt a thing.

With the oriental influence spreading over a certain department of our fair College, the Japanese Haiku comes to mind. The haiku is a poem of only seventeen syllables long and it is usually a brief poignant insight into the universality of the endless cycle of reincarnation and dissolution that the Buddhist Japanese believe.

This type of poetry is practically unknown to our world at large but it may be considered an integral part of the culture of Japan. It is estimated that the reading and writing of the haiku originated over seven hundred years ago but perfection of this art was not reached until the seventeenth century.

Just what is a haiku? This question would be hard to answer even in Japan. No two poets would agree on just what goes into a haiku but first of all it is a poem. Being a poem, it must express and evoke emotion. It is only seventeen syllables in length, therefore it must have a great power of suggestion. It must also present a clear cut picture of a matter and the reader must take it from this point.

Actually the haiku is only a start. It provides the reader a place which to begin and after he reads his experiences and his thoughts take over. The picture that the haiku paints can only be completed by the reader. Read these few haikus and let your mind do the rest.

If this type of poetry interests you, An Introduction to Haiku with translations and commentary by Harold G. Henderson might be of some help to a somewhat complete understanding of haiku. Also, there is a Peter Pauper Press series on the subject with translations of poems by Basho, Buson, Issa, Shiki, and others that may be purchased at book departments down town. The one entitled Cherry Blossoms, Japanese Haiku—Series Three—is very good in this opinion.

Who Has Whose Goat?

By LOUISE AMBROSIO
If you are producing a play (in this case "The Teahouse of the August Moon"), and in that play there is a scene in which the character, Captain Fisby bestows the name of Lady Astor upon the goat of a good woman of Okinawa, Mr. Higa Jiga—there arises the obvious necessity of obtaining a goat.

Not difficult, you say. This, my friends, is where the fun begins. First of all you gather a few of your friends (who will not be your friends afore long) and your two sons and frolic off to the nearest goat farm—WILD goat farm, of course.

Thereupon your first problem arises. You can use the goat for the play if you can catch it. Now as you run around trying to wear the little bastards down, you remember laughing uproariously in ridicule of the men of Pamplona as they chased the bulls into the arena. Oh, well, after all this is in the line of duty.

Ah! Now one of the goats begins to tire. You are naturally suspicious but you grab it anyway. The gods aren't smiling today. Funny, she didn't look pregnant from a distance.

As you recount to yourself the disadvantages of goat-chasing, one of your allies takes off from the ground in a flying tackle and makes an all-point landing in the nearby swamp.

Oh, well! Keeping in mind that the idea is not to wear out before the goats do, you manage to avail yourself of one nondescript goat.

Alas! the director's life is the life indeed!

New Teachers Look to Future at WC

This year more than 20 new instructors have joined the staff of faculty members as a result of the upgrading of the College to a four-year status.

Covered in this issue of the Seahawk are Page Shaw, Dr. B. Frank Hall, Bob G. Olsen, James C. Daniel, Dr. Harold G. Hulon, and Patricia Marie Minser.

Patricia Marie Minser, Instructor of Art, a native of Oak Ridge, Tenn., attended the University of Georgia where she received her BFA in drawing and painting; she also earned her MFA at the same university.

"Wilmington College is young, but daily growing," said Miss Minser. "I am looking forward to the day when we will have an Art Building." She also extended her invitation for everyone to visit the art exhibit now showing in Hoggard Hall.

Before coming to Wilmington, Dr. Harold G. Hulon, Associate Professor of Education, served as principal in schools at Chapel Hill, Hoffman, and Orrum.

Dr. Hulon, who comes originally from Huxes Mills, N. C., received his BA, MA and PhD from UNC.

He is married and has a 12-year-old daughter. He is interested in woodworking and golf. He "enjoys the post and the climate, except the humidity," and "is very fond of azaleas."

"I have hopes for the continued growth and development of the College," said Dr. Hulon; "and I hope we can develop a very good teacher program whose graduates will be recognized throughout the state."

James C. Daniel, Instructor in Ion College very much" and is Social Sciences, "likes Wilmington" very satisfied with the students and the College."

Daniel's home was Spring Hope, N. C., and Winston-Salem while he worked for his BA and MA at Wake Forest.

Speaking about the College, Bob G. Olsen, Instructor of Social Sciences, said, "The College is my alma mater, so my attitude toward it is obvious. The growth gives me a real sense of pride."

Olsen, who is originally from Beverly Hills, Cal., began his teaching career after his retirement from the U.S. Army. Presently in his second year of graduate work toward a PhD, he received his AB and MA from UNC.

Olsen is married and has four children. His hobby is raising and showing dogs.

Giving up his annual lecture tour to teach, Dr. B. Frank Hall, Associate Professor of Philosophy, is also a local minister.

He received his AB at Davidson College, his BD, ThM, and ThD at Union Theological Seminary, and his DD at West Mead, Mo. He taught Greek previously on a fellowship at Union Theological Seminary and has done popular lecturing in Bible and foreign affairs.

Dr. Hall, who has gone on several European tours, has preached at Morehead City, St. Louis, and Wilmington. He has three sons.

Dr. Hall has been a member of six different colleges and is currently a member of the board of trustees of Davidson College and St. Andrews College.

Page Shaw, Instructor of English, studied music at the Conservatory of Music in Cincinnati and sang with the San Francisco Opera before deciding to enter teaching.

Shaw, who is from Elizabethtown, returned to East Carolina for AB and MA in English.

He plans to continue his studies and earn a PhD.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

Basketball practice at Wilmington College began last week with an outstanding array of talent reporting for duty. Listed among the hopefuls for starting berths on the Seahawk squad were former 'Hawk stars Al Thiry, Larry Edens, and Phil Stephenson. Returnees from last year's nationally rated team were Marshall Hamilton, Tommy Cole, Harry Buzzell, Wray Ware and Bobby Shipp. Among the newcomers to the team were Jim Braxton, ineligible last year, and Jay Neary, transfer from UNC.

With the unquestioned talent mentioned above and the aid of some promising freshmen, it looks like another good year for the high flying 'Hawks. The schedule is growing and a fine list of opponents promises to be in the offing when the Seahawks take to the hardwood in competition.

Eligibility

Last year the question of player's eligibility arose during the spring when the golf and tennis teams were being organized. Under the NJCAA rules which Wilmington College was subject to last year, a player had to have been enrolled for an entire year before participating in intercollegiate play. In addition he had to have successfully passed a minimum of 12 hours during the quarter preceding his participation. This ruling caught many transfer students making it illegal for them to compete.

It's different this year. An athlete must still have passed 12 hours of work in the preceding quarter but under the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) rules, which the College has adopted pending joining the association next year, a player needs only to have been enrolled one quarter before competing in varsity athletics. It is for this reason that Jay Neary and Phil Stephenson will be able to compete this year rather than having to sit out the entire year.

Bats

How about those bats? If you haven't seen the bats presented to each member of last year's NJCAA baseball championship team you ought to! Each bat has the name of every member to the squad inscribed in gold on it. They are truly impressive remembrances of the Seahawks' outstanding record last year. The gesture also points out once again what a fine organization the NJCAA is. It was a pleasure to be associated with them.

Work Begins On New Campus Gym

By TOMMY SKIPPER
Assistant Sports Editor

So far things have progressed "smoothly" said Alton O. Heath, Superintendent in charge of construction of the New Wilmington College physical education-auditorium building.

Following the effective date of the contracts Sept. 10, the groundbreaking ceremonies Sept. 26, work began in earnest to raise the $450,000 structure scheduled to be completed in September of 1964.

The general contract was let to the DuBose Construction Company of Kinston, which is now marking the building "lay out" on the site and will soon begin setting up the "batter boards."

There will be one regular size basketball court, a smaller court, and two teaching stations for gymnastics; the balconies will have roll away seats and can be used for classrooms.

Dr. John T. Hoggard, named chairman of the Wilmington College Board of Trustees Sept. 26, that afternoon along with B. D. Schwartz, chairman of the student affairs committee at the College, broke the turf in a groundbreaking ceremony.

Though Mr. Heath said things were going "smoothly", he added that the going was "kind of slow during the first few weeks," adding that "this was to be expected."

Sigma And Angels Win In Intramurals

By KEN MARKS

This year is the first in which Wilmington College has had organized intramural sports. On Thursday, Oct. 10, four teams battled it out in two separate touch football games. In the first half of the first game, the Sigma Grunts were able to score only one safety. In the second half Jerry Thompson connected a pass to David Padgett for a touchdown and Reggie Tucker scored the extra point for the Sigma's. In the last two minutes of the game Terry Moore scored a safety for the Marauders and that is the way it ended. The Sigma Grunts 9, the Marauders 2.

In the second game, the Walkers couldn't stop the passing of the Blue Angels' quarterback, Larry Honeycutt. Honeycutt connected for four out of five passes for touchdowns. The first touchdown was scored when Bob Anderson intercepted and threw to Steve Coley. The extra point was scored on a short pass from Honeycutt to Steve Culbreth.

The second touchdown was scored on a pass from Honeycutt to Coley.

Honeycutt threw a fantastic forty yard pass to Webb for the third touchdown and the extra point was another pass to Culbreth. At the end of the first half, the score was twenty to nothing.

The Blue Angels opened up again in the second half and scored two more touchdowns with quarterback Larry Honeycutt as the key man on both, throwing to Jerry Hooks and Simpson.

Late in the second half the Walkers made the best play of the day when they completed four passes on the same down for a total of sixty yards and a touchdown by Stewart. The conversion was made by Jim Brothers. The final score was the Blue Angels 34, the Walkers 7.

Intramural Football

The Sigma Grunts square off against the Marauders Thursday, Oct. 10, in an intramural contest held on the campus. The Grunts were victors, 9-2.

Four Teams Sign Up For Football

Four teams of about 14 men per team have signed up to play a most unusual game of "football" here at the College.

The vast variety of experience claimed by the members should pay off in this combination basketball-football contest as high school players, sand lot and some of Coastal Carolina's best "surf side football players" compete.

The rules of the game, both liberal and strict, should require much practice and an intense amount of team work.

There will be no blocking in the game, though screening may be used as in basketball, each team is allotted six downs and may make a forward pass from any place on the field, with all men eligible to receive, key note to the game is no tackling. Downs are made when the player with the ball is tagged or throws an incomplete pass.

Referees will supervise the game, which has its own written set of rules.

The four teams now practicing and their captains are the Blue Angels, headed by Larry Honeycutt; the Sigma Grunts, headed by Bobby Baxter; the Marauders, headed by Terry W. Moore; and the Walkers, headed by Jim Brothers.

Larry Honeycutt, head Blue Angel, has stated, "I think we will do alright after we get organized and get use to this type of football"; speaking of strategy he remarked, "We are going to get three or four special plays, we will need them in this type of game."

Bobby Baxter, head Sigma Grunt, said, "I think we will have a good team; we have a good line-up and a good back-field," and after a little chest beating, "I think we stand a good chance, plenty of big boys, much strength." Speaking of strategy, he said, "I want my best boys for protection on the line and my fastest boys in the back-field."

The haiku is a poem of only seventeen syllables long and it is usually a brief poignant insight into the universality of the endless cycle of reincarnation and dissolution that the Buddhist Japanese believe.

This type of poetry is practically unknown to our world at large but it may be considered an integral part of the culture of Japan. It is estimated that the reading and writing of the haiku originated over seven hundred years ago but perfection of this art was not reached until the seventeenth century.

Just what is a haiku? This question would be hard to answer even in Japan. No two poets would agree on just what goes into a haiku but first of all it is a poem. Being a poem, it must express and evoke emotion. It is only seventeen syllables in length, therefore it must have a great power of suggestion. It must also present a clear cut picture of a matter and the reader must take it from this point.

Actually the haiku is only a start. It provides the reader a place which to begin and after he reads his experiences and his thoughts take over. The picture that the haiku paints can only be completed by the reader. Read these few haikus and let your mind do the rest.

If this type of poetry interests you, An Introduction to Haiku with translations and commentary by Harold G. Henderson might be of some help to a somewhat complete understanding of haiku. Also, there is a Peter Pauper Press series on the subject with translations of poems by Basho, Buson, Issa, Shiki, and others that may be purchased at book departments down town. The one entitled Cherry Blossoms, Japanese Haiku—Series Three—is very good in this opinion.

Who Has Whose Goat?

By LOUISE AMBROSIO

If you are producing a play (in this case "The Teahouse of the August Moon"), and in that play there is a scene in which the character, Captain Fisby bestows the name of Lady Astor upon the goat of a good woman of Okinawa, Mr. Higa Jiga—there arises the obvious necessity of obtaining a goat.

Not difficult, you say. This, my friends, is where the fun begins. First of all you gather a few of your friends (who will not be your friends afore long) and your two sons and frolic off to the nearest goat farm—WILD goat farm, of course.

Thereupon your first problem arises. You can use the goat for the play if you can catch it. Now as you run around trying to wear the little bastards down, you remember laughing uproariously in ridicule of the men of Pamplona as they chased the bulls into the arena. Oh, well, after all this is in the line of duty.

Ah! Now one of the goats begins to tire. You are naturally suspicious but you grab it anyway. The gods aren't smiling today. Funny, she didn't look pregnant from a distance.

As you recount to yourself the disadvantages of goat-chasing, one of your allies takes off from the ground in a flying tackle and makes an all-point landing in the nearby swamp.

Oh, well! Keeping in mind that the idea is not to wear out before the goats do, you manage to avail yourself of one nondescript goat.

Alas! the director's life is the life indeed!

New Teachers Look to Future at WC

This year more than 20 new instructors have joined the staff of faculty members as a result of the upgrading of the College to a four-year status.

Covered in this issue of the Seahawk are Page Shaw, Dr. B. Frank Hall, Bob G. Olsen, James C. Daniel, Dr. Harold G. Hulon, and Patricia Marie Minser.

Patricia Marie Minser, Instructor of Art, a native of Oak Ridge, Tenn., attended the University of Georgia where she received her BFA in drawing and painting; she also earned her MFA at the same university.

"Wilmington College is young, but daily growing," said Miss Minser. "I am looking forward to the day when we will have an Art Building." She also extended her invitation for everyone to visit the art exhibit now showing in Hoggard Hall.

Before coming to Wilmington, Dr. Harold G. Hulon, Associate Professor of Education, served as principal in schools at Chapel Hill, Hoffman, and Orrum.

Dr. Hulon, who comes originally from Huxes Mills, N. C., received his BA, MA and PhD from UNC.

He is married and has a 12-year-old daughter. He is interested in woodworking and golf. He "enjoys the post and the climate, except the humidity," and "is very fond of azaleas."

"I have hopes for the continued growth and development of the College," said Dr. Hulon; "and I hope we can develop a very good teacher program whose graduates will be recognized throughout the state."

James C. Daniel, Instructor in ton College very much" and is Social Sciences, "likes Wilmington," "very satisfied with the students and the College."

Daniel's home was Spring Hope, N. C., and Winston-Salem while he worked for his BA and MA at Wake Forest.

Speaking about the College, Bob G. Olsen, Instructor of Social Sciences, said, "the College is my alma mater, so my attitude toward it is obvious. The growth gives me a real sense of pride."

Olsen, who is originally from Beverly Hills, Cal., began his teaching career after his retirement from the U.S. Army. Presently in his second year of graduate work toward a PhD, he received his AB and MA from UNC.

Olsen is married and has four children. His hobby is raising and showing dogs.

Giving up his annual lecture tour to teach, Dr. B. Frank Hall, Associate Professor of Philosophy, is also a local minister.

He received his AB at Davidson College, his BD, ThM, and ThD at Union Theological Seminary, and his DD at West Mead, Mo. He taught Greek previously on a fellowship at Union Theological Seminary and has done foreign lecturing in Bible and foreign affairs.

Dr. Hall, who has gone on several European tours, has preached at Morehead City, St. Louis, and Wilmington. He has three sons.

Dr. Hall has been a member of six different colleges and is currently a member of the board of trustees of Davidson College and St. Andrews College.

Page Shaw, Instructor of English, studied music at the Conservatory of Music in Cincinnati and sang with the San Francisco Opera before deciding to enter teaching.

Shaw, who is from Elizabethtown, returned to East Carolina for AB and MA in English.

He plans to continue his studies and earn a PhD.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

Basketball practice at Wilmington College began last week with an outstanding array of talent reporting for duty. Listed among the hopefuls for starting berths on the Seahawk squad were former 'Hawk stars Al Thiry, Larry Edens, and Phil Stephenson. Returnees from last year's nationally rated team were Marshall Hamilton, Tommy Cole, Harry Buzzell, Wray Ware and Bobby Shipp. Among the newcomers to the team were Jim Braxton, ineligible last year, and Jay Neary, transfer from UNC.

With the unquestioned talent mentioned above and the aid of some promising freshmen, it looks like another good year for the high flying 'Hawks. The schedule is growing and a fine list of opponents promises to be in the offing when the Seahawks take to the hardwood in competition.

Eligibility

Last year the question of player's eligibility arose during the spring when the golf and tennis teams were being organized. Under the NJCAA rules which Wilmington College was subject to last year, a player had to have been enrolled for an entire year before participating in intercollegiate play. In addition he had to have successfully passed a minimum of 12 hours during the quarter preceding his participation. This ruling caught many transfer students making it illegal for them to compete.

It's different this year. An athlete must still have passed 12 hours of work in the preceding quarter but under the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) rules, which the College has adopted pending joining the association next year, a player needs only to have been enrolled one quarter before competing in varsity athletics. It is for this reason that Jay Neary and Phil Stephenson will be able to compete this year rather than having to sit out the entire year.

Bats

How about those bats? If you haven't seen the bats presented to each member of last year's NJCAA baseball championship team you ought to! Each bat has the name of every member of the squad inscribed in gold on it. They are truly impressive remembrances of the Seahawks' outstanding record last year. The gesture also points out once again what a fine organization the NJCAA is. It was a pleasure to be associated with them.

Work Begins On New Campus Gym

By TOMMY SKIPPER
Assistant Sports Editor

So far things have progressed "smoothly" said Alton O. Heath, Superintendent in charge of construction of the New Wilmington College physical education-auditorium building.

Following the effective date of the contracts Sept. 10, the groundbreaking ceremonies Sept. 26, work began in earnest to raise the $450,000 structure scheduled to be completed in September of 1964.

The general contract was let to the DuBose Construction Company of Kinston, which is now marking the building "lay out" on the site and will soon begin setting up the "batter boards."

There will be one regular size basketball court, a smaller court, and two teaching stations for gymnastics, the balconies will have roll away seats and can be used for classrooms.

Sigma And Angels Win In Intramurals

By KEN MARKS

This year is the first in which Wilmington College has had organized intramural sports. On Thursday, Oct. 10, four teams battled it out in two separate touch football games. In the first half of the first game, the Sigma Grunts were able to score only one safety. In the second half Jerry Thompson connected a pass to David Padgett for a touchdown and Reggie Tucker scored the extra point for the Sigma's. In the last two minutes of the game Terry Moore scored a safety for the Marauders and that is the way it ended. The Sigma Grunts 9, the Marauders 2.

In the second game, the Walkers couldn't stop the passing of the Blue Angels' quarterback, Larry Honeycutt. Honeycutt connected for four out of five passes for touchdowns. The first touchdown was scored when Bob Anderson intercepted and threw to Steve Coley. The extra point was scored on a short pass from Honeycutt to Steve Culbreth.

The second touchdown was scored on a pass from Honeycutt to Coley.

Honeycutt threw a fantastic forty yard pass to Webb for the third touchdown and the extra point was another pass to Culbreth. At the end of the first half, the score was twenty to nothing.

The Blue Angels opened up again in the second half and scored two more touchdowns with quarterback Larry Honeycutt as the key man on both, throwing to Jerry Hooks and Simpson.

Late in the second half the Walkers made the best play of the day when they completed four passes on the same down for a total of sixty yards and a touchdown by Stewart. The conversion was made by Jim Brothers. The final score was the Blue Angels 34, the Walkers 7.

The Sigma Grunts square off against the Marauders Thursday, Oct. 10, in an intramural contest held on the campus. The Grunts were victors, 9-2.

Four Teams Sign Up For Football

Four teams of about 14 men per team have signed up to play a most unusual game of "football" here at the College.

The vast variety of experience claimed by the members should pay off in this combination basketball-football contest as high school players, sand lot and some of Coastal Carolina's best "surf side football players" compete.

The rules of the game, both liberal and strict, should require much practice and an intense amount of team work.

There will be no blocking in the game, though screening may be used as in basketball, each team is allotted six downs and may make a forward pass from any place on the field, with all men eligible to receive, key note to the game is no tackling. Downs are made when the player with the ball is tagged or throws an incomplete pass.

Referees will supervise the game, which has its own written set of rules.

The four teams now practicing and their captains are the Blue Angels, headed by Larry Honeycutt; the Sigma Grunts, headed by Bobby Baxter; the Marauders, headed by Terry W. Moore; and the Walkers, headed by Jim Brothers.

Larry Honeycutt, head Blue Angel, has stated, "I think we will do alright after we get organized and get use to this type of football"; speaking of strategy he remarked, "We are going to get three or four special plays, we will need them in this type of game."

Bobby Baxter, head Sigma Grunt, said, "I think we will have a good team; we have a good line-up and a good backfield," and after a little chest beating, "I think we stand a good chance, plenty of big boys, much strength." Speaking of strategy, he said, "I want my best boys for protection on the line and my fastest boys in the backfield."

Trustees To Discuss Plans For Additional Facilities

(Note: This is the first in a series of news articles presented by the SEAHAWK in an effort to familiarize the students with the operational mechanics of the institution of which they are a part.—News Editor)

At the meeting of the college board of trustees, to be held on campus Oct. 22, plans will be discussed for presenting requisitions, for additional campus facilities, to the 1965 session of the N.C. General Assembly.

These plans for expansion include the following: an addition to the present Library building, which would house 250,000 volumes and provide space for seating 1,000 readers; a new Chemistry-Physics building; a new greenhouse for use by the Botany Department; money to retain consulting architects which would draw up a master plan for the campus; and about five miles of road paving and a parking area for 600 additional cars.

Approval of these plans must be made by the college board of trustees and presented to the Administrative Budget Committee of the State before March, 1964.

The process by which a state-supported institution procurs appropriations from the state falls into three divisions, according to the formal budget in which the request is being made. The "A Budget" covers appropriations given by the legislatures to continue services now being rendered. Budget "B" covers requests for funds necessary to inaugurate any new services. For example if this institution, which now offers a Minor in Modern Languages, were to offer a Major in this field, it would ask for funds under Budget "B" to cover salaries, facilities, etc.

The area of new buildings falls under the third budget "C", in the category of Capitol Improvements.

Formal requests are sent to what is known as the Advisory Budget Committee, which is composed of four members chosen by the Chairman of the House and the Chairman of the Senate plus two additional persons appointed by the Governor.

The budgets are published separately in three volumes each year and are distributed to members of the legislature, for reference.

Between the beginning of the summer and the time the legislature convenes, the Advisory Committee visits each institution requesting funds and tries to determine why the money is needed. At the time of this visit each institution is able to show why the money is needed. The committee then makes its recommendations.

When the legislature convenes, the Speakers of the House and Senate appoint a Joint Appropriations Committee which holds daily hearings, giving every institution an opportunity to appear before them to request additional funds. At the conclusion of the committee reports its findings and it is on this basis that the legislature passes the budgets. For example, Wilmington College found that it needed 125,000 more than appropriated for the gymnasium building so representatives appealed to the Joint Appropriations Committee and the money was granted, with the help of Rep. Robert Calder.

"No Subversive, Atheists Appear On This Campus," States Calder

wants an education and is willing to do the book work for it to get it," he said, pointing out that students pay only one-third the actual tuition, the rest coming from state tax funds.

"The state does not feel that a good basic education includes the teaching of communism or having communist speakers. He that wants it can read their (communist's) books or hear them on his own if he doesn't think he's getting an education."

"There are many private colleges in this state and other state colleges, and I recommend that they transfer to them," Calder said.

Calder said that, due to the other duties of his job, he didn't have the time to be an expert speaker against communism; whereas a communist devotes all his time to his arguments which are therefore "more skillfully and forcefully presented and will probably convince you that this is a dangerous bill."

Ronnie Staton asked Calder if there was any advance notice given of the bill before it was passed. Calder said that there had been no notice.

Staton then asked Calder why were college people, whom the bill would affect, not notified and allowed to express their opinions on the matter.

Calder replied: "Because we felt that college people had the 1941 bill and did not enforce it, therefore we did not need their advice... we questioned whether they were interested in enforcing it."

Bill Bryan asked Calder whether or not he thought that this bill, in its stating that a man should not have taken the Fifth Amendment in regard to communism, would cause a man to have to forfeit his Constitutional Right.

Fall Fashions Hit College Campus

By SANDRA SCHWARZ

The Carolinas seem to be taken with many new and many old fads, everything from the Hootenanny parties to madras.

For adornment, the girls are wearing lollipop pins almost good enough to eat, plain hoop bracelets, and the charm bracelet—no less than 15—25 charms, please!

The stores have trouble keeping stocked with Regattas, shoes with rope soles, Popogaloes, and Weguns of all colors. Tennis shoes have a new name, Quick Stops.

Seersucker is ahead of madras and bedtickling, but they are going strong, especially madras in navy and burgandy. Round-collared, pin-striped blouses in broadcloth, seersucker of Oxford are popularly matched with solid colors. Wrap-arounds, A-lined skirts, culottes and shorty pleated skirts are gaining popularity. For special occasions, the lightweight, dacron, soft, pleated skirts are nice.

The colors are still burgandy, navy, and blue denim, plus pastels including baby pink, yellow, and blue.

Hair-dos are beginning to be more simple with short, curly styles. Make-up also has gone more simple and chic, with light shades, including a slight touch of mascara. The heavy eyeliner and eyeshadow are "OUT" as far as Carolina coeds are concerned. The classic simple look is always "IN."

Calder pointed out that the bill said that a man couldn't speak if he had taken the Fifth Amendment in regard to any question pertaining to communism; and therefore, "if he won't answer, we'd have to assume that he was guilty."

Louise Ambrosiano stated that such actions penalizes a man for taking the Fifth Amendment, thus, "getting at him indirectly" for taking it.

"No, I don't consider this as penalizing him," replied Calder. "If he's a loyal subject, why should he fear answering?"

Jack Loftus mentioned that Thomas Jefferson had said that if a man considered the government bad, he had not only the right but a duty to try to overthrow it, and that therefore Jefferson, if alive, would not be able to speak in any of our schools since the "gag" law outlaws such ideas spoken in state-supported institutions.

Calder said that Loftus was mistaken, saying the "gag" law stated "forcible overthrow" of the government, rather than "overthrow."

A check of the bill proved Calder to be wrong.

Ed Bergamini protested against the bill, saying, "it would be better to listen and get the communist's ideas; I know I'm impressionable, but I know right from wrong."

Gene Merritt was the only person to openly favor the bill with Calder, saying, "Why should we listen to what the communists have to say if we know what they've got to say" (referring to the fact that communism is taught in schools to a degree).

A professor present at the meeting pointed out that this law was similar to what the totalitarian government of Russia does in picking what is and is not done and said.

Calder said that he did not think this would happen.

Mrs. Thomas Gay then asked Calder if he didn't think this law "sets a precedent", mentioning that others might want to push bills and outlaw other things.

Asked by one person how he reconciled the fact that the bill prevents people outlawed under the bill from speaking on subjects which are not communistic, such as the physicist Pauling, and the fact that today there is a vast exchange of information between East and West, Calder answered, "That is one of the prices we felt was worth paying."

Later in the evening, when it was noted that the questions were beginning to go in circles and repeat themselves, Calder said, "In my feeble way to point out—this bill is an implication of the '41 law... I ran for this silly job and I went up there and I've got to take some interest in what I think is right."

Page Shaw said that some people invited to speak, would refuse on principle to sign a statement saying they had never engaged in any of the things the law covers.

"That is the bad part of the bill," said Calder, "I wouldn't require a written statement." He suggested a discreet investigation by the administrations of the various colleges.

Saying that he trusted the administrators to enforce the law, Calder was reminded that he had stated at the beginning of the talk that the law was passed without the notification of the administrators and in addition to the '41 law because the college administrators were not trusted to enforce the law.

Faculty Wives Give Banquet

The Faculty Wives Club held a buffet supper on Saturday night, October 12, in the Student Services Building, in honor of the newly appointed members to the college board of trustees and new faculty members and their wives. Approximately one hundred guests attended the supper, according to general chairman of the committee in charge, Mrs. Doug W. Swink.

Co-chairman for the supper was Mrs. Frank Allen. Mrs. Gerald Rossetol and Mrs. Duncan Randall also served on the Buffet Committee.

For their regularly scheduled October meeting the faculty wives plan to entertain new faculty wives and women teachers by holding a small party in their honor.

Hardy Speaks To Student Body On Atheists In Contemporary Society

By Mary C. Hodgins

"The belief in a deity is a scape-goat and only shows man's lack of determination to solve his own problems," stated Lawrence Hardy, research scientist at James Walker Memorial Hospital, in an address given to students on the place of the atheist in a contemporary society.

"The God concept," he continued, "has given to man some place else to go to solve their own problems. I can't do this by myself, but He or it up there will get us through."

Hardy began his lecture by explaining that atheism is a touchy subject, and one which is hardly debatable, but is by all means discussable, and that his goal for the evening was to simply ask the questions, give his ideas, and then stimulate student discussion.

"Five years ago I could have said yes, without any equivocation, I am an atheist." But he continued by saying that after five years he was no longer the dogmatist he was before. He qualified this statement by another — "When we talk about anything, if you are to progress, you cannot be dogmatic. You cannot say that this is absolute, the opinions of today will hold tomorrow." He further stated that one can only say that this is my opinion now.

He then asked this question, "Do you need a god?" He said that god is to men all things, and that one's concept of God is the concept of something that is central in his life. He emphasized this point by using the Christian church as an example, which he said did not place its historic God in the center of its life, but rather that God was more of ten things which is the center of life.

Man Evolved Through System of Gods

"Early man had the God idea to explain the unknowns such as the wind, rain, sun, fire, etc. It is reasonable to assume that if you are in fear of something, and you adore this something, it is possible to now have a free mind where ideas can now have a central place. It is not possible to have a subservience to any deity and still be intellectually free."

He continued by saying that "all religions are and have been a means of control by minority."

That is to say that as long as this control is allowed to exist, it is a technique of subverting the will by a minority of people. "Even democratic religious organizations involve intimidations."

What Atheism Has To Offer

Atheism, according to Hardy, offers to man freedom from the shackles of organized groups, in that it does not owe allegiance to anything but ideas. "Only when you achieve this freedom, can you begin progress of going down many roads."

The question was posed concerning morality and the atheist. Hardy replied by saying that he had to sign a paper before allowed to speak to the group. "I may be a communist. Who knows if I've pleaded the Fifth? My morality as an atheist says I could not be a communist or plead the Fifth. Mentally this paper doesn't restrict me, because I refuse to say that communism is a way of life for me. The way of life for me is a free independent mind with which I can look into communism or anything I want to look into and examine it and take what I think is of value to myself and the people with which I live."

The Atheist — A Polyoid

"I submit that the atheist is a polyoid, in that he is able to travel any road he wants as far as he wants, can accept and reject what he wants, and has the intellectual freedom which he don't get any other way."

"I think atheism has something for you. One of the primary concepts of the atheist is that he is constantly moving. Zero doesn't equal zero. Zero equals."

In closing, Hardy recommended the following books by Bertrand Russell: Religion in Science, and Selected Works of Bertrand Russell.

This lecture was the second in a series sponsored by the Pan-mathian Society.

Senate Spotlights

Bill Holowiti, Cathy Losak, Ed Bergamini, Albert Jewell, Susie Herndon, Tim Chappell, Bill Gemmell, Bill Bryan and Gene Merritt were recently appointed to serve on the Senate Dance Committee during the recent meeting of the Student Senate.

Other items covered by the Senate included making appropriations for six students to attend the Model United Nations, which will be held Feb. 17, at Duke University. Each college represents one country at the U.N.

On March 12, 13, and 14, six students will go to Raleigh for two and a half days of sessions and meetings for the North Carolina State Student Legislature. Each college sends two senators and representatives. Priority for speaker of the Senate is Senator Everette Dirksen. Mike West, Tim Chappell, and Ronnie Staton attended a preliminary meeting in Wake Forest last weekend at which time the agenda for the Student Legislature was drawn up.

Tim Chappell was recently named chairman of the Inter-Club Council. The council serves to represent all campus clubs. Serving on the council are club representatives: Civitan, Tim Chappell, Circle K, Roger Webb; BSU, Sarah Fussell, Engineer's, Butch Ruhlen, Artist's, Betty Stanley; Panmathian, Sandy Wright. The chairman of the council serves also as a senate representative and retains full senatorial powers.

EDITORIALS:

SEARCH FOR TRUTH THUMBED DOWN

What should a newspaper print? Does it have an obligation to print all the news, a responsibility to publish the truth, or should it repress news which it feels harmful to some interests or the public welfare?

Are we not civilized enough to face the truth? Can we not be trusted to read plain facts without becoming irrational? Is freedom of speech a farce, too much for inadequate mankind? Marx was not the first and only one to believe the "masses are asses", and even Plato believed the public had to be protected from truth.

Furthermore, has a newspaper the right to not print all the news, to deliberately play down certain facts? Where would this country be if 200 years ago a group of rabble rousers imbued with the spirit of '76 hadn't received coverage in newspapers—the reason for which many of today's issues are not covered—"It's too touchy," "It's not good business to be controversial," "Keep quiet and maybe it'll go away." Everybody kept quiet and Hitler went away, after he had killed millions and devastated a continent.

When a newspaper deliberately omits and plays down certain matters out of proportion, is it the same as lying?

The editors of the Seahawk attempted recently to answer the above questions by interviewing members of the local news media where such ethics have come into sharp focus because of the racial situation.

Our intentions were to present these inobvious, but deeply entrenched and powerfully influential aspects of our community for a good healthy democratic airing. The administration, however, saw this as an invitation for a public free-for-all.

Consequently, no interviews, no stories, and the questions which could be answered by those who know them best will go unanswered.

OLD FLIES NEVER DIE
—THEY JUST PIE AWAY

By Mary C. Hodgkin and Gene Marlowe

Was that a raisin you ate, or a fly? This may not bother you much, but it's got the Student Congress in an uproar. As a matter of fact, the golden tongue of William Jennings Bryan would have been put to shame by the oratory displayed in the last Senate meeting in trying to discover the parliamentary procedure necessary to banish flies from your pies.

After a thorough investigation extending over two meetings, it was pointed out by one thinking man that with the appearance of winter a decrease in the fly population is anticipated.

So much for the fly crises, which brings to mind its cause: The pub is a pig pen.

Not intending to degrade the inhabitants of the Pub, but it is rather nauseating to step on a dejected brownie or a run-away wiener.

Luckily, this public menace is now being closed every afternoon at 3:30.

One might also note the aborted efforts at consecration in the Pub—our chairs are hole-y. This sanctification performed by the delicate manipulation of compass points—was not unnoticed by our vigilant Senate, enraged by the unorthodox air-conditioning of the cushions.

The Senate, in an effort to prevent plague, loss of sanitation rating, and further loss of face, is planning a campus clean-up week.

We, not lacking immunity to communicable diseases, and having our office just down the hall from the Pub, whose odors lend themselves to every passing breeze, can do nothing less than lend our hearty support to this cause.

Allies Attack
U.S. Policy
In Europe

By Jack Loftus

Recently the entire concept and strategy of conventional non nuclear warfare has received a blistering attack from our NATO allies. This, however, has not deterred the U.S. policy makers from insisting that a major part of the NATO strategy should be in conventional warfare.

Troop Reduction

Regarding this, Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatric announced that the U.S. will soon begin reducing some American forces in Europe. This represents a new phase of national defense, for in case of a conventional attack on Europe by the Soviets, entire Allied divisions would be airlifted to various areas to man pre-positioned equipment. This would supposedly enable a minimum number of divisions to protect a vast area. Such a strategy is far from proven, particularly on a major scale.

Soviet Sweep

The facts which led to this swift deployment idea are rather interesting. The six U.S. and twelve German divisions bear the major burden of NATO in central Europe, and in their defense of the southern NATO line could contain any Soviet conventional attack. However, the three British divisions in the North by conventional means could not stop such a Soviet attack. The Soviet army could sweep across the whole north German plain, duplicating the German feats of World War I and II, and outflank the U.S. and German forces in the south. The situation was made even worse by the French, Belgium, and Canadian announcement of cutting their NATO forces.

Criticism

There had been a general dissatisfaction in NATO concerning this situation, and the State Department's idea of swift deployment is still unsatisfactory. The entire conventional program has met with criticism from the NATO Council, who has relied on the employment of nuclear arms to overcome Soviet conventional superiority. The idea behind this is that any Soviet attack would trigger a nuclear response.

The U.S. has balked at this idea by preparing to meet a conventional attack force with the same as far as possible, withholding nuclear weapons until required. We see, therefore, a major difference in strategy.

Apprehension

This U.S. attitude has caused fear and apprehension throughout the West, and can be seen particularly in France where DeGaulle is building his own nuclear force. De Gaulle feels that a Soviet conventional attack would be another blitzkrieg flanking the southern European perimeter, regardless of swift troop deployment, and into France before NATO's atomic weapons could be used.

The feeling among the Western Allies is that a Soviet onslaught could not be conventionally contained, therefore, the emphasis should not be on conventional weapons; any Soviet attack would lead to a nuclear war, therefore, the emphasis should be placed on a nuclear deterrent.

End of Alliance

If the NATO Council is forced into adopting the strategy of conventional warfare, the repercussions could be grave. Not only would such a decision threaten the entire free world, but would mean the end of the Western Alliance.

Hear ye! hear ye! A new art exhibit will open on the 10th of this month in Hoggard Hall. This exhibition will feature a one-man show by the head of the Wilmington College Art Department, Mr. Claude Howell, and wooden crafts by Rude and Daphne Osolnik from Berea, Ky.

A few facts about Mr. Howell: he has painted steadily and prolifically for 34 years; he has had 428 exhibits, 50 of which were one-man shows; his numbered works total 2,948; he has 582 paintings in private collection, 5 in schools and colleges, and 32 in public collections; and 5 of his works are in Museum collections, at the N. C. Museum of Fine Arts, Mint Museum, Greenville Art Galleries, and the Atlanta Art Association Galleries.

One Man's

Water-colors by Claude Howell may now be seen at St. John's Art Gallery in town, and this exhibit will consist of drawings and oils.

Rude and Daphne Osolnik are well known for their crafts in wood. All Osolnik creations are fashioned from one piece of wood, and it is said that they use the hardest of wood, most of it being at least two years old.

Hours of hard work go into one of these creations in wood, and the Osolnik pieces reflect the combined creative thinking of this talented team.

This Opinion . . . A very good exhibition well worth the time to enjoy it.

Congratulations are in order for W.I.L.C. members Mike Fenley and Dale Rhodes.

Mike has been elected by the W.I.L.C. management to direct the Wilmington College Show which may be heard on W.K.L.M. every Saturday at 9:45 a.m.

In this his first year at W.I.L.C., Mike has proven his ability in radio work, and his help is most appreciated.

Dale Rhodes has been appointed as W.I.L.C. News Director. His job will be to get all announcements that concern the student body and to see that these are heard by the students. All clubs that have announcements should see Dale during the day or leave their copy in the radio station.

This Opinion . . . Progress at W.I.L.C., "The Campus Sound."

Opinion Sideline . . . "Strange Bedfellows," now in the first week of rehearsal—A good period show with many members of both organizations in the cast.

"Every genuine work of art has as much reason for being as the earth and the sun."

Students Attend
BSU Convention
In Greensboro

During the weekend of Nov. 1-3, the Wilmington College Baptist Student Union attended a state-wide convention in Greensboro, North Carolina. The theme for the convention was "Freedom Through Bondage". Eight hundred students from colleges of North Carolina attended the convention.

A budget of $10,000 was adopted by the convention for its mission program, L-I-S-T-E-N. This program calls for the sending of eight students to Korea during the summer of 1964. They will construct an assembly building for the use of North Carolina missionary Jim Greene. This will aid in his work with the Koreans. This project is the largest ever undertaken by the L-I-S-T-E-N program.

The convention adopted a letter inviting the Baptist Student Union of other states in the Southern Baptist Convention to join with them "in fostering a sense of concern for human dignity an equality . . . and in promoting understanding between men of different races in our communities by working with individuals and groups toward the removal of attitudes and practices which stand in the way of racial harmony and peace."

The delegates from Wilmington College were Evelyn Adkins, Mary Emma Blanchard, Sue Duff, Sarah Alice Fussell, W. J. Greene, Glenda Lennon, Ethrage Waters, Berry A. Williams, Jr., and Rose Williams, president.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

Basketball is an old and honored tradition here at Wilmington College. Throughout the years the game has perhaps aroused more school spirit and interest in the school, on the part of both the student body and the public alike, than any other activity sponsored by the school. Since basketball was introduced to Wilmington College in 1949 Seahawk fans have avidly followed their team's fortunes.

As is usually the case with young schools the going was rough at first. Both the teams and its leadership were inexperienced and as luck would have it the 'Hawks found themselves competing in the then-strong Virginia-Carolinas Athletic Conference. Schools such as Campbell and Frederick posed stiff competition for the young, inexperienced Seahawks.

Nevertheless, desire and determination were there and the Seahawks were destined to improve. The improvement came in 1951 when Coach Bill Brooks became head coach and athletic director. Recruiting of outstanding talent was stepped up and more advanced techniques were employed. The results were soon evident—the Seahawks became a team to be reckoned with. As the building of the team progressed confidence in it increased. In just a few short seasons the Seahawks became contenders for the conference championship.

As the saying goes, "The rest is history." Wilmington College basketball teams won several titles and earned the right to represent the Virginia-Carolinas Conference in the Region 10 tournaments. Twice Coach Brooks' charges gained berths in the National Junior College Athletic Association's basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas. In both cases the Seahawks gave a good account of themselves earning the respect and admiration of their fans—not to mention the title of "The Cardiac Kids," as they were dubbed because of their habit of going into overtime periods.

But that's all in the past, what about the future? The question is a good one but its answer is difficult. Heretofore Wilmington College has played only junior college teams and admittedly they have fared well. Now, however, the Seahawks find themselves in an entirely different class where the skills are better and the demands are greater. All eyes will be focused on the 'Hawks waiting to see if they can successfully bridge the gap between junior college and senior college basketball.

Judging in the light of past performances only, the prospects for this year seem bright enough. Of course it would be folly to predict that the 'Hawks will win all of their games (they never have), but it is quite possible that they will be able to sport a winning record at the close of the campaign. After all, look at the material available. Four members of last year's starting five are returning and competition from newcomers and returning veterans is giving even these players a battle for a starting position. Unlike last year's squad the 1964 edition of the Seahawks will have a strong bench and substitutions will present few problems.

Seahawk fans are already familiar with the play of Harry Buzzell, Tommy Cole, Marshall Hamilton, Bill Harris, Bobby Shipp, and Wray Ware. It was this group which helped boost the team to national prominence last year. But don't be surprised to see a few of the following players in the starting lineup: Jim Braxton, Larry Edens, Jan Neary, Phil Stephenson, and Al Thiry. All of these boys are experienced and capable players; with the support of the loyal Seahawk fans they should present a good account of themselves.

Sigas, Angels Win Touch Finals

By Ken Marks

On Monday, Oct. 21, the Sigma Grunts downed the Marauders in a touch football game.

In the first half, sharing the spotlight were Terry Moore, who scored a safety for the Marauders, and Jerry Hooks, who scored a touchdown for the Sigma Grunts.

In the second half, the Marauders were scoreless. Colin Shaw came through for the Sigma Grunts and scored a TD ending the game at 12-2 in favor of the Sigmas.

In the second game of the afternoon, the Blue Angels took the Walkers 1-0 on a forfeit.

On Thursday, Oct. 24, the Walkers forfeited to the Marauders for their last game of the season and the Sigma Grunts gave way to the Blue Angels. Colin Shaw pierced through the Angels' defense to score a TD for the Sigmas. Along with the passing of quarterback Larry Honeycutt, Jackie Smith and Steve Coley were the key men for the Blue Angels. Smith and Coley scored one TD each and the game ended with the Blue Angels in the lead, 12-6.

The success of Intramural Sports has—and is—depending on the participation and interest shown by each of us and on the hard work and good coaching already shown by Coach Earl Allen.

Everyone who has participated in the game so far has seemed to enjoy it.

Softball is next on the agenda for Intramural Sports. If you would like to see this good thing really survive and be a credit to our College, come on out when the season comes around and spur your favorite team on to victory, or—better still—get on a team, and really enjoy it.

Coach Allen says the season went as well as could be expected. He hopes to have better organization from here on out.

Blue Angels Drop All-Stars, 25-7

The Blue Angels, led by Larry Honeycutt, downed the All Stars in a 25-7 victory in Monday's touch football game.

The game started with a series of interceptions. Honeycutt kicked off for the Blue Angels; Jerry Hooks caught the ball and threw downfield only to have it intercepted by Bob Anderson. Anderson tossed out to Honeycutt and Honeycutt threw the ball again; David Padgett intercepted and was downed by the Blue Angels.

When the Blue Angels took the ball, Honeycutt continued to show his passing ability by throwing to Bill Stevens. Stevens scampered 30 yards for a touchdown.

On the kick-off, Simpson surprised the All-Stars by picking the ball up after they had touched it and ran across the line for another touchdown. This ended the first half with a score of 12-0.

Steve Coley received the kick and ran back 55 yards to start the second half. Honeycutt passed to Stevens for another touchdown, running the score up to 18-0.

Jerry Thompson received the kick and was tagged. Bill Stevens intercepted a pass and ran 20 yards for the Blue Angels' last touchdown. Honeycutt tossed to Lemon for the extra point.

Finally, Jerry Thompson threw a long pass to Bruce McCreary for the All Stars' only touchdown. The extra point was scored by Doug O'Hara on a beautiful diving catch to end the game; the Blue Angels 25, and the All Stars 7.

Thompson gets his pass away foiling Culbreth's attempt to it. The Blue Angels downed the Sigma Grunts 12-6.

Virtue Rewarded or Chastity Wins In The End

Students Comment On Dr. Hardy; Criticize Speech, Atheism, Arguments

COLIN SHAW

Dr. Hardy's lecture, "Atheism in Contemporary Society", was exactly what his title stated. He presented his topic as unbiased as one could possibly present such a topic. He tried to "convert" no one, but merely pointed out that atheism, in its smaller sense (freedom from restriction of God) could achieve best the open-mindedness necessary for progress. He admitted, however, that atheism in its larger sense (freedom from restrictions of organized society) would ruin what we call civilization. All in all, his talk was a good insight to the basic ideas of atheism.

NORMAN GODWIN

I thoroughly enjoyed Dr. Hardy's talk, especially the idea behind what he said. However, it doesn't seem that his word choice lent itself to proper expression. For example, when Richard Thorne asked if atheists would prefer a disbanding of all organization, Dr. Hardy found himself in a corner. Mr. Thorne also opened himself to question when he stated that a Christian leads a straight and narrow life. Perhaps Mr. Thorne does, but how does he define the word Christian? Does he choose to ignore the merits of all other religions? Atheism at least tries to examine endeavors other than religion. Man becomes supreme, not religion. Personally, I was disappointed in the discussion from the Panmathians; I received the impression that they had not examined the pro and con views; therefore, having little choice for their own philosophies of life.

SUSIE HERNDON

Dr. Hardy presented a highly argumentative subject in a most thought-provoking manner. I feel that he is not an atheist yet he presented his subject well for someone who does not fully believe his material.

RONNIE STATON

I thoroughly enjoyed Dr. Hardy's lecture. Not only did he give those attending the meeting much food for thought, but his lecture also should have caused them to question and examine some of the fundamental assumptions upon which their thinking is based. I commend the Panmathian Society for doing much to improve the intellectual atmosphere at Wilmington College. I am sure they will continue to uphold the high standards they have set for themselves.

CAROL SMITH

In my opinion Dr. Hardy contradicted himself and went in too many circles to get any point across. In my eyes he is neither one way or another, he is still looking for the answers to his own questions that he is so eager for us to answer for him.

GUSSIE LITTLETON

Dr. Hardy is a free thinker. He was very open to his audience. However, he has incomplete ideas of what he was presenting to us. He gave the impression that he was sort of still researching his own ideas.

RED DOUGLAS

I believe that the talk on atheism by Dr. Hardy proved quite valuable and interesting to the students that were present at the seminar.

BETTY STANLEY

I feel that Wilmington College needs more talks of the same, for we students need to be more informed of the beliefs existing in our society. I feel that Dr. Hardy's manner was excellent for he told us what atheism was in a very straight-forward manner and said in so many words that we could take it or leave it.

"Oh Dear Me, The Sky Is Falling"

By Ed Newman

The crash of an airplane behind Hoggard Hall produced many a raised eyebrow here at Wilmington College.

One Doug W. Swink was first to report the mishap. He is said to have run madly about the campus shouting: "A plane has crashed, a plane has crashed!" Meaning, of course, that a plane had crashed.

Soon, a crowd of three or four people were waiting with eager sadism for any signs of pain or suffering in the wreckage.

One bright fellow noticed a Japanese rising sun on the fuselage. When he commented that it looked like a Jap plane, everyone panicked. Some screamed about imaginary Japanese hiding in the woods; others merely screamed.

Wilbur Dudley Wimpledooper, student, claims he was trampled to death in the stampede.

No one is sure what really happened that day. Nevertheless, several rumors are circulating at present. One concerns the Japanese pilot, who, after having been labeled a "subversive atheist", was welcome with open arms by enthusiastic students.

Another Japanese is in jail for violating a North Carolina statute concerning the minimum altitude at which one might fly an airplane. He protested strongly on the grounds that he was not flying the plane but was ignored because of his inability to speak English.

The plane was completely demolished; you know — Made in Japan.

A Memory

The old man comes home.
Long day at the office.
Gray-headed,
Wrinkled;
Tired eyes glance
At a well-trod
Path to front door.
Weary feet carry him
To the threshold of
A well-worn world.
Once he was greeted;
Now he must knock.
Inside:
Well shuffled slippers,
Faded jacket;
Do's and don'ts of
A past generation
Pound his ears.
Fearless:
He figures on the future.
And with each puff
Drawn from a stubby
Pipe held
Firmly in his teeth,
A wish unveils itself
With a silent resolution.
Must we betray
The hopes of aristocracy?
Happy Birthday, Dad.

Admissions Committee Meets Alters Entrance Requirements

The Admissions Committee, composed of members J. Marshall Crews, Dr. Joanne King Corbett, J. F. Dermid, chairman, Thomas Gay, Dorothy Marshall, and Fred Vallianos, recently met to draw up a new college admissions policy. The policy was approved by the Board of Trustees in November and will go into effect immediately.

The committee recommended that students applying for admission must have a total of 750 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test with a minimum score of 325 on each of the verbal and math portions. The previous required score was 650 with a minimum of 300 on the portions. The scores will be derived through IBM calculations and based on records of former students.

Change in policy concerning transfer students was made. Transfers will be required to have the same minimum requirements as regular students with all transfer students being approved by the Admissions Committee.

The regular Admissions' Policy will not apply to students coming to summer school only, according to the committee. Admission will be at the discretion of the Admissions Committee.

Graduate students will be admitted as Special Students at the discretion of the Admissions Committee.

Application blanks are to be revised to include a photograph of the applicant and a record of any criminal offense. A fee of five dollars will accompany each application as will not be applied toward tuition.

John Birch Society Blasts Government Agencies In Lecture To Student Body

By Mary C. Hodgins

"Get the United States out of the United Nations, and the United Nations out of the United States" advocated William C. Henderson, salaried representative of the John Birch Society, in an address to students and faculty which was sponsored last Thursday night by the Panmathian Club in the Student Services Building. As an alternative, to the U. N. Henderson suggested a parking lot.

The above quoted passage was only one of twenty such aims and objectives of the Society, as explained by Henderson. Others included the impeachment of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Earl Warren, the repeal of the graduated income tax, the belief in states rights "to the fullest extent" as provided by the Constitution and its legal amendments, to get the federal government "out of communist inspired, directed, and controlled civil rights groups."

Birchers also call for the immediate abolishment of such organizations as Radio Free Europe, Voice of America, and the Peace Corps. And finally, to "get the federal government out of religion and not let it destroy reverence for God Almighty."

"A Brief Introduction to the John Birch Society", 27 minute filmstrip composed of fragmentary sketches of the history of the Society by its "wise kid" founder, as one listener commented, Robert Welch of candy Sugar Daddy fame, complemented by preachment on the organization's aims and objectives, was presented.

In this filmstrip Welch pointed out that the organization was named for communist martyred missionary Birch, and that by removing the controls imposed by the government over people, and returning to a government of laws who everyone understands, there will be reestablished a Republic under God.

Henderson was questioned by students and faculty on the validity of carrying out certain of the Birch proposals. In some cases they were referred to a Society publication, The Blue Book, which could be purchased at $5.00 per copy.

One objective of the Society, the overthrow of the Castro communist government in Cuba, could be accomplished by what Henderson termed "immediate invasion." The question was asked would this be advisable inasmuch as such an invasion could trigger a third world war and result in the sacrifice of mankind. Henderson, sticking to his original statement, agreed to the invasion even at such a risk.

Faculty Attends National Historical Association Meet

Richard Stone, Thomas Moseley, Carolyn Murray, and James Daniels were among some 500 participants in the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Southern Historical Association held recently in Asheville, N. C.

The Association, which publishes the Journal of Southern History, is composed of members of the faculty and history departments of Southern colleges and universities and scholars from all regions of the United States interested in Southern History.

Participants ranged from all Southern states. This was the first time such a meeting has been held in North Carolina, however.

The program was composed of morning and afternoon sessions, which featured discussion of pertinent topics, and culminated with the annual dinner meeting at which time the president of the association James W. Silver, of the University of Mississippi, delivered his presidential address entitled "Mississippi—The Closed Society." Copies of his address will appear in the February issue of the Journal and were covered by Time magazine.

"Not only did the meeting offer us an opportunity to exchange ideas with the faculty of other colleges and universities," stated Stone, "but it also gave recognition to our college in our participation."

Dean's Office Announces Changes In Eligibility

Students have been asked by the office of the dean to review the college catalogue, 1963-64 edition, page 24 in reference to eligibility, according to Dean J. Marshall Crews.

"In order to remain in good standing at Wilmington College, students must meet the following quality - point average requirements on all work elected at the beginning of the indicated quarter." At the end of the fourth quarter a minimum quality point requirement of 1.50 is required, as well as at the end of the seventh quarter. After the tenth quarter, however, the student must possess a 1.75 average in order to remain in school.

According to the catalogue, "Eligibility for continued residence or for readmission may be restored by the completion of sufficient work in the Summer Session or through approved correspondence courses to enable him to attain the required quality - point average."

"We want to ask the students to consider this," stated Crews, "to put him on his toes, and also to make him realize that this policy will go into effect at the end of this year. If a Freshman, Sophomore, or Junior does not qualify, he will be dismissed at the end of the year after his quality point average is counted up."

Fine Arts Committee Plans Student Concert For January

Metzoprasano Martha Bradner will kick off the entertainment for the second annual Fine Arts Week, Jan. 15-22.

Miss Bradner, a music student, will sing the night of Jan. 15 in the SS Building.

The following day, Jan. 16, an open house and art show will be held here at the college.

On the 17th, Sterling A. Stoumdemire, chairman of the Department of Romance Languages at UNC at Chapel Hill, will speak in the SS Building on Cervantes and Shakespeare.

Two successive dates, Jan. 18-19 are at present still open.

Dr. Catherine Carmichael will speak on the 20th. Dr. Carmichael is the Dean of Women at Woman's College; she will talk on the cultural aspects of Vietnam and the crafts of the South-Asians.

The State Ballet will perform on the 21st. The ballet, under the direction of John Lehman, will be making its second appearance in the Fine Arts program.

A masquerade ball will be held by the Senate Dance Committee Jan. 22; the Arts Committee is in charge of the decorations.

Thus far, Fine Arts Week has received money from two sources: a donation from the Wilmington Film Society and money reallocated from the WC Azalea Float Fund.

"I don't think I'll bother with it this year!"

"SENATE DEFUNCT"

Two kicks—and it's still not budging.

The first time, it was just a nudge; the administration quietly began closing down the Pub every afternoon at 3:30.

Our noble student defenders and representatives in the Senate immediately launched forth scathing rhetoric against dirtiness, announced their chargin and disgust with the situation and pledged themselves to sponsor a Campus Clean-up Week and do something about it.

That was all that was ever done about it.

Two months have passed. The Pub still closes at 3:30. The Christmas dance, a festive, big-band, semi-formal occasion, has been the largest and most widely anticipated college sponsored event of the holidays.

This dance is the responsibility of the student government. This year there was no Christmas dance.

The student government executive explained this: "There were too many conflicts . . . it wasn't known just who in the dance committee was returning this quarter . . . things got rushed."

We would interpret this to mean somebody goofed.

The administration told the Senate what they thought of the entire state of affairs:

"As a student government you're defunct."

One of the most striking things about Wilmington College, we've been told—so many of us have thought—is that it seems to be an extension of high school. One of the most frequently attributed reasons for Wilmington High's continued existence was that the administration refused to let the students do anything. In cases this accusation may have had foundation—but when the administration has to come to the students and asked them to at least assume the responsibilities they so loudly demanded last spring, it is time to reshape opinions as to just what may be really contributing to the high school atmosphere at Wilmington College.

The Senate is notorious for its fumbblings and blind wanderings in a maze of parliamentary procedure which only a couple of Senators—at the most—even pretend to understand. Yet the Senate, constant in its love of a vast, intricate, logical system of pedantry, rules, and red tape, which it one day has dim visions of perfecting, continues to fritter away its time.

ONCE UPON A TINFOIL STAR . . .

By Mary C. Hodgins and Gene Marlowe

A few million years ago, in some remote corner of the cosmos, the gods all got together and decided it was high time man be taught a lesson. The world hasn't gotten over it since.

But what to do? Several millenia were spent. — One god, partial to reptiles, sent down a snake. It didn't work; and as a result an incompetent gardener got his walking papers.

Another attempt—water! But there was a leak in the department, and another man, keeper of the Sodom Municipal Zoo, floated his whole show for 40 days.

Resorting to fire, they went through two cities, a burning bush, and numerous citizens; no avail.

The the most ingenious god of all, Yahweh, while idly lounging on a cloud, noticed two impoverished earthlings on their way to pay their taxes and have their noses counted. Out of sympathy for the two, because he really wasn't a bad fellow, he decided to bless them with another nose—since, as everyone knows, dependents are tax deductible.

The other gods, preying upon the innocence of Yahweh, decided to turn his kindness into a publicity stunt; and hung up a tinsel shingle in the sky. It worked!

In no time at all, three wise men were beating it, via camel, gift laden to Bethlehem. But it didn't stop there. We've been paying for it ever since.

For two thousand years now, each December month, the managers have come out of mothballs, and the wisemen, having increased in number to include almost all of mankind, continue to peddle bargain-basement gifts, that the Child doesn't even see.

The gods are still laughing.

LETTER TO EDITOR:

Student Government Urges Traffic Safety

December 13, 1963

To editors of SENC Newspapers
To the news directors of SENC
Broadcasting Media
Dear Sir:

As the holiday season approaches, we at Wilmington College are giving considerable thought to ways of making this season the happiest and safest ever. The State Highway Patrol urges us "to be practical" during the holidays; and with this thought in mind, we are urging the students of Wilmington College to be particularly careful while driving when our highways are flooded with traffic.

We at Wilmington College are acutely aware of the added dangers of holiday driving. The vast number of automobiles on the highways during this season greatly increase the possibility of accidents; however, we feel, that with increased vigilance in observing the following rules of highway safety and common sense, accidents can be avoided.

1. Start early so you won't have to hurry, and adjust your speed to traffic and weather conditions.

2. Never drive after drinking.
3. Watch out for pedestrians, and stay alert in your walking.
4. Use seat belts.

As individuals, we can work toward reducing the number of accidents by following the above rules and by making a personal pledge to do our best to drive as safely as possible at all times—especially during the approaching holidays. We can also give our wholehearted cooperation to the law enforcement agencies that are striving to make the coming holidays safe ones.

Sincerely,

Ronnie Staton, President
Hugh Paschal, Vice-President
Judy Campbell, Secretary
Student Government Assn.

Scriptics Pick Editors

Initial plans for Direction, literary publication of the Scriptic Society, were formulated at the monthly meeting of that organization Monday night.

The magazine, an anthology of student poetry and prose, will be edited and compiled by Jennifer Davis and Jack Loftus.

In previous years the publication has served as an outlet for the work of members of the Scriptic Society and other students in the college who have been invited to submit their work for consideration.

Assassination Reflects Barbarism of Today

By JACK LOFTUS

Almost four weeks have passed since the assassination of late President John F. Kennedy. These days have been ones of careful introspection for all Americans. One thing we must keep in mind in such an examination is the fact that an act of unmitigated barbarism does not originate from a serene and peaceful society. Therefore, the only conclusion which one can come to is that this event, like all acts and events, is to some degree a reflection of the time—our time. According to Governor Connally of Texas, the assassination was "a manifestation of extremism." Nothing could be more true.

The extremists, or the radicals, regard those who disagree with them as their enemies; the Federal Government an aggressor; and the President a communist puppet. Their weapons are fear, hate, and violence; their trademark is ignorance.

Such licentious radicals live in Dallas, Texas, the cornerstone-state of fanaticism. It was in Dallas that these degenerates attacked our U.N. ambassador Adlai Stevenson, and who prior to that had done the same to Mr. and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson. Even the Dallas News using the most unscrupulous form of yellow journalism added fuel to the fire of extremism. Finally, it was in such an atmosphere that some punk with a mail-order rifle murdered the President of the United States.

However, we must not confine extremism merely to Texas, for it exists in every city in the U.S. including Wilmington. We

LETTER TO EDITOR:

Letter Decries "Charge of The Light Brigade"

Charge of the Light Brigade
There is a menace among us, mincing us like "meeces to pieces."

It is the frustrated athletes with the fourth down and goal to go stiff-arm, smashing their way out of the buildings on the half hour. We be unto the unwary in their paths.

Just as the innocents are reaching for the latch in their quest to enter the buildings—WHAM!—the door is violently flung open and there is an immediate college of up-ended student, text books, broken fingers, teeth, and an abundance of profanity.

But the innocents can counter by tearing open the door before the unsuspecting would-be stiff-armed lunges, and watch with relish as the body is snatched through the open door and hurled down the stone steps.

Fortunately, there are solutions to this problem of intramural athletics at the portals of our school. Windows could be cut in the doors so one could see approaching students on either side. But then, these windows would provide such excellent locations for campaign posters that they would soon be obscured and you would have the same old problem—somebody getting smacked inna' mouth. Or a trap door could be installed just outside the doors so that just as the stiff-armed touches the bar, the innocents would disappear and the menace could rush on, oblivious to the muted cries of entombed students. Or we could all show a little more consideration for each other by opening the doors in a more normal sort of way.

saw it here in a recent Ku Klux Klan demonstration. We saw how the irresponsible actions of Governor Wallace led to the kindling of extremism in Alabama which found its fullest expression in the bombing of a church and the death of several children. We saw also the disgraceful actions of Governor Ross Barnett which led to violence and death at the University of Mississippi.

The bloody claws of the demagogues and the extremists have imbedded themselves in the very heart of our country; herein lies the greatest threat to the Republic; for the marks of hate, fear, and violence only corrupt and weaken the nation from within making it prone to conquest from without.

However, being a Christian nation we cannot believe that the demagogues, extremists, and violence have had the last word. Somehow in this nation of, by, and for the people—under God—wrong will be righted and peace restored.

If the death of President John F. Kennedy shocks this nation into a realization of what is happening, then his death will not have been in vain. With the coming of Christmas and the birth of Hope, let us recall the words of our martyred president: "For this is a time for courage and a time of challenge . . . In your hands my fellow citizens, more than mine, will rest the final success or failure of our cause."

Representative of the efforts of approximately the last ten year was an exhibition in Hogard Hall of works of art by Claude Howell. The two media included in the show were ink sketches and oil paintings.

However, these two media are not really separate means of expression because the two are related. Ink sketches are drawn first in order to gather material. These sketches are just quick impressions of the subject matter. Then drawing from many ink sketches of a subject a synthesis is achieved and created in a more permanent and complete impression, an oil painting.

Mr. Howell produces about twelve oil paintings a year, but usually works on more than one at the same time and does not wait to finish one before starting another.

The style which Mr. Howell uses particularly in his oils more than his sketches is not referred to him by any special name. He refers to them as abstract, but not non-objective because in his paintings it is possible to recognize the subject matter.

Beach at Ocracoke

Nets

An abstract style is more difficult than a non-objective one because in an abstract there is an added limitation of subject which is not involved in non-objective works.

It is necessary to be able to do realistic art work in order to do good abstract work. Believing this Mr. Howell did not begin with, but tended toward abstractions over the years.

The Art of Claude Howell

Claude Howell has an especially distinctive style which is easily recognized. When one of his oil paintings is placed in an associated art show, it is nearly impossible to mistake it for another artist's work.

Everything in a painting will seem to be almost flat and outlined, and yet the painting as a whole will have a certain depth and fluidity because of his careful use of light and color.

Market Women

Although Howell's paintings are warm and expressive, they lack the humanism and moving life that is found more often in his ink drawings.

One of the things that can be most appreciated about abstractions, and in particular those of Mr. Howell, is that the subject is seen not as it is, but as it is regarded by the artist. Mr. Howell is adept at expressing vividly what he sees and wishes to communicate—and that is art.

Chorus Makes Public Appearances; Offers Songs of Christmas Season

"Christmas" is synonymous with "public appearances" to the members of the Wilmington College Chorus and their director, Loyd Hudson.

They have already made three performances: on Dec. 5 for the Lions Club, Dec. 10 for the Rotary Club and Dec. 16 for television station WECT.

Then on the 18th of December the chorus is entertaining its own in an assembly at Wilmington College's Student Services building. Their second engagement for the day is a performance for the Kiwanis Club.

The program that has been prepared for these engagements includes "Fanfare for Christmas Day" by Shaw, "The Song of Christmas" by Ringwald, and "The First Christmas."

Five members of the chorus will be the soloists for the group. They are Marcia Roberts, Sherry Lackey, Jay Fisher, Wayne Robinson, and Sam Garner. The accompanists for the chorus will be Glenda Lennon and Carl Sneed.

The chorus is already making plans for after Christmas. A musical show possibly by Gilbert and Sullivan, is in its first stages of preparation. Being considered now for performances is "Pirates of Pensance." According to Mr. Hudson, the chorus now has an unusually good number of soloists, and the chorus as a whole is shaping up very well. There are at present forty-four members in the chorus and as a result, auditions will be held for membership in the future.

During the past four years the chorus has taken short tours. Current plans are not final, but a tour is anticipated, probably during either the latter part of the winter quarter or the early part of the spring quarter. It is hoped that the musical show will be the item of primary interest in the various schools on the tour.

Tops To Be New Fad

In an effort to increase esthetic phenomena and the cultural level of WC, two students have "revived the ancient art" of top spinning.

"This device," said Red Douglas, holding a small blue and white top in his hand, "is to sponsor school spirit."

"The tops our goal," said his co-spinner, David A. Walker, who went on to discuss the joys of top spinning.

"The pleasure in spinning a top is the sense of accomplishment after it took me two days to learn... the challenge it presents," he said, describing the vast damage inflicted to self and personal property by the careening little projectile.

Asked how long he had been working at the sport, Red, who taught David, said, "Not long enough," watching as his top shot out of control down the hall of the SS Building and into the door the girl's rest room.

"There's an art to spinning it," asserted David; "just anybody can't do it."

"That's right," said Red, "it has to be a certain color to spin right... like my blue and white top."

"I think it should be offered as a major course here at college and would be a benefit to all students that took it," continued Red expressing his hope that funds might be appropriated to help them spread and perfect the art.

They expressed their desire to work with the Pep Club and use their skill in topology to foster school spirit; however, the Pep Club announced: "We don't wish to be associated with these people in any way."

One Man's Opinion

by
Sam Garner

'Tis the season to be jolly... un-quote the Wilmington College Chorus. The Chorus, under the leadership of Loyd Hudson, have started their Christmas tour. Singing for various civic organizations around town, the College Chorus has a selection of Christmas that shows their great ability.

Carl Sneed and Glenda Lennon are the pianists for the group and should be complimented for their handling of the difficult music that the Chorus has chosen to do this Christmas season.

This quarter, the Chorus is the biggest that it has been for some time. It is indeed gratifying to see more of the student body taking interest in this organization in our Fine Arts Department.

This Opinion... The Wilmington College Chorus: one of the College's biggest assets.

The Wilmington College Players and the Thalian Association have completed the second in a series of plays to be given this season. Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements' Strange Bedfellows was presented on Dec. 5, 6, and 7 at Thalian Hall with a cast that really represented both organizations. Members of the College Players in the cast were Sandy Carr, Mary C. Hodgins, Jay Fisher, Sandra Schwarz, Greg Godwin, Wayne Robinson, Barbara Bradley, and yours truly.

The production was under the direction of Doug W. Swink, director of Dramatics Arts at the College. Assisting Mr. Swink with the play were many students of this institution who should be complimented for their work toward a rewarding play.

This Opinion... Strange Bedfellows, quite a contrast to Tea-house but well worth all of the effort. Stalag 17 will be presented after Christmas and tryouts are on Jan. 2 and 3 at the Hall.

The new quarter is upon us and WILC Campus Radio has changed its programming schedule to meet the needs and demands of the students. The Station has programmed two 90 minute shows for your enjoyment. These are from 12:30 until 2:00 and from 2:00 until 3:30 when the station goes off the air for the day.

There are new plans in the making for the Station that were discussed at an executive meeting of the Station management not long ago. Soon after Christmas, these new plans will come about for all students to see just how professional their College station is.

New members of the station management for this quarter are Don Skipper, News director, and Dale Rhodes who will be in charge of the Wilmington College Show.

This Opinion... WILC, the Campus Sound, does have something to offer to the student body and the faculty of W.C.

Opinion Sidelines... Congratulations to Miss Nancy West and her committee for the work done on the Wilmington College Student Directory. The finished product reflects all the work.

Oils and Drawings by Claude Howell and wooden crafts by the Osoiniks may be seen in Hogard Hall. Be sure to see this exhibit before you leave for the Holidays if you have not already done so.

We wish you the happiest of all Christmas Holidays and a joyous New Year.

Students Comment on Drinking

RICHARD LEWIS

Drinking is primarily an escape mechanism, and I believe it can be very relaxing and beneficial when used in moderation. Nevertheless, under circumstances in which judgment and emotional stability are necessary it can be detrimental. I would like to add that those who abstain from this type of thing often do so because they fear their inability to cope with it.

TERRY FRYE

I do not drink, but I feel that those who do are looking for a way of proving themselves to be adults.

SANDY CARR

The uses of alcohol can endanger the human body no more than excessive smoking or an undue amount of eating. I can see no reason for completely abstaining from anything. I think a person should not be condemned because he uses alcohol, smokes cigarettes, or eats certain foods—it's part of the art of living. As a matter of fact, I can see no reason for condemning anyone for anything.

MIKE WEST

My personal opinion is that drinking is alright in moderation, when you can restrain yourself. It does no good when used in excess.

JAY FISHER

I disagree with those who say drinking affects one's personality. A person is the same—good or bad, whether he drinks or not. (Cont. on Page 6, Col. 3)

Seahawks To Play In Christmas Tourney

CAMP LEJEUNE—The big news in sports right now is the Fifth Annual Camp Lejeune Christmas Basketball Tournament, which gets underway Tuesday, Dec. 17.

Six colleges and the Camp Lejeune quintet will be trying to unseat Elon College, the present tournament champions.

In the first round of play Elon will play Pembroke, Mercer will go up against Camp Lejeune, St. Michaels will face Wilmington, and East Carolina College will play Frederick.

Games will be played at 1:30, 3:30, 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. during the three-day tourney. The tournament will run from Dec. 17 through Dec. 19, with each team playing three games.

To date Camp Lejeune looks pretty hard to beat. They have a three win and two loss season. They split a two game series with the always powerful Quantico Marines, and lost a game to North Carolina College last week-end. They have victories over Quantico, Edwards Military Institute, and Fort Bragg.

The public is welcome to attend any, or all, of the tournament games. There is no admission charge.

Wilmington College Tops Monarchs—ACC

The Wilmington College Seahawks broke out of their early season slump last weekend with wins over Methodist College of Fayetteville, 100-52, and Atlantic Christian College, 85-79. The wins brought the Seahawks' record to two wins against three losses.

Coach Bill Brooks' Seahawks recaptured their winning ways of last year by dumping the Monarchs of Methodist College Friday night. The 'Hawks' superior height enabled them to dominate play from the floor and control the backboards as they romped to their first win of the season and their first as a four-year institution.

The only category in which the Methodists excelled was free throw shooting as they hit on 20 of 27 attempts for a 74 per cent average while Wilmington connected on 14-21 for 64 per cent.

Wilmington College dominated the contest from the opening tip-off. The Seahawks held a 53-25 lead at the half and were never challenged. Larry Edens' 25-point spurge sparked the Wilmingtonians while Jay Neary collected 14 points and Al Thiry connected for 11. Five Wilmington College players hit in double figures; rounding out the group were Tommy Cole and Jim Braxton with 10 points apiece.

Eleven Seahawks saw action in the high scoring affair witnessed by a bus-load of Wilmington College students.

'Hawks Bop Bulldogs

The Wilmington College Seahawks downed Atlantic Christian College, 85-79, as they made their first appearance of the season on the home court of Brogden Hall.

After playing on even terms for the opening minutes Atlantic Christian broke into the lead and managed to accumulate a 10 point lead before the Seahawks took a 35-33 lead and were never headed.

Coach Brooks' charges displayed the brand of basketball which made them feared in junior college ranks as they combined a close, pressing defense with a driving fast break. The crowd was brought to its feet time after time with outstanding ball handling on the part of both teams.

The second half saw the Seahawks put their lead to as much as 19 points, 81-62, before the Bulldogs were forced to employ a full-court press to trim their lead in the waning minutes. Capitalizing on fouls, Atlantic Christian scored 9 of 12 straight points from the charity stripe to cut the 'Hawk lead to 81-75.

Sporting a well balanced attack which saw four starters hitting in double figures the 'Hawks were led from the floor by Jay Neary who pumped in 26 points. Marshall Hamilton tallied 17 points for the victors while hauling in 18 rebounds. Al Thiry hit for 12 points and Larry Edens scored 11.

Gary Johnson led the ACC attack with 20 points followed by Bill Fugate's 18 points and Elmer Hobbs' 16 point effort.

Jay Neary is surrounded by ACC Bulldogs as he gets the rebound in Saturday's game. Larry Edens looks on.

School Spirit — Yes or No

Do the students of Wilmington College have school spirit? If so, how much? How many students have it? What is being done to promote school spirit? What can we as individuals do to promote school spirit? These questions have been raised recently by various members of the student body. Student leaders have been asked these questions in both their official and unofficial capacities. Let's take a look at the situation

What About School Spirit?

First of all we shall combine the first three questions since they are so closely related. There is little doubt that the students of Wilmington College have school spirit. School spirit has always been present to some degree since the college was founded. During the last two years when the Seahawks were competing nationally in both basketball and baseball and when the college itself was rapidly advancing toward four-year status, school spirit was exceptionally high.

Now we find ourselves among the ranks of the four-year institutions—and not even that until next year—with no prospect of great fame for at least a few years to come. It is now that we must forget the past and concentrate on making a name for Wilmington College among the other senior colleges. The challenge is being offered and it is up to us to accept it now. But if the challenge is to be met it must be met by all of us and not just a few athletes or cheerleaders. For the challenge is leveled at all of us.

We Have Started!

We have started our struggle to obtain school spirit. Just last weekend a bus-load of students from Wilmington College journeyed to Fayetteville to cheer the Seahawks to their 100-52 victory over Methodist College. The Student Senate, aware of its responsibilities concerning school spirit, donated 50 dollars to help defray the expense of chartering the bus. When they learned that the bus was full, many students decide to drive themselves. As a result well over 60 students attended the Fayetteville game.

This is a good start, but it is only a start. We must continue to work together to help raise school spirit. Our attendance at home basketball games still leaves much to be desired. Last weekend's games proved that the Seahawks play an exciting brand of basketball and a glance at the schedule certainly indicates the caliber of the opposition. Besides, you have already paid for your season ticket — why not use it!

What Is Being Done?

Quite a lot is being done to promote school spirit at Wilmington College but it is up to each of us to make it successful. The Student Senate is sponsoring a weekly newsletter to inform the student body on all events, the radio station, WILC, is endeavoring to keep all students informed through its hourly campus news programs, and, of course, The Seahawk is doing its part.

The cheerleaders are constantly promoting school spirit and the Pep Club, which is still being organized, has already done a great deal to aid school spirit. All of these organizations are certainly to be commended for their efforts. But all the publicity and planning in the world would be for nothing unless each individual did his part.

What Part The Individual?

We as individual students have a responsibility to our school to help it achieve its goals. We must give it our wholehearted support. We should try to attend every athletic and cultural event possible. We should help those people and organizations trying to promote school spirit by attending their functions and volunteering our services.

School spirit is everyone's concern. It is a broad field and most definitely is not limited to athletics, rather it encompasses all college-related activities. DO YOUR PART.

Pep Club Fosters Extra School Spirit

"It ain't no big thing, but it's growing," said David A. Walker, publicity chairman of the newest organization on campus, the Pep Club.

The club was originated and given its initial boost by the cheerleaders to increase the attendance and enthusiasm at ball games.

One club member stated the purpose of the club as: "To promote school spirit and to cooperate with the cheerleaders in every possible way."

Membership in the Pep Club is open to all students of WC. Future meetings of the organization to be announced after the holidays.

Officers of the club are: President, Red Douglas; Vice-president, Roger Webb; Secretary-treasurer, Jean Thorpe; Activities chairman, Susie Herndon; and Publicity chairman, David A. Walker.

Among the plans of the club is an idea to form a special section in the front row of bleachers to cheer and possibly use cards.

The Pep Club sponsored the bus sent to Fayetteville.

Senate To Publish Weekly Newsletter

In order to insure a more thorough coverage and dispersion of campus news than is presently being done by the radio station, bulletin board, and newspaper, the Senate is in the process of organizing a committee to print a newsletter each week.

The newsletter, which will be posted on the bulletin board, will contain only factual information such as dates, events, and places, with no editorial comment.

A date will be announced shortly for members of organizations and persons wishing to have something in the newsletter to hand in their material before that week's bulletin is posted.

The committee to handle the newsletter is composed of volunteers, five of these coming from the Senate and the other five from the Student Body at large.

Drinking is a way for a young man to waste his money while endangering his health and reputation.

Social drinking is acceptable to a point; this point should be determined by the individual.

Trustees From Moore County College Visit

Newly-appointed Moore county Community College trustees visited Wilmington College last Sunday, Dec. 8, to study the college plant and curriculum.

Chairman of the Moore County College Board of Trustees is H. Clifton Blue, Speaker of the House, N. C. State legislature.

Blue told college officials that the Moore County group was visiting the college to "see what suggestions you might be able to give us" in setting up their program.

Blue added that the program in Moore County was one of the first to be approved by the State Board of Education through the 1963 Comprehensive Community College Act.

Representing the college at the meeting were Dr. William M. Randall, Dr. John T. Hoggard, and J. Marshall Crews. Also present from Wilmington were Rep. Robert Calder and Addison Hewlett, Jr., local attorney and former legislator.

History Outlined

Dr. Randall, Dean Crews and Dr. Hoggard outlined a brief history of the college and discussed the present college facilities. Randall told the group that the enrollment had jumped from more than 680 in 1961 to about 920 this past fall. He said the college was located on a 620-acre site and was planned for future growth. He pointed out that the college is currently undergoing expansion in growing toward becoming an accredited senior college.

Randall also told the group that the modified Georgian type architecture found at Wilmington College was less expensive than the modern design.

Office Space Needed

The group was advised to plan on having a lot of office space for the faculty. Randall said that the college has already had to convert two classrooms for office space.

Trustees from Moore County attending the meeting were Blue of Aberdeen; Thomas B. Hunter, an insurance businessman from Rockingham; Robert Ewing, a publisher from Southern Pines; Dr. W. E. Alexander of Robbins; Dr. A. A. Vanore of Troy; and L. L. Marion, Jr., Carthage mayor. Also Dr. Charles Highsmith of Troy; Paul Dickson, a publisher from Raeford; J. C. Robbins, a merchant from Aberdeen; J. E. Causey, a contractor from Lake View; and N. L. Hodgkins, a banker of Southern Pines.

"Friends of College" Pledges Financial Aid To Library

Known as "Friends of Wilmington College, Incorporated," 24 local women, under the leadership of Mrs. Robert Kallman, Mrs. Rye B. Page, Mrs. Daniel Darrow, Mrs. Henry Von Olsen, and Mrs. B. Frank Hall, have established as their first project the business of strengthening the present library for meeting the requirements of accreditation.

In a recent letter to local citizens the organization stated its purpose—"to pledge the college our individual support, now that it is a full four-year institution." Our first project will be to strengthen the library. The minimum requirement for a senior college library is 50,000 volumes. Our library now has approximately 11,000 volumes. This does not include professional periodicals. Just one of the many we need cost $500 dollars a year," continued the appeal.

"Even though the state will provide some funds toward this end, we will not have enough money to enlarge the library in order to receive the necessary accreditation by the Southern Association Of Colleges And Secondary Schools within the required three year period. Therefore, we are attempting as "Friends Of Wilmington College, Inc." to ease the difficult transition to a first class senior college."

Asserting that the progress of the college is a source of pride to the community, the "Friends" have asked the citizens of the area to give of their financial support during what it terms "this critical period of development."

Committee Works At Cleaning Up Campus

In several recent meetings within the past two weeks the Senate Cleanup has been seeking means to alleviate the condition existing in the Student Services Building.

This week the committee sought additional trash cans for the Pub, including a stable tray at the front of the pub on which dirty glasses and plates could be put.

Carol Smith, chairman of the Clean Up Committee, said that the demand from students to reopen the Pub after 3:30 p.m. has not been great enough to warrant a request to Dr. William M. Randall to that effect. Since the janitors leave at 4:00, it is impossible to have the Pub cleaned for any meetings at night when it remains open later than 3:30. The committee has also been looking into means of maintaining better sanitation in the eating areas and of keeping the tables cleaned off.

Other members of the committee are Tim Chappell, Tommy Cobe, Sandy Wright, and Jimmy Sharpe.

Defense Loans

Students on scholarship on NDEA loans who want them continued next year must let Dean J. Marshall Crews know so by Wednesday, Jan. 22. The office will assume that those not contacting them by that date do not wish to continue their loans and scholarships next year.

Bradner

Fine Arts Presents Bradner In Concert

Martha Bradner, mezzo soprano, appeared here in concert last Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the student services building. Her appearance was under the auspices of the Fine Arts Committee of the college, and headed by student chairman Ray Oxendine.

Currently residing in Greenville, Mrs. Bradner studied privately at the Kimball Hall of Music with Carolyn Besson Fry, in New York City. In addition, some summer operatic study was done in White Plains, New York.

Mrs. Bradner received a B.M. Degree from East Carolina College, where she is currently a candidate for her Master's Degree in Music.

To her credit were several performances in various operas, in which she played leading roles in such productions as "The Bartered Bride," "The Medium," "Sister Angelica," "Faust," and "The Marriage of Figaro."

In addition she served as Director for Music Composition and Presentation for the Sesquicentennial Celebration on Granville, Ohio. Her composition, "A Slave Named John" is registered and copyrighted through the Ohio Historical Society.

She was also a member of an opera touring group last December in the Arctic, which was sponsored by the State Department.

News Briefs

All college clubs wishing to use the facilities of the Seahawk are asked to contact the staff members and provide them with club news items.

A record hop will be held in the Pub following the game this Saturday night. The dance is being sponsored by the Pep Club, admission 25 cents.

Money from the dances held by the Pep Club is going toward Homecoming and to buy warm-up jackets for the basketball team.

Memory Farrar was recently chosen "Sweetheart" by the Engineer's club. The club, as a service project will distribute canisters for the March of Dimes.

The Script Society, literary organization of the college, recently met at the home of Beebe Bloome. Members brought writings which were critically discussed by the group.

Homecoming Activities Include Dance, Hootenanny, Pep Rally

The Migrants, renown folk-singing group, will appear on campus February 8 in a Hootenanny to be held after the Homecoming game with Campbell College in Brodgen Hall, culminating three days of student festivities celebrating the annual Homecoming Weekend, February 6, 7, and 8.

Under the direction of the Inter-Club Council, headed by Tim Chappell, and sponsored by the student senate, Homecoming activities begin with a bonfire on Thursday night, planned by the Engineers Club. During the celebration the Cheerleaders will hold a Pep Rally and present the basketball team.

A semi-formal dance will be held on Friday night, sponsored by Alpha Chi Sigma, from 9:00 until 1:00. Admission is two dollars per couple. The dance, main social event of the Homecoming weekend will be held in the student services building. It is during the dance that presentation of the Homecoming Queen and her court will be made to the students.

The Homecoming Court will be made up of girls, 14-15, who were chosen by various campus clubs to run for Homecoming Queen. The queen will be elected by the student body January 24, and announced at the Saturday night dance.

Combo music will be featured each night of the festivities. Several groups have been contacted to play, but have not been approved by contract. The names of the combos providing music will be released at some later date, according to Tim Chappell, co-ordinator of Homecoming. "The groups will be brought to the campus largely through the efforts of the Dance Committee," stated Chappell, "who are providing the financial support needed." There will be no admission Thursday or Saturday nights to the dance events, except by Activity card.

Saturday night's Homecoming game, in which the Seahawks face Campbell College in cage action, is the annual event causing much campus excitement. During the game, the Homecoming Court will be presented to the public in Brodgen Hall by the Cheerleaders. Immediately following the game the Hootenanny will be held in the student services building. Arrangements for the Hootenanny are being completed by BSU, club in charge of the program.

The Circle K Club will sell Mums during Homecoming.

"Stalag 17" Scheduled February 13, 14, 15

"Stalag 17," three-act comedy-melodrama by Donald Bevan and Edmund Trzonski, and third major production of the Thalian Association and Wilmington College, was recently cast for production on February 13, 14 and 15 at 8:30 p.m., in Thalian Hall, according to Doug W. Swink, director.

Featuring 23 male parts, "Stalag 17" shows a group of American prisoners lodged in a German prison camp, trying to escape, to embarrass and irritate their captors. The plot revolves around the escape of an American who will face serious punishment for sabotaging a train, and his fellow-prisoners who hide him. They at last learn which prisoner has been all the while a stooge for the Germans. The dominate tone of the play is lusty comedy, but this is ingeniously combined at all times with excitement and tension of the most holding sort of suspense.

Brooks Atkinson wrote in the N. Y. Times that he was "still shaking from the excitement of the performance."

Included in the cast are Ray Tolley, Lem Roberson, Wally Warr, Moe Kotler, Gerald Kallman, Billy H. Bullard, Edward Ward, Harry Patterson, Richard Gerrish, Dale Stevens, Richard Cribb, Bill Weir, Paul Bainum, Ed Herring, Ronnie Register, Clinton Collins, Bert Gornto, Sam Garner, Jack Lane, Michael Alper, Greg Godwin, Robert Johnston, and William J. King.

Serving on the production staff are Sam Garner, Virginia Simkins, Betsy Patterson, Elizabeth Bridgers, Hoyle Foster, John Swart, Jean Scott, John Powell, Jack Lane, Sandy Carr, and Mary C. Hodgins.

Hulon Speaks On Teaching Career

"The importance of teaching can never be over emphasized," stated Dr. Harold Hulon, while addressing a group of students interested in teaching careers last Wednesday at New Hanover High School.

"Teachers," he said, "must have enthusiasm, a missionary spirit, the ability to unfold and project knowledge to others, a love for children, patience and determination."

"A teacher never gives up on a student. Instead he cultivates the student, helping him to grow and develop. In a sense, a teacher is one who ministers to the educational needs of students," he added.

Hulon is head of the Education and Psychology Department. Before coming to the college he served education on an administrative level, in Chapel Hill, where he was a school principal.

Staton Plans Veto On Coming "Unconstitutional" Senate Bill

Monday night the Senate will be faced with the problem of what to do with a bill which was almost unanimously approved at their last meeting and will be sent back to them from the president with his veto.

It was brought up at the last meeting of the Senate that they were having difficulty communicating with the students and finding out how they feel on issues. This matter has bothered the Senate for several months; at an informal Senate discussion called by Ronnie Staton some time ago, it was suggested that a meeting of the Student Body be called to question them.

No action had been taken up till the last Senate meeting. "The Senate felt that Staton was derelict in his duty in not calling a meeting of the Student Body," said John Loftus, president of the Sophomore Class, who introduced a bill which received only two negative votes and one abstention.

The bill, directed to the president of the Student Body, Ronnie Staton, says:

"That the Senate convey to the president of the Student Body that he will at the next meeting of this assembly announce a date for a Student Body meeting, and that before such a date of student assembly he issue a questionnaire approved by the Senate to the students for getting student opinion."

Ronnie Staton has said that he will not approve the bill.

Senator Mike West, speaking against the bill, said, "It is unconstitutional because it takes the form of a legislative directive to the executive."

"The Senate is passing the buck. I'm for the principle, but the procedure is faulty, hogwash . . . they are throwing the idea in his (Staton's) lap in a premature stage."

Continued West, "If this action goes unchecked, it could lead to the downfall or, at least, severe drop of the effectiveness of the student government. I think the proponents of this bill have not taken into consideration either the prerequisites necessary to get a Student Body meeting, nor have they speculated in the difficulties of arranging one."

Staton said he was for the idea "in print, but its their (the Senates) little kitty and I'd like them to take care of it."

Staton said he would like to see the Senate "conceive it; set up the machinery; and complete it" on their own.

Calling the bill a "legislative mandate," Staton said he would veto the measure. "I would probably have taken it better if it had been in the form of a suggestion instead of an order."

"We need to achieve a spirit of cooperation," continued Staton, "and we're not going to do it by ordering each other around."

Also aliening himself against the bill is Tim Chappell.

Steve Culbreth, Junior Class president, spoke in favor of the bill, saying, "Something needs to be done; I'm willing to try anything to get things moving." He stressed the need for topics and questions at the Student Body meeting the bill would provide for.

Unless some agreement is reached out of the Senate it is likely that the supporters of the bill will either try to push it pass the presidential veto or introduce a new bill suitable to the president.

Growing Pains

Growing pains are indicative of any college just getting on its feet, and Wilmington College is certainly witnessing a few.

For instance, the college was recently subjected publicly to an attack for allowing freedom of expression in this column. The founders of this country never suggested that living with and maintaining freedom of speech and freedom of religion would be an easy thing, nor has any college remained for long at a time unchallenged concerning ideas belonging to a few of its individuals. In this case we think Wilmington College handled itself rather well and has emerged strengthened as an institution for individuals in the pursuit of truth, learning, and expression — wherever it leads.

Other areas affected with the pangs of growth are yet to weather them out, however. This is in reference notably to the Senate, where a mild uproar is expected this Monday night when they receive one of their most urgent and drastic bills with a presidential veto on it.

The Senate is disturbed about the spirit of Wilmington College which seems thus far to be apathy and are a bit in the dark as to what the students they are representing expect of them. The Senate has been working for weeks to at least get a peep from the Student Body. The current plan is to call a mass meeting of the college and pump us for questions to find out what we want.

The bill and the little battle surrounding it that presently provides for such a meeting may be dragged out for weeks; furthermore, no one really seems to have any clear idea of what the meeting would do — it is assumed that if all the students are gotten together under one roof, something is bound to result.

The Senate is to be genuinely admired in its intentions and endeavor, though the headache and sacrifice of both time and patience they are now enduring in order to straighten out their confusion is laudable; if the Senate were to cease its inevitable bickering, the energy now expended could be put to innumerable constructive uses.

As an example, one area where Student Government and Student Body is crystalizing: preparations for Homecoming. Although Homecoming will be notably without a parade this year, present plans indicate that Homecoming will be more successful than ever before.

With the elaborate and well-organized work of the Dance Committee and the Inter-Club Council that has already been shown, Homecoming will offer a good opportunity for the appearance of the school spirit and student interest that the Senate has been so frantically seeking.

S.O.S. - Radio Station

One of the college's most valuable assets is being threatened; WILC is fighting a battle against apathy and mounting negativism here at Wilmington College to maintain its existence.

It has been through the efforts of many hard working individuals that the radio station has been built to what it is now — certainly an achievement deserving both the thanks and praise of the College; with time and the necessary support we believe the radio station could rival in excellence that of any other college. This is the goal of those who now operate WILC.

However, that goal has been eclipsed by a more immediate need: to hold the ground which the radio station has already gained.

Those operating WILC were given a starvation budget of $100 in the fall to last them through the school year. They have little hope of getting more money — the Senate already in sight of the bottom of the bag — and despite aid from outside the college, the members of WILC are now racking their brains to come up with a means of obtaining money to continue operation.

Wilmington College has been anything but kind to the radio station in its plight. It is regretful that the radio station even had to try to earn its money to function, but even trials at his have so far failed: WILC was denied permission to either sponsor dances or films to raise funds.

During this time the radio station tirelessly continues its regular programming, in addition to playing for someone else's dances. WILC has voluntarily been supplying news material and broadcasts to downtown stations.

"I feel that we've put on a remarkable program considering the cooperation we've received here at the college," said Hugh Paschal, station manager.

What support the radio station has gotten has come from the local radio stations; Paschal said, "The four radio stations downtown have almost broken their backs to help us."

It is through these stations that WILC has continued existing; they loan equipment and donate albums and records. WGNI is presently trying to procure a three or four hundred dollar piece of equipment for the campus radio.

But WILC needs and deserves help besides this outside of the college. Because the air is an intangible medium, the radio station's work has largely gone unthanked and unappreciated.

The radio station is presently seeking members of the faculty who have had experience in radio to help them improve their standards, already recently upgraded by a change in programming.

LETTER TO EDITOR

"Star of Wonder"

"Once Upon a Tinfoil Star" is indeed a blasphemous farce. This editorial appearing in the Christmas edition of The Seahawk reeks with irreverence and violates all that is sacred.

Everyone is quite aware that Christmas has become too commercialized. However, this does not warrant anyone being so sacrilegious as to interpret the Christmas story in such a profanatory manner. Taking the birth of Christ and turning it into some kind of joke, is humor in its lowest form. Tagging the star of Bethlehem "a publicity stunt" is desecration. Declaring that Christmas is a punishment, and inflicted upon mankind to teach some sort of lesson, is abusive and degrading.

The exact purpose of this editorial is not easily determined. Surely it could not have been to inform. Could it have been to amuse? Perhaps it was only a gross attempt at sensationalism. Whatever the purpose, the result was nothing more than sacrilegious obscenity.

—Audrey Rhodes

LETTER TO EDITOR:

Student Speaks Out In Defense of Paper

For years men have been throwing the names radical, conservative, liberal, and sometimes even atheist at each other. But why the names? The answer is simply because of what an individual says. The people are standing up and supporting what they believe in. The method by which they support their ideals indicates the label which they will soon acquire in our "name-calling" society.

"Once Upon a Tinfoil Star" by Gene Marlowe and Mary C. Hodgkin that appeared in the Christmas issue of The Seahawk is such an example of speaking out in support of an ideal. When reading the editorial, one realizes the authors are speaking out against materialism which is taking over several religious celebrations. But as one reads further into the editorial there is an objection to the negative and vindictive aspect which some hold to be ever present in Twentieth Century Christianity. Unfortunately these holders do not know so much about Christianity as to know one of the main differences between the Old and New Testaments or even the meaning of Christ's birth.

Other people take upon themselves the duty of keeping religion clean — especially from this type of satirical criticism. Ben McDonald, on WECT-TV, publicly ostracized Gene Marlowe and Mary C. Hodgkin for writing "Once Upon a Tinfoil Star." Mr. McDonald on two different nights stated on his program that the editorial was not approved by the college administration. This can be called nothing else but a complete falsehood. The editorial was approved by the Seahawk's faculty advisor which is approved by the college administration.

This attack was even without an invitation to Gene and Mary C. to rebuke Mr. McDonald's feelings and attacks. Instead Ronnie Staton acted as a defense attorney for the two writers without their request.

But why did Mr. McDonald go to such lengths to be critical. I contend the answer lies in two related areas. Mr. McDonald is a "purifier," a "cleanser"; but he seems to keep one eye closed while he is "in the process." A second reason lies in that he has read the work to only a superficial depth. I can only ask why a person of such supposedly high caliber cannot comprehend the obvious and even read into this work. He has not only verbally chastized Gene and Mary C., but also, by implication, chastized the students at Wilmington College. I can only deplore Mr. McDonald's actions.

There also appears to be individuals of this type at Wilmington College. These people have or are working toward a college degree. They seem to have a long road to travel before they acquire the sense and insight which accompanies a degree.

To these people I applaud Gene Marlowe and Mary C. Hodgkin who believed in their convictions enough to stand up and support them.

"Mangy Curr" Defends Senate, Attacks Defunct Bandwagon's Play

By JACK LOFTUS

Since this seems to be the time for groping around blindly taking the ax to the U.S. Congress in particular and all institutions in general, we might as well hop on the bandwagon to examine a few things concerning the Wilmington College Student Senate.

For about two weeks running the College presented a comic play entitled "Defunct", presented at the bandwagon house across from the Pervert and Promiscuous Word Display. The leading character was Mr. Spooner whose immortal words marked the climax of the play; when asked if he sang, Mr. Spooner replied: "I know only two tunes—'God Save the Weasel' and 'Pop Goes the Queen'." The play was widely acclaimed by several prominent critics, the newspaper (which ran a second page cartoon on it), and lastly by a few students whose loyalty is now under investigation by the College Un-Wilmington Activities Committee.

No matter how hard I searched I couldn't find a single prominent critic who thought the play damaging, in foul taste, or at the very least subversive. Indeed it now appears that all is lost for a humble attempt to salvage the desolate Senate. But there is HOPE; for as I was lying in the gutter, I beheld the bandwagon passing close by when suddenly an old mangy curr fell off. She noticed me immediately, for we had something in common, and as she gently licked my wounds she related this story:

It seems that one day a long time ago, an incredibly long time ago, a few dissenters banded together away from the disinterested masses to elect a president. With a slogan of "progression or retrogression" and throwing promises of intramurals, fraternities, and sororities to the masses, one candidate swept into office.

Now it seems that these electors also had a constitution, by which a Senate was elected to hinder the president in all possible ways. Eagerly the Senate waited to pounce upon the unsuspecting president as soon as he attempted anything constructive. But the president was too smart; he worked through other organizations pushing through trivials. Naturally disappointed the Senate undertook the monotonous job in the first place. To this end the Senate worked hard; it appropriated funds for the various committees and publications, offered a helping hand to clubs and even donated some money to them, supported the dances, passed the May Court and Homecoming bill, published a news bulletin, sponsored a clean up week, and provided a place where anyone could come and be heard.

However, the Senate felt that it must do more. To this end it authorized the president to call a meeting of the masses for an exchange of ideas. It seems that facts such as these the bandwagon completely forgot about, for surely they would not be so defunct as to ignore them.

I gathered at this point that this was the reason the old curr rather indigently fell off the wagon. I say this because I'll never actually know, for at that moment she died in my arms.

The Democracy

The mist is Filled with bitter
Seeds of miscalculation;
And often the fog Lifts:
Ne'er clear or sweet.
Fruit is still sour!
For the sham of Humanity still looms:
Just from reach;
A meek mirage,
The robberbarons
Grow tired of stealing;
Steal one,
You've stolen all!
The murderer grows weary:
We all die the same.
Artists slave for Conceptions with the Identical hue,
Priests disgust themselves
With one goal: and Humanity sits,
Poised in a ridiculous cliché.
Holding a highball
With a fat paw
Rich with new deals of Grandiose;
Will Gabriel play in Ragtime.
Or Bossa Nova?

Seahawks To Play Pembroke Tonight

Tomorrow night the Seahawks go into action against the Pembroke State College Braves at Brogden Hall. Fresh from two overwhelming post holiday victories over the Bombers of Darlington, S. C., and the Methodist College Monarchs, the Wilmington College cagers are eager to add another scalp to their collection on the home court.

The game promises to be an interesting affair, especially to local fans who remember the exploits of Elizabethtown's Mac Porter. It was Porter who almost single-handedly carted off practically all the high school awards last year. Coach Howard Dean boasts the services of the 6-5 freshman.

Coach Dean also sports a great deal of talent from out of state with most of the starters hailing from New England.

The Seahawks narrowly missed clashing with the Braves earlier in the annual Camp Lejeune Christmas Tourney last December. In that tournament Wilmington College placed third as Pembroke placed eighth in the standings.

Coach Bill Brooks' charges will be seeking their fourth straight win at home as they face the Braves for the first time this season. Game time is 8:00 p.m.

Wilmington College Stomps Monarchs

The Seahawks displayed a scaring second half attack as they downed a surprisingly strong Methodist College team, 94-67, at Brogden Hall Saturday night.

Behind 41-36 at intermission, the 'Hawks stormed ahead behind a 58-point barrage in the last twenty minutes of play. The 65 per cent scoring average completely outclassed Coach Ernie Schwarz's Monarchs from Fayetteville.

The win marked the sixth of the current campaign for the Seahawks who now post a 6-5 mark prior to their game against Campbell College.

Hungry for their third win of the season the shorter Monarchs dominated play in the first half enjoying as much as an eleven point lead during the half.

But with less than three minutes elapsed in the second period a Larry Edens bucket put the 'Hawks in the lead to stay, 46-44. From then on the high scoring 'Hawks padded their lead playing the wide open brand of basketball they like so well.

Wilmington's Larry Edens took the scoring honors with 23 points followed by Marshall Hamilton's 16 and Jim Braxton's 15. Jay Neary contributed 13 points to the winning effort.

Carson Harmon led the Monarchs in the scoring column with 18 while George Potts and Herman Britt tallied 13 and 12 points respectively. The loss gives the Methodists a 2-6 record for the campaign.

Buzzell, Cole Provide Fans With Thrills

Editor's Note: This edition of The Seahawk features Tommy Cole and Harry Buzzell, two members of the basketball team who have provided Wilmington College cage fans with countless thrills on the basketball court.

Tommy Cole, a sophomore, comes to the Seahawks by way of Danville, Va., where he participated actively in baseball as well as basketball. He spent three years on his varsity basketball team in high school and played on the varsity squad in baseball for four years.

In addition to his high school athletic career Tommy sparked the Danville team of the Virginia State Connie Mack League to the runner-up position in the Southeastern Regional playoffs in 1961. The following year his team placed fifth in the National Connie Mack League World Series.

Last season Tommy's outstanding play and fine seven points per game scoring average helped Coach Brooks' lads capture sixth place in the NJCAA Basketball Tourney in Hutchinson, Kan.

Harry Buzzell, a 6-2, 170-pound native of Presque Isle, Me., is in his third year of competition for Wilmington College. In high school his outstanding court play as co-captain and his scoring average of 15 points per game led Presque Isle High School to the championship of eastern Maine and the runner-up spot in the state basketball tournament.

After leaving his alma mater, Harry entered Wilmington College in 1961 promptly winning a position in the Seahawk lineup. His fine play has helped Coach Brooks' charges to two consecutive Region 10 titles and trips to the NJCAA Tournament.

His brilliant defensive play and heads - up basketball have made Harry a favorite of the fans and a mainstay in the Seahawk lineup.

Feature players Tommy Cole and Harry Buzzell give added depth to the Seahawk cage attack.

Cheerleaders Sell Pennants

How about the new Wilmington College pennants? We think they are really great and are certainly a credit to our school. Their display is certain to give an added impetus to the already surging tide of school spirit in evidence on campus. Since the cheerleaders started selling them earlier this month the pennants have really caught on and have become almost a necessity for every loyal Seahawk fan.

The Cheerleaders should be given special credit for their outstanding work in designing and carrying through the sales campaign for the pennants. This year's models are the best ever with the correct colors and an attractive arrangement. What is more they come in two sizes—small for 50 cents and large for a dollar.

Buy A Pennant

Memory Farrar, head cheerleader, reports that sales are outstanding and are exceeding expectations, however, she feels that the supply will last for a while longer thus enabling the last-minute buyers a chance to get their own Wilmington College pennant.

The cheerleaders agree that the sale of the pennants has boosted school spirit and at the same time has provided the girls with money which they plan to use to promote even more school spirit.

Pep Club Charters

Now that the Pep Club has officially joined the distinguished list of organizations on campus look for even more action from this spirit group. Red Douglas, the club's president, reports that the group has several projects in mind to spark school spirit.

Money taken in at the dances after the basketball games will go for decorations for the gala Shipwreck Party during the Homecoming weekend. The party, sponsored by the Pep Club in conjunction with the Student Dance Committee, promises to be the highlight of the festivities of Homecoming Week. Bill Bryan, chairman of the Student Dance Committee reports that he has lined up a great combo giving added assurance of a good time.

Radio Broadcasts

There is a good possibility that the remaining Seahawk basketball games will be taped for radio broadcast at later dates. Mr. Tom Dannaher of radio station WMFD says that the station is tentatively planning to broadcast the Seahawk games after they are played. He stated that other commitments this season have made it impossible for WMFD to program the Wilmington College games live as in past years. However, he feels certain that there is a sufficient audience in Wilmington and the surrounding area to make the program worthwhile.

Mr. Dannaher has enlisted the aid of the college radio station WILC in this endeavor. He claims that the station has several good sportscasters in its ranks and that announcers from Wilmington College would provide an added incentive for listeners.

If the home-games prove to be successful an attempt will be made to cover the out-of-town contests thus enabling many fans who are unable to attend the games to at least follow the Seahawks on radio.

"Varsity Report" sees this as another step forward in bringing Wilmington the very best in intercollegiate athletics. The radio broadcasts will encourage local fans to turn out to see the Seahawks in action for themselves. We wish WMFD and WILC the best in their joint endeavor.

WC Adds Teacher's Training Program

The Teacher Training Program at Wilmington College is new this year and was enabled by Wilmington College's new status as a four-year institution. The State Board of Education through its certification department has been advising with the college in the development of an acceptable teacher training program.

The State Board of Education will honor the work done at Wilmington College and will grant certificates on a provisional basis until Wilmington College has graduated three classes and is fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the North Carolina College Conference.

In order to enter the teacher training program a student must have enough credit hours to have a classification of junior or near-junior. A student may begin his education courses before he has formally made his application, for admission to the Teacher Training program, but before the end of his first quarter this application must be made.

Acceptance into Program

Acceptance is based on two evaluations. The first is a 1.75 quality point average. The second is an evaluation by six reference, teachers of the applicant's choice.

On a four-point scale of items which list personal attributes, one's average evaluation must be at least two. Some of these items are, voice quality, personality, enthusiasm, and character.

WC Has New Artist;

Patty Minser, WC Instructor

In September, 1963, Patty Minser joined the Art Department at Wilmington College. As an art instructor she teaches graphics course and art education for elementary school majors. Since Miss Minser has only been here for less than five months, all of the students have possibly not had the opportunity to view and appreciate her art work.

Miss Minser is a native of St. Paul, Minnesota, but lived in Oak Ridge from 1943 until last fall.

Miss Minser is one of Oak Ridge, Tennessee's most exhibited young artists. Her first exhibit was held three years ago at the Oak Ridge Public Library. Besides the Oak Ridge exhibition, Miss Minser has had her paintings shown in Knoxville, Atlanta, at the Georgia Association of Artists Show, and has had a one-man show at the University of Georgia gallery last spring.

Miss Minser attended the University of Georgia for four years and the University of Chattanooga for two. She received her master's degree from the former. Her majors were painting and drawing.

Although Miss Minser works mostly in oil on canvas and masonite, she also likes color crayons, watercolor wash with ink or color crayons, and gouache which is a gum arabic solution mixed with dried pigments.

Most of Miss Minser's pictures are large due to her preference for working on a large scale and also she likes to work fast.

Once accepted into the program prospective teachers are expected to maintain at least these averages.

Requirements

In addition to the basic requirements and the requirements in the major field a student in the program must earn 36-39 quarter-hours credit in professional education courses. Fifteen quarter-hours are earned while teaching as a student in a regular elementary or high school for a period of a quarter.

At the time of graduation the student in the program must have a 2.5 quality point average in his major if he is to teach in a secondary school (high school) or a 2.5 in all 300 or higher courses if he is to teach in elementary school.

Upon graduation and successful completion of the teacher program the Department of Public Instruction will issue a teaching certificate to the graduate upon the proper recommendation of the College.

Final Recommendation

Final recommendation is dependent upon a 2.5 quality point average in the student's Major or 300 and 400 courses and an acceptable evaluation by the applicant's references.

Prospective teachers will have to pass the National Teacher Examination before they will be granted a certificate to teach in North Carolina. For the last several years teachers have been required to take the examination, but have not been required to make a particular score to be certified until now. North Carolina does not have agreements with other states according to which the teaching certificates of each state is mutually recognized. However the requirements for an "A" certificate in North Carolina are high enough to be sufficient for certification in most other states.

During the next school year there will be forty to fifty students practice teaching in the schools in the immediate area.

With the addition of the fourth year courses and the supervision of student teachers during the next year, it is anticipated that the Education - Psychology Department will need to employ two additional persons. The department will in effect double. (Dr. Harold Hulon and Fred Vallianos are professors of Education and Psychology respectively in the department now.)

Sometime in the future the college will probably set up a teacher placement office which will set up interviews between those seeking teachers and the students at Wilmington College who have nearly completed their teacher training.

Seahawk Survey Polls Students

On Various People, Topics, Issues

On Friday, January 10, this newspaper conducted a survey of sundry and topical topics.

When given a choice of Goldwater or Rockefeller for the Republican nominee for president in '64, the students of Wilmington College chose Nixon. Out of 92 ballots the final tabulation was Goldwater—40, Rockefeller—32, and 4 write-ins for Nixon. Sixteen people didn't vote.

Will the Pope's visit to the Holy Land have a lasting benefit? 46 said yes, 42 said no. And four people thought it meant Alexander Pope.

67 students concede that the Johnson image will secure for him his second term; 23 are less optimistic; and two evidently haven't heard of "Uncle Lyndon."

The political chances of the remaining Kennedy's have been termed unfavorable by the majority of the students polled.

42 students have liked the dances that have been held so far; 30 did not. Many people invalidated their ballots by writing in "What dances?"

Attention Student officers: 55 students voted that you have not lived up to your campaign promises, promises, promises...

Is the Senate doing its job? 44 yes, 40 no. That is what one calls a narrow margin.

Are you satisfied with the plays being produced this year? 64 said yes, 20 no. Did you hear that, Mr. Swink?

Rockefeller's divorce will affect his political aspirations according to 57 students. 34 don't agree. Happy was not polled.

Sanford is a good governor to 43 students, but he is a bad governor to 48 students. One person didn't know the difference between good and evil.

Prostitution should not be made legal—48. Prostitution should be made legal—43. No comment.

Gambling should not be made legal—30. Gambling should be made legal—59. Once again, no comment.

72 were pro Peace Corps. Ten were con Peace Corps. And ten thought it meant a body in repose.

Demonstrations are not an effective civil rights weapon according to 52 students. However, 38 said yes, they are.

There were 42 liberals, 33 conservatives, and 14 unknowns, polled. Also, there were three write-ins from branches of the same party: democrat, fanatic, and communist.

66 students feel that the racial situation in Wilmington is being handled adequately, whereas 22 do not.

17 students plan to remain in Wilmington; 69 do not; six didn't know where Wilmington was.

24 persons would like to see Sargent Shriver as Johnson's running mate, 61 would not, and seven have already forgotten who Sargent Shriver is.

Yes—48. No—35. Do you think that Wilmington College adequately prepares you for the future?

One Man's Opinion

by
Sam Garner

"Thirty days hath September, April, June, and November; all the rest have thirty-one." It seems that we are well into the thirty-one days allotted us for this month of January and a great many activities will highlight this the first month of a new year.

Already the first weeks of the month have seen activity for the Wilmington College Players. They have begun work on the third play of the season—Donald Bevan and Edmund Trzcinski's Stalag 17. This play will open the second week in February with many of the male students of Wilmington College in the cast.

The stage crafts classes of Professor Swink are now in the process of making stage props out of old lumber that they obtained from some unknown place near the College. The play takes place in a barracks of Stalag 17 somewhere in Germany during World War II; therefore, the workers will have to use wood and materials that look as near the period as possible.

Making their second appearances on the Thalian stage in February will be students Gregg Godwin and Paul Bainum. Gregg is remembered for his role in Strange Bedfellows and Paul appeared in Teahouse as well as working with the last presentation.

This opinion... Stalag 17, a production well worth attending. More news about the play as it progresses.

A new exhibition now in Hoggard Hall! This exhibit by Ann Wall and Howard Thomas is one of the most interesting shows that we've had at the College this year.

Mr. Thomas' technique is the most interesting one that this layman in the Art world has ever seen. It is most difficult to describe an artist's work; therefore, I shall not attempt to but I urge all students of this College and members of the community to go to Hoggard Hall and see this exhibit.

This opinion... The Art Department is to be congratulated for the work in bringing these exhibits to the school.

Opinion Sidelines: Comments to the Sophomore Class in the selling of party mugs with the College seal. They are nice enough for any College get-together when you might be at your wits end.

College students, this one included, are looking forward to next summer with exciting thoughts. The Opinion has it that summer work is one of the most thought about.

The Wilmington College Chorus will do the musical H.M.S. Pinafore on tour this year and Opinion has it that the student body will get to see and hear it early in the spring.

The Holidays were well expected by all including the staff of the Seahawk. "Welcome back."

Bonfire Launches

Festivities Tomorrow

Tomorrow night marks the beginning of three days of celebrated festivity for Wilmington College students as they participate in the annual Homecoming Weekend on February 6, 7, and 8. Planned activities include Pep Rally, Shipwreck Party, Bonfire, Basketball games, Dances, and a Hootenanny.

Under the direction of the Inter-Club Council, headed by Tim Chappell, and sponsored by the student senate, Homecoming activities begin with a bonfire on Thursday night, planned by the Engineers Club. During the bonfire the Cheerleaders will hold a Pep Rally and present the basketball team. A Shipwreck Party, planned by the Pep Club, will follow the bonfire in the student services building and music will be by the Rebels and the Majestics.

A semi-formal dance will be held on Friday night, sponsored by Alpha Chi Sigma, from 9:00 until 1:00 p.m. Admission will be two dollars per couple. The dance, main social event of the Homecoming weekend will be held in the student services building. "The Village" will be the theme of the dance. It is during the dance that presentation of the Homecoming Queen and her court will be made to the students.

The Homecoming Queen will be elected by student ballot from 14-15 girls, who are chosen by various campus clubs to run for Homecoming Queen. Memory Farrar, reigning May Queen, declined to run for the queenship but will be serving as a member of the court. The Queen and her court will be presented by Master of Ceremonies for the evening, student Richard Thorne. Music for the event will be by the "Ambassadors."

Faculty Votes Class Attendance Changes Effective Next Quarter

By PAM LONG

New class attendance regulations were approved Jan. 13 by the faculty due to the criticism the original system received from both the faculty and students. The new regulations were formulated by a faculty committee comprised of Walter Biggs, chairman, Mary Bellamy, Doug W. Swink, and Page Shaw. Beginning with the spring quarter, the new rule will go into effect.

According to the new regulations, permits to re-enter class after any absence in excess of those allowed in a course will be issued by the Dean of Students (for men) and the Dean of Women. Students must submit to the dean a note from an authorized person acceptable to the dean to explain the absence. If the Dean of Students or the Dean of Women fails to excuse an absence in excess of the maximum number allowed in a course, the student is then referred to the Academic Dean for his decision. If a student wishes to appeal the decision of the Academic Dean, he may have this case referred to the Student Affairs Committee for final action.

Students Exempt

Juniors and seniors who are full time students and who are on the "Dean's List" for the preceding quarter are permitted absences not to exceed 25 per cent of the class meetings.

Faculty members are expected to check class attendance daily and to inform the appropriate dean whenever a student has been absent the maximum number of times allowed in the course; each subsequent absence by that student likewise is to be reported. Daily reports of all absences in a class are not required.

Notification will be sent by the Academic Dean to the parents of the student who has been absent the maximum number of times allowed in a course; this notification should explain the consequences of an additional absence for which there is no acceptable explanation.

Former Regulations Included

Some of the former class attendance regulations were maintained in the new system. The number of absences allowed in courses will stay the same: three absences in a six- and five-quarter hour course, two absences in a four- and three-quarter hour course, and one absence in a two- and one-quarter course. Any absence in excess of

EDITORIALS:

A SUCCESSFUL HOMECOMING

For more than a year some Student Government officers have complained that we never say anything good about them and take advantage of every possible opportunity to make fun of them. The first part of the complaint may be answered by pointing out that neither do we congratulate students for just being students nor teachers for just being teachers; the second part, answered by remarking that the Senate happens to have rather high incident of the ridiculous. The Senate could never accomplish much with everyone simply being "co-operative"; unless enough individuals put in leadership plus effort, all the co-operation possible would be no more than nothing.

At last enough leadership and work has been put out by the Student Government to come up with something really good: a Homecoming that will offer a variety of entertainment and excitement for everyone at the college. When Student Government officers are chosen, it is to a rather nebulous job—it's almost entirely up to them to define that job in many areas; this takes a great deal of originality, thinking, and sweat if they define the job as a big one. With Homecoming, members of the Student Government and the various clubs have created and taken on a large job and are completing it well. We, the students, couldn't ask for more.

WHO KILLED SCHOOL SPIRIT ...?

Where is school spirit? Everybody is wondering where it is—we've been accused of assassinating it—so has everyone else at one time or another including the administration. The fact is no one really even tried to kill it yet—it's never appeared in the first place.

School spirit can't be aroused by yelling your lungs out at a ball game—that's mob violence; nor can it be achieved by everyone thinking Wilmington College has some sort of unique sanctity—that's chauvinism.

The trouble lies in people thinking school spirit is a collective feeling. School spirit is an individual determination held by each individual to get the most out of what college has to offer that he thinks would be advantageous to him. It's more than shallow mass enthusiasm; it becomes communal when enough of these interested and determined students are together in one college.

Such spirit isn't stifled only because of negative factors that might exist in a community or an administration, or because the college happens to be small or non-residential. If the spirit is genuine, other persons successfully objecting to it may expect persistent shouts of protest, if not a stink, to be raised about it; and if in no other way, collegiate spirit will be evidenced by an air of scorn and rebellion.

A college is never dull; the students are.

COLLEGE "HOLDEN CAULDFIELDS" NEED GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT

By Mary C. Hodgins

The number of college "drop-outs" is increasing at an alarming rate. This fact, coupled with what national magazines have labeled present college generation, "the tormented ones," makes it safe to assume that Wilmington College must take its place in the statistics, and recognize that many of its students have found it necessary to "drop out" and that those who have managed to remain often find their abilities crippled by "emotional disturbances."

While Saturday night "beer bouts" and other escape mechanisms trigger what is often labeled "typical college behavior"—public drunkenness, pseudo beatnikism, drug experimentation, etc., and while some may argue that this extra-curricular activity doesn't even concern the college, the fact remains that it does happen, and that it effects a large percentage of our student body. Just what is the cause? We don't pretend to have the answers. But as long as students find it necessary to "let off steam" without regard to themselves or those around them, then we say that it is time steps were taken to investigate the problem.

The establishment of an efficient guidance department would relieve much of the situation. It is expecting far too much to push the job off on an already overloaded faculty. Their duties should not include the task of testing, counseling, and guidance in addition to carrying an academic load. This only leads to inefficient instruction and shallow counseling, or "vitamin grabbing," exhausted teachers.

If the administration saw fit to establish such a department, and if they recognize that a problem does exist, the benefits gained would be theirs.

Not only in the area of student counseling would the college benefit from such a center. Faculty members, too, would have a place to air problems. The admission program could be handled by the department, in addition to administering tests to the community.

Or is it worth additional salaries, finding another space in an already crowded plant in which to squeeze an office? The answer lies with the administration. As students, we have said yes!

Said the psychologist:

"It is a despicable thing that some people can be cloaked as such — and get away with so much."

... The poet who wrote this remains anonymous. At this institution he would have to.

The Opinion has it that one of the rules of the College is slyly being violated; this rule being—"Hazing is a violation of the laws of the State of North Carolina. Any type of physical punishment, humiliation, or intimidation of one student by another is classified as hazing and is not permitted."

When this takes place, it is not something that can be reported or reckoned with. A student at this age must live with himself and with others. It seems to a great many people that the others are the worst things in life and they are. People may not understand this poem or this writing but to those of you to which this applies, be warned! Even at the tender age of 20 or 21, a man knows what he will do and let's hope that he is allowed the privilege of doing so. An anti climax is here needed! Too bad there isn't one available.

OPINION SIDELINES:
There will be three different exhibitions in Hoggard Hall this coming month.

The Wilmington College Chorus is working on "H.M.S. Pinaflore" and this will be presented in March. The show should be interesting and the music is delightful. Make plans to see "H.M.S. Pinaflore."

"Stalag 17," a presentation by the Wilmington College Players and the Thailians will be presented on March 13, 14, and 15. Students of the College are admitted free to all performances by using their activity cards. This is a very interesting show and well worth your attention.

Opinion has it that WILC will be on the air soon. This will be a great step forward for one of the College's leading news media.

"Direction," the annual publication of the Scriptic Society, is well on its way to being the best in years. Congratulations to co-editors of the book.

The Wilmington College Show on WKLM is always interesting to listen to—9:45 a.m. on Saturday morning—if you're up that early.

Apathy Invites Welfare State

By JACK LOFTUS

On January 22 Dr. George Lumb from James Walker Hospital gave a fine and constructive address to the students of Wilmington College on socialized medicine. I believe the gist of Dr. Lumb's talk was that the reason for the growth of socialism in the United States is the result of the American people being content to let someone else do the work for them—the someone else is the government, be it local, state, or federal. If this is true, and I think it is—we must stop and take note.

Today it is the government who tells us whom we must serve in our restaurants, how much is to be deducted from our pay check for our social welfare, how much we must pay a laborer, what time we can go and come from work, and many others. However, we must remember that today these laws are necessary, but only because the American people have made them necessary by not living up to their responsibilities. It would appear that the motto of this country "E Pluribus Unum" has lost its once cherished meaning. We are becoming a nation of parasites; we have betrayed the ideas of our founding-fathers.

The answer seems clear if we are to survive as a nation. We must again become a nation of individuals if this government of, by, and for the people is not to perish from the earth. However, with individualism also goes responsibility, and the two cannot be mutually exclusive. The responsible individual takes an active part in his government. He begins by asking questions; and when he gets the right answers, he does something about them.

It is this "doing something" that is the duty of every American; for when we are lax in this we have the birth of socialism and the death of democracy. Not too long ago a young individual wrote the first sentence in the chapter of the American '60's—"Let us begin." The rest is up to us.

"The Dollmaker" Deals With Ruin Of A Personality

By Richard Lewis

When one finds a really good book, truly meaningful to him, one that speaks to and for him, he has found a rare and valuable thing. One feels, in addition to his initial delight in reading it, a responsibility to make it known to others.

To this end I invite your attention to Harriet Arnow's, The Dollmaker. I have seldom run across a work that combines such clarity of expression, consistent aim, and highly readable style.

The Dollmaker is a novel of unusual depth and sensitivity, and the protagonist, Gertie Nevils, is warm and humanly compelling. The main conflict arises when she is forced to leave her extremely rural home and live in wartime industrial Detroit. Her high intelligence and sensitive nature render her adjustment to the new conditions very difficult. It is painfully fascinating to stand by and watch as she is torn down, bit by bit, and reshaped in the mold of the industrial north.

Harriet Arnow has embroidered a very fine cloth of dialect and symbolism with the ever-recurring theme of man in conflict with the larger society.

Fine Arts Committee Presents Dance Films

The Fine Arts Committee recently presented several films on modern dance.

"The Plastic Body" was a film made by the students of the University of Utah Dance Department. The film demonstrated the various phases of modern dance techniques.

"Air for a G String" presented music interpreted in dance steps. The dance was performed by the group under Doris Humphry, a pioneer of modern dance whose technique is based on the deflection of gravity. She views motion as "the arc between two deaths" — between stillness and the danger of imbalance.

Martha Graham, one of the geniuses of modern dance, was shown in "Lamentation." She has developed a distinct dance technique based on contraction, release, and percussive movement. The seventy-year-old dancer still works with her company abroad and in New York City.

"The Moor's Pavane", a modern dance classic, is based on the Othello story; the work is still being performed though it is over thirty years old.

Artist Houchens Lectures Students In Hoggard Hall

"Reason and Unreason in Art" was the title of the lecture given by Doug Houchens at 8:00 p.m. last night in Hoggard Hall. The Fine Arts Committee presented the program, the subject of which was Dionysian and Apollonian aspects of art.

Houchens received his B.F.A. and M.F.A. from the Richmond Professional Institute. He is Associate Professor of Fine Arts at Davidson College and was a Visiting Professor of Fine Arts at Barber-Scotia College, Concord, N. C., from 1956 to 1957. He was included in the Supplement to Mallett's Index to Artists, 1956.

Houchens Masters thesis is entitled Contributions of Expressionist painting to the Art of Portraiture. He is a member of the Jury of Awards for the Annual Competition of Painting, Mint Museum of Art, Charlotte, 1956, and a member of a symposium panel (The Significance of Art to the layman), Barber-Scotia College, 1954. And in addition he has prepared and delivered a radio script, lectured on aesthetics, and given a critical analysis of painting by students.

Many of his paintings and graphic works are in private collections.

He has exhibited his works at the Mint Museum, Charlotte; the Jewish Community Center, Richmond; the Museum of Art, Raleigh; the Arts and Science Museum, Statesville; and the Salem Gallery of Fine Arts.

His one-man exhibitions have included the Richmond Professional Institute, Queen's College, Salem College, and the Mint Museum.

DeLoach Publishes Article On College President Chemists

Dr. Will S. DeLoach, head of the chemistry department at Wilmington College, recently had an article, of which he is the co-author, published in the current issue of Science Education.

The article concerns a study of college and university presidents through 1960 who were chemists.

The co-author of the article is Opey Dew Jeanes, who was a graduate student at Peabody College when the work was done and is at present a member of the faculty at Chowan College.

The article entitled "Chemists As College Presidents" gives the names of the 33 men and one woman, their academic fields in chemistry, and the institutions of which they were presidents, with dates.

A study of 192 college and university presidents in 1928 revealed that although 142 had teaching experience, only three had taught chemistry.

The first university president who was also a chemist was Thomas Cooper, who became president of the University of South Carolina.

Although there was for a time some objection to the selection of Charles W. Eliot as president of Harvard, largely because he was a scientist, he went on to served for 40 years, and Harvard has had a chemist as president for 60 out of the last 90 years.

No special effort was made to learn the names of acting presidents, and there are probably many others who could be added to this list.

Thomas C. McCall Offers Comments On New York Plays

During the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCall made a trip to New York especially to see plays on and off Broadway. The plays that they saw were Chips with Everything, Here's Love, Riverwind, Luther, She Loves Me, Spoon River, 110 in the Shade, Jennie, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf, This Was Burlesque, The Boys from Syracuse, The Streets of New York, Oliver, and The Girl Who Came to Supper.

On some of these plays Mr. McCall has given critical comments for the purpose of this article.

Chips with Everything won the top drama award in England. It has an all English cast and is a satirical comedy on the R. A. F. Well done, impressive, well portrayed were the words Mr. McCall used to describe it. There is a harmony of plot that rises into one big burst.

Riverwind — A First
Riverwind is a play that just closed off Broadway. It was the first effort of a new composer, John Jennings, who is now celebrated because of it. The story itself is a corny one of a couple patching their marriage by going to the scene of their honeymoon, but the music in it is fine.

Albert Finney makes an impression one can never forget in his performance carries the play. One scene in particular is beautifully done. This is the scene involving the selling of indulgences when the performers take the audience into it and sell to the audience.

She Loves Me, as every critic including Mr. McCall calls it, is charming. The story is that of a pen-pal love affair in a French perfumery. The stars are Daniel Massey and Barbara Cook, who Mr. McCall terms one of the two best female voices on Broadway.

Spoon River, which has since closed, had only a cast of six, four speakers and two folk singers. The play was more like a dramatic reading than a play; it brought Edgar Lee Masters poems to life with no scenery. The build up in character was fast with very little change done; only a shawl, glasses, a walking stick could alter a character. The folk music included was very good.

The Rainmaker
Inga Swenson, the female lead in 110 in the Shade, is the other one of the two best female vocalists on Broadway. This was the best musical that the McCalls saw, but it somehow still didn't ring true. In the play, which was taken from The Rainmaker, Robert Horton had a weak voice.

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf is really, really funny. It is not vulgar, but has naked truth which is uncomfortable and even embarrassing; you are completely exhausted after it is over.

This Was Burlesque is a documentary on burlesque written and narrated by Ann Corio, who coached Gypsy Rose Lee. There are comedians, casino cuties, and a chorus line. It is a midnight show with a barker at intermission. The crowd — college students.

Contemporary Shakespeare
The play voted by Mr. McCall as one of the four best shows ever seen in New York is The Streets of New York, the other three being Carnival, How to Succeed in Business without Really Trying, and A Man for All Seasons. The Streets of New York is a spoof on the old 19th century melodramas about a ruthless banker who forecloses on a pretty young widow with children. The music — wonderful!

Oliver "Disappointment"
Oliver was "the biggest disappointment of my life." The play was full of slapstick that insulted one's intelligence. And because of anti-semitism in this country, Fagin was reduced to a cardboard, two-dimensional clown who is an idiot. However, the set and music was worth it. The set was a revolving series of steps and platforms and levels. Furthermore, Georgia Brown is captivating.

The effect in respect is BEACH PARTY on all occasions. Petite, Pert, Pretty. Our models are Pat Beasley, Patsy Futchs, and Sandra Lennon.

Saturday Night

'Hawks Meet Campbell In Homecoming Game

Hometown fans will be able to witness the long awaited return engagement of the Wilmington College Seahawks and the Campbell College Camels Saturday night at Brodgen Hall. The last time Campbell faced the Hawks here in Wilmington was three years ago when the Camels won the 1961 Virginia-Carolinas Conference basketball tournament, 87-73, in a hard-fought contest.

Long rivals as junior colleges, the feud was broken temporarily after the 1961 season when the Camels moved into the ranks of the four-year schools.

'Hawks Follow

When the Seahawks became a senior institution this year both schools were eager to resume their rivalry. In their first encounter this season, the Hawks journeyed to Buies Creek on Jan. 14 where they downed the Camels 92-87.

The Camels, under the direction of Coach Fred McCall since 1955, will be out to avenge the earlier defeat at the hands of the Seahawks.

The contest promises to be a thrilling affair with the Seahawks displaying the brand of basketball which made them them feared in junior college ranks as they combine a close, pressing defense with a driving fast break.

As an added incentive for the fans the game will mark the highlight of Wilmington College's homecoming festivities. All in all the contest promises to provide all of the excitement of a few years back.

As members of the Virginia-Carolinas Conference the schools met every year from 1950-1961 as junior colleges. However, both squads are currently listed as independents.

In their third season as a senior institution Campbell has faced some rugged competition, playing such teams as High Point College, Catawba College, and nationally ranked Western Carolina College.

'Hawks Drop Two In Overtime Play

Wilmington College's basketball crew dropped two of their three games last week. On Wednesday the Hawks journeyed to Darlington, S. C., where they dropped a 97-90 decision to the Bombers in overtime; Thursday they trounced Charlotte College, 100-80; and on Friday night the Seahawks returned home to meet a 103-99 defeat at the hands of the Raleigh All-Stars, also in overtime.

Darlington's Bombers used the services of former All-American Grady Wallace and former All-ACC cagers Art Whisnant and Scotty Ward who together tallied 74 points to aid in halting the Seahawk win streak.

None of the three saw action when the Hawks downed the Bombers by 38 points earlier in the season. However, it was Whisnant whose field goal sent the contest into overtime. His six points combined with Ward's five lead the Bombers to victory in the overtime period.

Whisnant captured the scoring honors with 30 points and Jay Neary paced the Hawks with 24 points.

'Hawks Top Owls

The Seahawks broke open what had been a close game after the halftime intermission in their game against Charlotte College Thursday. Led by their high scoring guard, Jay Neary, Coach Brooks' charges poured in 20 points to Charlotte's 3 as they paced their 47-46 halftime lead.

Jay Neary led the Seahawks from the floor with 35 points while Tommy Cole and Larry Edens contributed 17 and 14 respectively.

Stars Stop Seahawks

On Friday the Seahawk's returned home to play their third game in as many nights as they encountered an aggregation of former All-Americans. Led by 6-6, 240-pound Bob DiStefano of N. C. State who personally accounted for 38 points, the muscular All-Stars lumbered to a 103-99 overtime win.

Quality Costs

This old adage is proved over and over again and the Wilmington College athletic program is certainly no exception to the rule. However, by the time one reaches the collegiate level he should have realized that you don't get something for nothing; success is often expensive.

Such is the case with the Seahawk athletic program. It is an acknowledged fact that the athletic budget takes the lion's share of the student activity fee—50 per cent to be precise. Thus the questions naturally arise, "Is it all worth it?" "Are we getting our money's worth?" "How valuable is a successful athletic program, anyway?"

It Is Worth It

Athletics are an integral part of practically every institution of learning in this country—whatever the level. The benefits to the institution are boundless, especially if the program is a successful one.

Athletics serve as a focal point for scholastic life. Sporting events are one place where everyone in the school has a common interest. Loyalty to the school transcends other interests and as a result students are drawn together in a mutual bond which serves to promote a greater spirit of unity and pride of accomplishment.

Educators everywhere recognize the importance of a healthy psychological attitude on the part of students and are aware of the role of athletics in fostering such an attitude. Thus the answer to question number one is definitely in the affirmative.

Look at the Record

In ascertaining whether or not Wilmington College is reaping adequate benefits from its investment, let's look at the record. In the two major sports—basketball and baseball—the Seahawks have compiled enviable records.

Taking a look at basketball first we find that the Seahawks have been ranked among the top ten junior college teams in the nation for the past two years. They participated in the NJCAA Basketball Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., both years capturing tenth and six places in the double elimination grinds.

The record in baseball is even more impressive. As a junior college outfit the Seahawks have hustled their way second the other year. Always one of the top contenders, Wilmington College has consistently walked away with outstanding honors at the NJCAA tourney in Grand Junction, Colo.

That's a good score in anybody's game!

We've Had Our Greats

How about the individuals helping compile these records—the players? In the past three years Wilmington College's athletes have been noted not only for their athletic prowess but for their irreproachable conduct as well. They have indeed been a credit to the college and excellent representatives of it.

The list of Wilmington College All-Americans is indeed impressive and worthy of comment. Who can forget such outstanding athletes as: Dave Miller and Lou Howard of the 1961 national champion baseball team, Flea Coward and Tommy Cole of the 1963 national champions? Of course, everyone remembers big Gene Bogash, perhaps the greatest performer to come out of Wilmington College. Their accomplishments were, and continue to be, magnificent and they all played at Wilmington College.

Nobody Loves a Loser

One of the biggest drawing cards a school can have is a well-known and respected athletic program. It is a big advertisement and something both the students and the alumni can point to with pride. Not only are athletics terrific advertisements, they also, in many cases, help finance other aspects of the curriculum equally important but perhaps less glamorous.

As to the value of a successful athletic program witness the plight of our sister institution—Wake Forest College. The Wake Forest administration realized that one of the most valuable assets to the school would be a successful athletic program. They realized that just having an athletic program was not enough; it must be a successful one. A losing team is worse than none at all. Nobody loves a loser.

As a result of this sentiment just last week Wake Forest's president, Dr. Harold W. Tribble, tired of being the doormat of the ACC, stated, "We'll do just about anything to win."

We Are Lucky

Wilmington College is indeed fortunate to have such an outstanding athletic program. Granted it costs money and lots of it, but the results bear witness to the fact that the investment is being well-spent. Furthermore, the results, both immediate as well as in the future, will doubtless sustain this observation.

Seahawk Player Feature

Larry Edens, Bobby Shipp, Marshall Hamilton and Jim Braxton pause before going into action.

VETERAN CAGERS SPARK SEAHAWKS

Editor's Note: Continuing in its series of player features THE SEAHAWK focuses the spotlight on Jim Braxton, Larry Edens, Marshall Hamilton, and Bobby Shipp.

Big Jim Braxton whose 6-6, 220-pound frame gives him the distinction of being the largest man on the Seahawk squad this season hails from Winterville where he excelled in both basketball and baseball.

As a high school cager Jim racked up a 23 points per game scoring average as he captured all-conference honors for three consecutive years. He also earned all-state recognition as a pitcher at Winterville High School.

Because of ineligibility rules Jim was unable to play basketball last season but with the baseball season he was ready to go. His hurling helped boost the Hawks to the NJCAA championship last spring.

Edens Returns

Larry Edens rejoins the Seahawks this season after a year's absence. A native of Wilmington and a graduate of NHHS, Larry led the Wildcats to outstanding seasons in both basketball and baseball while earning All-State honors for himself.

In his last year as a Seahawk Larry's outstanding play in both sports sparked Coach Brooks' charges to national prominence in the NJCAA. His 10.2 points per game scoring average helped the Hawks at Hutchinson, Kan., and his booming bat and fine glove work at first base helped earn the Seahawks their first national championship at Grand Junction, Colo.

"Stick" Is Tallest

Standing in at a towering 6-7 Marshall Hamilton is the tallest Seahawk. The 190-pound sophomore hails from Washington, D. C., by way of Frostburg, Md., where he completed his high school cage career.

As a senior at the Maryland school Stick's 17 points per game scoring average helped Frostburg capture the Potomac Valley Conference Championship and a third place rating in the state's cage tourney.

Stick's play as a starting forward on last year's basketball team gave the Seahawks the extra push they needed to gain national recognition.

Shipp Excels

Bobby Shipp is no stranger to Wilmingtonians who followed his exploits at NHHS for three years. The 6-1, 180-pound sophomore proved to be an outstanding high school athlete during his stay at NHHS. He was on the Wildcat basketball squad for three years—the same squad that won the state championship seven years out of eight. Serving as co-captain of both the football and baseball teams, Bobby was elected to the all-state squads in both sports.

In his first year as a Seahawk Bobby proved to be a vital part of both nationally rated teams last year.

Local Unions Donate Dugouts For College Baseball Field

Some months back after the lights for night baseball had been installed at the Wilmington College field, Robert Rhodes, business agent for the local bricklayers, learned that Coach Brooks had plans for the construction of two rather impressive baseball team dug-outs adjacent to the baseball diamond.

Coach Brooks wanted the dug-outs to be built in a manner that they would in no way obstruct the view of spectators while games are in progress. This meant that the dug-outs would have to be built at least partially below the surface of the ground.

Robert Rhodes discussed the ambitious project with Fred Groten, president of the Wilmington Building Trades Council. Groten informed his Building Trades membership at the very next meeting and in a matter of minutes one of the members suggested that the council offer to donate the labor for the project. All were in favor and shortly afterwards a committee from the various trade unions in Wilmington called on Coach Brooks to see about starting the project.

Coach Brooks displayed his plans to the committee which included in addition to Groten and Rhodes, Luther Sullivan, business agent of the Wilmington carpenters, and W. H. Phillips who serves in the same position for the local electricians.

The project was recently started and it is expected that both dugouts will be completed in early 1964. The men from the various local unions will donate their services on weekends, holidays, and when they have other free time.

Groten said, "We just want to be good neighbors and show our appreciation to Coach Brooks and all the other fine folks at the college. We think they do a great job and we're eager to help whenever we can."

Bobby Shipp arches one in for the Seahawks.

Jay Neary leaps high to score for the Seahawks.

Chorus Performs H. M. S. Pinafore

"H.M.S. Pinafore" will be the major presentation of the Wilmington College Chorus this year. "Pinafore" will be given, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, on March 13 and 14 with the following characters:

The Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., Fred McAfee; Commander of H.M.S. Pinafore, Cpl. Corcoran, Sam L. Garner; Ralph Rackstraw, Wayne Robinson; Dick Deadeye, Richard Thorne; Bill Bobstay, Boatswain's Mate, Grady Griffith; Josephine, The Captain's Daughter, Marcia Roberts; Cousin Hebe, Sir Joseph's First Cousin, Gaye Newber; and the Little Buttercup, Jay Frances Fisher.

The scene for the musical production is the Quarterdeck of the H.M.S. Pinafore, off Portsmouth. Ralph has fallen in love with Josephine, and likewise, Little Buttercup, a buxom peddler-woman, has fallen in love with the Captain. Class pride, however, stands in the way of the natural inclinations of both the Corcorans to reciprocate Ralph's and Buttercup's affections. The Captain has, in fact, been arranging a marriage between his daughter and Sir Joseph.

The action takes off when Josephine will have nothing to do with Sir Joseph. This causes the Captain's crew to doubt him and the Captain suggests that perhaps his daughter feels herself inferior in social rank to Sir Joseph, and urges him to assure her that inequality of social rank should not be considered a barrier to marriage. This could also apply to Ralph's love for Josephine, and Buttercup's love for the Captain.

The height of confusion is when Little Buttercup tells a secret that she's been holding for some years. The characters of Dick Deadeye and Sir Joseph's cousins and aunts add to the action of the presentation.

Former Editor Wins Miss Wilmington Title

Sondra Gail Wilson, former editor-in-chief of the Seahawk, was recently crowned Miss Wilmington, by former student and Miss Wilmington of 1963, Carol Smith, in the Miss Wilmington Pageant held in Brogden Hall last week.

A junior at the University of North Carolina and majoring in journalism, Sondra sang two blues numbers in the talent competition phase of the contest.

In addition to representing Wilmington in the Miss North Carolina Pageant, she received a $300.00 scholarship and numerous gifts from local merchants.

While a student at Wilmington College, Sondra was a member of the Pen Pushers Club (Scriptic Society) serving as president. Sondra has performed locally on stage and was also chosen Miss Rebel, representing the town of Carolina Beach.

25% Attendance Required
A student who, for any reason whatsoever, is absent more than 25 per cent of the meetings of a class in any quarter will not receive credit for the course. A student on academic probation is not allowed any unexcused absences. Any absence by a student on academic probation should be reported to the appropriate dean, and the student should not be readmitted to class without a permit from the dean.

Absence from class immediately before or after holidays will still count as two absences.

Absence from an announced test, examination, or in-class assignments must be excused by the dean. Make-up tests or examinations for those students whose absences are excused by the dean may be given at the discretion of the instructor.

College To Defend Cuba At Model UN

From February 12 through the 15, a delegation of students from Wilmington College with Thomas Edward Gay, Jr., instructor of social sciences, as advisor will attend the Sixth Annual Middle South United Nations Model General Assembly.

Sponsored by the Panmathians, this will be the second time that Wilmington College will have participated. Last year Larry H. Ingle, who was an instructor of social sciences here, took to the Assembly a group of students who represented the Ukraine and pushed through a resolution of admittance of Red China into the Model UN.

69 Entries

This year 69 countries are being represented. Wilmington College is representing Cuba, the Air Force Academy is representing the United States, and Duke University is representing the United Soviet Socialist Republic.

Comprising the student delegation are Carol Smith, Louise Ambrosiano, Hugh Paschal, Jimmy Sharpe, and Sandy Wright, who is the head.

There are four main committees. The first committee is Political, the second Economic, the third Social, Humanitarian, and Cultural, and the fourth Trusteeship.

UN MGW Schedule

On Wednesday, February 12,

the schedule includes registration, a Security Council meeting, Quad Flicks, and an informal reception. The agenda for Thursday begins with the opening of the General Assembly and is followed by committee meetings throughout the day. The committee meetings will continue through the next morning. Then in the afternoon the General Assembly will convene, and the main address will be given in the evening. Saturday morning will be spent in another plenary session. Immediately after noon the Annual Business Session will meet. After this meeting the United Nations Model General Assembly itself will adjourn.

Opening Speaker, Dr. A. Larson

At the opening session Dr. Arthur Larson will be the speaker. Dr. Larson is one of the world's foremost authorities on international law and the idea of a "World Rule of Law," a phrase referring to the agreement upon a legal machinery, rather than force, to settle disputes between nations.

Dr. Larson has received degrees at Augustana College and Oxford University. In addition, he has served on the faculty at a number of universities across the country. He is presently Director of the World Rule of Law Center at Duke University. Dr. Larson served as President Eisenhower's chief speech writer and special consultant on Rule of Law.

Major Address, Dr. Tran Van Chuong, father of Mme. Nhu.
The major address will be given by Dr. Tran Van Chuong. Dr. Tran Van Chuong served as the Ambassador to the United States from Vietnam until August 22, 1963, when he resigned because of the repressive measures being taken by the Diem regime against the Buddhists.

At the time of his resignation he sent a cable to President Diem stating that the "war will be won by reconciliation and sincere union in liberty of all anti-Communist Vietnamese forces and by the utilization of all available talents and not by copying totalitarian regimes." Dr. Chuong is now engaged on a tour explaining the background and aims of the recent revolution in Vietnam.

A native of North Vietnam and the father of Madame Nhu, Dr. Chuong received his law degree at the University of Paris in 1922. Since that time he has been a prominent lawyer and public figure in Vietnam.

Prior to the division of Vietnam, he served as president of the Grand Council for Economic and Financial Interests in Indochina, as Minister of Foreign Affairs, and as a judge on the French-Vietnamese Court, which is the equivalent of the United States Supreme Court. In 1954 he was made Minister of State under the new regime of Ngo Dinh Diem. A year later he was appointed Ambassador to the United States.

Resolutions To Be Presented

Wilmington College, as the delegation representing Cuba, will offer for passage three resolutions concerning the United States and Cuba.

The first resolution is that the United States be required to allow the world to trade with Cuba if it so desires.

The second resolution is that the United States be required to discontinue surveillance by aircraft and be publicly reprimanded for spying and violation of Cuban air space.

And the last resolution demands that the United Nations, the defenders of right of a nation to be free and independent of foreign domination, come to the aid of the Cuban people in their struggle to rid their Fundamental Law of the last trace of the Platt Amendment by restoring the Guantanamo Naval Base to its rightful owners, the Cuban people.

Trustees Vote In Favor Of Additional Teachers

Wilmington College trustees in their recent meeting voted to add eleven new staff members to the faculty, subject to the approval of the advisory Budget Committee.

Also, approval by the Board of Education would have to be given by May 11 in order for the College to include the request in the 1965-66 budget which is due at the time.

According to Dr. William M. Randall the request for additional faculty members is necessitated by the senior curriculum being added next September.

Wilmington College will have to operate on a high teacher-pupil ratio during the next few years.

The college will need just as many staff members next year as it will when it has 1,600 students, because this number of teachers were needed to teach the curriculum as it was set up through state channels.

With the provision that it is approved by the Board of Higher Education and that money for the program is available, the college trustees have approved "in Principle" a nursing school at the associate level. The planned nursing program would lead to the degree for registered nurses.

In another vote the trustees agreed that the students program in high school must correlate with the major that the student desires to take in college.

This is the same system that the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill uses to assure that correlation for students entering college there.

At the same meeting the trustees gave the Circle K permission to place concrete benches at the two bus stops at the traffic circle on the college campus.

HOMEcoming

The Migrants, folk singing group, and Miss Guerry Matthews, vocalist, will have double billing February 8 at a Hootenanny to be held after the Homecoming game with Campbell College in Brogden Hall, culminating the three-day celebration.

Saturday night's Homecoming game, in which the Seahawks face Campbell College in cage competition, will feature half-time presentation of the Homecoming Court to the public, by the Cheerleaders. BSU will sell programs during the game. They also are in charge of making arrangements for the Hootenanny following the game.

The joint planning of the Inter-Club Council and the Dance Committee, under the leadership of Tim Chappell, will make Homecoming arrangements. Various campus clubs have been participating in the event. The Circle K Club is selling Mums and the BSU, printed programs for the game.

Members of the Inter-Club Council assisting Chappell in the planning are Roger Webb and Sarah Fussell. Sandy Carr is lighting technician.

Admission for all events except the dance on Friday night will be by Student Activity Cards.

Dr. Lumb Speaks; Socialized Medicine

Dr. George Lumb, pathologist at James Walker Memorial Hospital, spoke on socialized medicine at the Panmathian meeting on Wednesday, January 22.

In beginning his argument, Dr. Lumb pointed out that socialized medicine in England is not so absurd, because the English people trust the government, but in the United States nobody trusts the government.

Taking care of aged parents, he continued, must be handled by someone or something. If the people fail to accept this responsibility, then the church or government will have to assume it.

According to Dr. Lumb, the three evils of the economic system in medicine are high fees, high insurance premiums, and high drug and hospital supplies. On the other hand, the evil of socialism is that it takes a responsibility from the people and passes it on to someone else.

Dr. Lumb's solution is that the church should again take over the medical center where people could support it by tithing and treatment could be for love and not money. However, he admitted that he did not feel that America was basically religious or moral in the sense of the brotherly love needed to accept this responsibility. Therefore, he feels that socialized medicine will exist in America in the next few years.

The United States and Russia, he added, are essentially pursuing the same paradoxical ends. The only difference is that the United States seeks liberty with equality, whereas Russia is attempting to establish equality without liberty.

Senate Passes Bill; Two To Committee

At their recent meeting, Feb. 3, the Student Senate of Wilmington College passed one bill and sent two bills to committee.

The Absences bill was passed 19 to 0. At a previous meeting a motion was passed that the nine senators who left early would be counted absent. And that in the future any one who wanted to leave early would have to rise to point of privilege recognized by the chair. This was to be a blanket rule.

The new bill rescinded this older bill and re-enacted the second part of it as an amendment to existing rule Four of the Senate rules.

The Rules Committee had reviewed this bill the week before the meeting and passed it 9 to 0.

Two bills were sent to committee at the meeting Monday. The first bill, sent to Committee B, was a bill to have the results of the questionnaire issued to the Publications Committee for publication on campus.

The second bill, sent to Committee A, was for the Senate to convey to the proper authorities its recommendation to cover food in the cafeteria.

Under the direction of Charles Stevens, a member of the faculty of the School of Music at East Carolina, the East Carolina Men's Chorus will present a choral recital on Feb. 19, at 8 p.m. in the Student Lounge. The program will consist of classical and semi-classical music. Accompanist will be Juliette Mosser.

On Feb. 20 Dr. Katherine K. Carmichael, Dean of Women at UNC at Chapel Hill, will speak on the "Cultural Background of Southeast Asia" at 8:00 p.m. in Hoggard Hall. Dr. Carmichael has been Dean of Women at UNC since 1946. In 1951 and 1952, Dr. Carmichael was a Fulbright lecturer at Manila in the Philippines. Dr. Carmichael was a Smith-Mondt professor at the University of Saigon in Viet Nam in 1961 and 1962. In 1955-1956 she was the recipient of a scholarship given by Delta Kappa Gamma Society under which she visited 87 American colleges and universities studying conditions for women students. Dr. Carmichael is now writing a book on this subject. At her lecture Dr. Carmichael will have some objects d'art on display from Southeast Asia.

SRO-Thalians Present "Stalag 17"-Thalian Hall

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. for the third major production of the Thalian Association and Wilmington College "Stalag 17." Under the direction of Doug W. Swink, "Stalag 17" will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at Thalian Hall. Admission will be by student activity card or Thalian membership.

Featuring an all male cast of 23, the action of the plot revolves around the inconsistencies and incongruities of life inside a Nazi prisoner of war camp during World War II, in Germany.

The tension mounts when the Germans convict one of the prisoners of sabotage. There is only one way the information could have reached them, some one of the group has been tipping off the Germans. As the prisoners eye each other with suspicion, ever more interpreted negatively, the prison camp becomes packed with emotion.

Brooks Atkinson of the New York Herald said of "Stalag," "a truly magnificent drama . . . full of suspense, laughter and tragedy . . ."

Sam L. Garner is technical director for the performance. Barbara Bradley assists with properties.

John Compos, Harvey Covil, Andrew Gemmell, James Harris, Larry Honeycutt, James Neary, John Pistolis, George Savage, and Ricky Simpson handled scenery construction.

Chemistry Professor Lectures Students

The program of Visiting Scientists in Chemistry is made possible by the National Science Foundation and the division of chemical education of the American Chemical Society.

While here, Dr. Davis will meet some chemistry classes, and will confer with individual students and with the chemistry faculty.

Dr. Davis was born in Pelzer, South Carolina, Nov. 7, 1915. He graduated from Parker High School in Greenville in 1933 and subsequently enrolled in the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Davis received his Bachelor of Science degree in chemical engineering from the University of South Carolina in 1937. From the University of Cincinnati he received his Master of Science degree in 1939 and his Doctor of Philosophy in 1941.

The various positions that Dr. Davis has held include Assistant Professor of Chemistry, University of South Carolina 1941-1944; Associate Professor of Chemistry, University of South Carolina 1944-1949; Professor of Chemistry and Head, Department of Chemistry, University of South Carolina 1949-1959.

From 1959 to 1960, Dr. Davis was the principal scientist at the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

Dr. Davis is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the South Carolina Academy of Science, the American Chemical Society, and others.

Peace Corps Visits Campus Feb. 26

Returned Peace Corps Volunteer to Ghana, John McGinn, will be on campus Feb. 26 to visit and speak with students.

McGinn, one of the first Peace Corps Volunteers, taught English and literature in Ghana, and worked with various clubs and adult education groups.

Following the termination of his Peace Corps service in Ghana, McGinn travelled for a short time in the Middle East and settled for several months in Paris where he studied and worked with a film editor on an original film screen play.

McGinn presently works in the United States as a field representative for the Peace Corps.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER

The new cuts system effective next quarter will go a long way toward correcting a situation that has caused a great deal of complaint both among students and faculty. For several years there has been dissatisfaction with the attendance rules and requirements which have treated the Student Body less like adults and more like high school students. It is felt among most of us that the college's main responsibility should be educating the student and not checking to see that he has the "proper" amount of days in class to his credit.

Allowing Juniors and Seniors on the Dean's List to cut—unquestioned—25 per cent of their time in any class will at last give some of us a bit of their time in any class will and demand as adults. The new system, though not giving the unlimited cuts some of us feel we have a right to, does grant us more of the personal freedom which one expects in a college. Besides indirectly acting as a stimulus to students to achieve the Dean's List, the new system will give recognition of the responsibility and ability to manage their own education and affairs to a greater degree to those who make the Dean's List.

Undoubtedly, the new system will show a few drawbacks when the Dean's List diminishes by a few students who will cut more classes than they can afford to maintain their average; but the few letter grades lost in learning to assume more personal responsibility will be well worth the maturity gained. No college of integrity could turn out, with a straight face, students and call them mature which it had forced to go to class.

The new cuts system, however, still contains many of the old practices which we think the college would be better off without. This is in reference to the fact that attendance reports will still be sent to parents to inform them of the number of cuts taken by their students. This procedure is a gripe to most students for obvious reasons: and though we also share this sentiment and disagree with the continuance of this practice, we will explain the administration's viewpoint since many students are unaware that the administration has a reason for such action. The administration feels that since the parents are, in most cases, paying for their students' education, they at least have a right to know when the student is not taking advantage of what they are paying for; furthermore, many parents, the administration says, have requested such information.

Though in many respects the attendance rules will still give students reason to feel that they are under the thumb of a baby-sitting agency, the new rules are a change for the better and will allow us to breathe more freely.

A THREAT TO THE COLLEGE

Recently when some members of the Student Body expressed views which deviated from the "norm" concerning one of society's pet institutions, there was a mild uproar among certain elements of the community; and on two different occasions we were privately served notice by a prominent citizen that pressure would be brought to bear on the college to rid it of imagined unbecoming or radical persons among the faculty. (Though it was student views which caused the grumbling, these people seem to think they'll have better luck sniping at a few professors who stray from the middle of the road, rather than risk unpopularity by picking on "youngsters.")

Immediately following this information, we were advised to sit tight, hang on to our pants, keep our mouths shut, and just hope they don't strike; and for a while it was like waiting for the arrival of the White Citizens Council after having been friendly to a Negro in Mississippi. We have no intention of bringing up the original issue at this time or egging bigotry on; but we can not sit back mum and call ourselves either a newspaper or honest while we have knowledge that the College is threatened.

We have no illusion that we can fight in the newspaper the local forces of bigotry and ignorance that exist; however, we can at least let the students know what is going on so that they will have no illusions concerning the toleration and intentions of some members of our society. If administrative policy should drastically or noticeably change to conform to these negative forces, students have a right to know why; students have a right to know what they will encounter and be dealing with when they leave this College and settle in this community.

Though you may not presently be among the minority of those who think and believe differently, at least take warning of what you must beware of if you should ever find yourself in disagreement with the majority and have the courage to live by your conflicting convictions.

Certain people, both within the College and within the community, fight hard to maintain the intellectual integrity and freedom of Wilmington College. But, there is an attitude among some in this town which vigorously resists the existence in Wilmington of any factor which would awaken the mind of man more than it is presently enlightened, which would tempt others to thoughts different from their own, or which would question what they hold to be truth.

Such an attitude is dangerous not only to a college but to the nation. Ben Franklin said we have a republic in America—"if we can keep it." To keep it we must educate ourselves not only of new ideas but of sources that oppose any new ideas or thinking so that we might be on our guard against the narrow shackling of those who fear and hate anything not of themselves.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

The Valid Question

Some years ago Sherwood Anderson, a novelist known to many of us through English 102, if through no other source, wrote a poem entitled "Song of Industrial America."

"They tell themselves so many little lies . . ." the poem begins; it is the voice of someone completely disenchanting, weary, and tired of the "little lies" which still exist in society as strong, if not stronger, today as when Anderson wrote the line. And in the din of the lies, shouted by almost everyone, where is there room for truth asks Anderson, where can one "sing in this smoke and grime?"

It's a valid question, one which still needs to be answered today. Many people are so blinded by the "smoke and the grime . . . the shrill screams and rattle . . . of the scheme," what is today called "the system," that they never pause to ask the question, of those who recognize the question, still fewer of them have either the courage or the character to do something about it. Doing something about it isn't trying to change the whole reeking works single handed; it is, as Anderson explains, simply getting oneself free of the darkness and ignorance of what is prosaically called in part the "rat-race." Those who try to break free are not necessarily pretty people; it's usually a violent struggle. But those who do attain some measure of freedom, such as Walt Whitman, Arthur Rimbaud, or Henry Miller, from the harnesses which keep mankind at the treadmill, stand on the sidelines and tempt others to chuck the bother of upholding the lie.

If you're not at least vaguely familiar with any of three mentioned above—or someone of their breed—it could be an indication of your depth in the "flood . . . in the whirl of industrial America," since the "system"—as a matter of self-preservation—takes little stock in those who would turn on it the light of a deeply and critically scrutinizing eye.

This fight for freedom—freedom of the mind as well as being—is seldom socially acceptable; but Camus, recognizing that the struggle for freedom would most likely occur in youth when we are struggling for a great many other things, said "Youth owes it to itself to be unjust." Being free is not always being law or mores-abiding as Thoreau who wrote "On Civil Disobedience" has discovered.

Those who wrote and now write on this freedom of the mind are many, but it remains primarily a process such as Anderson described: "We have to sing, you see, here in the darkness. All men have to sing—poor broken things. We have to sing here in the darkness in the roaring flood. We have to find each other. Have you courage tonight, for a song? Lift your voices. Come."

COLUMNIST GIVES INSIDE STORY ON PROCEEDINGS OF A SENATE

By JACK LOFTUS

The results of a questionnaire circulated at Toningwil College a few weeks ago have been tabulated and discussed by their Student Senate. Various committees were then appointed to investigate the leading desires of the students. There was a sex committee headed by Sara Nurgess, an alcoholic committee headed by Sherry Sackey, and a gambling committee headed by Fredi Liss.

A series of orderly and unemotional discussions then ensued concerning fraternities and sororities. It was felt that such functions would both raise the prestige of the College, and promote friendly relations among the students. Much heat was generated as senators began to take issue. Jimmy Hernia cited the slow student population growth at T. C., and declared that fraternities and sororities would be a boon. Senator Nurgess then leaped from her chair, "Oh, I love it, I love it!" she shouted. Tim Cathedral maintained that such groups would be just a bunch of Greek-lettered drinking clubs, but was cut off from further discourse by the hysterical Senator Nurgess, "I love it!" she repeated. "You do?" asked Tim. "Yes, yes yes!" she replied. "Then phooey, so do I!" shouted Mr. Cathedral. For 20 minutes pandemonium reigned supreme as Hugh Pasquell sounded his paper gavel and demanded order. The issue was referred to Miss Forton whose final approval is expected.

Jack Sutfol then presented a rather startling bit of information which he found written in code on a questionnaire. It seemed that the College faces West which is a clear and unmitigated violation of the confederate constitution which calls for the constitution of all edifices in a Southerly direction. Somehow this information had gotten out, and is now known to certain leading citizens. Unless the position of the College is rectified, these subversives have threatened to cut off the College's water supply. One less prominent citizen has threatened to go on TV and tell all. President Stateon, visibly shaken by the awesome news, confessed that he had for some time known the College was facing West, but withheld such knowledge in the public interest. "To tell ya the truth," Mr. Stateon commented, "I didn't think anyone would give a [censored]!" Senator Sutfol then reminded the president that evidently someone did, for he pointed out, "unless the College is relocated soon, we ain't gonna have no water." All this quite naturally created a stir in the senate, but cooler heads prevailed as Jimmy Dull assumed the floor. "We'll just have to make do with gin," he disclosed. After a thirty-minute standing ovation, the motion was sent to Mr. Tan where his final approval is expected.

ONE ASPECT OF FINE ARTS

The Fine Arts Program is an essential facet of college life, giving the students occasions to broaden their intellectual horizons and deepen their artistic appreciation and understanding.

The program offers the students contact with aspects of our culture vitally important to the continuance of civilization. In the art forms, man's highest thought is given expression; here new thoughts and ideas are given their original presentation. In this way, art is the perpetuator of learning; in it are the shadows of past history and the seeds of the future; it is the most articulate voice of the present.

Besides being a part of education which aims at developing a person rather than a highly skilled animal, Fine Arts programs represent a type of entertainment scarce in this area. In this way, Fine Arts serves the community as well as the college as is shown by the attendance of local people often outnumbering that of students at the programs. Many students are unaware of these benefits the programs offer and will continue to be so—that is their loss.

Seahawks To Play Wesley On Saturday

The Seahawks return to the friendly confines of Brogden Hall Saturday night when they will take on the Wesleyan College Bishops of Rocky Mount. Saturday's contest will mark the first engagement in Wilmington of the Methodist school.

On Feb. 4, Coach Brooks' charges journeyed to Rocky Mount where they broke a Seahawk record while romping over the Methodists 97-46. The 51-point difference gave Wilmington College its widest margin of victory in the school's history.

The Rocky Mount school has only been fielding a varsity squad for two years and has been experiencing difficulties in fielding a talented outfit. The school's poor record is generally attributed to its stand on athletic scholarships which forbid their issuance unless the applicant meets the same requirements demanded of those students receiving academic grants. However, the team is reported to have shown marked improvement in the short period since they last battled the Seahawks and promise to make Saturday's contest more interesting than the last one was.

Another factor in determining the outcome of the game will be the starting line-up for the 'Hawks. There remains some doubt as to whether Larry Edens' sprained ankle will be well enough to allow him to participate against the Bishops. Gametime is 8:00 p.m.

Hebron, Ware Provide Action For Seahawks

Editor's Note: "The Seahawk" presents its final installment of the player feature series on the Wilmington College basketball team by spotlighting Jim Hebron and Wray Ware.

Jim Hebron, the 5'-8", 150-pound sparkplug of the freshman basketball team, has seen action as a member of the varsity squad often this season. The 18-year-old freshman, a native of Bayside, N. Y., has the distinction of being the smallest member of the 'Hawk line-up.

Jim's outstanding play for the Fledglings comes as no surprise for he was also a talented performer in high school as evidenced by his being elected captain of the Bayside High School basketball team and leading them to first place in their division in New York City. One of the main reasons for the Fledglings' 5-0 record for the season is Jim's 21 points per game scoring average.

Double Star

Outstanding play in baseball as well as basketball has made Wray Ware a welcome addition to the Seahawk athletic program. The 6-3, 195-pound sophomore from Danville, Va., was a member of both nationally ranked Seahawk teams last year.

As a high school athlete Wray was on no less than four championship teams—one in football and three in baseball. His fine play as halfback and team captain for the George Washington High School Cardinals helped them post an 8-2 record and earn the 1960 Western District Championship. The Cardinals won three of four Western Division baseball crowns behind Wray's superb pitching. He posted a 26-7 career mark and a 1.49 earned run average for the Cards.

In addition to his great record as a high school athlete Wray helped the Danville Connie Mack baseball team to dominate the state of Virginia for three years. In 1962 Wray's 20-0 record led his team to the Connie Mack Southeastern Regional Championship and earned him the region's Most Valuable Player Award. In that same year

Danville captured third place in the nation in the Connie Mack World Series and Wray was elected to the Series All-Star Team sporting the leading series batting average at .400. In three seasons Wray compiled a 32-5 record with an amazing 0.65 earned run average.

As a Seahawk Wray's aggressive play made him a favorite among baseball and basketball fans alike.

Featured in this issue are Seahawks' Hebron and Ware.

Varsity Report

Homecoming Success

Despite the Seahawks' 82-72 loss at the hands of the Campbell College Camels Saturday night, the Wilmington College Homecoming week proved to be a huge success. Just about everyone was enthusiastic in their praise for such an outstanding effort on the part of all those persons responsible for Homecoming 1964.

The praise was not limited to just students here at Wilmington College but came from the townspeople and former students as well. Even students from schools such as UNC hailed the Seahawk Homecoming as a huge success. No one disputed the fact that it was without question the best Homecoming ever held at Wilmington College.

"Varsity Report" would like to take this opportunity to congratulate all of those whose tireless efforts made Homecoming 1964 the fabulous success it was. A special word of appreciation should go to Tim Chappell, chairman of the Inter-Club Council, for his work in correlating the efforts of each of the organizations on campus.

Gym Going Up

The beams are being erected on the new gymnasium (in case you haven't observed). With the progress advancing rapidly it looks as though the badly needed plant will be ready in September, right on schedule. It will really be a welcomed addition to our ever-growing campus.

Baseball Season

With only two basketball games remaining on the Seahawk schedule and March rapidly drawing near, thoughts of the national pastime are becoming recurrently stronger. As national junior college champions the Seahawks are expected to field an exceptionally strong squad this season.

The Seahawk will probably have a full report on the baseball team in the next issue if the information is available.

Intramurals?

What's the story on spring intramural activities? There is no definite answer to this question yet but it might not be a bad idea for groups to begin thinking over what sports they would like included in the program and to make plans for the formation of teams.

We are sure that Coach Earl Allen will be most interested in hearing from all parties concerned as soon as possible. The success of the program depends on an early start.

Mechanical Coin Bank Collection On Exhibit In Showcase Of Hoggard Hall

On exhibit now in Hoggard Hall is a collection of mechanical coin banks. This is the legend displayed with the collection.

As early as the Han dynasty between the years 206 B.C. and 220 A.D. mechanical banks encouraged thrift. Perhaps the oldest known bank is "Mechanical Alms Box", now in the Metropolitan Museum, New York City. It is made of pottery glazed green, showing a little bear that bows when a coin is deposited.

The popularity of mechanical banks in the U.S. began with the use of large copper pennies, which were first coined in 1793. Early American banks were of shell homemade from gourds or shells or whittled from clay or wood. The first American manufactured banks were of tin soldered together.

In 1869 cast iron became widely used in the manufacture of banks and shortly thereafter, craftsmen started designing figures that moved. The result was a bank in the form of a toy that encouraged thrift and, at the same time, entertained. Most of the banks in this collection were made between 1869 and 1900. John Hall of Watertown, Massachusetts, took out the earliest recorded patent for a mechanical bank, now called "Hall's Excelsior", on Dec. 21, 1869.

Ideas for these ingenious contraptions frequently were taken from the historical and popular events of the country at the turn of the century. Since the banks were intended to amuse children, most of the action reflects a comic situation taken from sports, the circus, animal life, etc. At the peak of their popularity in the last decades of the 19th century, the top price for the most complicated banks was $1.00, and they could be purchased in most general stores.

In her book Old Mechanical Banks Ina Hayward Bellows says of the artistic qualities of the banks that because of the limitations of cast iron, they never became over elaborate in design.

Fine Arts Week

The North Carolina State Ballet is returning to Wilmington College Feb. 21 at 8 p.m. to give a second dance demonstration in the Student Lounge. Nine of the ballet soloists will be present. A group work from Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony will be performed with excerpts from other ballets. John Lehman, artistic director of the company, will preface the dances with commentary. The company has danced two full scale performances this month at Fort Bragg and Kinston. This is the fifth season for the company. All of the dancers are natives of North Carolina. The repertoire ranging from folklore to classic is all originally choreographed.

On Feb. 22 a masquerade dance from 9 to 1 p.m. will be sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee in the Student Lounge. This dance is for students, members of the faculty, and guests only. All students attending the dance are required to wear costumes. The theme of the dance will be "Broadway Lights". Admission will be $1 per couple. All other events of Fine Arts Week will be free.

Student members of the Fine Arts Committee are Kathy Losak, Jennifer Davis, Peggy Jo Worrell, Faye Barnes, Diane Copeland, Greg Godwin, Sandy Wright, and Ray Oxendine, chairman. Faculty members include Claude Howell, Doug W. Swink, Page Shaw, Dr. B. Frank Hall, and local dance instructor Dorothy Nesbitt is also a member.

The color of a bank was choice of color schemes, similar to the colors used in the old merry-go-rounds, and the traveling circuses. The banks were perhaps a little 'stiff' or 'wooden' as each bank was carved in wood first; however, at no time can it be said that they were poor in design or showed lack of feeling for subject."

There are three examples of the banks in the collection.

"Tammany Bank" — coin is placed in hand of Boss Tweed who puts it into his pocket.

"Dark Town Battery" — pitcher throws coin, the batter misses, and it is deposited in a slot by the catcher.

"Eagle Bank" — coin is placed in Eagle's beak. When a lever is pressed, the coin falls into the nest and the eaglets rise with mouths open for food.

WC Chorus To Present

HMS Pinafore In March

The Wilmington College Chorus is presenting "H.M.S. Pinafore" Mar. 13 and 14. The cast of characters is as follows:

Captain Corcoran, Sam L. Garner; The Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., Fred McAfee; Josephine, the captain's daughter, Marcia Roberts; Ralph Rachstraw, Wayne Robertson; Little Buttercup, Jay Frances Fisher; Cousin Hebe, Gage Newber; Dick Deadeye, Richard Thorne; and Boatswain's Mate, Grady Griffith.

Little Buttercup opens the production with a song explaining who she is. She speaks to the crew of the Pinafore, who is awaiting the arrival of Sir Joseph Porter and his cousins, sisters, and aunts. Buttercup sees a lamenting sailor, Ralph Rachstraw, and asks who he is. When she learns his name she is shocked, for she holds a secret within her heart she cannot tell. Ralph, who is a common sailor, is in love with Josephine, the captain's daughter. This cannot be, for Josephine is of a higher class than he, and her father would never permit their marriage. Ralph's thoughts are interrupted when Captain Corcoran strides on deck to bid a good morning to his crew.

Sir Joseph then arrives with all his relatives and tells how he became the captain of the "Queen's Navee." Everyone is impressed — except Josephine, whom he is betrothed to; Josephine is nauseated by Sir Joseph.

Later, Ralph proclaims his love for Josephine and attempts to shoot himself; but Josephine prevents him from doing so by telling Ralph of her love for him and her distaste for Sir Joseph. Everyone is happy as Act One ends with preparations for the marriage.

"H.M.S. Pinafore" will be taken on tour by the Wilmington College Chorus following its initial presentation here. Each year the chorus tours the surrounding area, singing for schools and civic groups.

Pre-Registration

Pre-registration begins for Freshmen and Sophomores on Feb. 17, ending Feb. 21. Juniors will pre-register on the 14th. To pre-register, the student should first see his advisor and make an appointment. Classes will be assigned on a "first come, first served" basis, says Dean Crews.

Registration for the Spring Quarter will take place Mar. 9 and 10.

Exams for this quarter will begin Mar. 2.

Pembroke Students Show Ceramics Here

In one of the glass showcases in Hoggard Hall is displayed several ceramic items made by the college art students of Pembroke College and their advisor Nelson Dudley. Those exhibiting are John Cutrell, Donna Harrison, William Loclear, Arlene Woody, Pete Mathews, and Dennis Lowry.

Many of the ceramic pieces, especially the coffee cups, are "early American." The tall, large vases have an oriental quality except for one which looks as if it belongs in a hotel lobby with a rubber tree plant in it. Many look like water-wine containers.

The entire collection is ponderous, weighty and heavy dark. All the colors are browns, greys, and greens.

One Man's Opinion

by Sam Garner

It is comparatively quiet on the Campus now. Homecoming is over and all settles down to the "dull" life of Wilmington College. If there is anything that's not true—it's our campus being dull. This past week-end should have proven this. It seems a shame that people sit with their heads in their hands saying, "there's nothing to do." Oh, well... such is the condition of the average W.C. industrious student.

Stalag 17 opened last evening and proved another enjoyable production by the Wilmington College Players and the Thelians. The Seahawk hasn't published any drama reviews this year so now, a first. The Opinion Review: The parts of Sefton, Huffy, and Shultz were played in a manner that befitted the production. They were convincing and well done.

A note of comedy and humor was seen in Paul Bainum's characterization of McCarthy. It is indeed warming to see one take a part that could have been underplayed and make it into an enjoyable performance.

Gerald Kallman was Harry Shapiro. The part is a good one and was played well. Richard Cribb handled the part of Marko with high pitched notes of comedy.

Stalag 17 is an evening of entertainment. It would be well worth your time to take advantage of tonight and tomorrow nights' performances. The College players have done a fine job and your attendance would be indeed appreciated.

While reading a national magazine a while back, the Opinion thought of the way censorship was used in publications. It was humorous to read that a business firm in the North had printed bumper-stickers for drivers who did not like the conventional signs for cars. If any of you would like to be a non-conformist, it might be rewarding for you to purchase signs like: "Kick a Dog Today," "Pray for War," and "Beat a Kid." It's a thought anyway.

Opinion Sidelines:

"H.M.S. Pinafore" is coming along nicely. The cast had an enjoyable rehearsal at the director's home last Sunday. The characters of the musical are interesting to say the least and you don't want to miss the production.

Congratulations to Fine Arts Committee and to the Collegiate Civitan, Student Senate, and Baptist Student Union. The Fine Arts Week Committee has done a fine job in preparing an enjoyable week and the other organizations did a bang-up job on homecoming. School spirit, like chivalry, isn't dead yet. "Raus! REPORT ON PROBLEM AREA

Campus Necessity: Mental Program

By MARY C. HODGIN

In many colleges, as many as 59 percent of enrolled students will drop out before completing their courses this year. A large number of these withdrawals are directly related to unresolved emotional problems.

Much is attributed to the cause of these emotional problems, and one can easily find traces of J. D. Salinger's Holden Caulfield behavior on most campuses today.

A recent article in the quarterly, Mental Hygiene, entitled "Mental Health Problem in College" offers insight into the question of the emotional problems of students.

"Among the disturbances seen in college students are 'adolescent adjustment reactions' (anxiety, depression, etc.) which are responses to the stress of adjusting in a new environment. Normal problems of growing up are encountered frequently. Acute reactions to stress are more severe than the adjustment reactions and may be incapacitating for a period of time."

Intensification of emotional disturbances already existing represents another problem.

The most frequent expression of these anxieties appears in such forms of behavior as deliberately disregarding college regulations (a display of unconscious resentment of authority) and cheating on exams (the result of a need to fulfill desires for accomplishments and achievement.)

In order to meet the emotional needs of college students, there has been established on many campuses a student health program. Charles E. Llewellyn, head of the psychiatric outpatient division and associate professor of psychiatry at Duke University, states the aims of the student mental health center: "The ultimate objectives of any college or university health program are to maintain a state of optimum health, both physical and emotional, among the student body and staff... An adequate health program assures a healthful and safe physical and emotional environment, health education and health care. It discovers physical and emotional problems in their early stages, when they may be correctable, prevents loss of time and promotes the pursuit of academic work by maintenance of health through the prevention and... A good college health program is more than provision of first aid for accidents or medical care. It should be broad in scope, encompassing preventive medicine and psychiatry. When it is properly organized and developed, it becomes an integral part of the educational experience of college students, demonstrating the importance and value of health as a personal and community asset."

That there are many who frown at the words "mental health" and jeer at any suggestion that this may be the cause of student failure to achieve academic success at Wilmington College, is evidenced in the fact that nothing has been done to establish so much as a trace of professional counseling on the campus. Perhaps students and faculty refuse to see any validity in the establishment of such a center.

A lack of funds has been quoted as a reason for the failure to add a psychiatrist to the staff. When one looks at the 1963-64 Budget, considering the money allotted for athletics, one can only wonder if there is not indeed money available, only being grossly mis-channelled, and in the final analysis benefitting the College in a superficial manner.

College Juniors Place Orders For First Class Rings

This years junior will soon be the first students from Wilmington College to wear class rings. All juniors who have at least a 2.0 average are eligible to order rings. If any junior did not order his class ring on Feb. 20, he should do so at Kingoff's Jewelers as soon as possible. A down-payment of ten dollars is required. Rings are expected to arrive sometime during May.

Josten's Incorporated of Owatonna, Minnesota, has been contracted to produce the rings. Three representatives from this company—R. V. Watson, salesman; Peter Leveaux, sales manager; and Phillip Barringer, designer—met with the ring committee recently to discuss the plans for the rings. Josten's Inc. has designed rings for many outstanding colleges and universities, such as N. C. State, Georgia Tech., Yale, Syracuse, and many service academies.

The following design for a ring has been approved by the ring committee. On one side of the ring is Hoggard Hall with the letters "B.A." written above it. On the other side is a swooping Seahawk with a ribbon below it with the word "service" written within it. Above the stone is a triangle, school scroll, and quill pen, which are the elements of the school seal, and the graduation date.

Juniors may select any color for the stone.

ACT TO CHARTER FRATERNITY PRESENTED TO STUDENT SENATE

A bill entitled "An Act to Charter Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternity" was presented by Jimmy Hearn in the meeting of the Student Senate on Monday, February 17.

The bill was sent to committee A for consideration.

The fraternity which will have the legal status of a club, has been given tentative approval by the administration depending on the final form and details.

In the same meeting committee B reported on a bill that had been sent to the Committee at the previous Senate meeting. This bill, concerning the Senate's opinion poll, was passed with an amendment to send the poll's results to the Information Board instead of the Publications Committee with the authority to pass it on to the other news media.

Committee A failed to report on their bill concerning the covering of food in the cafeteria.

Highland Handicraft Guild Exhibit Opens Here March 5

"He who does creative work, whether he dwell in a palace or a hut, has in his house a window through which he may look out upon some of life's finest scenes" is only one expression of the temper of the Southern Highland Handicraft Guild, which will exhibit here in Hoggard Hall March 2-31.

The Southern Highland Handicraft Guild, a non-profit educational organization, was formed in 1930 by representatives of a few craft centers scattered through the mountain area. Its purpose was to preserve the highland heritage of craftsmanship, always so vital a part of the cultural, economic, educational, and social pattern of mountain life.

The exhibit will feature pottery, wood, weaving, corn shuckery, textile decoration, rugs, spinning, quilting, basketry and jewelry and metal forming.

The SHHG was born out of the needs and dreams of the mountain people, "out of the strength and beauty of their land, grew the traditional highland crafts."

EXAMS PLUS WEEK BEFORE EQUALS CATASTROPHE

Winter quarter is almost over. Since Winter quarters are statistically proven to be the worst for students, it is inevitable that some of us won't be registering week after next. There is hardly a publication—newspaper or magazine—that hasn't at one time or another attempted to probe the problem of drop-outs and flunk-outs. A recent edition of the East Carolinian contained an interesting view on the matter from Professor Nevitt Sanford, director of the Institute for the Study of Human Problems:

"In the best colleges the demands upon the students have long exceeded rational bounds. The amount of reading assigned far exceeds what anyone could do with intelligence, and the consequences of failure are made to appear so dire that no one can imagine the prospect without becoming unnerved.

"Recently, in a highly-ranked university, the fifty top Freshmen students were interviewed . . . Not one had ever had a date, none was getting any satisfaction from his relations with his fellow students, and some were suicidal.

"More generally students have found various ways of adapting themselves—none of which bode well for their future, either as citizens or productive workers.

"Some are overwhelmed by their first sense of failure and either drop out or lower their level of aspiration in some other irrational way. Others rebel and attack the system with more enthusiasm than wisdom.

"Most merely submit and 'play it cool,' committing themselves far enough to be assured of a reasonably comfortable place in the world, while keeping their reservations to themselves."

Applied to Wilmington College

In one respect this hardly seems to be the case here at Wilmington College; the work is hardly burdensome enough to prevent dating or drive students toward suicide; the Pub and bridge tables suffer no lack of patronage. There are a few rebels here; but the system they are fighting is that which they will encounter outside as well as inside college. There are a great many of us easily "playing it cool" most of the time. There's no great worry about being bounced the first time for academic failure, since all one has to do in that case is lay low for a quarter and then reapply for admittance.

In another respect, however, there is one period here at Wilmington College which, in its short time, equals in effect Professor Sanford's gloomy picture of college life: the week preceding exams. In this week, this such as we have just endured, we are bombarded with a deluge of last minute tests and final term papers. Many of the teachers approach this week behind their schedule—some very far behind it—and try to cram several week's work into the final five days. It's common to hear something like, "We won't have time to go over these last couple of chapters; however, you knew we would have to do them and you will be held responsible for them on the exam." This pre-exam week gauntlet is enough to fray the edge of the best of us; we stagger out of it fit for seclusion and the rest home.

The week in itself is more than enough. Sadly, it is not all.

Exams Immediately Follow

Monday morning we begin exams. We have all of two days—Saturday and Sunday—in which to regather our wits and study. The word "study" is used here with reservation—what should be study can be nothing more than cramming in this short space. As a matter of fact, it takes something of a superhuman strength to even cram decently during the two day recuperation from gauntlet week.

Many of us haven't got it. Those of us taking more than one of the advanced courses that required term papers this week have had it. With Wilmington College moving into four years and more of the advanced courses for the majors, there will be an even greater problem in the years to come.

The result of this double-barrel academic assault is that many of us take the second volley lying down, ignore the second call to rally to the midnight oil. Those who have been hanging on by the skin of their teeth are done up in style rather cruelly right at the last minute; all of us "catch it."

When students walk into exams Monday morning with haggard faces and circled eyes, it will be indicative of a pooped mind, one hardly fit to take a series of two hour tests.

Something should be done to remedy this situation.

Several teachers lay the blame on the quarter system. In the semester if a teacher gets behind, he will have ample time to catch up before exams; however, once fallen behind in a quarter, they say, and you've had it.

Some colleges solve this problem with "reading periods" prior to exams. Three or four days to a week before exams, classes are suspended or review classes are held.

Either of these solutions would benefit Wilmington College. As time passes and the College grows, the cry for a solution will become louder.

Exams plus the week before with all its tests, term papers, and extra reading tend to have negative effects on the average students.

Administration Bungles US Foreign Program

By JACK LOFTUS

Each year the United States spends billions of dollars in connection with its foreign aid program. It should, therefore, concern us all to see our foreign policy degenerating all over the world. As history has shown, there are three stages in the life of a foreign policy: inclusiveness, complexity, and, finally, collapse. I do not believe we have reached this final stage, but we will reach it at the present rate we are going. The task of averting such a collapse is in the hands of the administration, who thus far has done a rather remarkable job of bungling the whole affair.

Laughing Stock

Cuba has made the U.S. the laughing stock of the world. Both our military and economic sanctions against the island have failed miserably. Our allies are now trading freely with Castro while we chop a water pipe in half.

Southeast Asia is also lost. First Laos, then Cambodia and now Vietnam. Secretary of Defense McNamara announced the other day that by 1965 all U.S. troops will be out of Vietnam. This is indicative of the fact that our policy of containing Red China has totally collapsed.

Fat Red

The U.S. has been able to do nothing to halt the growing economic ties between its allies and the Communist world. Great Britain has adopted the policy that a fat communist is less dangerous than a lean, hard, and hungry one; I believe Britain made a similar mistake during the time of Hitler. France has followed a similar policy regarding communism, which has already lost her the alliance of Formosa.

Taking all these instances into consideration, it appears obvious that something is wrong. Somewhere in the complexity of foreign policy, someone has squared what should have been cubed. The questions we must now ask ourselves are: What is it, and what can be done about it?

Negative Policy

I think the answer to this lies in the fact that our policy is basically negative, that is to say, our policy is directed toward containing communism rather than expanding capitalism. Communist-socialism, on the other hand, is more aggressive, and by its nature more acceptable to the poor, uneducated masses of the people. It is this aggressiveness that appears to be the key-word in the two policy differences. However, many Americans, including the administration, seem to shy away from such a policy believing it to be belligerent at best, and immoral at its worst. The fact of the matter is, that in such a life or death struggle morality and belligerence have nothing to do with foreign policy.

Need Aggression

Recognizing this need for aggressiveness is one thing, applying it is something altogether different. In such a light, let us re-examine some of the above mentioned instances.

Certainly there is no reason why we must keep on failing in Cuba. As long as communism exists in such a capacity in Cuba, the Americas will not be safe. Castro has already been connected with the revolts in Panama and Venezuela. The island has become a training ground for subversion. An arms boycott by the O.A.S. could be used to thwart the Cuban military outflow, and full U.S. support to the Cuban exiles would give Castro another headache. Finally, the U.S. could raise its tariffs against any nation trading with Cuba. If such were done on a "one nation at a time basis," I believe there would be some fast results.

Crippling Blow

Such an aggressive military and economic policy could and should be applied anywhere our interests lie. Suspension of foreign aid would be a crippling blow to many countries all over the world who make a practice of blackmailing Uncle Sam.

All this, however, is nothing new; the United States has been balking at it for quite some time now. The reason our policies have been rejected by our allies can be found in the old axiom that the amount of influence of a foreign policy varies in proportion to its success or failure. It is this failure that we must guard against, for the collapse of United States foreign policy will accomplish two things: The triumph of communism, and the destruction of American idealism. We cannot afford to let either happen.

LETTER TO EDITOR:

COLLEGE NEEDS TRACK TEAM

With the advent of Spring, I find my thoughts turning to the matter of sports. I don't play baseball, and even if I did, I think "Brooks' Boys" have that sport sewed up and do well without the likes of me, thank you—that's why they are here, I'm told.

What I had in mind was the establishment of a track and field team. I really don't know how expensive such a program would be; but surely it wouldn't be nearly as bad as basketball (that's costing us a cool half-million for a building to house our illustrious team). The appeal of a sport where one individual (me, for instance) competing against individuals from other colleges in running, jumping, the javelin throw, etc. is much greater to me than being a part of a bunch of boys racking up points against another bunch of boys.

Also, [track and field sports would tend to produce a more well-rounded athlete than any team sport—the Greeks thought so anyway. I can only speak for myself on this matter, but if anyone else is interested, why not let's get together and see what can be done? I'd like to know how others feel about this. I hear the high school got a pretty good response when they started a cross-country team. Why not here?

SEAHAWK BASEBALL TEAM READIES FOR SEASON OPENER

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

Now that the basketball season at Wilmington College is over and the tennis shoes are being put away until next year it is time to turn our attention to coming events, namely, spring athletics. With the coming of the Spring Quarter at Wilmington College it is traditional for students to cast longing eyes toward Wrightsville Beach and try to arrange their schedules so that they can have their afternoons free so that they may do whatever one does at the beach. However, there is also a select group who also try to arrange to have no classes in the afternoon—the baseball players.

All Set

All winter long the members of last year's National Junior College Athletic Association championship baseball team have been eagerly awaiting the return of balmy spring weather so they could go out to "the pasture" and play ball again. Even before the basketball season was over many of them were taking advantage of a few of the better days to do a little running in an effort to get in shape for the long season ahead. No batting practice or pitching yet—just running, running to get rid of that extra pound collected over the Christmas holidays when "that extra piece of cake was just too tempting" or when it was just "too cold to do anything but sit and watch the football games on television." It's amazing how much running and how many push-ups it takes to remove those pounds which were so easy to get during the long lay-off.

Nevertheless, various members of the team have been feverishly working out in an effort to get ready for spring training which began right after the close of the basketball season. They tell us it is amazing how fast the season comes after the start of spring practice. But we tell them it should come faster and give us something to write about.

Pre-Season Predictions

It's almost impossible to make pre-season predictions about baseball teams—too many sports writers wind up eating their favorite hats in October after their April prognostications. Since we don't wear a hat we think we'll just crawl out on that little limb with all the rest of them and predict a winning season for the Seahawks. Since we're in such a devil-may-care mood anyway (we've just finished a research paper) we think we'll go all the way and predict not just a winning season but a season to rival any Wilmington College has had in the past with one exception—there will be no NJCAA championship—that's impossible this year because Wilmington College is no longer a junior college.

Good Reasons

There are many reasons why we are making such a rash prediction. Last year the Seahawks took on all comers and walked off with the NJCAA baseball championship trophy for the second time in three years. Coach Brooks has lost only one starter from last year's team, Flea Coward. Flea was a valuable player all right but we feel that someone, probably Butch Watts, will come along to fill his shoes. The 'Hawks have what it takes to win: good pitching with Eddie Lemon, Jim Braxton, and Wray Ware among others; good hitting with Bobby Shipp, Tom Cole, and Bill Harris; and a tight defense comprised of Shipp, Watts, Harris, Glenn Mills, and Whitey Hunsucker. At least that's the way it looks now. This year, as indeed for the past several years, the Seahawks seem to be blessed with talent.

The Schedule

Perhaps the only real question is in regard to the opposition the 'Hawks will be facing. At the last count Coach Brooks had planned about twenty games and the schedule is still growing. The season will start off with a real bang as some of the biggest schools in the nation send their teams south for spring training and they drop by to play the 'Hawks. Mid March is set for the season's opener against the Camp Lejeune Marines in a five-game series. The complete schedule should be published some time this week or early next week.

Emphasized Baseball

By the way, with the prospects of having such a good team this year the College plans to play up baseball more this season than ever before. Brooks' Field has been improved with the addition of badly-needed lights and dugouts. In addition, the old dirt road which circles the park will be paved soon making it easier for fans to get in and out. There are rumors about that NHHS is interested in playing some of their games on the premises as well. So all in all it looks as if Brooks' Field is going to be rather busy this spring.

Wilmington College Cagers Complete Successful Season

Larry Edens, the Seahawks' outstanding forward, dribbles down court against the Atlantic Christian College Bulldogs. The 'Hawks won handily.

Bobby Shipp goes high to sink an all-important shot as the Seahawks defeat the Monarchs of Methodist College.

Wilmington College Represents Cuba At 6th Annual Model UN Assembly

For three days, five students from Wilmington College had an opportunity to learn through experience of the mechanics, difficulties, international politics, et cetera, involved in the United Nations. These five students constituted the delegation from the college representing Cuba at the Sixth Annual Model United Nations General Assembly held at Duke University.

Defending Cuba on the four committees were Carol Smith, social committee; Louise Ambrosiano, economic committee; Jimmy Sharpe, administrative committee; and Hugh Paschal, political committee. Sandy Wright served as chairman for the delegation.

The schedule began on Wednesday, February 12, with registration in Flowers Lounge and an intense study of a map of Durham to find the homes of the faculty members who were our hosts.

On Thursday morning the assembly was opened with a plenary session at which Dr. Arthur Larson, head of the World Rule of Law Center, was the guest speaker. That afternoon the various committees met in classrooms to consider, amend, and vote on the resolutions presented by the various countries.

Except for breaks and lunch these committees met from 8:30 to 3:30 on Friday. At 4:00 the second plenary session was held. It was during this session that the United States of America moved to have Russia's vote taken away for non-payment of dues under article 19 of the United Nations Charter. The chair ruled in accord with this motion. The assembly voted to uphold the ruling which was out of character. (The real United Nations would have gotten around the issue so as to prevent Russia from walking out.)

Therefore, when in the model assembly Russia's vote was taken away, the Russian delegation had no alternative but to walk out. When they did this the whole communist bloc (including Cuba) with the exception of Yugoslavia walked out also. The session was soon adjourned.

That same evening Tran Van Chuong, father of Madame Nhu and former South Vietnamese Ambassador to the United States, explained the background of the recent revolution in South Vietnam and discussed his country's future in the struggle against communists in Southeast Asia.

The last plenary session was held Saturday morning and began with the secretariat's faculty advisor explaining to the assembly what would have happened in the real United Nations to allow Russia to keep her vote. Accepting this as done, the Model Assembly proceeded. After considering and voting on several resolutions which were passed in the committees, the Model United Nations General Assembly adjourned.

Many resolutions were presented in the committees and plenary sessions. Brazil (U.N.C.) presented a bill for the establishment of a Capitol Development Fund. The United Arab Republic (U.N.C.) offered a resolution to condemn the policy of Apartheid in South Africa. Cuba (Wilmington College) presented three resolutions concerning Guantanamo Bay Naval Base, plane surveillance of Cuba by the United States, and the economic blockade of Cuba by the United States. One of these bills was tabled in committee. The other two were not considered.

Some of the other resolutions concerned the establishment of a world lottery, membership and voting in ECOSOC and Security Council, Southern Rhodesia, the alleviation of the refugee problem, international development of the Jordan River, recommendations involving international trade and the development of nations, international fishing rights, and administration of economic aid.

One Man's Opinion

by
Sam Garner

"It's so beautiful to be irresponsible!" This profound statement was made in the publications room as the Opinion was thinking of something to write. After homecoming, fine arts week, class rings, party mugs, plays, and this and that, it's quite nice to sit and look back over the past few months. A new quarter begins next week and exams will be over and it'll be time to rest, to play, to visit your favorite places, and to see your favorite people. Be happy that there are a few days in which to rest and to catch your breath between quarters. We wondered what people did during these few hours and decided to ask the normal, average Wilmington College student. Here are some answers, we found them interesting:

"I sleep! I try to catch up on all the sleep I've missed."

This time I think I'll get to Asia for a few days! We asked, "During the quarter break?" the answer was "YES!"

"Various things. Like sleep, hang around the house, ride, et cetera."

"I attend to brush up on my Shakespeare. I want to read. I may buy a shell home!"

"I practice hatha yoga. I put a kink in my spine last quarter practicing raga yoga and I'm trying to get rid of it!"

"I have many thing to do. I'm going to climb a flag pole and have a 'blue'. Then I'm going to sit on Wrightsville Beach and have a 'blue' and then I'm going to go to Topsail, rent a motel room and have a 'blue!'"

It's been said that the pseudo intellectuals that write for the newspaper are a bunch of weird ones! The Opinion thought it would be nice to assure the student body that the majority of people that are on the staff are just that way. They, or should it be, we enjoy doing things in a non-conformist way. Now isn't that unusual? Currently the staff is saving Bible school pins and monkey wrenches, scotch bottles and empty lipstick tubes. After these objects are obtained in the correct number, they will be put into a collage that is to be entitled, "Masochistic Interlude."

Sideline Opinions

Deadlines for the year book have been met and all is in the making. The fledgling promises to be an interesting year book. The staff has worked throughout the year and the final result will appear in the late spring.

H.M.S. you know what, will go into final rehearsals next week. The show will be presented in the Pub March 13 and 14. College students are reminded to keep these dates in mind.

Hoggard Hall is the scene for a beautiful exhibition of Highland Crafts this month. Variety is the watch-word for the exhibitions that the Art Department has brought to the College this year.

WILC is now on the air. Congratulations are certainly in order for the staff and Hugh Paschal, station manager, and D. Rhodes who acts as program director.

"The time is out of joint, oh cursed spite."

There seems to be a placing of emphasis on areas which do more than offer pleasure to a small percentage, or boost the image of the College in the public eye. We suggest that a re-evaluation is in order, that there be a recognition of campus "problem areas" and means taken immediately to cope with these areas.

College graduates form a high percentage of the leaders in any community. If educators and psychiatrists, together with workers in the related disciplines, can co-operate to produce a greater degree of emotional maturity in these college students, "we may expect significant improvement in the approach to and solution of many of the social problems which the world faces."

The College must assert a personal interest in the development of its students, socially and mentally. The failure to do so will result in even more drop-outs, and many more young adults echoing the words of Holden Caulfield:

"Do you have any particular qualms about leaving Pencey Prep School?"

"Oh, I have a few qualms, all right. Sure . . . but not too many. Not yet, anyway. I guess it hasn't really hit me yet. All I'm doing right now is thinking about going home Wednesday. I'm a moron."

"Do you feel absolutely no concern for your future, boy?"

Oh, I feel some concern for my future, all right. Sure, I do . . . But not too much, I guess.

Look sir. Don't worry about me . . . I mean it. I'll be all right. I'm just going through a phase right now. Everybody goes through phases and all, don't they?"

Crews Speaks Out On Q. P. Averages

J. M. Crews, college dean, expressed concern recently at the apparent number of students who do not understand the quality point average required of a student to continue in school in good standing. He asked students to "please see me this quarter if they have any questions about how they stand." He also pointed out that because attendance was being handled by the Dean of Women and Dean of Students, that he would have more office time to devote to individual problems.

As stated in the current college catalogue, "In order to remain in good standing at Wilmington College, students must meet the following quality-point average requirements on all work elected at the beginning of the indicated quarter: Quarter 4, 1.50; quarter 7, 1.50; and quarter 10, 1.75. Eligibility for continued residence or for readmission may be restored by the completion of sufficient work in the Summer Session or through approved correspondence courses to enable him to attain the required quality-point average."

"This is not the old attendance regulation," stated Crews. "A student ineligible to come back at the end of a quarter, would probably have to remain out of school for an entire academic year, and make up the work during summer school."

The present policy is only one part of changing Academic policy. Admission to Wilmington College, for example, is now being handled on an individual basis, allowing closer screening for selection to meet the increasing applications for enrollment.

James MacMillan

Dr. MacMillan Lectures Student Body On Sex

By MARY C. HODGIN

"You can't say those things, some of the people you're talking to might be virgins," commented the wife of Dr. James MacMillan upon hearing a preview of the speech he delivered last Wednesday evening to students attending a lecture sponsored by the Pannathian Society.

Opening with the words of Rusty Warren, "We all do it so we might as well talk about it," MacMillan pointed out that much emphasis has been placed on sex, particularly in contemporary literature. "Ten to fifteen years ago, the author merely introduced sexual episodes in novels. Now, many novels owe their success to one sexual episode after another. Hundreds of pornographic magazines can be purchased at our newsstands." He spoke of girlie magazines which are devoted entirely to "bosom worshippers." "Many books," he continued, "are made respectable because marriage is mentioned in the title."

The biggest change has not been in the subject, but in the treatment. Not only do paperback tell you how, "they make you want to get out and start doing it. They include special features for celebrations to add spice and variety."

The legitimate theatre has always been a forum on which sexual ideas are propounded and elaborated on, according to MacMillan. Hollywood adheres to a strict moral code in that nudity and sex codes are not seen but can be implied.

The Church is changing its attitude toward sex. Originally, Sex was considered by the clergy to be an inherent evil. MacMillan quoted a statement which appeared in Time magazine, given by an Anglican Priest, who said that "premarital relations . . . constitute a blessing." Most ministers, he stated, will not done an occasional slip.

Is all of this talk to say that man is degenerating? MacMillan says not. In support he offers two examples, Ancient Greece, where homosexuality was fluently practiced, and the Roman World, where many sexual expressions were considered the norm. In the Roman world, homosexuality was not only widespread, but condoned.

With the rise of Christianity, the sexual behavior of the Roman World was dampened. But the Renaissance saw another revolt in sexual mores, Italy being the scene of sexual freedom and the Church itself indulging in sexual promiscuity. He pointed out that Catholic priests acknowledged their illegitimate offspring and often provided for them materially.

Two periods in history swayed to the other extreme, pointed out MacMillan — the Victorian Age and the Puritan Experience.

The main question at hand, stated MacMillan is "what constitutes proper behavior in 1964." "How far do you go?" Most neurotic symptoms, he stated, in college, attempt to deal with anxiety rising from basic impulses, one of which is sex.

He pointed out that everyone must decide individually what represents the best for himself. "No two persons can be alike in beliefs. Sexual behavior is a highly individualized matter."

Wilmington College Contains District Science Fair March 21

Aspiring young scientists from junior and senior high schools in 13 counties of Southeastern North Carolina staged the annual District Science Fair in Hoggard Hall March 21. The fair consisted of over 130 exhibits, all prize winners in local science fair competitions.

"The quality and diversity of exhibits was outstanding this year," said Director Louis H. Adcock of the Chemistry Department. "They revealed the fascinating and tremendous scope of modern science."

Awards were made in both junior (grades 7-9) and senior (grades 10-12) divisions of the competition. All winners received seals of merit. The three top winners of each category in the junior division received medals while the top winners in the senior division were invited to enter their exhibits in the State Science Fair which will be held at Duke University in April.

Dr. W. B. Bond, Dr. Daniel Gintis, and Mr. T. W. Lunney, all of the E. I. DuPont Research Laboratory at Kinston, judged the exhibits in the physical science division. Judging the biological entries were Dr. Heber Johnson, Wilmington physician, Dr. J. M. Jenkins, Jr., horticultural crops scientist from the Castle Hayne Research Station, and Dr. J. H. Parnell of the Department of Zoology at N. C. State.

Exhibits covered such topics as mechanical stroboscopes, rockets for a trip to Mars, atomic energy, the role of the DNA molecule in heredity, and the effect of cigarette smoking on health.

This was the ninth year that the District Science Fair has been held at Wilmington College. Members of the Engineers' Club helped set up the exhibits and coordinate the event.

The North Carolina Academy of Science and other organizations sponsor science fairs every year for the purpose of promoting interest in science among junior and senior high school students and encouraging outstanding students to pursue scientific vocations.

Trustees Throw Fraternity Issue To Committee

"To foster the spirit of brotherhood among the members of the fraternity, to improve the social atmosphere of the college, to increase school spirit and provide some supervised housing for students. This is the objective of the fraternity, Sigma Phi Kappa, as stated by its treasurer, Ronnie Staton.

The members of this fraternity have been working for some time to establish their organization as a chapter of the national fraternity, Phi Kappa Alpha, and as an official Wilmington College group.

The Student Affairs Committee is presently studying a set of rules to govern fraternities.

The organization, which is established under North Carolina Law as a non-profit organization, is still awaiting official approval by the Board.

The present officers are: Harry Rickenbacker, president; William Gemmell, vice-president; Jimmy Price, recording secretary; John Allen, corresponding secretary; Ronnie Staton, treasurer.

History, Government Classes Conduct 1964 Gubernatorial Primary Study

A project known as "1964 Gubernatorial Primary Study" is currently being conducted by members of the U.S. History and Government classes, under the supervision of faculty members Thomas Gay and Pete Daniel, and in cooperation with the Center For Education In Politics of the University of North Carolina. Other colleges and universities in the state also are interviewing citizens as part of the same study.

Designed to find out how the average voter feels about the candidates and issues in the Gubernatorial Primary, and how well informed the people in the state are on political matters, the Primary Study results may very well predict the outcome of the race for Governor in this state.

Audubon precinct was chosen as the most typical middle class precinct in our city, and the persons interviewed were picked at random from the registration books of the precinct. The First Wave of the survey has just been completed. A second interview will take place during the latter part of May, its results tabulated in Chapel Hill and then compared with the results of the First Wave, through statistical analysis.

Such questions as the following were asked of the voters: "Do you think it makes a good deal of difference to North Carolina which candidate wins?" "Are there any public issues that you regard as particularly important in this year's election?"

Students receive instructions for political survey.

Gubernatorial Contest Arrives Here As Student Groups Form

The appearance of campaign groups for several of the gubernatorial candidates here in the college has occurred within the last few days. Three candidates have organized support within Wilmington College — Preyer, Moore, and Lake. These college groups work in close cooperation with the local headquarters, specifically directing their campaigning toward the collegiate voter.

The bulk of the work of these college campaigners consists of providing literature on their respective candidates to those here at the college, of personally contacting people and informing them about their candidate, and enlarging active support.

The college campaign groups are not restricted to the college alone and plan to branch out in their efforts into the community. Many of those now actively participating in the election here on campus will continue working after the school year ends, being absorbed into the local support groups.

Students for Preyer, the first state-wide student organization to support a candidate for governor, began forming its network last month with headquarters at Wake Forest, State, and Carolina.

Although no formal appointments have yet been made on this campus by students for Preyer, Jerry Kallman and Ronnie Staton have already begun coordinating student support for Preyer.

Candidate Lake is represented at WC by Jimmy Hern who was contacted recently by the state headquarters for I. Beverly Lake. Hern is working on campus with Thomas McNair.

Bill Bryant heads the supporters for Dan Moore on campus. Hank Poisson, Fred Little, and Stan Winbourne constitute the initial staff of Moore's support.

EDITORIALS:

STATE POLITICS ON CAMPUS

Until recently Wilmington College has been void of the political interest among students that exists in the larger up-state colleges. This has been shown by the fact that almost all organized opposition to the gag law appears in colleges in the more populated areas of the state; this also is noticeable when one considers where student opinion on the civil rights issue has appeared and been demonstrated.

The larger colleges have chapters of the Young Americans for Freedom (otherwise known as the Young American Fascists), the National Student Association, the Student Peace Union, and a little known group—the Militant Middle of the Road.

Of all this Wilmington College has been left out, obviously because of size and location—perhaps also for other reasons.

The Democratic gubernatorial candidacy contest is an event that might possibly bring a spark of interest in politics to this campus. Already the respective committees for the various candidates have been busy establishing campaign leaders among the students here. Last week Students for Preyer held a meeting in the Library Building.

If the inbred apathy of most of the students to politics can be overcome, this campus gubernatorial campaign groups might succeed in precipitating an active concern for state politics.

We believe this is necessary; a greater awareness of what is actually going on is needed by all, including students, when a state has a gag-law on the books, or sends the National Congress, under the guise of "Democrats," men who spend fifty per-cent of their time supporting the opposition party.

JOE COLLEGE GOES GREEK

By Louise Ambrosiano

A fraternity is a group, organization, institution of boys (ages 18 and older) gathered together for the purpose of insuring a secure social life and to "belong".

A fraternity is a board full of the same size holes whose pegs have all constricted themselves to that same size and proportion so they can "fit".

To fit, to be a part, to belong, to get along with others; this is the reason for fraternities.

Many educators and all fraternity men believe this learning to live within the social rules of a fraternity are important toward existing within the social rules of man's civilized world.

What is meant is that learning to relinquish one's individuality, to not coexist but exist interdependently, to give up the insecurity of one's own basic principles for the safety of the principles of the majority while one is in a fraternity, enables one to submit easily and painlessly to those economic facts of life which require the same of the members of that civilized world upon pain of ostracization.

No one has ever given a satisfactory reason for the establishment of fraternities. The reasons given are always round, ear-pleasing ones like "brotherhood", "school-spirit", and a sort of "instant friendship" deal all in one.

A bunch of boys in one house bonded by the holy chains of three sophisticated Greek letters and the right family background is a very poor basis for communion of personalities. Friendship of rapport and true benefit can't be organized.

Individuality is appreciated and praised when it is expressed well in creative arts such as music or painting; those that are relatively inoffensive. But individuality of ideology, philosophy is cursed. It is even fought with preventative measures such as a fraternity so that a person can go from childhood to the working world without ever having experienced the elements of life which create him.

A person, well fed, cushioned, does not question — he burps.

Freedoms Foundation Louds Circle K

Circle K International, one of whose clubs serves this campus, has been awarded the George Washington Honor Medal for its college campus citizenship and service program in 1963, it was recently announced by Bobby Eakins, president of Circle K. This is the third time that the International organization has received recognition from the Freedoms Foundation.

The Freedoms Foundation singled out Circle K for its work in "promoting active citizenship by participating in service projects on the campus."

"A Freedom Foundation award enjoys the same prestige and significance in the community service field that the 'Oscar' does in the motion picture industry and the 'Emmy' of the television world."

Though a relatively young organization, the Circle K already has more than 10,000 members on over 525 college campuses in the U.S. and Canada.

Circle K is a college level service club sponsored by a local Kiwanis Club which voluntarily assumes the leadership responsibilities in its respective college and host community.

Interview With Dr. Randall

Fraternities Round Out College Experience

"Fraternities can be a great asset but have to be properly managed and controlled." Dr. William Randall expressed this opinion when questioned about the college's attitude to the proposal for the establishment of a fraternity on campus. "Fraternities do have certain drawbacks," Dr. Randall added, "but these depend on how the college handles them. The college will have to set up ground rules."

As he stated, the main obstacles are the opposition in some quarters to the fraternities, the necessity for the establishment of ground rules, and a time limiting factor on the petition for affiliation with the national fraternity. In regard to the opposition that fraternities are snobbish, and closed, Dr. Randall replied that a college should have enough fraternities so that everyone can join one.

Dr. Randall further added that although fraternities were highly selective, since the war this circumstance has reversed and they now have to resort to "rushes" to obtain pledges; fraternities are actually dying out and at the University of Chicago, there are no longer any fraternities.

"Fine Arts Week is an example of the advantages that college offers which few students participated. Fraternities and sororities are one way to instill group effort toward participation."

In fraternities the members are better than average students usually, and they make better grades, but they do not make as high as their predicted grade averages indicate that they should. Although academically they are a selected group of students, the average fraternity members' grades are a half to one point less than his projected grades. The question is, are the advantages worth the grade drop?

Here is Dr. Randall's reply: "I believe if a fraternity is properly operated, the social contact and the experience of living with other men of the same age are worth more than a little higher grade average. Not everybody believes this. Too many people work for grades. I don't know why. This is a 'drive-in' college. It is difficult to establish a social life. The students must make the effort."

Klan And Revived Confederacy Have Similarity With Muslims

By JACK LOFTUS

The best thing Governor George Wallace ever did for Alabama was when he left it aboard his private plane, "The Spirit of 1866", and in a daring daylight adventure he struck out for the northern wilderness of Maryland. Refueling at Raleigh, he got a chance to listen to Democratic gubernatorial candidate I. B. Lake who was speaking out against the Civil Rights Bill. It seems that Mr. Lake had only recently come out against Civil Rights, asserting that "only people have rights."

"Encouraged by this, Governor Wallace finally arrived in the very heart of enemy territory — Washington, D. C. After clearing customs, the Governor wandered into the Capital where he received a rather pleasant surprise. Here in the Senate of the United States, Sen. Strom Thurmond and his small group of incompetents were conducting a "filibuster" over the pending Civil Rights legislation. Feeling right at home in Sen. Thurmond's little confederate army, the good Governor remained in D. C. the remainder of the day before flying on to Maryland.

Last Call for Copy

Direction, the annual publication of the Scriptic Society is in the forming stage and is expected to be the best ever, according to Sam Garner. Edited by Jennifer Davis and Jack Loftus, it will include varied types of poetry, short stories, short plays, and critiques. The publication is to be illustrated by a member of the art department.

To date about 25 pieces have been considered for publication, but only a small percentage of that number has been accepted.

It is not necessary to be a member of the Scriptic Society to submit a piece of writing. Anyone wishing to contribute any kind of writing may do so by contacting Miss Morton, Jennifer Davis, or Jack Loftus.

for his campaign for the Grand Wizardship of the Klan.

Unfortunately, the Governor's story does not end here, for every day finds him stirring up more and more trouble in a state that is trying to control its race riots. If this is not enough, he has now set sail for the mid-west in quest of a similar nomination. In this respect there is absolutely no difference between this and a campaign by Malcolm X — X of the Black Nationalist Party in Alabama or Mississippi. Both are radicals, both are protest symbols, and both only point the way to lawlessness and violence.

Such has been the keynote to the Civil Rights movement in this country for years, and it is this violence on both sides that must end soon. Certainly this problem can be solved, but there is no one solution; rather, there are a number of solutions which, I believe, can be found in both legislation and education.

Certainly it can be seen that proper legislation is needed on both the State and National level. Narrow-minded individuals such as Thurmond and Lake only seek to cripple the effectiveness of such legislation which would serve little purpose in a watered own condition. The fact is that a federal Civil Rights measure is needed now because the States under such irresponsible governors as George Wallace of Alabama, Ross Barnett of Mississippi, Pat Brown of California, and Nelson Rockefeller of New York have failed to do anything about the problem.

Such failures are our tasks, not only in legislation but in education as well. A well rounded and properly educated individual is neither a member of the Klan nor a Black Muslim, but rather he is an individual with a moral and ethical outlook in life; he is an individual that can conceive of and formulate freedom and equality in this age.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Local Editor Favors Editorial

Congratulations on your recent editorial, "A Threat To The College", which we are reproducing in full in our issue of February 23.

It is good to know that we have such liberal-minded individuals among us. Education teaches, or should, one to think, and you are doing just that. Keep up the good work.

Seahawk Veterans Play Bearcats This Afternoon

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on the feature players of the Seahawk baseball team.

With baseball activity already well underway at Wilmington College as evidenced by the games played at Camp Lejeune, and today's scheduled encounter against the University of Cincinnati, The Seahawk features four of the Seahawk starting lineup: Tommy Cole, Bill Harris, Butch Watts, and Steve Coley.

Watts At Second

As the Seahawks' number one utility man last season Butch Watts saw a great deal of action at second base and right field. With the absence of Flea Coward from this year's team Butch is expected to step up to a full time role as the regular 'Hawk second baseman. This comes as no surprise to those who have followed Butch's career; being a year younger than Flea, Butch has pretty much followed in the footsteps of the former 'Hawk great playing on many of the same teams together.

A native of Wilmington, Butch is also a product of the city's fine athletic program, playing on the American Legion Post #10 team which won the 1960 and 1962 State Championship. His .368 batting average earned him All-State and Most Valuable Player honors in 1962.

Coley, The Veteran

A 5-10, 170-pound junior, Steve Coley is the veteran of the Seahawk squad having played on the varsity for three years running. Steve hails from Landrum, S. C., where he excelled in football, basketball, track, and baseball during his high school career picking up Most Valuable Player awards in football and baseball while earning All-Conference honors in basketball.

Not content to let summer vacation halt his baseball activity, Steve played for the Inman American Legion Post where his astounding .614 batting average was the highest in the state. In 1962 his .359 average sparked the 'Hawks to the finals of the NJCAA baseball tourney in Grand Junction, Colo.

Harris At Short

Bill Harris is certainly no stranger to Seahawk fans; the Hamlet has been a fixture on both the baseball and basketball teams here at the college for the 6-0, 170-pound sophomore from past two years. Last year he moved right in and nailed down the challenging job of varsity shortstop and became one of the team's leading hitters as a freshman. His sure hands, coupled with good speed and agility, give him a decided edge at short.

All-American Cole

Tommy Cole is likewise an outstanding competitor as displayed by his varsity positions on both the baseball and basketball teams. A native of Danville, Va., the 6-3 sophomore has tallied an impressive athletic record. While in high school he participated in the Connie Mack baseball program, and his powerful bat sparked his team to third place in the Connie Mack World Series. Last year Tommy continued Wilmington College's tradition of having at least one Junior College All-American baseball player per year as he captured the honor at Grand Junction on the basis of his outstanding batting and faultless fielding.

All four boys played on last year's NJCAA championship baseball team each proved to be outstanding examples of the quality of athletics played at Wilmington College.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

Spring is officially with us now, whether the weatherman agrees or not, and it is time to drag out the sporting paraphernalia and head for the softball diamond, in the case of Wilmington College students, that is. After last year's tremendous success with the intramural softball league everyone is certainly looking forward to the resuming of the program.

Coach Allen has started the ball rolling by announcing that students may begin forming teams immediately. All that is required is for the person wishing to organize the team to go by Coach Allen's office in H-111 and pick up a registration sheet and get 15 prospective teammates to help him for a team. All registration sheets must be in the office by March 31.

All teams will be limited to the 15 players on the permanent roster turned in before the season begins. It is hoped that at least six squads will be formed. All games will be played on campus on the field directly behind the parking lot between Hoggard Hall and the new gymnasium. The construction of two softball diamonds is proposed for the near future and when completed it will be possible to play four games per afternoon. Coach Allen plans to limit the duration of the games to 50 minutes with one beginning at 4 and the second at 5 o'clock. A "skunk rule" will be used in case one team gets a prohibitive lead.

It is expected that many of the service clubs on campus will be represented by teams with several others being organized by non-affiliated students who are equally as anxious to participate in the program.

Another avenue open to those who feel inclined is that of officiating. Coach Allen is looking for students who are willing to umpire the games. He announced plans for an officials' clinic on March 23. All persons interested in umpiring were cordially invited to attend. Those graduating from the clinic will be allowed to umpire the afternoon contests and will receive a salary of $1.00 per game.

Golf

Wilmington College golf hopefuls began qualifying competition last week. Coach Allen, the squad's mentor, reports that 14 boys have contacted him concerning berths on the golf team and that things are shaping up fine for what promises to be the best season in years. Ricky Berman, captain of last year's team, Jack Harrell, Roger Fowler, Will Gemmell, Harry Buzzell, and Jim Moseley, all returnees from last year's Virginia-Carolinas Conference Champs, face some stiff competition from the likes of Freddie Day, Reggie Fowler, Jim Henderson, Steve Hines, Tom McLean, Terry Moore, Robert Parker, and Jim Price. From this list only six players will be chosen and a ladder will be comprised on the basis of lowest average score per round. It has also been announced that once again this year all home matches will be played at the Municipal Golf Course.

All in all it promises to be an exciting spring in athletic circles at Wilmington College.

Fraternity States Ideals

At the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College held Tuesday, February 25, B. D. Schwartz presented a petition from 17 students to the Board requesting permission to establish at the College a fraternity chapter that would become affiliated with Phi Kappa Alpha. Mr. Schwartz assured the Board that the administration was in favor of national fraternities.

Frederick B. Graham suggested that a thorough study be made before any definite action was taken, and that rules be set up for the regulation of these groups.

L. Bradford Tillery moved that the Board approve in principle the idea of national fraternities and sororities on the college campus and that the faculty be authorized to explore the matter and form some specific recommendations.

College Radio Station Progresses Rapidly

The existence of WILC depends in part on the help and support of local commercial stations. WMFD, for example, has been especially helpful in supplying Campus Radio with records and equipment; recently they donated $800.00 in records to WILC. WMFD is also planning to sponsor a five minute show which will feature interviews of various noteworthy people around college.

WKLM reserves a fifteen minute spot every week for the Wilmington College Show. This show had previously been broadcast from WGNI, but eventually found itself at WKLM.

It had been thought that WKLM would broadcast a show from Wilmington College, but that station had evidently lost interest in the idea. It is possible that WWSL will sponsor such broadcasts as a public service due to a state law forbidding advertising on state property. At the same time the station would be fulfilling the public service requirements set up by the F.C.C.

The staff of WILC is attempting to model their radio station as closely as possible after the commercial stations.

EUROPEAN JOBS

The trend among students is to work in Europe during the summer. Thousands of jobs (e.g. resort, lifeguarding and office work) and travel grants are available to every registered student. Some wages are as high as $400 a month. For a complete prospectus, job and travel grant applications, a $1 ASIS book coupon and handling and airmail charges send $1 to Dept. M, American Student Information Service, 22 Ave. de la Liberté, Luxembourg City, Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

An earlier election to fill the post was invalidated when only 58 names could be found to account for 65 ballots cast. In the last election, only 24 per cent of eligible students voted.

The Senate will vote on the charter for the Canterbury Club in its first meeting of April. The Canterbury Club, a campus organization of Episcopalian students, submitted its charter to the Student Government last week; the prospective club was sent to committee.

The problem of "flies on pies" continues to plague the Senate. On March 16 a committee of two, Kappa Phi, was formed to find a means of putting caps on pies and other food in the cafeteria.

This move was made after a previous committee designated to investigate the sanitary situation in the cafeteria failed to meet.

Fashion Show Set

Alpha Chi Sigma, women student's organization, is planning a Spring Fashion show to be held here on campus in coordination with the local dress shops.

The show, called "April Showers of Fashions", is set for April 17. The stage will be set with a backdrop and umbrellas appropriate for the particular numbers.

Members of both the college and the students are invited to attend the event. The charge will be $1.00 for adults and $.75 for students. A door prize will be given, and proceeds will go to the college for a project.

The Fledgling staff has completed compositional work on the '64 annual. At this time the staff is finishing checking the proofs for the book.

"After many hours of debate and discussion, the staff collectively decided upon an appropriate color and cover design that contains an addition to the orthodox cover constructions of the past," said Billy Lewis, editor-in-chief of the Fledgling.

The two stone benches placed on either side of the traffic circle Monday have been donated to the college by the Circle K Club.

Circle K gave the benches to the college to help further beautify the campus and provide a place to sit for students waiting for the buses.

The stone of the benches was carefully chosen to match the buildings and blend with the existing structures on campus.

Oxendine Wins Award In UNC Art Show Exhibiting Wood Cut

The Second Annual Student Art Competition at the Erdahl-Cloyd Union Gallery, North Carolina State of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh, opened on April 12, 1964, at 3:00. This exhibition will continue through May 4.

A woodcut by Wilmington College student Ray Oxendine won second place in the Prints division of this exhibit. This color woodcut is entitled "Cinder blocks" and was executed by Oxendine in the Graphics Class at the College.

All awards and the selection of work that is included in this showing were made by a professional jury. This is the second annual showing and for the first time all students enrolled in colleges and universities in North Carolina were eligible to enter.

College Arranges Program With Local Industry

Dr. Randall and Robert Kallman, president of Garver Manufacturing Company, a division of Kellwood Company, have announced a joint training program which will be inaugurated next September for students who wish to pursue accounting and production careers.

This program will correlate the students' training with actual on-the-job experience. The students who qualify will be offered employment for several months at the Garver Manufacturing Company and will receive training and actual practice in the subjects they have studied at Wilmington College. The program will expose the student to as many areas of business enterprise as possible so that he can assimilate basic, fundamental knowledge of a manufacturing concern.

"The success of the program," stated the Garver Manufacturing Company in a news release, is assured through the cooperation and guidance of Mr. Kallman and Dr. Randall and through the sincere desire of the candidates to supplement their formal education by actual experience in the many integral phases of a manufacturing concern."

All students who are interested in participating, and who have successfully completed their Junior year of studies, may make application at Dean Crews' office.

Community Views Minser Exhibit Featuring Oils, Drawings, Prints

By Sam Garner

Work that is created to make a loose, spontaneous expression which although might not look disciplined and planned; work that is concerned with uses of color; work with a flatness of shape and figure-background relationship; this is the work of artist Patricia Minser.

A one-man showing of the art of Patricia Minser opened Sunday in Hoggard Hall at Wilmington College. This exhibition consists of paintings, drawings, watercolors, and prints. Miss Minser's work is well known in galleries in Tennessee, Georgia, and North Carolina. She is an exhibiting member of the Associated Artists of North Carolina and has shown in two AANC exhibits this year—in Wilmington and Raleigh.

Her paintings have been exhibited in the Hunter Art Gallery in Chattanooga, Piedmont Arts Festival in Athens, Georgia, and in numerous showings of the Georgia Association of Artists.

Miss Minser is instructor in Art at Wilmington College and teaches life drawing, graphics, and art education in the Elementary School. She attended the University of Chattanooga for two years, the University of Georgia for four years, and holds the degrees of B.F.A., M.F.A., and a teacher's certificate in Art Education.

Miss Minser's work is free-flowing, and sometimes one cannot distinguish where a figure begins and the background ends. She is always concerned with human figures—these figures are the important element of her work. There are no oil paintings of landscapes, but Miss Minser does make drawings and watercolors of these subjects.

In the study of art and artists, comments Miss Minser, a student in art does not start off where a master finished but rather he starts with nature as did the old master and carries on from there to develop his own style. One does not imitate other artists but studies them, and from this study the technique and style of the artist develops.

This exhibition is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Saunders Awarded Grant For Study At State College

The National Science Foundation Undergraduate Research Participation Project State has named Lloyd Saunders as a member of its research group for this summer.

Saunders, one of eight North Carolina Students participating, is a biology major and lab assistant here at WC.

Under the supervision of a State biologist, Saunders will engage in independent research for ten weeks this summer either in the field of experimental evolution or vertebrate animal populations.

Saunders, who was selected for participation in the program on the basis of scholastic record and interest in biology, will continue his education following graduation from here to earn a degree either in medical research or biochemistry.

The National Science Foundation sponsors the National Science Foundation Undergraduate Research Participation Project as a means of offering college Juniors and Seniors an opportunity for professional experience in the research techniques.

New Serigraph For Trustees Room

By Pam Long

The Board of Trustees Room recently acquired an exciting new feature to its appearance with the hanging of a serigraph (an original color print made by pressing pigments through a silk screen with a stencil design) above the conference table. Bonnie Raines, who works as a secretary in the board room said of the serigraph, "It certainly brightens the room, with the colors. The work of art is entitled 'No Name.'"

It is one of a series of serigraphs by Ann Wall Thomas. Mrs. Thomas, a native of North Carolina, received her BFA and MFA degrees from the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. She has taught in the North Carolina public schools, and most recently has served on the staff of the Department of Art, University of Georgia. Her prints have appeared in such exhibitions as the Brooklyn Museum Print Annual, the Library of Congress Print Exhibition, the North Carolina Artists Annual Exhibition, the Association of Georgia Artists Annual Exhibition, the Winston-Salem Gallery of Fine Arts semi-annual exhibition, and other regional and national exhibitions.

Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights of last week, April 9, 10, and 11, marked the presentation of the fourth major production of the Thalian Association and Wilmington College, Noel Coward's "Fallen Angels." Under the direction of Miss Hester Donnelly, the comedy in three acts revived the stage play which premiered in London in the 1930's.

"This is Noel Coward at his inimitable, best, gay, debonair, infinitely sophisticated — this is Noel Coward in the style that won him his international reputation as the most successful purveyor of high comedy in the present day theatre," stated one critic following opening night.

Tatum S. Robertson, Robert Dawson, Dora Cameron, Bill Rogers, Claire Taylor, and Richard de Faut were members of the cast.

Assistant director was Jane Fonvielle. Robert N. Clark served as stage manager for the production and Hoyle Foster headed lighting. Properties were under the direction of Nancy Benson, while Andrew L. Johnson was make-up chief. Publicity was under the direction of John Powell and Mary F. Kilburn.

Serving as stage crew for "Fallen Angels" was Henry Bullard, Bill Bullard, Edward Hamrick, Virginia Jennewein, Harold Holliday, and Dell Dawson.

Beaches Off-Limits To Frats

Several weeks ago the fraternity submitted its constitution for approval; since that time they have been standing around cooling their heels while waiting for it to pass through red tape. Part of this procedure includes a list of regulations drawn up by the Student Affairs Committee to apply to all Greek societies that might form here at the campus.

At present this list of rules is somewhere on this side or the other of the Board of Trustees. Included in these regulations is a passage which says that frat houses can not be located on or near any of the area beaches. It doesn't take much thought to imagine how well this would go over with anyone if they were selecting a place to live, the beaches being one of the most popular—particularly for groups.

The fraternity's original preference for a house near the beach was shown when it moved into a house on the sound. Before actually becoming a fraternity, they will have to get out of this location.

Of course there is a reason for this ban on the beaches; it being that a frat house at the beach might be the scene of "raising Cain" by any groups that went down to the beach. However, it seems that the fraternity, supposedly composed of mature adults, should be the ones to decide whether or not a location is suitable or not for their house—they're the ones who will be living there.

PUMPKINHEAD POLITICS

By MARY C. HODGIN

Four more years! My, my, my.

The voters in this district should have been more cautious when vesting their political hopes in the demi-god Alton A. Lennon, favorite son of the Daughters of the Confederacy.

He's full of surprises. His voting record in the 1963 Congress makes it apparent that he is obviously representing the wrong party. A representative from the Democrat party, he has managed to vote its way 28 per cent of the time.

In comparison with Rep. David Henderson's 46 per cent for party support, two conclusions can be drawn. Lennon is either a conscientious conservative, or the instrument of a New Hanover County political machine which calls the punches in his stead at the mention of a Roll Call.

"Lennon, according to Americans For Constitutional Action, has voted during 1963 to uphold the Constitution of the United States and has opposed appeasement of Communists abroad and the trend toward socialism at home through centralization of power in a mammoth bureaucracy in Washington," stated the Star-News Newspapers in a recent article praising Lennon's voting record. Isn't that sweet? The ACA is also against social legislation, which could account for, in part, Lennon's misconception of the pending Civil Rights Bill.

The article continued to term Lennon "a courageous legislature dedicated to individual freedom and liberty, and the private enterprise system and preserving the inherent American heritage for our children."

Flag waving urchins, we endorse, but with the hope that they will not develop into the uninformed, apathetic puppets which infest Wilmington and its surrounding counties.

We cannot totally condemn Lennon; he has been duly elected. The fact that he returns to Washington unopposed relieves him of much of the blame. His election constitutes an exemplary display of apathy.

A few of the citizens in this county are interested in the Congressional elections—interested enough, in fact, to manage to see that Lennon is re-elected, and then after he gets in, from all appearances, tell him how to vote. The others don't seem to care. With the combined endorsement of the City Fathers and the local news media, one can easily see why the Star-News in a recent editorial stated that "Alton A. Lennon is too strong for a 'lone wolf' political adventurer to oppose him."

Aside from apathy and political "machinism," there is another reason why Lennon wins the praise of the public: they are generally too uninformed and misinformed to see through the acrobatics of the Southern Gentleman. Take, for example, Lennon's recent appearance on WECT-TV with News Director Ben MacDonald concerning the Civil Rights Bill. This piece of proposed legislation in its written form has not been published in this area, despite the request of local citizens. Therefore, when Lennon states that under the proposed Bill his summer home would have to be rented to the first person that came along, no one sees his statement for what it is, an obvious misinterpretation of the Bill. Such a statement makes us wonder if even Mr. Lennon is familiar with the Bill.

We haven't a Hat, we'll try the cliché.

Director Praises Volunteers' Work At Science Fair

Letters to the editor commenting on the behavior of young people today usually take the form of criticism, deserved or undeserved.

The actions of a certain group of students Saturday, March 21, at the Southeastern N. C. District Science Fair demonstrated that most of this criticism is unjustified. The Wilmington College Engineers Club, as they have for the past several years, were of invaluable assistance in setting up the fair, helping remove exhibits, policing the exhibit rooms, running movies, making signs, and doing any job asked of them. Typifying the idea that extracurricular school organizations have a service function as well as a social one, these young men show the attributes of today's youth that too often go unmentioned.

While the entire Engineers Club supported the project, certain members participated more actively in its success. These were: Carl Farmer, Bill Higgins, Reid Larson, Bill Reid, Ed Ruhland, David Seeger, Horace Thompson, Elton Tucker, and Harold Williams. The Science Fair Committee wishes to thank these young men for contributing to the success of a program that benefits both their school and the community.

Sincerely,

Reporter Blows Lid Off College Scandal

By JACK LOFTUS

Today the American public appears to be obsessed with the scandals seething on both the national and international levels. Great Britain had Profumo, the U.S. has Bobby Baker, and now Wilmington has a little gem of its own. There is, however, something rather unique about our scandal, because it is an affront against the very nature and preservation of man. If man is to survive as a distinct species above the animal and vegetable levels, he must be guided by certain rules pertaining to both his nature and health. It is the violation of these rules that has made our fair city the bed of iniquity to the eye of the muck-rakers.

Now at last after almost two years of investigation the whole story can be told. Inevitably people will be damaged, students will be expelled, and high administrative officials forced to resign. However, by far the most significant result will be the damaging blows to our local health department and to Wilmington College. I call such a scandal to the attention of the public only in the hope that the situation will be rectified. The complete record can be found at the offices of the State Bureau of Investigation under the file "Musca Domestica."

This pertains to a rare form of insect located only in South-eastern North Carolina and breeds nowhere else save in stale pies which in turn must be located in unsanitary buildings. Wherever these three conditions are met there will you see this foul and odious insect breeding and multiplying. It is indeed amazing that our small and humble college satisfies such profound requirements.

For over a year I labored laboriously verifying this data and interviewing experts in this chosen field after which over 12,000 pages of sworn testimony and veritable records were compiled. In October of 1963 I secretly confirmed this information to Mr. Stanton and Mr. Paschal, both of whom expressed profound shock and horror over the results. Upon their urging this information was presented to the Student Senate on Nov. 2, 1963. To say the least this information was greeted with mixed reaction.

Some senators regarded the document as potentially explosive, demanding that it be suppressed in the public interest. Others favored immediate publication of the news to all news media. Senator Sutolf was heard to say: "They shall not crucify man on a cross of Musca Domestica!" For full six months, the Senate pondered the situation. Finally, on April 1, 1964, a representative was sent to a college administrator's office whereupon he was confronted with this information. However, much to the agnost of the representative, the administrator stated that he was well aware of the conditions prevailing in the area and so was the public health department. When it was suggested to him that if the stale pies were covered the dangerous insect could not breed, the official asserted that the Health Dept. had certified the college with an A certificate.

The question we must now ask ourselves is why this area of the college with the stale pies was given such a certificate by the health department who had full knowledge of the prevailing conditions? Another point to consider is why the college is so dead set against covering the stale pies? Perhaps a payoff is involved somewhere, or maybe the college owns a controlling interest in the Public Health Department.

The repercussions of such a scandal are indeed grave, especially if an epidemic of Musca Domestica breaks out among the students. If this occurs the result could be chaos. However, the college does have one last chance to save itself. The plan calls for hard courage of the highest sort, and a total disregard for the consequences—cover the 'stx'!! pies!

One Aspect Of Rights Issue Society Versus Individual

From an objective viewpoint it will be interesting, though probably not very pleasant, to witness what will happen if the Civil Rights Bill is successfully foiled by "educational debate." This, of course, is saying in one way that we (the nation) are forced to accept the bill by threat of violence.

This is similar to the situation of the Civil War—principles versus morals: a man has a perfect right to be immoral—at least not nice—if he wishes in opposition to the idea that society doesn't have to tolerate wickedness. There is probably no "right" solution. The practical fact remains that regardless of the rightness or the wrongness of this bill and its opponents, the devil will break loose if it is defeated (we may catch the same if it is passed).

Democracy is designed, explained a professor here recently, not to achieve the perfect society but to keep us off each others' backs. A lot of Negroes resent being assigned an effective inferior status and many Caucasians dislike the threat of not being able to use color as a basis for judging character; we're at an impasse.

This whole situation is due to one manifestation of the fact that, using one of this same professor's frequent quotations, "man is a nuclear giant and an ethical infant"—Omar Bradley. We've not reached the point in race relations where we are brought face to face with the reality expressed in the quote. If we're to come out of this with our shirts, we may have to go a long way toward resolving the difference in our technical, economic, and informational progress and our moral state. The trouble is that we have found the word "ethics" to be meaningless unless it is confined to a particular group; any attempt to establish a universal ethic inevitably meets with dissent.

We can't afford the war which usually is the proper result when two equally right principles clash on this magnitude. At this stage though, most of us know which side must win.

The cry of trampled individual rights (Southern, state's or inalienable rights) will arise, naturally. The Civil Rights Bill certainly tends toward greater authoritarianism of government and socialism (that last term is what this sort of thing is locally called when not referred to as "communism"). It brings us rather startlingly to an awareness that in the modern world we have no alternative but more laws and more usurped individual initiative. Whether this is right or not is not the issue; the fact is that we have no other choice.

Authoritarianism and democracy don't necessarily work at cross purposes; in our complex society democracy is simply being forced to pull more people in more ways off others' backs. Men are unable to act as free agents and live harmoniously; therefore, they will be coerced into acting decently.

This was, in the past, largely the domain of religion, where men would surrender their individual freedom to an abstract principle or idea and act within the socially advantageous framework that was said by those in power to reflect that principle or, in the case of an anthropomorphized principle, the principle's wishes. However, religion has ceased a great deal to serve adequately in this capacity; its stinger—ignorance, fear, and superstition—has been removed, and we find that we are left with a little more intellectually palatable form of religion which, however, is no longer able to perform the social service of keeping the animal in man in place. Without a nation-wide, narrow, and darkened religious foundation such as our Puritan forefathers enjoyed, the state must replace the function of keeping us from running all over one another; for now the state possesses the stinger—legal punishment.

A highly developed form of socialism is where we will ultimately end if we don't blow ourselves off the globe in the meantime. There is no room for the social individuality of the brand expressed by Mr. Goldwater; at this stage of evolution, Homo sapiens, it has become suicidal to society. True individuality will exist as always in ways other than imposing one's self on others.

The social irresponsibility of those who have made necessary the Civil Rights Bill shows that nothing will suffer by it except their unrestricted ignorance. Man has a right to be wicked if he wishes . . . perhaps. But the proponents of the Civil Rights Bill and those suffering from racial oppression argue that no man has a right to act in a manner harmful to another.

"Accommodations" Of Civil Rights Bill Quoted

"The pending civil rights proposals are the most monstrous blueprint for governmental tyranny presented to an American Congress since George Washington took his oath of office as First President of the United States. They are even worse than the Reconstruction Acts," stated North Carolina Senator Sam J. Erwin, Jr.

The above comment exemplifies not only the attitudes of many statesmen but also of the general public as well, merely because they have not had an opportunity to read the Bill.

We present the actual context of the most debated portions of the proposed Civil Rights Bill in the hope of cleaning up a bit of the propounded idiocy about the Bill:

Title II—Injunctive Relief Against Discrimination In Places Of Public Accommodation

Sec. 201. For purposes of this section, "Commerce" means travel, trade, traffic, commerce, transportation or communication among the several States, or between any State, or between any foreign country or any territory or possession and any State or the District of Columbia, or between points in the same State but through any other State or the District of Columbia or a foreign country.

(d) Discrimination or segregation by an establishment is supported by State action within the meaning of this title if such discrimination or segregation (1) is carried on under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage; or (2) is required, fostered, or encouraged by action of a State or a political subdivision thereof.

(e) The provisions of this title shall not apply to a bona fide private club or other establishment not open to the public, except to the extent that the facilities of such establishment are made available to the customers or patrons of an establishment within the scope of subsection (b).

SWINK DESERTED

We have three service clubs here in this college that are lacking good deeds to do, but somehow they seem to have all overlooked one which they didn't finish last year. Spring is here; work can resume; but Mr. Swink has been left high and dry all by himself out at the amphitheatre in back of Hoggard Hall.

The dramatics department tackled the amphitheatre by themselves last year when the College couldn't come through with the money for the project. The formidability of the task was reduced to something humanly possible when the service clubs came to the rescue and pitched in to help build Theatre Al Fresco. One value of these service clubs was shown when they alleviated the dramatics department of some of the backbreaking work that had been added to an already full schedule.

Now that winter is over, work has started again; the dramatics department is back in the woods, and again it is entirely alone . . . where are the service clubs?

WE "WOULDN'T UNDERSTAND"

An interesting discussion was kicked off among the members of the Senate at their last meeting which was never held officially due to the lack of a quorum. The discussion was a continuation of one that has been going on for some time—why aren't the budgets being published each quarter in the newspaper as the constitution requires.

The general feeling now among most concerned, both Senators and administration, is that it isn't worth the trouble. "Students wouldn't understand why so much money was appropriated for some things," said Judy Campbell, secretary-treasurer, explaining what the administration has told her. "and they (the administration) wouldn't want to sit down with each person and explain their reasons." Carol Smith seconded this opinion by saying that it "wouldn't be worth the argument it might cause." This line of thought was accepted with the observation that the administration has "a good reason for why they allocated so much money to certain things."

From here the conversation went on to how to get around the clause in the constitution that says the budgets must be published. Hugh Paschal, Chairman of the Senate, came up with the suggestion that the clause might be interpreted to pertain only to the $500 allocated to the Senate at the beginning of the year. This view, never having been voiced before, was more or less liked by all. It remains to be seen what will be done.

For instance, how will this new interpretation fit into things this Spring when the various organizations begin submitting their budgets? The clubs, publications, and so forth will submit budgets, won't they—or is that another section of the constitution that needs reinterpreting?

This money comes out of the $8.50 we shell out each quarter for our Student Activities Fee. There was a great deal of sentiment expressed last year that since it is supposed to be our Student Activities Fee, we should at least have a say in how it is spent. This feeling was put into action in the constitution by giving our representatives in the Senate a voice in approving allocations made with this money.

If we, the students, are going to be able to judge the performance of our Student Government representatives, if we are going to see where our money is going, the budgets will have to be adequately publicized and brought to attention. This is the intention of the constitution.

Agreed that it is hardly worth the trouble to publish how the Senate "plays around with" $500; however starting next month—if the organizations are going to make their own requests for funds rather than have the state unexpectedly do it again this summer, the students will have to know where the money is going—the attitude that someone "up there" has "a good reason" for what they are doing will defeat the purpose of student government.

Had the students not wanted to run their own affairs more themselves and know more about why and how things are being handled, the Senate would never have been formed; it is much too troublesome and time-consuming to maintain merely for the purpose of pretense at self-government.

Student Criticizes WC Cuts System

Letter to the Editor:

There seems to be a growing consternation among students at our progressing school on the debatable issue of class "cuts." As I understand the procedure of unexcused class absences from the handbook and discussion, after three absences, unexcused, subtraction of Q.P.'s from your average begins. If you are on probation, subtraction begins with the first absence. The point is, must our average not only suffer because of grades but also from the flank because of "cuts." The atmosphere is that we are being regarded as mere high school juveniles, and are not mature enough to accept the responsibility of going to class without the arm of authority throwing a shadow on the Student Body.

I am not advocating no authority whatsoever, because without authority there is only chaos. My opinion is that young adults should be treated as young adults.

I would like to propose a system which works satisfactorily at a land grant college in our state. Let the individual instructors or departments decide on the system of class attendance. I don't want to infer that instructors do not have sufficient work to keep them occupied; they do. But class attendance is not the major issue it is now. There is much to be considered, but let's decentralize a little and appraise a new proposal. Students should also voice their opinions openly because this is our school.

Seahawks To Battle Georgia Southern Sat.

The Wilmington College Seahawks play their second consecutive home game under the lights when Georgia Southern College journeys here for a contest Saturday night. The game is scheduled for 7:45 p.m.

As of last Saturday's win over the Ft. Bragg outfit the 'Hawks brought their season's record to 7 wins against 5 losses. Coach Bill Brooks' charges will be out to improve this mark and fatten their batting averages which as a team trail those of last year.

Steve Slugs Second

Slugging Steve Coley blasted his second home run of the season as he led the 'Hawks to their 7-5 victory over the Ft. Bragg G.I.'s. The collegians broke open the game with a nine hit onslaught.

In a four-game tilt against Elon College with two games on each campus the squads split the series at two games apiece. In the last contest Vic Johnson turned in a sterling performance with a thrilling two-hit effort.

The 5-3 victory gave Johnson a 1-1 mark thus far.

The 'Hawks also downed the Bulldogs in their first contest of the season handing them their initial loss of the season, 6-4. Big Jim Braxton picked up the victory in a relief role as the home team capitalized on several Elon miscues.

In an all-out slugfest marked by four home runs the Wilmington College nine outlasted Ohio University, 10-9, in their first home game of the season.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE GOLF SQUAD READY FOR ACTION

The Wilmington College golf team is ready for action. After several qualifying rounds the ladder comprised of the best six members is being determined. Coach Allen and Coach Brooks have been hard at work rounding up matches for this season's "tour." At last count eight contests were scheduled and several more were in the works.

Such schools as East Carolina College, Pembroke College, Wesleyan College, Methodist College and Campbell College have already consented to play the Seahawk linksmen on a home and home basis. Elon College, Guilford College, and Atlantic Christian College are also listed as possible opponents this spring.

As of now the team looks like this: Ricky Berman, Freddie Day, Roger Fowler, Jack Harrell, and Tom McLean with Harry Buzzell, Will Gemmell, Jim Henderson, Steve Hines, Terry Moore, Jim Moseley, Robert Parker, and Jim Price battling it out for the sixth position on the squad.

All home matches this season will be played at Wilmington's Municipal Golf Course.

Varsity Report

Athletic Facilities

The campus of Wilmington College is rapidly becoming one of the best equipped athletic complexes in this area. Many facilities already in existence, under construction, or still in the planning stages promise to make Wilmington College a haven for the athletically as well as the scholastically inclined of Southeastern North Carolina.

Already Brooks' Field is perhaps the finest collegiate baseball field in the state and the newly installed dugouts and lights have certainly added to its prestige. The college is rapidly enlarging the seating capacity at the field and is planning to provide a paved access road and parking lot to the area. This will no doubt enhance the present facilities even more.

Gymnasium

The soon-to-be-completed gymnasium will be not only an excellent plant for the athletic program, intramurally as well as intercollegiate, but will also provide a badly needed assembly area for the student body. The structure will be a welcomed addition to the scene here at the college from the added standpoint of expanding our somewhat limited athletic program thereby enabling it to reach far more students than it now does.

Softball Fields

The softball fields are to be located directly behind the new gymnasium and are to be completed shortly. The area will provide space for two games to be played simultaneously and will enlarge the scope of the college's intramural athletic program which is scheduled to get under way this week.

In The Plans

Such juicy items as tennis courts, a track, and even a football field have already found their way into the plans for the future of Wilmington College. Apparently the only reason they haven't been started yet is lack of money coupled with the urgency of completing existing facilities.

How Soon Track?

This column is of the opinion that a track and field program is greatly needed here at Wilmington College. In these times when so much emphasis is being placed on the Olympic Games and their importance to our nation's stature it seems that every opportunity to further the pursuit of track and field events should be encouraged. This is also a field of endeavor in which a small college such as ours can specialize. The importance of a track and field program at Wilmington College cannot be over estimated in view of the number of persons reached by it as well as the excellent training it provides. Let's hope such a program is not long in coming to our campus.

Seahawk Returnees Give Added Strength

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles featuring members of the Seahawk baseball team.

With the baseball season already well under way as evidenced by the outstanding play witnessed thus far The Seahawk spotlights four more players. Despite the inclement weather of a tempestuous early spring the Hawk nine has performed admirably and merits praise.

Braxton Is Biggest

Big Jim Braxton, whose 6-8, 220-pound frame gives him the distinction of being the largest man in the Seahawk lineup this spring, hails from Winterville where he starred in both basketball and baseball. The big sophomore pitcher also pursues both sports here at Wilmington College.

As a high school cager Jim racked up a 23 points per game scoring average on his way to capturing all-conference honors for three consecutive seasons. His pitching also won accolades earning him all-state recognition in his senior year. Jim is a hard worker in all endeavors as evidenced by the fact that he was considered by many to be the most improved player on this year's basketball team.

Seahawk fans take pride in the psychological advantage Jim has over opposing batters as his big bulk looms menacingly over them as he winds up for the pitch. His arching delivery and blazing fast ball keep the opposition from digging in against him. This advantage has made him one of the most successful and most feared men on the Seahawk mound corps.

Hooks Hustles

Jerry Hooks, a 5-8, 155 pound junior infielder, hails from Kenly where he excelled as a player for Nahunta High School for four years. His 300-plus batting average sparked his team to the conference championship each year he played. Jerry was a valued member of the Nahunta team as he was voted the Most Athletic member of his class in his senior year after Nahunta had placed four in the state class A baseball tournament.

As a Seahawk for the third year, Jerry has witnessed many thrilling spectacles including the first place finish in last year's NJCAA baseball tournament in Grand Junction, Colo.

Shipp's No Stranger

Bobby Shipp is certainly no stranger to Wilmingtonians who have followed his exploits at NHHS and Wilmington College for the past few years. After distinguishing himself in three sports at the county high school, Bobby came to Wilmington College last year to help spark the Hawks to greater heights in basketball and baseball.

The 6-1, 180-pound sophomore proved to be an excellent high school athlete during his stay at NHHS where he co-captained the football and baseball teams winning all-state honors in both sports. Last season, as a Seahawk, the big first sacker's bat helped boost the Hawks to national prominence as he posted one of the highest averages on the championship team.

Percy Pitches

Percy Wood, the 5-9, 165-pound junior pitcher, comes to Wilmington College by way of Charlottesville, Va., where he played both baseball and football.

As a four-year letterman in the national pastime at Lane High School, Percy chalked up a 16-5 record as a pitcher and a .347 batting average as a fielder. His outstanding play sparked Lane High School to a conference title in his junior year.

Besides being the winningest pitcher on the team Percy racked up a no-hitter during his high school career. Because of his excellent record and fierce determination, off the playing field as well as on, Percy received three Most Valuable Player awards—two in baseball and one in recognition of his prowess on the gridiron.

Coach Earl Allen Announces College's Spring Intramural Softball Schedule

Coach Earl Allen has announced that seven teams have registered to participate in this spring's intramural softball activities. Judging from the enthusiasm shown by those interested in playing this season the program is destined to be the best yet.

As director of the proceedings Coach Allen has set up a few rules to speed up play and make the games more enjoyable for participants and spectators alike.

All games will be played on campus between the west parking lot and Brooks' Field. One game will be played at 4:00 p.m. and lasting for 50 minutes when the second game will start. All contests will be officiated by trained student umpires who will be paid $1.00 per contest.

The umpires will undergo a training period climaxed by a test of their ability before they are allowed to officiate the games. Players will be allowed to umpire games in which their team is not participating provided they have been qualified.

Teams which have signed up thus far are as follows: Circle K—Roger Webb, Collegiate Civitan—Maerae Padgett, Cromwell House—Ronnie Hutchinson, Faculty—Fred Toney, Phantoms—Johnny Gore, Seagulls—Larry Hubis, and Sigma Phi Kappa—Ray Fraley. The schedule for the season will be announced shortly.

Well, if you come to the Student Services Building this Friday night at 8:00, you will see the lovely misses who belong to these legs. A "shower of Fashion" will be presented by the Alpha Chi Sigma Club of Wilmington College.

Many summer fashions will be shown with emphasis on bathing suits and other beachwear. The cost is reasonable (only 75¢ for students and $1 for adults), and a door prize will be given.

Tickets for this "Shower of Fashion" may be purchased from all Alpha Chi Sigma members and at the door. All proceeds will go to the Alpha Chi Sigma project to help the College.

Entertainment will be furnished by the Wilmington College Top Twelve.

SRO-Thalians Present "Skin Of Our Teeth"

Pulitzer prize winner "Skin of Our Teeth," by Thornton Wilder has been selected to be performed in May by the Thalian Association and Wilmington College, marking the fifth and final production of the 1963-64 theatrical season. Tryouts for "Skin of Our Teeth" were held April 13 and 14 at 8:00 p.m. in Thalian Hall. The production is under the direction of Doug W. Swink, chairman of Dramatic Arts at Wilmington College.

"This Pulitzer Prize play is enormously rich in its amusing and serious comments upon modern life. It abounds in deliberate anachronisms, obvious theatricalism, and rapid alterations of moods," stated one critic.

An allegory depicting the story of Mankind, the action of the play revolves around the antics of the Antrobous family, the invention of the wheel, the Ice Age and a world war. Broad comedy intermingled with tragedy culminates in sheer delight and a bit of fright, and the story of civilization unfolds on stage.

Casting is open to the community, as well as college students and Thalian members.

Spring Elections

All nomination slips must be signed by the registrar to be valid; they may be obtained in the main office, the radio station, or from Mike West, chairman of the Board of Elections, and should be returned to any of those places.

All students winning in the May 7 primary except candidates for senatorial seats must present campaign speeches at the assembly on May 14.

Those wishing to run for office who are in doubt concerning their eligibility should contact Mike West.

Following a welcome by Dean Crews, the debaters took part in four rounds held from nine o'clock Saturday morning until four thirty that afternoon; the rounds were conducted in the drama auditorium in Hoggard Hall.

Members of the college faculty judged the debate. Acting as judges were Miss Helena Cheek, Dr. Lloyd Bishop, Richard Stone, Miss Nancy Kendall, Miss Shannon Morton, Douglas Swink, Mrs. Bessie Vallianos, and James Daniel.

Wilmington College students assisting in the debate included Michael Costin, Kenneth Stanley, Steve Coley, Dale Rhodes, Michael Hebron, George Akel, Fredi Crisp, Mirium Koski, Judy Campbell, Ann Hewett, Carol Smith, George Ferger, and Martha Johnston.

The state high school debate championship will be held in Chapel Hill on April 18.

One Man's Opinion

by
Sam Garner

Here we go again! The Opinion apologizes to all of you who possibly read this material. We are sure that all of you felt incomplete because the strip didn't appear last issue. The Wilmington College Chorus went on tour last month and deadlines were not met.

The Festival was a success? The Opinion and friends have decided that Queen Azalea XVII was the most gracious Festival queen since Polly Bergen. That's a statement to make but it is true. The opinions are divided as to the graciousness of the other Festival guests but this may be discussed in a new novel that is soon to appear on the scene. This book will be entitled, "Boredom with Flowers."

Opinion Sidelines

Actually this past week was one of many interesting events: the Top Twelve at Cottage Lane welcomed festival guests; art projects were completed by five faithful students; the College students in the parade didn't fall off the floats, and so on and on.

There is workshop in the wind! The Scriptic Society has made plans for a Saturday of literary exploration to come about in the middle of May. Student support will be appreciated when this comes about.

Tryouts for Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" were Monday and Tuesday. This next Wilmington College Thalian Association play will be one of the highlights of the year's dramatic work by these combined organizations.

A one man show by Patricia Minser opened in Hoggard Hall April 12. This is one showing that the students should take in. Miss Minser's way of expressing herself in her work is one of the most interesting that the Opinion has seen all year. This exhibit should not be missed.

An idea! Someone asked for an idea so here goes. The old changes and makes place for the new? That quotation is not exact but it will serve the purpose. The idea is that many people leave one's surroundings to go to schools of higher education, to go into business, to work or go on part time basis. These people return to the old stomping grounds and isn't it uneventful to be the one person that's still at home? We mean that progress is made in other places of the world so progress is made on the home front. It would indeed be nice for all the old group that leave and come back to realize that although they have been away and you've stayed home you haven't deteriorated. We mean wouldn't it be great for these people to remember when they were in your place? That's a thought anyway.

Wilmington Singing Group Finds Immediate Success

Since January the popularity of a pair of singers, one a student here, has increased with geometrical progression in North Carolina.

The high echoic voice is that of Diane Copeland, Wilmington College student, singing in accompaniment to Mary Adams, a teacher at Roland-Grise School.

Mary and Diane began singing this January and have been out of town singing every weekend since then with the exception of the weekend they sang in the Key Club Follies. They usually play in Chapel Hill at the Village Tempesta; however, they have played at other places including the Greenville Rathskeller and fraternity parties.

Most of their numbers are folk songs and ballads. They've also begun doing their own blues arrangements in Basin Street style. They sing some original songs written by Mary including a child's lullaby and a song with 3/4 timing done to a 4/4 guitar.

Diane and Mary, who carry a rather solid booking, including the Azalea Festival Hootenanny, broke into the business more or less unintentionally. "A lot of people just learn to play the guitar and just leave it there," said Diane. These two have perfected their playing and singing to the point where the have a unique appeal. "We had indirectly planned to go professional," said Diane, "but we were surprised with the tremendous success."

On several occasions while traveling over the state they've run into their nationally known folk singing groups such as Peter, Paul and Mary, the Limeritters, and the Journeyman. When in New Mexico, Mary once sang with Joan Baez.

"Mary has a three octave range," said Diane. "Her voice is similar to Baez but has more quality." Diane usually sings in a highly pitched buoyant and gay voice.

Sanctum, Alwin Nicolais' theatre work on the dilemma of modern man, expressed in terms of motion, shape, color and sound.

Fine Arts Committee To Present "Theatre Of Alwin Nicolais"

By Dorothy Nesbitt

Former Professional Dancer

A meeting of the choreographer, composer, artistic director, ballet master, scenery designer, and costume designer at the Henry Street Playhouse would involve only one man, Alwin Nicolais.

He will be coming to Wilmington College May 14 for a program on the "Theatre of Alwin Nicolais," to be presented in the student services lounge at 8:00 p.m. The program is sponsored by the College Fine Arts Committee with Ray Oxendine as chairman.

World of Motion

Quoting from his article on the World of Motion, Mr. Nicolais believes that the polygamy of motion, shape, color, and sound is the basic art of the theatre. That fundamentally the art of the theatre is one in which the magical panorama of things, sounds, colors, shapes, lights, illusions and events happen before your eyes and to your ears.

In an article on composer-choreographer he writes that it was the unique communicative value of sound and the fascination of its interrelation with motion that originally brought him to dance. The invention of electronic tape brought him the means to relate these two areas.

"Sanctum"

"Sanctum," Mr. Nicolais' latest work, premiered in New York this spring and his company is now touring the west coast. Quoting P. W. Manchester of Dance News: "Alwin Nicolais latest work is magnificent, so sure, so completely developed and presented to the tiniest detail that it becomes an experience at which one ceaselessly marvels. — 'Sanctum' finds him soaring beyond anything that has preceded it in assurance and imaginative flights."

About Sanctum, Walter Terry of the Herald Tribune writes: "See and respond but don't ask for a translation, but if you must identify insanity and conformity are two sanctums of the modern age."

Sanctum is Mr. Nicolais' sixty-third dance work, dating from 1936. He was born in Connecticut and originally trained as a musician, he learned to dance because he was interested in accompanying dance.

Background

He attended the Bennington School of Dance in 1939 and 1940 and studied with the modern greats, Martha Graham, Charles Weidman, Doris Humphry and Hanya Holmes, the latter whom he assisted in teaching.

Sixteen years ago he came to the Henry Street Playhouse to create a comprehensive dance school with an emphasis on creativity. His dance company has developed from this school. The Paper Bag Players, a children's repertory group, is also from the school.

The scope of Mr. Nicolais' imagination seems inexhaustible; a list of his articles is printed below and if you'll check what you find most interesting that will help guide his trend of program and leave the list in the publications room.

Pictures on his works are on display in the radio station and his articles can be obtained by request.

ARTICLES

1. Basic dance and sensory perception.
2. Semantics of dance.
3. New dimensions of dance.
4. Composer-choreographer (method of taping electronic sound).
5. The world of motion.

Freshman Class Plans Variety Show

The Freshman Class will present a Variety Show on May 16 at 8:00 p.m. in the Student Services Building of Wilmington College.

The proceeds will be used for the benefit of Wilmington College.

The Variety Show will present many different numbers. Among the types of entertainment to be featured are folk singing, ballet, acrobatics, and jazz dancing, instrumental numbers including a guitar solo and a flute quintet, classical singing, and a monologue.

Richard Thorne will emcee the show.

Carol Smith is chairman of the show. Working under Miss Smith's direction are Margaret Lassiter, director; Patsy Futch, chairman of the program committee; Camellia White, prop chairman; Tom McLean, chairman of the door committee; and Gwen Culbreth and David Walker, co-chairman of the publicity.

The Freshman Class invites you to support its project for the school.

Sophomore Class Donates Funds To WC Library

The Sophomore class has donated $26.77 from its treasury to the Wilmington College library. The money will be used for the purchase of popular fiction books. The announcement was made by Jack Loftus, president of the Sophomore Class.

After conferring with Dr. William M. Randall, Mr. Loftus informed Seahawk reporters that there was a increasing concern among administration officials over the lack of funds necessary for the purchase of popular fiction material. Most of the money allotted to the college library will be used for academic material required by the various departments.

Dr. Randall stated that the money donated by the Sophomore Class could purchase about ten books.

The money which the Sophomore Class is donating to the library was raised through a series of class projects which included a stationery sale, a party mug sale, and a student-faculty basketball game.

The money was presented to the acting librarian, Mrs. Marguerite Fogleman, by the class in the hope that other classes and organizations here at Wilmington College will follow suit in the drive to further improve and develop our library.

NEW STANCE, NEW LINE . . .

"SAME" MAN

"In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud.
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed."

Those lines by Ernest Henley were some of the favorite of ex-governor Huey Long of Louisiana. Long was an amiable enough fellow to his friends and had a political method that, though cursed by educated people, seems to be rather effective at times in certain quarters.

Just how effective that method can be here in North Carolina will be determined again at the Democratic primary in May. I. Beverly Lake, who has done a bit of wincing and crying aloud about the unfair press coverage and reportage is back on the scene, "bloodied but unbowed." A similarity to the poem is not all he has in common with Long; Lake, too, is a would-be-demagogue. Lake isn't a Louisiana style demagogue with all the bluster and corn, having somewhat more refinement and subtlety than Long; but a demagogue is a demagogue regardless of style—it's the technique that is the determinant factor.

In regard to Lake: he ran his last campaign in 1960 almost solely on the racial issue and was shot down twice. Lake is back this time with a new dragon to protect the people from, segregation not having proved as important to North Carolinians as he had hoped. The new dragon is actually an old one and a much easier one to attack than one containing one-third of the people of the state (the colored population); this go-around Lake has decided to protect us against communism. It's an old shoe and it seems people would weary of wearing it so much—McCarthy having run it absolutely into the ground. But Lake is banking on people having forgotten the rottenness of the McCarthy era, hoping to cash in on a little of the same neurotic sentiment that McCarthy found so advantageous to his political show.

Lake might have possibly been allowed the racial issue that he took last time; but when he comes back now spouting about the danger of communism right at our doorstep (does he really pretend to tell us something we do not already know), he can be seen as nothing but a rabble-rouser after the style of Long, McCarthy, Hitler, and all the others.

What does Lake propose to do that isn't already being done to fight the communists in this state? Does he actually think that communism is a serious threat to North Carolina? Certainly there is no threat of Marxism due to poverty and discontent; Lake has already told us that the North Carolina peace corps is not needed. He fully supported the red-speaker ban. What else would he do, close the universities?

As ridiculous as it might sound, that might be a good idea if Lake is elected governor, since educated people will always oppose anyone advocating the nonsense we hear from Lake. Fortunately, however, Lake's chances of getting elected, despite both the John Birch Society and the Ku Klux Klan, are slim; the citizens of this state recognized him for what he was the first time—it's hardly likely that he'll get by the second time using a trick that was perceived and foiled four years ago.

FREEDOM OF AND FROM RELIGION

By LOUISE AMBROSIANO

Liberty is an abstract, elusive idea and ideal. For all his yearning and clamoring to be free, man has never held the freedom that he thinks he is going to get.

Absolute freedom is an incongruity and an impossibility in the make-up of our civilization. All that can be hoped for is an equilibrium of freedom; a balance of one man's rendering to another the same freedom he allows himself without an infringement on either.

For one man to assume more is to disrupt the balance and give birth to infant tyranny.

An application of this is appropriate to the present uproar over the Supreme Court's decision forbidding public prayer in public schools.

The constitution of the United States grants an equal freedom: the freedom to practice religion or not to practice religion, a freedom equally applicable to all citizens.

Houses of worship are functioning more than adequately under the protection of this provision.

For religious sects to demand the right of public worship in a public school is to disturb this equalized freedom. Now, one holder of a freedom is infringing upon another.

A person of another faith, an agnostic, or an atheist is being intruded upon, discriminated against, and even tyrannized when he is forced to partake, listen or leave.

It should be remembered that the freedom of worship includes the freedom not to and that the provision of the constitution upon which the United States Supreme Court's decision was made states that the United States shall make no law respecting or prohibiting religious practice.

President Proclaims Law Observance Day

By JACK LOFTUS

May 1 of this year was proclaimed by President Johnson as National Law Observance Day. Such a proclamation was made to counter-act the traditional May-Day celebrations throughout the Communist world. The President rightly felt that the law is the cornerstone in the maintenance of Democracy and equal opportunity for all. All Democratic people come under and are equally subject to the law. This is what freedom means; this is what Democracy is. It is this equality and the guarantee of fair treatment before a just yet compassionate legal system that has made the United States the arsenal of Democracy.

It is, therefore, important to note that any encroachment upon or violation of such a legal system is an attack upon free people everywhere who aspire to live under a law that guarantees equal protection. Certain aspects of the law are contested in the courts every day. This is how it should be. Yet in the U.S. today there are those in positions of authority and responsibility who seek to slander, violate, and reject the law.

The Jack Ruby murder trial demonstrates the unprecedented extent to which the law could be slandered. The actions of the defense attorney were disgraceful. He hindered not only his client but gave the entire legal profession a black eye.

The jury tampering trial of James R. Hoffa proved to be yet another slander upon the law. In this case the President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters was found guilty of rigging a jury. As the presiding judge pointed out, the jury is the legal system in America. To seek to corrupt this is to corrupt the law itself.

The law suffers still another form of slander when it is openly violated. This is exemplified in the civil rights demonstrations throughout the country. With this the Negro has betrayed the cause for which he was once fighting. He has taken his grievances out of the court and into the streets. He has let any means justify an idealized end.

The Civil Rights Bill now before the Senate must not pass under duress. It must not pass through a maze of mob rule and civil disobedience. Instead, it must pass because our legal system must adapt itself to a rapidly changing society. The road to such a passage is paved with civil obedience, not civil disobedience. The law offers a kind hand and a helping word to those who follow it, but a swift sword to those who violate it.

There is, however, still another threat to the law equally as dangerous as those who violate it. This is despair, or the very rejection of law as a means of government. On May 2, 1964, in a speech in Chicago, Gov. George Wallace said of the civil rights laws: "I think it just goes to prove that laws don't solve anything." What will solve the civil rights issue other than law? Are we to prepare ourselves for a rapidly changing and demanding society armed with the philosophy that law solves nothing?

It is essential to meet the complexities and demands of this modern world with a sound philosophy. Eighteenth century ideals are seldom able to cope with twentieth century problems. Something more flexible is needed. The law is very much like this. It must be flexible in a structure that can endure change, for this is how equal protection and liberty are insured.

One Man's Opinion

by Sam Garner

"Where have all the flowers gone?" "Spring has sprung!" And I think that's more than enough to describe May. The last month of classes is here! Shall we give three cheers?

It seems that we are in for a big month. Everyone in the arts field at Wilmington College is hard at work to make this last month one that we'll all remember.

The Scriptic Society's annual anthology went on sale on Wednesday, May 6. This anthology contained works of poetry and prose by students of the College. Each year, the Society has as its main goal, this anthology and this year was no exception to the rule. Direction was indeed worth waiting for. The Opinion congratulates the co-editors Jennifer Davis and Jack Loftus. Direction shows a cross-section of student poetry and student art in the Scriptic Society.

An exhibition of student work in the Art Department opens on Sunday, May 17, at 3:00 p.m. in Hoggard Hall. This, the last art show of the season, is entirely by the students in Art. Over sixty students are exhibiting more than two hundred works in this show. Design, Life Drawing, Graphics, Watercolor, and oil painting classes are all represented in this exhibition and it promises to be one of the best shows of the entire season. Claude Howell and all of the art students in design, watercolor, and oil classes and Miss Minser and students in Graphics and Life Drawing started the work on this show late in April and no student at Wilmington College should miss this show. It is truly the best way to end a great season of exhibitions from the Art Department.

Thornton Wilder's The Skin Of Our Teeth will be presented by members of the Wilmington College Theatre and the Thalian Association on the 21, 22, and 23 of May at 8:30 p.m. in Thalian Hall. This is the last production of the season and has many Wilmington College students in the cast.

The College Theatre's productions this year have shown a variety in works, productions, and style. From the quaint villagers of Tobiki, the wild young ladies on the Barbary coast, and the prisoners of war in Germany, the department now moves to the destruction of mankind. This is what the Opinion calls variety!

Settings of the play were designed by the head of the Art Department of the College, Claude F. Howell. Mr. Howell's use of color is evident in the cold setting of the comedy.

The music department has planned a concert on the 26th of this month. This concert will be held at the Greenfield Amphitheatre and will consist of music by the Wilmington College Chorus and band. Compositions by College students Carl Wilson and C. F. McAfee will be featured on the program.

The College Chorus, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, has accomplished a great deal this year. Civic concerts, Christmas programs, H.M.S. Pinafore, and the Spring tour have all been highlights of music at Wilmington College this year.

The last month will be a busy one at the College, it's true. Student support can make or break all of these presentations of the Fine Arts Department; therefore the Opinion would like to urge all members of the student body to attend all of these programs. Make it a point to be there—the future presentations by this department may be determined by your attendance now.

Student Senate Impeaches Five Members

Five members of the Wilmington College Student Senate were impeached for failure in the performance of their duties during a regularly scheduled meeting of the senate Monday night.

Those impeached were: Fredi Crisp, Carl Sneed, Kay Wells, Sherri Lackey, Jimmy Sharpe.

The Vice-President of the Student Body, Hugh Paschal, announced that these senators have been formally charged and will be tried in a closed session of the senate on Monday, May 18.

Under senate rules any senator who misses more than two regularly scheduled meetings is automatically suspended from the senate. However, after an investigation of their attendance record all year, it was discovered that all had missed from five to six meetings.

This could well be one of the most important events concerning student government this year, for it points toward a growing discontent within the senate over those senators who have been lax in the performance of their duty.

The senate has been plagued all year by the faculty attendance of certain senators. There have been three meetings of the senate this quarter, and these impeached senators have failed to attend any. At every regularly scheduled meeting this quarter the senate has found itself waiting for over a half-an-hour for a quorum without which it may not proceed. One time this quarter the senate was forced to adjourn due to a lack in attendance. Even the various standing committees have been suffering in attendance, and their functions have become almost nebulous.

The impeachment of these senators comes at a rather delicate time, for elections are only a week away.

TOMORROW NIGHT AT BROOKS' FIELD

Seahawks To Meet Campbell College Nine

Coach Bill Brooks' Seahawks will be out to notch win number 15 as they go into action against the Camels of Campbell College tomorrow night at 7:45 here at the local field.

In their last outing against the Buies Creek outfit the 'Hawks behind the four-hit pitching of southpaw Eddie Lemon and a Larry Honeycutt home run downed them, 5-0. The previous day the 'Hawks dropped the Newport News Apprentice nine, 7-4, behind a 10-hit attack led by home runs by Tom Cole and Ken Miller.

Road Trip

During the previous week, March 22-25, the Wilmington College team traveled to Pembroke, Newport News, Va., and Portsmouth, Va., where they managed to salvage two of their three contests. Their only loss on the three-game road trip came at the hands of the Pembroke Indians, 3-0. The Seahawk nine dropped the Apprentice team, 6-3, as they capitalized on the Virginia team's miscues. In the final contest razzle-dazzle base-running accounted for a 5-1 margin as the Seahawks defeated Frederick College.

The Seahawk record for the season now stands at 14 victories against 8 losses.

Strong Reserve Forces Provide Depth In Wilmington College Roster

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in the series of player-feature articles in THE SEAHAWK introducing members of the Wilmington College baseball team.

This edition of The Seahawk focuses the player-feature spotlight on a few of the lesser-known members of the 'Hawk line-up as well as those regulars familiar to all the fans.

A strong bench has always been a tradition here at Wilmington College and every year local fans witness the fierce competition for a starting berth on the varsity. Because of these top-notch varsity teams, backed up so ably by reserves, the Seahawks have compiled an enviable record and the reputation of being a crack outfit.

Bennett

Del Bennett, the 6-1, 195-pound freshman pitcher, hails from Asheboro where he compiled an impressive record as a high school athlete. Participating in three sports for the Blue Comets, Del sparked his school to conference honors in both football and baseball. As a gridder his outstanding play helped his team to second place in their conference with a 9-3 won-lost record.

On the baseball diamond Del's talent became even more apparent as his 9-1 pitching record was the major factor in the Blue Comets' capturing the conference in his senior year. His remarkable hurling coupled with a .412 batting average earned him All-Conference recognition in both his junior and senior years. Del boasts an overall pitching record in high school of fifteen victories against only one lone defeat. The big pitcher also played ball for the Asheboro American Legion team, which won second place in the state in 1963 when Del chalked up a 6-1 record and a .300 batting average.

"Happy" and Tommy

Gordon "Happy" Durham, the 5-9, 167-pound native of Charlottesville, Va., also comes to the 'Hawks with outstanding accomplishments in high school. As a varsity tackle and linebacker for the Black Knights of Lane High School, Happy earned recognition as the team's most valuable defensive lineman for his alert, heads-up play.

However, Happy's real ability lay in baseball as proven by his capturing the Most Valuable Player award on the team rated as the tenth best high school baseball team in the nation. As co-captain of the Black Knights he boasted an astounding .500 batting average in addition to his great play behind the plate.

Tommy Hall, also a reserve catcher for the 'Hawks, is likewise a native of Charlottesville, Va., and a graduate of Lane High School. As a football player for the Black Knights for three years Tommy was voted defensive captain and earned best defensive lineman recognition for his efforts on the gridiron.

As co-captain of his baseball team, Tommy's .300 batting average helped the Black Knights to an 8-3 record in 1961. Last year he batted .250 in a reserve role for the Seahawks.

Honeycutt

Larry Honeycutt also boasts an impressive record as a high school athlete. As quarterback for the Raleigh Caps in 1962 he led the team to an 11-0-1 record and the state 4-A Championship. In recognition of this outstanding accomplishment he was voted the school's most athletic senior in 1962.

The 5-10, 185-pound sophomore has also been active in high school and American Legion baseball for the past few years. However, last year as a Seahawk Larry was voted to the All-Tourney team at the NJCAA baseball championship at Grand Junction, Colo. Larry has been a regular for the Seahawks for almost two seasons holding down the right field position against some very stiff competition.

Kalamaras

170-pound reserve infielder, George Kalamaras, the 5-9, 170-pound reserve infielder, comes to Wilmington College from Charleroi, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, where he excelled in three sports. As a halfback on the football team he helped them post an 8-1-1 record and received honorable mention for most athletic honors serving in his capacity as co-captain of the team. As a guard in basketball his 10 points per game scoring helped Charleroi to an 11-3 record as he served as co-captain in this sport also.

But in baseball George really proved his worth. As captain of the Cougars his .368 batting average earned him a position on the first team of the high school all-stars. In American Legion competition he captained the Charleroi Magicians to the 1961 sectional championship.

Lemon

In three years of baseball at NHHS, four years for American Legion Post 10, and one year at Wilmington College, Eddie Lemon has amassed a record to be envied by almost any player. In 1962 he posted a 6-0 record and a .333 batting average in sparking the Wildcats to the state baseball championship and earning a position on the East team in the annual East-West All-Star baseball game. Eddie's overall high school record is an impressive eleven wins against only one loss.

In American Legion play Eddie won eleven games as Post 10 won the State Championship, the Area 2 Championship, and placed fourth in the South among Legion teams. He was named to the All-Star team as the outstanding player on the Post 10 team.

Last year, his first as a Seahawk, Eddie stepped right in and despite an attack of appendicitis won three games while losing one and earned himself a place on the NJCAA All-Tournament Team in Grand Junction, Colo.

Eddie's courage, spirit, and determination have made him one of the most feared and respected hurlers on the Seahawk mound corps. He has also gained renown as an effective bench jockey as he rides opposing players at every opportunity.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL, Sports Editor

The biggest athletic success story of the spring quarter at Wilmington College is unquestionably that of the intramural softball program. Never before has such enthusiasm been displayed by so many would-be ball players than in this program. Though not entirely unexpected the success is nevertheless gratifying and reflects the hard work and dedication of Coach Earl Allen and his staff.

Not only is this year's program the best received ever it is by far the most efficient, best organized, and most effective program of intramural athletics ever offered here at Wilmington College.

Good Attitude

The attitude of all the participants in the program has been likewise rewarding. There has been almost a total while the completion is indeed demanding everyone realizes just what the program is designed for, and tempers cool lack of poor sportsmanship on the part of all concerned and rapidly. For example, when a couple of teams experienced roster troubles earlier in the season the rest were eager to allow them to solve their problems so that they could continue to participate in the seven-team league. Such a spirit of cooperation has been in evidence throughout the season which goes to show that there are still some groups around possessing this rare quality.

Deserve Praise

Coach Allen and his staff as well as all the participants in the intramural softball program certainly deserve all the praise we can muster for the tremendous success of the program.

Next Year

With the added facilities offered by the addition of the new gymnasium on campus next year the outlook for an expanded intramural program is good. In all probability several new sports will be added to the program next year. There is certainly little question as to the addition of basketball to the program. It seems that the only limiting factor in the program will be the interest shown on the part of the students.

As it looks now there will be at least three intramural sports being indulged in next year: football, basketball, and softball. If this year is any indication whatsoever of the reception they will receive next year things could hardly look brighter. It is not difficult to envision at least a dozen teams entered in each sport—a true indication of the value of a good intramural athletic program.

May Queen And Court Presented At May Dance

May was the motif and the name of the dance sponsored by the Dance Committee of the Student Government Association on May 2.

The dominant decoration was a maypole situated in the middle of the room with an ivy covered base and pastel streamers from the maypole to the walls along the ceiling.

A platform along one wall covered with grass and daisies provide the stage for the May Queen. A white, wrought-iron bench served as the May Queen's throne and white lattice-work with ivy as the background completed the setting.

Musical entertainment was offered by the "Sensational Six", and refreshments were served.

The May Queen, Memory Farrar, was presented along with her court. Joanne LeGwin was maid of honor to the queen.

The Junior attendants were Kay Wells and Pat Stiles.

The Sophomore attendants were Sherry Lackey and Fredi Crisp.

Sports Parachuting Club Organizes

Looking for something new and exciting to do? Then maybe you should attend the next meeting of the Sports Parachuting Club.

At present efforts are being made to establish a sports parachuting club on a firm basis for Wilmington College.

Bob Olsen of the Dept. of Social Sciences, who in response to student interest is acting as advisor for the club, said, "Our main problem lies in recruitment of enough members to make a training program worthwhile."

Mr. Olsen, a retired U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel, served with several airborne organizations during the latter part of his military career and is a rated master parachutist with 73 military jumps.

"The only requirements for entrance into this club," Mr. Olsen went on to say, "are time to devote to the training program and a genuine desire to participate in this type of sport. Once training is underway, a student cannot afford to miss a day and then come back to resume training, because this is the sort of thing one must stick with once he starts training."

Mr. Olsen also emphasized that prospective members need not be former members of the armed forces, and that personal expenses will be kept minimal.

Attempts are now being made to obtain equipment on a loan basis from existing parachute clubs.

Captain Jerry White, advisor to Company C, 16th Special Forces of the National Guard here in Wilmington, has offered his assistance to the club in instructing trainees. Captain White has been associated with sport parachuting since 1955. He helped to establish the Fliegerhorst Skydiving Club in Germany and another skydiving club in Fort Campbell, Ky.

Captain White spoke at a recent meeting of the Sport Parachuting Club on the various aspects of the sport and the best methods to use in organizing a club for the sport.

Sergeant Sam Hinson of the Wilmington National Guard, who is also offering his assistance to the club, was also present at the meeting.

John Allen, junior, has composed a draft for the constitution. After approval by the student senate, this constitution will go into effect.

Bob Kermon, freshman, is chairman for the drop zone-equipment committee.

Charles Upchurch, sophomore, is chairman of the membership committee.

In charge of publicity is Archie Alderman, freshman, who has recently designed an emblem for the club.

Bill Mathis has volunteered his services as a pilot. Bill has had experience in flying parachute jumpers before.

George Spivey has been appointed to the training committee.

"The purpose of this club is to train a competitive sport parachute team for Wilmington College that can compete in inter-collegiate competition and to provide opportunity for students to participate in parachuting."

How dangerous is this sport? Mr. Olsen says, "With the high degree of concentration and mental alertness required to undergo training, accidents will be kept at a minimum. It should be safer than motor cycling or sport car racing."

Shaw Lectures on e. e. cummings

By Jennifer Davis

Page Shaw, an instructor in the English department, was the guest speaker at the Scriptic Society meeting Tuesday, April 27.

The subject of Mr. Shaw's lecture was the well known and somewhat controversial poet, the late E. E. Cummings. To begin his discussion, Mr. Shaw gave a brief outline of Cummings' background, his early life, family, education, and literary awards.

He spoke of the poet as being a writer of poems of resolution; Cummings depicts very little conflict of meditation in his writings as he had definitely resolved his opinion of a poem's subject before writing it.

Cummings Work

A majority of Cummings' poems are lyrical, subjectively written, and abundant with imagination. His power of perception makes his description one of his most outstanding points. Mr. Shaw gave several reasons that could possibly explain Cummings' original use of typographical dislocation.

As an experimenter, the poet might have wished to retreat from a dictated form; it might have also been his reaction to the lack of order in a chaotic world, a means of giving visual freshness to poetry, or merely a device by which he received attention. Along with his device of typographical dislocation, Cummings used other techniques such as the coining of words, the shifting of grammatical forms, and the frequent use of the prefix "un."

Love Poems

In his love poems, or better known as his "Whore Poems," Cummings stresses the physical aspect of love. Mr. Shaw accounts this preoccupation with raw sex to a hangover from the brashness of youth.

Another series of poems makes Cummings well known for his acute descriptions of squalid urban scenes. Throughout most of his works the poet reflects a strong vein of humor, which, perhaps, accounts for many of his works lacking in any profound emotion.

Mr. Shaw followed his discussion by reading several pieces of the poet's works. He pointed out that most of the poems lack title, but they are numbered. The program was concluded with a general discussion lead by Mr. Shaw.

Holzer Discloses Theory Of Maco Light

Hans Holzer, ghost hunter, disclosed to the audience at Brodgen Hall, Friday night, May 1, that the Maco Light was indeed the wandering spirit of Joe Baldwin.

According to legend, Joe Baldwin was a conductor on the Wilmington - Manchester - Augusta Railroad in 1887. One night the rear coach on which Baldwin was riding became uncoupled from the rest of the train. His effort to signal to an oncoming passenger train with his lantern was in vain and the crash decapitated Baldwin. Soon after this, a light began to appear along the tracks just east of the Maco station. The light swayed back and forth and then dropped into a swamp where it continued to glow.

It can still be viewed on almost any warm summer night.

The Southeastern North Carolina Beach Association and the Panmathian Society of Wilmington College were the co-sponsors of Holzer's visit here.

Holzer believes that "A ghost is nothing more than the emotionally disturbed spirit of a person who died under some shocking or traumatic condition." "There are two kinds of physical deaths," he added. "First is the normal transition from life to death in which a person's spirit moves on to wherever it is destined."

"The second kind of physical death," he explained further, "is death by accident under some traumatic condition. In some cases where people have died by violence, the emotional spirit has been unable to accept the death and remains at the scene to those final moments to relive the experience over and over again."

This second type of physical death, he believes, is the case of the Maco light.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE ELECTS STUDENT GOVERNMENT OFFICERS

Candidates Vie In Major Election For Positions

Richard Feagin, Roger Fowler, and Kitty O'Brien were recently elected by the student body in a campus wide election as president, vice-president, and secretary, respectively, of the 1964-65 Wilmington College Student Body.

Feagin defeated candidate Jim Price with a margin of almost a hundred votes. Fowler's victory was slim; only eleven votes over Ernest Fulwood.

Elected as president of the Senior Class was Tommy Covil. For the office of vice-president a run-off was held between Jimmy Collier and Hugh Paschal. Secretary of the Senior Class is Mary C. Hodgkin.

Heading the slate of Junior Class officers is Jack Loftus, who previously served as head man in the Sophomore Class this year. His vice-president is student Marshall Collins. Some 12 candidates for the office of secretary will appear on a run-off ballot.

Terry Moore defeated Jimmy Hearne as president of the Sophomore class. Johnny Gore is vice-president of that class, while Camilla White will serve as secretary.

Senior class senators elected are Sara Burgess, Linda Gaskins, Ronnie Staton, Pat Stiles, and Ed Ward.

Senators for the junior class are Ruth Batson, Pat Beasley, Memory Farrar, Sara Jane Fussell, and Susie Herndon.

Gloria Shephard, Carol Smith, Patsy Fuchs, Margaret Lassiter, and Sherry Lackey will serve as Sophomore class Senators.

46.24 per cent of the students were said to have voted in the election, as compared with a low of 43 per cent in the previous election.

Feagin Fills Post Of Student Body President

Dick Feagin has been elected to the position of president of the Student Body for next year on a platform of "more student participation and choosing the editor of the student publication by the students."

Stating his primary objectives for next year, Feagin said that he would work "likewise, also, on the Student Activities Fee; to find and maintain a better line of communications between the students and the Administration as to where the money goes. I think both of these can be done with a little better understanding between the Student Body and the Administration and, I shall attempt to do this."

Student Apathy Solution

Asked about how he would deal with the problem of student apathy, the president-elect replied that he would "appoint a special committee of public relations to work on this." The committee would, besides studying the matter in this college, contact other schools which have faced the problem and see what steps they have taken toward correction. This committee will also contact the various news media to "elevate the college above the idea of being grades 13, 14, 15, and 16."

Speaking on the issue of Student Government control of the money in the Student Activities Fee, Feagin said, "This will be brought up at a joint meeting between the incumbents and myself. I will appoint a committee, and the organizations can present their budgets then to us, and we will present them to the administration." This action will be taken before the close of this school year. "Our ultimate goal is that these funds be handled by the Senate, itself."

Fraternities

In regard to fraternities, Feagin said, "I am in favor of fraternities; however, I think this is not an important issue now . . . it is a little too early until we become, what I call, a 'resident college.'"

"When you have dormitories," he continued, "then you find a place for fraternities. I think it is a little bit premature for it now; there are other things more important at this point."

Answering how he feels on the matter of sanitation and space in the cafeteria, Feagin said, "This is a problem, but I do not think it rests with the cafeteria management. It is a problem of limited space . . . I think that we should be concerned with enlarging the facilities." He mentioned that the cafeteria area proper might be extended back to the double doors.

Student Slobs

Feagin said that there were a few things that could be done by the cafeteria management, however, that the main problem lies with the students. "I am sure that 80% of them don't live like that at home; if they do, they don't belong in college."

"I'm quite concerned about this," Feagin said, "because we will have an influx of more students with the incoming Freshmen next year." Feagin said that the problem required a little more patience on the part of the students; "it is something that is a matter of individual pride. I would ask the students to treat the cafeteria as if they were living at home."

Favor Christmas Dance

Speaking on college dances he said that thus far there were no definite plans. "This is something difficult to plan this far ahead. We will probably follow the same general plan as this year. Only one dance out of the did not come up to expectations," he said, adding that there would be a Christmas dance next year.

The present Administration position is that the Editor of the Seahawk will not be chosen by the students because it involves a scholarship. On this Feagin stated, "I have not gone into it with the direct individuals concerned. I feel that there can be a better arrangement arrived at."

Students Should Choose Editor
"Under the present system the students have nothing to say about the selection of their Editor . . . I think the final approval should be with the Senate."

Feagin said that the matter would have to be worked out with the Administration and "done with mediation."

EDITORIALS:

PRESS OR PROPAGANDA

One of the main planks of the platform of president-elect of the student body, Richard L. (Dick) Feagin is to have the editor of the Seahawk elected by the Student Body.

The idea is undeniably a good one; however, the difficulty and ticklishness of effecting it will be tremendous.

For instance, as it now stands, the Administration will not let the position of editor of the Seahawk be open to a vote by the student body because it involves a scholarship. Whether or not the Administration will or should alter their position on this remains to be seen. Feagin makes the good point that the editor should not be chosen on the basis of the scholarship. However, it is highly doubtful that any person could be found that would accept the editorship if the scholarship were discontinued.

Each year by the time to select a new editor for the newspaper it is pretty well defined who deserves and is qualified best for the job on the basis of past endeavor and experience. Can the students, the majority of them having no intimate contact with the internal structure of the newspaper, judge who this person is?

To this question we answer that they can certainly be no more inadequate or unjust than the Student Affairs Committee who, half-way through their proceedings of selecting an editor for next year, brought in another member who heard the entirety of one side and absolutely nothing of the other.

The main point of issue that we take with Feagin is that he is of the opinion that the newspaper should be used to help further the good opinion of the community for the college.

If the college must have the good opinion of the city of Wilmington, let it publish propaganda and be honest about it. To use the newspaper—which is, as has been constantly reiterated, for the students, not for the community—in such a way is not only grossly unethical, but it threatens the purpose both of the newspaper and of the college.

We are not going to college to produce a good impression downtown; we are going to college in order to learn—learning involves doubting and questioning, and, as we have found out only too well, many of those people in whose eyes Feagin would like to build a good image of the College do not like certain questions, do not tolerate expression of doubt of what they believe.

We are not only opposed to this aspect of Dick Feagin's intentions because we believe them dishonest and patronizing, but also because they will not work: the College would reek in its foundations if the good opinion of all Wilmington—its Birchers, rabid fundamentalists, and Klanners—were gained. No journalist could work under such a condition.

The idea of greater student participation and voice in selecting the editor is a good one; therefore, we voice this strong opposition to this aspect of it because we favor the basic idea as being more democratic, giving the students an opportunity for greater interest in the College and the newspaper, and giving them some initial say as to who they want to be stuck with having to read for a year. This basic goal should not be overshadowed or warped by an unethical opportunist aim.

Feagin seems to possess the determination to carry this idea through. It is no easy task and perhaps an impossible one; the question is whether he will destroy the press and something of the college in the process.

A BIT OF FORTUNE-TELLING— UNSOLICITED, BUT FREELY GIVEN

by Louise Ambrosiano

Wilmington College is a paradox, progressing and regressing.

Academically the college has improved since last year and promises to continue in its growth.

Any building is a major addition to a campus consisting of only three, and next year's students will have two more than this year's. The Physical Education building and the Liberal Arts building will add a little more towards making Wilmington College more of a college, and less of a community educational project promoted by overseers otherwise known as benefactors.

Other things have happened and are happening to nullify this progress, however.

Without the growth of responsible individualism Wilmington College is going to be embalmed in the conservatism it secretes. Professing to be a liberal arts college, Wilmington College seems more like a trade school when a student will state before a committee: "I don't think the average student here cares about Civil Rights." A liberal arts education is supposed to produce an individual of well-rounded interests and concerns with a rational, intelligent attitude toward matters.

The above stated quotation is not an indication that this individual is in a majority here—or even a major minority. Some of the factors of the cause for this regression are obvious; others are not. Anyway, stabbing attacks make no indentation. There is only one effective means of rectification—the development of a student body that will demand the atmosphere necessary to a properly conducive college.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Editor's "Astuteness" Draws Faint Praise

May 18, 1964

To the editor:

It is well to note that the new editor of our newspaper, not yet being old enough to vote, is such an astute student of political science.

Wilmington College should be commended for producing such an authority on politics. Especially one so well versed on Huey Long, Joe McCarthy, and Adolf Hitler. It would seem to the reader that he has so vigorously studied the fore-mentioned that he employs the same muckraking, distorting, and rabble-rousing tactics as his so called political idealists in his editorial of May 8, 1964.

Marchis Childs, syndicated Washington columnist, stated before a recent assembly of journalists that "news stories should be taken with a grain of salt." This could also apply to some editorials.

It is a discredit to an institution of higher learning and an insult to its patrons when they are asked to sit back and accept the demagogic tactics of such a young and brash political idealist. One is entitled to one's political views, but the views and tactics involved should not be forced on an educated populace just because one holds an entrusted position.

Sincerely,

—C. A. Tanner

LETTER TO EDITOR

Role Of Editors

Transcends Paper

Respecting the wishes of unobtrusive destiny, the formulation and immediate and ultimate purpose of the three editors of the Seahawk has been to effect a reality upon a reality notwithstanding the coexistence. The local image of these editors has been one of a composite of projections both individually and collectively of the students. This evidently has given satiety to them and relieved them of the anxiety of searching all existing unconscious. The editors have perfected a fluent and dynamic medium between the ominously threatened framework and its unconscious.

To you, Gene, Mary C., and Louise, the sinew, audacity, acumen of rare soul will be your relentless followers!

College Plans Expansion

Two additions to the Wilmington College campus are forthcoming—a gymnasium, already under construction and expected to be completed by September 1, 1964; and a Liberal Arts Building, the drawings of which are in their final stages.

The general plans of the Liberal Arts Building have been approved and $500,000 has been appropriated for its construction. The Liberal Arts Building will be completed by the fall of 1965.

In November of 1963 the College requested funds for capital development amounting to $5,900,000.

The improvements include an addition to the Library Building with a book capacity of not less than 250,000 volumes and reading space for 1000 students.

Also included on the priority list is a Chemistry-Physics Building.

Additional equipment for four biology laboratories has been requested.

An Educational Building has been planned and is to include ten classrooms with a capacity of 30 students each.

Political Parties Face Election Headaches

By JACK LOFTUS

Every election year seems to bring with it headaches for both political parties, and this year has proven no exception. Both parties are now preparing for the coming national conventions this summer in which each must nominate two candidates and agree upon a unified and sound platform to present to the voters in November. No one can really predict the outcome of these conventions other than Johnson will be the number one man on the Democratic ticket. What each party has going for and against it at this time will certainly become magnified in the weeks to come.

The Republican party is faced with a rather unique problem—a lack of real issues. The two parties are not clashing over the Civil Rights Bill, rather, small factions in each party are thwarting its passage.

The Republicans have not offered anything new concerning the Cuban problem. It is true that Goldwater has made a few trigger-happy suggestions such as sending in the Marines to turn on the water, and Rockefeller has urged that the government give the exiles free reign in the Caribbean. All this is just so much saber-rattling unless something more concrete is devised with concern shown for the consequences.

Viet Nam is another example of Republican lack of unity. Goldwater has urged a more aggressive war by carrying it into North Viet Nam, however the Arizona Senator has not suggested how this might be done. To send the U.S. Army marching all over the Middle East is one thing, but what next? Richard Nixon visited South Viet Nam several months ago, stayed there a few days, conferred with Lodge, and returned home fancying himself an expert on Middle and Far Eastern affairs.

Sen. Goldwater has also attacked the reliability of American missiles, yet this has been a rather baseless charge. It is one thing to urge the further construction of manned bombers, and something altogether different to attack the missile system as unreliable. Secretary of Defense McNamara once suggested that Sen. Goldwater paddle a boat out somewhere in the ocean and see first hand just how inaccurate those missiles were.

These cases are just a few, and they are an indication of a lack of something within the Republican party. The Republicans have failed to coordinate themselves. This should have been done a long time ago by the party leaders, for it is this very thing that has caused the lack of solidarity within the party. The result has been a number of candidates groping blindly for issues. The party has offered nothing constructive to replace what they wish to destroy.

All this does not indicate a bed of roses for the Democrats in November. Their task is to defend many unsound policies. The Middle Eastern problem continues to expand. The administration is faced with defending a war which is unpopular at home and which is costing us billions. Everyone is screaming about Cuba while the government hesitates and fails to come up with anything concrete. Further Civil Rights demonstrations can only hurt the administration. Gov. Wallace has given both the party and the administration a black eye by sewing the seeds of unrest and disorder which any enemy is quick to seize on. Choosing a vice-presidential candidate will be no easy task, for the Kennedy machine is still a power to be reckoned with.

Alwin Nicolais Lectures On Dance And Motion

"To dance one must be a neuro-physiological creature aware of happenings. It involves the basic simple factor of motion. What kind of motion? That which is self-contained and satisfied, which has no aim beyond itself."

The above quotation is that of Alwin Nicolais who defined the meaning of dance and motion to an audience in the Pub May 14. Nicolais, director of the Henry Street Playhouse in New York and a genius in dance choreography and sound, constituted the final Fine Arts program of the year.

Nicolais stressed that not the end in mind, but the quality of the motion employed is the important thing in any act.

Distinguishing the difference between motion and movement, he said: "Motion is the detail, the quality with which a movement takes place. Movement is a gross act looking to the ends. Motion is sensing the quality of the being in action."

"When you have a sensing of motion you are sensing a physical passing of yourself through time and space all that it implies. When you sense this you put yourself in a magical kinship with all the laws and aspects of life; you sense yourself living in the universe, in time and space."

Speaking on the origin of dancing, Nicolais said, "Primitive man felt this universal ecstasy of feeling time course through his being, life in his body and the living forces—attaching himself to the deepest mysteries when dancing. He had a psyche and could reflect upon this act and felt that in dance he had hit upon a magical power.

Primitive man and the Indians today "dance for rain because of the feeling of making contact with the elements of life. Shortly thereafter man discovered a similar magic in colors and sound. If he had a need for anything, he didn't think whether it should be ballet, avant garde or so forth; he used all the magic at his command."

The advent of the specialized dancer brought a change in dancing; no longer was the dancer concerned so much with being aware of the dynamics of universal forces" so much as with he felt he gave the auditors of his dance the illusion he was feeling." The specialized dancer "performs the illusion of the sensation."

A dancer must be whole psychologically as well as physically. Nicolais explained that since the body is his medium, whenever he has any psychological disturbance or worry it comes out in him physically. "The practice of any art is the practice of sanity."

Students who must come to Summer Session to restore eligibility will be notified by letter on or before June 8.

If anyone is in doubt about their standing please see Dean Crews.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Student Favors Fraternity System Describes Their Nature, Purpose, Reason

For those of us who have belonged to the American Fraternity System, Miss Ambrosiano's editorial, "Joe College Goes Greek" needs no answer. It is immediately recognized as an unfounded and unqualified person. So it is not the purpose of my writing to debate the accusations and unwarranted ridicule she directs at the fraternity system, but rather to try and present the true picture and purpose of the fraternity for those who know little about it and may be interested in its formation on our campus.

I would make this comment however, assuming Miss Ambrosiano to be a girl she has never belonged to a fraternity. Assuming she has never attended another school she hasn't seen fraternity life first hand, and assuming she isn't in our local sorority she hasn't experienced the greek life of the ladies. With these assumptions in mind, I feel it is plain to see that her lack of knowledge and qualifications in this matter stick out like a sore head.

Why Frats

The subject I want to devote the balance of this letter to is "Why Fraternities" in hope that it will help some to have a better understanding of fraternities—why they are established and what they do.

Fraternities are, by their nature, different social institutions and represent democracy in one of its best forms. We are proud of the freedom which we have and through which our institutions are able to teach. But there are those outside the fraternity system who would regiment the fraternity into the type of organization which they consider proper. Where is democracy and education process in such an instance? The fraternity is more democratic than any college or university ever claimed to be. It is composed of members, who through their own volition, seek membership, meet standards, and are unanimously accepted. They are accepted into a group which governs itself with rules and regulations established by the members for their mutual benefit. Every member has an equal voice in the government of the fraternity. And this government is democracy, in the finest sense of the word, in action. Even on the national level the national fraternity is governed by regulations which its student members establish. Fraternities then are established on the foundation of freedom and democratic government. Freedom to have selective membership and ideals, democracy to insure the best interest of all involved.

Purpose of College

Colleges are designed to train the mind. And while this takes place the students must develop socially, physically, morally, and spiritually. The college curriculum leaves a vacuum and it must be filled. Especially is this true at Wilmington College where you only see your friends for a few hours a day in class and a few minutes in the Pub. Can the growth and experience necessary to develop properly in the above areas take place in a class room or over a bridge table?

Students away from home for the first time and possibly experiencing academic difficulty need understanding, help, and a sense of belonging. There is in the average student a real longing to be understood. Each of us is aware that we have faults, but we each feel that below and within there is a self that is very worthwhile, one that if people would trouble themselves to look for we would have more friends, a happier life, and easier time making adjustments. How many members of a student body do this?

Conformity

Fraternities seek members on the basis of their inner self every day. To do this is not an easy task for the shrouds of conformity, born even before registration must be torn away. Take for example the general populace of any college. Look at the clothes—Bass Weejuns, London Fog, Gant, Gold Cups (or none at all), etc. Look at similarity in use of expressions and social habits. Where does conformity end in the college? It doesn't because to belong and find identity with a large unorganized group with no set ideals or values means to do so by outward physical measures. In other words there must be constrictions or expansion of the self to belong.

The Fraternity man wants more than this for himself. He wants the intimate companionship of certain of his fellowmen with whom he has ideas and ideals in common, who show similar tastes, standards, and aspirations. He cannot have a deep and meaningful friendship with ten thousand students. He wants the intimate and personal friendship of a group with whom he fits naturally, one in which he can be himself and be accepted. Fraternity men have never had to constrict themselves to belong and they will never have to. This stresses the most important ingredient of the fraternity—mutuality. Man has the inalienable right to select his friends and there can be no intimate friendship where it is not completely mutual. So too, the fraternity has the right to continue its existence by selecting future members as it desires.

This selection is a demonstration of taste and not superiority. Failure to qualify for membership in a certain fraternity does not spell doom for the individual. In fact, the process of learning to qualify for some groups and not for others while in school is an important part of education and preparation for life to come in the society we live in.

Social Need

Fraternities then have not been foisted upon our schools but have evolved to satisfy a social need. The primary purpose of a fraternity chapter then is to satisfy the yearning for intimate friendship from among the student body by bonding friends together in a chapter and subscribing to certain ideals and standards. The primary purpose of the national fraternity is to bring into its membership compatible men who can live together in a local chapter or any other chapter in the United States and can be accepted immediately in any one as having measured up to certain standards. I had a personal experience which meant a great deal to me and illustrates this well. I transferred from N. C. State to U. N. C. At this time when I could have certainly used some help and friendship, no administrator came to help me, no student group came to help me, no student came to help me, but my fraternity did! I was accepted immediately, made to feel welcome, and treated as a friend. This took place because we all had accepted our fraternity and what is stands for and it had accepted us. This you might call the sort of "instant friendship" Miss Ambrosiano refers to in her article. Together with school spirit and brotherhood it forms the "ear pleasing reasons for fraternity establishment. What's wrong with any one of the three? I don't see them individually or collectively running rampant on the W. C. campus.

Discipline

Besides providing an intimate face to face association in a small sustained and sustaining social group the fraternity provides a disciplined association. Membership involves the acceptance of obligations and ideals. In a fraternity one is assigned or accepts a role. Social scientists say the acceptance of a role is a chief determinant in the shaping of character. It is the fraternity's obligation to cultivate and communicate the highest ideals of the American college and university and of the liberally educated gentlemen. It is within the bulwarks of these ideals that the members role should be

LETTER TO EDITOR

Student Defends I. Beverly Lake

May 19, 1964

In reference to the editorial in the May 8, 1964, issue of The Seahawk, entitled, "New Stance, New Line . . . 'Same' Man", it appears that the writer feels that his intellectual oats are pretty tall. For one with only two years of college and still too young to vote, the evaluation of a man like Dr. I. Beverly Lake on superficial evidence is pretty noticeable and especially so since the criticism is of a destructive nature.

Does the writer know that Dr. Lake holds a Doctor's Degree from Harvard University, and that he was teaching Law in a long-established and highly reputable four-year college (namely Wake Forest) before he (the writer) was born? Does he know that Dr. Lake has been a visiting professor at both Duke University and the University of Florida? Does he know that Dr. Lake has argued, and won, a number of cases before the United States Supreme Court? Does he know that Dr. Lake was Assistant Attorney General for North Carolina for four years? and that he has filled many other important positions, including Sunday school teacher for forty years?

Editorially speaking, the writer may or may not have the privilege of belittling Dr. Lake. But to do so, he can only presume that he cuts a wide literary swathe. There are those who disagree with him, which fact was borne out by the long list of people with Doctor's Degrees and others who have endorsed Dr. Lake for the Governorship of North Carolina.

Sincerely,

—Joanne LeGwin

EDITORIALS:

INDIVIDUALISM CHARACTERIZES STATON

As a president of the student body, it is difficult to judge Ronnie Staton's performance. Being the first president under an entirely different setup and constitution, he stands in a position incomparable with that of any past president of Wilmington College's student body. Doubtlessly Staton is unlike his predecessor, everybody's hand-shaking "buddy", Nat Bost, who was, however, notoriously ambiguous in a tight spot.

Last spring Staton went into office and cries of "clique rule," supported behind the scenes by the powerful influence of Bost and what was referred to as the clique. In office, however, he has shown the same lack of concern for clique and public opinion which he demonstrated in the famous Staton-Mason debates which enraged his colleagues. As a Senator last year, he was head of the committee which drew up the new constitution, and he almost wrote this entire work single-handedly which, when presented to the students, brought down the wrath of the gods, and a new committee had to be drawn up.

Several times during this year Staton has stood before a group of people and told them without any hesitation of placation that they were not doing their jobs. His criticism in such instances has come immediately and with little regard for personal political repercussions; many of his moves have come suddenly and at the surprise of other members of the Student Government. Nevertheless and paradoxically, this strongly individualistic president appears to have constantly been one of the most popular with the students.

Staton has seldom been willing to concede an inch when he thought someone was in the wrong or being a bit sloppy about their procedure. This has occasionally marked him not only as an individual, but as a loner in many ventures.

At times the Senate, itself, has looked upon Staton as being a renegade. During January when the Senate investigation to find out why the students were so indifferent to extra-curricular functions reached a crises and members of the Senate were clamoring for an assembly of the entire Student Body, Staton was practically dragged into the Senate and put to an impromptu trial.

What was to have been a meeting of interests and ideas between the Senate and the students resulting first in a head-on clash between the Senate and Staton due to the lack of diplomacy which the Senate's anxiousness produced. Staton came out unscathed and on top when the Senate's "legislative mandate" to order him to carry out their wishes fizzled. The incident left the realization not only that the office of the presidency is somewhat isolated from the Senate, but that the person in that office can, himself, retain an individuality and aloofness from their embroilments.

Staton has shown himself at considerably less Senate meetings this year than he did last year as a senator. When he appeared it was usually to make a brief statement or address and then take a back seat for the rest of the meeting. Sitting in the rear of the Senate, sometimes vestiges of his inclination to aggravate the Senators' inadequacy and ignorance concerning themselves, their positions, and their procedure would appear, and he would, grinning, correct them on a point of rule.

What Staton has accomplished has been done quietly; but the big nemesis, apathy in the students and Senators, continues to plague the College. The cure for this will probably be a president and a few other people who are little short of spectacular. Unless it is remedied the Student Government will soon be no more powerful than that of a high school—if it is not already in such a position.

The Senate has had a breather this year without the direct presence of naggers to keep them on the ball (Jack Loftus, Tim Chappell, and a few others have sometimes proved exceptions to this). Last year this newspaper criticized Staton and a couple of others of his breed for kicking the Senate too cruelly when it didn't move. As one political candidate said last week, it's getting to be now or never. Staton will have a Senate seat again next year, and we think it is more than fair to throw this live-wire and headache to Senators who neither know the rules nor care to learn them back into their midst.

THIS IS IT

This is the final issue of the paper.

We wish to thank, among those who have helped us during the year, Dr. Randall and Dr. Hall for a bit of sane advice when the going was rough; Mr. Lupton, our advisor, for intercepting the dickens for us when we brought it on; Mr. Hicks and the fellows at Carolina Printing for stretching our deadlines; and Mike West, our expert in the Senate, who also mediates our quarrels with the students.

Seahawks To Battle UNC Monday Night

The Wilmington College Seahawks boasting an 18-9 record for their first venture into the ranks of the four year schools will take on the best team in the state Monday night in Durham's Bull Stadium when they will play the University of North Carolina.

UNC's baseball team behind the masterful pitching of former Seahawk Bill Haywood has compiled an impressive 23-5 won-lost record on its way toward capturing the coveted Atlantic Coast Conference crown.

Seahawks Fresh
Fresh from their victory over the Devil Dogs of Camp Lejeune last Wednesday night the 'Hawks will be out to add another scalp to their string of victories. The game against UNC will be the second contest this season for the Seahawks against an Atlantic Coast Conference team. They played an exhibition game earlier in the year against Wake Forest College losing by only one run to the ACC's second place team.

There is also a slight possibility that the 'Hawks will play a contest against the Pirates of East Carolina College this week-end. Both UNC and ECC are destined to play in the NCAA regional playoffs to be held next week. The Pirates received an "at-large" invitation to the proceedings by virtue of their outstanding season.

Player Feature Spotlights Seahawk Pitching, Power

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in the series of the player-feature articles in THE SEAHAWK introducing members of the Wilmington College baseball team.

This edition of The Seahawk focuses the player-feature spotlight on a few members of the 'Hawk pitching corps and overlaps to pick up a player whose performance this season has come as a pleasant surprise to Wilmington College fans.

A strong mound staff has always been a tradition here at Wilmington College. This year's team is no exception. Following in the footsteps of Bill Haywood and Lou Howard, former 'Hawk stars who have distinguished in ACC ranks, Seahawk hurlers this year have compiled an enviable list of accomplishments. Backed up by power hitting from the rest of the squad the pitchers have enabled the team to compile its 17-9 record against some rough competition.

Darden

Sophomore pitcher Herb Darden like several other Seahawks is a New Hanover High School alumnus where he played on the Wildcat baseball squad for three years. Herb's masterful pitching and timely hitting helped spark the 1962 Wildcats to the State 4-A baseball championship.

Not only did Herb shine in high school; he was also a star for the American Legion Post 10 team which won the North Carolina and Eastern Area Two Championships and placed fourth in the South among Legion teams.

Johnson

Vic Johnson at 23 has the dubious distinction of being the oldest player on the Seahawk roster. But by virtue of his age the big six-foot pitcher has been around baseball circles for quite a while picking up valuable experience which he brings to the Seahawks.

As a high school hurler in Irvington, N. Y., Vic helped his squad to an 8-6 record before graduating in 1958. Once out of high school he joined the Marines and the Camp Lejeune team. Plagued by a sore arm he saw little action for the Devil Dogs but did participate in the 1963 Pan-American Games as a Marine pitcher. As a Seahawk hurler Vic boasts a 2-1 won-lost record and a 2.50 earned run average for 30 2/3 innings' work.

Miller

Ken Miller comes to the Seahawks from Chatham, Va., by way of Louisburg College where he played last year. The 6-2, 182 pound sophomore has played just about every position on the field in his baseball career. In addition he was also a basketball standout for the Chatham Blue Demons winning All County and All Tournament honors for his performance in the Pennsylvania County Playoffs. Ken's 14.2 points per game scoring average led his team to the regionals in the Virginia State Basketball Tournament in 1961.

Ken was also a teammate of Wray Ware and Tommy Cole on the Danville Connie Mack team which won the Virginia Championship, the Southeastern Regional Championship, and placed third in the nation among Connie Mack teams in the 1962 Connie Mack World Series. Ken's .350 batting average helped put them there.

Smith

L. D. Smith comes from a long line of fine baseball players who have made names for themselves in North Carolina. At 19 the big pitcher from Topail seems destined to make his mark with the Seahawks. In four years with the Topsail Pirates L. D. led both the baseball and basketball teams to conference championships. As a cager his 18.5 points per game earned him all-conference recognition for two straight years.

As a pitcher L. D. boasts an equally impressive record. In four years and four championships with the Pirates he also captured Most Valuable Player honors twice. His best year came in 1963 with a 9-1 mark. Over his high school career L. D. posted a 25-6 record.

L. D. was also a member of the great 1962 Post 10 team which won so many honors. He holds a 7-3 mark in two years of American Legion competition.

Whitfield

With four wins against no losses this season Doyle "Dee" Whitfield has the distinction of being the winningest pitcher on the Seahawk squad. Despite having trouble with a sore arm earlier in the season the 19 year old Mt. Olive freshman has given up only 15 earned runs in 31 innings for a 3.77 earned run average.

Dee's success should come as no real surprise to those familiar with his background. As a high school quarterback he led the Mt. Olive Panthers to a 10-2 record and the state playoffs while earning all-conference honors for two seasons. In four years of baseball for the Panthers Dee's 34-5 pitching record and .348 batting average helped spark Mt. Olive to three conference titles and the state semifinals while earning him MVP recognition.

As a member of Goldsboro's American Legion baseball team Dee's 4-2 record and 1.17 ERA helped the team to the state finals where he lost to an outstanding Greensboro outfit.

SEAHAWK ATHLETIC PROGRAM REACHES NEW HEIGHTS

By HUGH PASCHAL, Sports Editor

It seems that each year about late May a certain uneasy sentimentality and vague sense of nostalgia settles over a select group of the population known as students. The most significant result of this phenomenon is an almost uncontrollable desire to reminisce. We must admit that we too have fallen victim to this strange but off-delightful malady.

Good Year

Yes, it has been a good year. In its interim year between junior college and senior college status Wilmington College has indeed shown that it is ready in every way to accept the duties and responsibilities incumbent upon a four-year institution. The college took on an air of maturity in the past year that it never quite possessed before. A deeper interest and desire to participate in the affairs of the school was displayed by an aroused student body. Under the leadership of the student and administrative officers Wilmington College moved into its own.

Athletic Picture

The college, already established as a powerhouse in junior college athletics, stepped into the ranks of the larger schools with zest and fervor and, incidentally, compiled rewarding records in its initial year of four-year competition. There were, of course, no post season junkets to compete in NJCAA competition because the Seahawks are no longer affiliated with the NJCAA. Instead they are looking forward to entry into the NAIA as soon as possible.

Basketball

Seahawk cagers played without the aid of Gene Bogash, the big All-American who has gone on to greater heights as one of the stars of the Drake University outfit of the tough Missouri Valley Conference. Nevertheless, employing the services of former Hawk cagers, Larry Edens and Al Thiry, as well as those of last year's excellent team Coach Brooks' charges tallied a 13-8 mark against some rough opposition.

Baseball

The always-powerful Seahawk nine has proved to be so once again this season as they have posted a 17-9 record thus far this season in action against some of the best of the four-year competition. The Hawk mound corps has carried the brunt of the burden for most of the season but the sluggers seem to be coming into their own after what proved to be a chilly spring. Heavy jackets made it hard to swing those bats with power and its hard to hold on to anything when your hands feel numb with cold.

Intramurals

Coach Earl Allen and his staff of officials have done a marvelous job this year in formulating the most successful intramural program ever conducted at Wilmington College. A great deal of credit must also go to the faculty and student body whose interest and enjoyment made the program worthwhile. Varsity Report looks forward to an even better program next year with the addition of the soon-to-be-completed gymnasium on campus.

Outlook for the Future

Athletically as well as otherwise the 1963-1964 term has been a success. And, as this year has been successful so next year promises to be even more so. As Wilmington College tacks on its fourth year the experiences gathered in the past will doubtless prove invaluable and will enable the school to broaden its horizons in many ways. The competition will get even rougher, but with our experience we will be better equipped to meet the challenge.

Feagin Promises Change

is done only with the scholarship in mind, then I'm in favor of relinquishing the scholarship so that he may be chosen by the Student Body. I don't think the scholarship should be a determining factor."

Editorial Policy

Asked about the editorial policy of the Seahawk, Feagin said, "I think there are limitations to what the editor writes within the editorial column." Feagin said that the Editor should stay "within the mores, conventions, and standards set by the students and society."

"It is time that we begin to solidify our communications with the community. . . . We must improve our image with the community . . . or it will continue to worsen. The Editor should keep this in mind and work to improve conditions rather than aggravate conditions."

On the Student Government, the new President of the Student Body said that the government has this year "overall done a pretty good job. I think there have been times when they've been bogged down and a few meetings have been unproductive. Basically, however, they have done a good job."

"I hope the Senate, themselves, will indicate ideas and not wait for someone else to prevent them." He said that the President and Vice-President should "give a little more lead-way to motivate them and produce a little better potential."

Experienced Past

Richard Feagin began working in student politics in high school where he was president of his Junior Class and a Senator. When in Florida, he worked in both state and national politics.

When he attended Wilmington College in 1956, Feagin was on several Student Government committees, including the publications committee. He was Sports Editor of both the Fledgling and the Seahawk; during the latter part of the year he served as Assistant Editor of the newspaper.

Feagin, who "spent nine years in the business world," said his "experience of belonging to the Toastmasters Club has helped immensely. I feel," he continued, "that a lot of the public relations work which I have done will help immensely in working with the Administration."

"I think we can create a better image of Wilmington College and have just a little more pride in our school."

"The doors, to so speak, of my office are always open for suggestions," Feagin said, "and I'm never too busy for any organization, if they have a plan or suggestion, to meet with them."

The five featured Hawk baseballers have given a big contribution this year to the impressive Wilmington College record.

formed. The fraternity provides an inclusive association in a widely extended national body. This serves as a corrective of the narrow localism and provincialism that too often are a part of independent fraternal organizations. The fraternity provides the unquestionable right to disagree and propound personal philosophy. If he is dissatisfied with any part of the fraternity life he has the right to work from within to bring about change. If this fails he has the ultimate right to resign and form a fraternity which favors his views.

Strives to Meet Needs

The survival of the fraternity system is reflected by the thinking of the students who over the years have seen that it fulfills a definite need. National fraternities must continue to strive to meet these needs or else perish. There need be no pressure from outside. The student members themselves are in the drivers seat. Too many administration regulations can be like pruning the branches rather than feeding nourishment to the roots.

Final proof of the pudding is in the pie itself. Compare a proportionate amount of fraternity men with a proportionate number of non-fraternity men for scholastic average, for campus leaders, for beneficial projects that help the community, for school spirit, and any other, and you will find the fraternity placing first in every category.

Leaders

After graduation, fraternity men are leaders again. Let me give you a few examples from my own fraternity. I do mean a few because to list all that deserve mention would fill a small book. One of our founders in 1968, William Alexander, was secretary of the Equitable Life Insurance Company and was in their service for 65 years. In the ministry are Howerton, Wells, and Brown who have held the highest honor in their church as Moderator of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. In education — Harmon, president of Drake University; Pomfret, president of William and Mary; Talley, chancellor of Syracuse University. In law and government are: Senator Underwood, A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Wayne Morris, Willis Robertson, and John Sparkman.

Governors are Blackmon, South Carolina; Clements, Kentucky; and Meadows, West Virginia. As previously stated, these are but a few of the many whose work has touched every field of endeavor.

Education then is more than the mere cultivation of the mind. The college and the fraternity system working together can help provide the opportunity of educating the whole self — the intellect, the emotions, and the will, together with the values and appreciations that give meaning to one's life. It is with this spirit of co-operation that fraternities are established, to promote friendship on a firmer and more lasting basis.

Teachers Leave For Ph.D.'s

Four members of the faculty of Wilmington College will be leaving after Spring Quarter this year. Four others have received leaves of absence for one year in order to return to school.

Miss Carolyn Murray is to be married on June 16 in Durham to Marshall Happer, a Raleigh lawyer. They will live in Raleigh, where Miss Murray will teach.

Miss Ethel Murray will retire after this year.

Page Shaw will be teaching next year at East Carolina College.

Richard Stone is going to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to begin work on a doctorate degree in American History.

On leave of absence for a year are Thomas Gay, Carl Gay, Fred Toney, and Calvin Doss.

Thomas Gay will be enrolled in the graduate department of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Virginia to obtain both his M.A. and Ph.D. in American History.

Carl Gay will attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for the summer, fall and spring semesters, to work on his Ph.D. in European History.

Fred Toney will be attending Duke University next year for work on his Ph.D.

Sam L. Garner Plays Summer Stock

"I've always wanted to go to summer stock but I never thought I could." Last year an opportunity presented itself which enabled Sam Garner to get his wish.

It was in the Theatre Arts Magazine that Sam first became aware of the existence of the State Theatre of North Carolina, The Flatrock Playhouse in Flatrock, North Carolina.

His hopes soaring, Sam sent a resume of his theatre experience to the playhouse. After Robroy Farquhar, director of the company, sent him reply, Garner mailed to him three letters of recommendation, an application, and an eight by ten picture. Three days later Garner received a technical scholarship for $325.00 which covered room and board.

June 14 found him on his way to his "promised land", which consisted of the playhouse, a red barn-like structure, an old mansion-type dormitory, the director's home and a house for the female professionals.

As a first-year apprentice Sam's duties were varied and plentiful. In the daytime they included building sets, parking cars, ushering, sweeping the theatre, and cleaning the grounds. At night he might work the lights or sound for the show, run props, manage the house, or park and usher some more. If there happened to be any vestige of time left after that, there was always some costuming or substitute teaching of creative dramatics for children.

Each apprentice is guaranteed one part for the season. Sam had the part of John (the butler) in The Man Who Came to Dinner. He was production coordinator for the musical, The Fantastics, and played the part of Uncle Joe in the United States premiere of the British comedy, The Amorous Prawn.

At the end of the summer two scholarships were awarded. Sam was given a full scholarship to come back this year and was voted the "most outstanding male apprentice."

Although he is not certain of what his jobs will be this year, Sam is optimistically and happily leaving on June 4th for another summer's experience of summer stock.

One Man's Opinion

by Sam Garner

This was the year that was. This was the year that we found out how "B.M.F." works! This was the year of the I. Beverly Grape jokes! This was the year of the Elephant jokes!

This was the year of the new constitution . . . the Senate will probably take another year to recover.

This was the year of "flies in the pies." This was the year of the "free press."

Unlike the television show of the same name, the Wilmington College "this was the year that was" really works.

And in the department of Fine Arts, the year has been one of special activity.

The department of Dramatics has presented four very interesting and different plays: Teahouse of the August Moon, Strange Bedfellows, Stalag 17, and The Skin of Our Teeth. Mr. Swink and members of the department are to receive final congratulations from this columnist. The shows were presented in an historic theatre, Thalian Hall, and Wilmington College students were able to see these shows by using their activity cards. The Opinion is that the department will have a hard time topping next year what they did this year. This was the year that was. . .

The Art department of the college has presented a wide variety of shows for the public. This year saw the beautiful showing of the Highland Crafts Exhibition; the Lower Cape Fear exhibition; the different style of the Osolniks; the Minser one man show; Mechanical Banks; and many others. Surely, students have viewed a contrast in painting, graphics, drawings, & crafts. Recognition for a job well done to Claude Howell and Miss Minser. This was the year that was. . .

The Music department and the work of Loyd Hudson and Frank Honey was clearly evident in the performances by the Chorus this year. They both should be congratulated for the work done in the right direction. H.M.S. Pinafore was really the highlight of the year in the music department. The Spring tour, Christmas concerts, the Top Twelve performances of original music, all of these events went into the making of a good year in Music. This was the year that was. . .

W.I.L.C. had its usual ups and downs but the year ended up as one that should be noted. Our radio station went on the air for the first time, and now students may hear it within a block of the college. Station Manager Hugh Paschal and his staff receive the Opinion tip of the old ad battered hamburge for a job well done. This was the year that was. . .

This school year was many things to many people. To each of you it had its own special memories. It was a good year, an interesting year, and a year filled with variety.

A profound statement was made by a friend in Indiana: "After all, you can't expect next year to be like this one!" This is true. We can only wait for the time to come and later look back on it. We'll see you next time.

Bonfire Highlights First B.S.U. Meeting

A new year began for the Baptist Student Union when the club met at the First Baptist beach cottage at Wrightsville Beach. A typical southern meal of ham, peas and candied yams was served to all. Following the dinner, President Sara Fussell welcomed everyone to the meeting.

Students from various Baptist churches in Wilmington told about worship opportunities for out-of-town students and invited them to find a church away from home.

Sara then announced that the State B.S.U. Convention will be held at High Point, November 6-8, and added that a goal had been set for at least 12 students to attend from Wilmington College.

The other officers were introduced: Vice president, Fred Jacobs; recording secretary, Glenda Lennon; corresponding secretary, Sue Duff; publicity chairman, Carol Merki; citizenship chairman, Ethrage Warters.

The B.S.U. Advisor, Adrian Hurst, also added a few words of welcome.

The highlight of the evening was the bonfire on the beach. This gathering around the fire enabled members to get better acquainted. Fellowship singing was led by Sarah Gay Simerson, Educational Director of Temple Baptist Church.

Membership is still open to all interested students.

College Students And Thalias Pratice For "Hotel Paradiso"

Nineteen college students and Thalias have been cast for the Wilmington College—Thalian Association production "Hotel Paradiso," to be presented November 13, 14, and 15 in halian Hall at 8:30 p.m.

"Hotel Paradiso," a farce-comedy, marks the beginning of the 1964-65 theatre season and will be directed by Doug W. Swink, head of the Department of Dramatic Arts.

Cast members are Sam Garner, Eleanor Howland, Sally Rea, Ronald Lee, Robert illey, Rosemary Green, Wally Warr, Billy Bullard and Bill Weir. Other members are Cori Collins, Glenda Hayes, Gayle Foyles, Diana Smith, Wesley Ward, Bill Wahlgreen, Marie Register, James Tabb, William Lloyd and Allen Mangum.

Stage managers for the production are Sandy Carr and Mary C. Hodgins. Anne McCrary is prompter. Make-up will be done by Carole Benton, Linda Kelly, Carol Cecil and Sharon Scott. In charge of programs will be LaVerne Will. Hoyle Foster will head the lighting and Jack Lane, poster design. Sound will be engineered by Jay Howard.

This "mad French bedroom farce" finds an assortment of refined people stealing through the halls and rooms of a cheap hotel comically intent on assignments. There is the hero, the henpecked husband, who arrives in disguise with his friend's wife; a tottering octogenarian and a chorus girl; a stiff youth on his first flight with a housemaid; a housing inspector investigating ghosts; a nose bellboy who impales the hero with a brace and bit as he bores through the wall for a peek.

Admission will be by student activity card.

This farce, acted to the hilt on Broadway by a cast headed by Bert Lahr, was hailed unanimously by the New York critics.

College Honors Gov. Sanford

Wilmington College officials honored Governor Terry Sanford in a resolution passed unanimously by the board of trustees at a recent board meeting.

The resolution which has been mailed to Gov. Sanford reads in part:

"The Board of Trustees expresses to Gov. Sanford on behalf of itself, the members of the faculty and administration, the students and the community served by the college, hearty appreciation and gratitude for the many and various thoughtful acts performed both directly and indirectly by him which have resulted in the furtherance of the aims and objectives of the college.

"Realizing that the acts constitute only a part to the great service to education accomplished under his administration, the board further most sincerely compliments the Governor for his forethought and wisdom in appointing the Governors Commission on Education Beyond the High School, and upon his forthright support of the recommendations of this Commission, which actions have resulted in strengthening and improving the entire system of higher education in North Carolina and in giving to the youth of the State new and valuable opportunities for richer and fuller lives through learning at all levels."

Freshman Orientation Reveals College Life

Freshman Orientation was held September 22-23, headed by Ernest Fullwood as chairman. Members who assisted Fullwood in inducting the freshmen were Elaine Blackmon, Sandy Carr, Nancy Craig, Bill Weir, Fay Lewis, Ronnie Station, Ray Fralley, Sylvia Turnage, Mary C. Hodgins, Jan Darby, Pat Little, Jane Cherry, Carol Ward, Jimmy Hall and Jim Smith, Eddie Wilson, Eddie my Hearn.

C2H5 OH FORMULA FOR DISASTER

It is not unusual to drink. It is more unusual not to drink. Universities and colleges have more drinking students than do high-schools, for the college student is older, he is no longer living under his parent's jurisdiction but is off on his own and is thrown together with other individuals who drink. All three factors seem to influence the student to drink. But how many college students realize the funds his parents have invested in him, and the dangers he places his education in when he is too drunk to attend classes the next morning, or in the long run because he was out drinking too often, to earn the grade he was hoping for? It is estimated that a maximum of 75 per cent engage in it at some time of their school careers.

The most frequent incidents occur early in the fall as students are adjusting to the new environment; or at a later time such as after exams, when students have been unusually tense. Seldom do they drink alone; it is usually in groups or in couples. "But why discuss something the student is already aware of?" you might ask. Because there are three myths which exist about alcohol and they need to be dismissed.

The first is that alcohol is a stimulant in any moment of crisis or stress. Alcohol is not a stimulant. It is the most important of all depressant drugs. Through the blood it is carried to the brain, on whose cells it has a paralyzing effect, especially on that part of the brain governing speech and action. Our ability to talk and act may be less inhibited, but we have less control over erratic speech and action.

The second is alcoholic beverages best promote geniality and good fellowship. On the contrary, alcohol doesn't do this, for psychologically, it is the act of sharing pleasure with someone else which does this. A coke or milkshake has the same effect as a martini, so far as promoting fellowship is concerned.

The third is that drinking is socially proper. It isn't. Many of the better circles are repudiating social drinking to the extent that the one who is "high" or "drunk" is out of place.

C₂H₅OH causes many an exciting life with the promise of a glorious future to go down the drain. What can you do about it? The best way to avoid being another statistic is to simply refrain from the use of alcohol.

The manufacturers of a well-known brand of whiskey have linked famous names to their product, such as Daniel Webster, three U.S. Presidents, Jackson, Harrison, and Grant, all of whom have appeared on advertisements. Henry Clay and Breckinridge, who were both defeated for president, have been linked with this brand. The manufacturers have tried to distinguish the whiskey by linking it with distinguished Americans, but not all presidents have preferred this brand, namely the Father of the Republican Party, Abraham Lincoln, although he drank some while growing up and actually worked at a still one summer, at 18 he stopped and never drank with slodier, friends or voters.

Lincoln voted against the temperance forces of the day who had tried to pressure the legislature to pass more stringent regulatory laws for the sale of alcoholic beverages, although why he did, when he believed in the temperance societies, one cannot say. He did write a temperance article once though. Abraham Lincoln believed that the greatest thing on earth would be when no slave nor drunkard walked the face of the earth. In his temperance addresses, just as we have in the preceding paragraph, he called for total abstinence.

One particular incident stands out about Abraham Lincoln; it was the custom of the day to serve drinks to the committee who came to call on the man to notify him of his nomination for the presidency of the U.S., but Lincoln refused to continue the tradition, stuck by his own convictions and reached the highest office in the country.

USED BOOKSTORE NEEDED

The "Seahawk" staff has been beset with problems evident in the publications room in the Student Services Building. Books have been piled ceiling high making it impossible to find work space for the staff. There is not enough room in the Bookstore to hold all the books, and until some of the present stock is sold the cluttered condition remains.

Being around the Bookstore so much brings to mind the idea of a "used bookstore", and how sorely needed it is according to the number of advertisements on the bulletin board and the mad clamor the first three weeks of school, and the price of new books. Students buying books for a required course are anxious to get rid of them when the course is over and from the cost of new books another student would welcome the opportunity to buy a used edition.

Even though the required books change from time to time, a student operated and owned bookstore would help some students a great deal. The highest priced book in the bookstore is $11.95 on down to the small paperbacks. It is estimated that books will cost $42.50 in the Catalog. There could be a great amount of money saved if such a bookstore were opened.

TURNING BACK THE CLOCK

A letter written by John M. Lupton, former Connecticut State Senator, to his son Joshua.

I understand that in school recently you were told that conservatives are "trying to turn back the clock". The implication in such a remark, of course, is that all true and good political progress today comes only from the so-called "liberals". It also suggests that all change is ipso facto, that dogged efforts to hold fast to established principles of limited constitutional government are old-fashioned and even somehow unpatriotic.

In order to realize how truly inappropriate the accusation is (that conservatives are "trying to turn back the clock") it is necessary to know how some political words have changed in meaning over the years. Not very many years ago, the word "liberal" in politics meant a person who was a champion truly inappropriate the accented liberal believed that too much government deprived the individual of his natural rights.

If you remember your Revolutionary War history, the of human freedom. The 18th onstration by liberals; Patrick Henry made a very liberal speech; and Thomas Jefferson's writings about men being "created equal" and about the necessity for complete separation of church and state were so liberal that they were considered inflammatory and rebellious. Almost everyone in those days accepted domination by the government as the norm. Individual liberty was a fantastic, a radical ideal. It was taken for granted that everyone was a subject of the king; you lived and worked with the approval of the crown or the king's appointed agents. You were either born to position in life and, therefore, to education and opportunity, or, if you were not, there wasn't much you could do about it. The "conservative" thing to do in those days was to accept government control. It was the way of life. The "liberal" idea, which took root in the minds of men like Burke, Paine, Jefferson, Madison and others, was the belief that the individual citizen must be in control of his government.

Now, we Americans have had our Constitution and our personal liberties for a long time—almost two hundred years. It may not be surprising, but it is tragically true that after such a long time many of us take freedom for granted. We often forget to take personal care not to let government have the upper

Welcome to a new year with the SEAHAWK (under new management) and a new year with the Opinion (still under the same management). Off to a slow start but, nevertheless, we're here with banners flying high with all the news, features, and most important, all the opinions.

For those of you who might not know, the purpose of this written matter is to give comments, critiques, and views of the activity in the fields of Art, Music, and Drama at Wilmington College. And, we intend to do just that, and probably more before the year is out.

he art exhibits in Hoggard Hall are a perfect way to start a new year. Each month the exhibit changes and the Opinion is sure that every student will take the time to see these exhibitions as they come to us. Japanese Prints, Five Winston-Salem Printmakers, and North Carolina Shore Birds mounted by Jan Newton are all worth your time.

The Wilmington College theatre and The Thalian Association again join with each other for dramatic productions this year (same song, second verse). The schedule indeed looks interesting. The first combined effort, directed by Doug Swink, is a mad hand over our lives the way it did before 1776. As Thom-Boston Tea Party was a demand too cheap, we esteem too lightly; it is dearer only that gives everything its value."

It is true we have voted for the changes which have made our federal government so huge in just the last 35 years. But is this possibly because many Americans after so many years of freedom, have lost the fear of government? Perhaps we have voted for more and more "benefits" and "services" from government because we have lost our instinctive distrust of the controls, regulations, and taxes which automatically accompany this government "help", and which eventually become so burdensome that they first stifle economic opportunity, then economic freedom, and finally personal liberty.

It is a strange and bitter irony that the words "liberal" and "conservative" have opposite meanings today from what was meant in Washington's time. Today, the "liberal" (so called) is the proponent of more and more government, and the "conservative" is the Paul Revere who warns of danger ahead.

Far from "turning the clock back" the modern conservative urges Americans to French comedy, "Hotel Paradiso." The Opinion considers this one of the better selections for this season. When production dates come up, the entire student body of the College should arrive at the newly-white-washed doors of historic Thalian Hall "en masse."

The College Chorus is hard at work on new music. All seem to be enjoying themselves and the selection of music is quite good. The Chorus, under the direction of Loyd Hudson, serves a useful purpose during the school year of acting as good will ambassadors for the College. If the Chorus meets up with the precedent set by last year's group, as we know it will, then indeed we can look for great things from this musical organization.

appreciate their freedoms now lost through apathy or misguided thinking we slip back once more into a way of life in which government comes first and the citizen last.

In truth then, the modern liberal is the one who would actually turn back the clock. He goes about preaching a gospel of government for its own sake. Never does he give a hint of concern about over-spending or about over-building the federal bureaucracy. The modern liberal loves and trusts government. The modern liberal's answer to each problem is more government.

We know the ultimate outcome of such a course for our country. History books are filled with example after example of the downfall of nations whose people turned from the hard work of guarding liberty, and followed instead a Pied Piper promising something for nothing. In the days of Rome, it was "bread and circuses"; today it is the myth of "free federal aid." You might call it "seduction by subsidy."

We know we cannot exalt government without diminishing the individual. We know we cannot extol public property without degrading private property. And we know we cannot defend and advance human rights unless private property rights are held inviolate.

We conservatives would wind the clock of freedom by lifting some of the burdensome weights of government with more individual effort. We would cut away the red tape of bureaucracy from the works. We would set the alarm any time the federal government unnecessarily steals another prerogative from the state governments or spends more than it takes in, or usurps in the executive those powers which belong to the peoples' representatives. Especially, we would mark the lateness of the hour whenever our government would yoke us together unequally with nations who do not respect the sacred character of the individual.

It is today's conservative who is the true progressive, for he favors limited government in order to give unlimited opportunity to every man.

Seahawk Cage Crew Prepares for Season

As the 1964-65 school year gets under way many of the members of last year's basketball squad and several new prospects have been working hard to get into shape for the upcoming season. Although cage practice doesn't begin officially until October 15 most hopefuls have been out running in order to build up their endurance.

Big Guns

Three of the 'Hawks' big guns will be back again this year. Larry Edens, a native Wilmingtonian who racked up a 16.6 points per game scoring average last year, Marshall Hamilton, the 6-7 star from Washington, D. C., and Al Thiry who posted a 12.2 average will all see action on the boards this season. These boys should form the nucleus of the 'Hawk' attack as the team looks forward to its opening game against Mars Hill College on November 21 here on the home court.

"We've got 22 games lined up so far," the Seahawk mentor reports, "but we're still looking for more. About 26 would be a good season. I've got nine home games scheduled but you have to take them any way you can get them at this stage."

New Prospects

Coach Brooks added that there are at least six good freshman prospects coming in this year. "Jim Budd of New Hanover High will be here along with David Baker of Muncie, Ind., and T. J. Ingle, a transfer student from North Greenville Jr. College. We're also expecting Clyde Markley, another Indiana boy, Jerry Bron from New Hanover, and Wynn Moore of Atkinson to show up. These boys could really be a big help to us."

Frosh Ruling

Under NAIA ruling freshman athletes may participate in varsity athletics; it is only the NCAA which prohibits college is not a member of either organization but does plan to apply for NAIA affiliation it is adopting the policies of the latter organization.

VARSITY REPORT

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

Sports enthusiasts at Wilmington College are in for an exciting year if advance reports are borne out in the coming months. Early indications have it that the Seahawks will once again be an athletic power to be reckoned with in basketball and baseball. The additional experience and maturity of senior competitors will be available for the 'Hawks' to draw upon for the first time this year. Judging by past performances such players as Larry Edens, Marshall Hamilton, and Al Thiry, who have led the cagers in years past, will again be in the forefront of action spearheading the attack.

Lost Few Players

Coach Brooks has lost few players from last year's squad, but among them was Tommy Cole the Jr. College All-American whose mighty bat rattled fences and whose skillful ball handling contributed to many cage victories. Tommy has transferred to Wake Forest College where he will certainly be an asset to the Deacon program as he follows in the footsteps of former Seahawk greats Dave Miller and Lou Howard.

Despite this loss Coach Brooks remains optimistic about the squad's chances of compiling another winning season. "It's a little early to speculate about our chances even before practice begins, but I think we have a good crop of freshmen who will help us out a lot this season."

Basketball practice doesn't begin officially until October 15, but already just about all the veterans and the prospects are out whipping themselves into shape in preparation for the opening tip-off still about two months away. They are all aware that Coach Brooks is a stickler for fitness and that only the fit can compete successfully in collegiate basketball.

Baseball Outlook

Bright as the baseball picture is, the baseball forecast seems even better. Coach Brooks reports that despite the loss of Tommy Cole, Bobby Shipp, and Butch Watts he still has approximately three candidates for each position on the diamond and a host of pitching prospects. Any lineup he decides upon will certainly be loaded with both offensive and defensive talent. Many of the hopefuls as well as the established veterans such as the likes of Steve Coley, Bill Harris, Larry Honeycutt, Ken Miller, and Glenn Mills are the products of American Legion baseball and are already proven athletes with the ability and the desire to win.

Mound Crew

Once again the Seahawk pitching staff will boast such outstanding hurlers as Eddie Lemon, Jim Braxton, Doyle Whitfield, Vic Johnson, and Wray Ware. But these veterans as well as others will all have a tough time holding on to their places in the lineup against the competition from the newcomers. In the light of present indications spring promises to be most interesting.

New Sport

Another sport becoming increasingly popular across the country currently, not only as a varsity activity but also as a means of acquiring conditioning and coordination, is the ancient art of wrestling. Under the direction of Coach Charles Sproles wrestling will be added to the curriculum and more than likely will be included on the list of varsity athletics.

Aficionados of the sport are quick to point out to the layman familiar only with the gaudy masquerade of professional wrestling that the amateur variety is quite different. Gone is the showmanship and cheap tricks used to attract audiences into the smoke-filled arenas. In their place is a dedicated devotion to the art of hand to hand combat without the distracting frills. Those who know this side of the sport appreciate wrestling for the ancient and honorable sport that it is.

Archery Revival

If there are any remnants of the now defunct Archery Club left around they might take heart in the fact that the college has added the sport to its ever-growing curriculum albeit only on the distaff side. Of even more interest, however, might be the fact that the Cape Fear Archers have established a field range on the campus right behind the new parking lot by the baseball field. Information on student use of the field range might be obtained from one of the coaches. His column is sure that renewed interest will be generated in the sport as a result of the efforts of Coaches Lewis and Mobley.

blocked kick goes to the team which blocked the kick and is dead at point of contact with ground. A blocked punt which contacts the ground in the end zone or goes out of bounds in the air is a safety for the defensive team.

If the ball is centered over player's head it is dead at point of contact with ground, for consecutive incomplete passes.

Any pass forward or backward that is incomplete is dead and the ball will be put in play at the point from which the pass was attempted.

An air dribble will not be allowed.

Defensive and offensive players are restricted in the use of their hands. Rushing is permissible. Contact is a foul on the same basis as in basketball.

Every man on the offensive team must be within fifteen (15) yards of the ball when it is declared "ready for play" (when it is spotted by the referee). After the ball is ready for play, flankers may spread as wide as they like, bound only by the side lines.

Wilmington College Physical Education Dept. Bolsters Staff With Three Additional Coaches

With the addition of a fourth year to the curriculum and an influx of students expected to exceed 1000 the athletic department has taken measures to meet the ever increasing demands being placed on it.

The state of North Carolina requires that every student graduated from a state supported institution of higher learning must have completed courses in physical education in addition to his other courses—hence the addition of the soon-to-be completed gymnasium. While this ruling is certain to apply to freshmen it is not expected to affect juniors and seniors who entered Wilmington College under a two year curriculum. The status of sophomores remains uncertain at the moment, but a decision is likely to be made shortly.

New Instructors

To handle the increased demands of a physical education program on the athletic department the college has acquired three new instructors to assist Bill Brooks and Earl Allen. Mrs. Judy Lewis and Miss Virginia Mobley will administer the women's physical education program during the current term. Mrs. Lewis is a graduate of East Carolina College and the University of North Carolina and comes to Wilmington College from Campbell College where she taught last year. Miss Mobley is a graduate of Georgia Southern College in Statesboro where she also taught.

Charles Sproles has been added to the staff to help with the men's program and to instruct wrestling, a sport which the college hopes to participate in on the intercollegiate level in the future. Sproles is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and leaves his position at Hargrave Military Academy where he taught wrestling for three years.

Improved Program

There is no doubt that the college's athletic department is ready to meet the challenge of increased enrollment and an expanded program. All of last year's programs are slated to be continued and several others are being considered as the new mentors take up their duties.

No part of the toucher's body except his feet, shall be in contact with the ground throughout the touch. No diving.

Pi Sigs Get New House Seek To Go National

Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity was first conceived last year around January by a small group of young men at Wilmington College. The first meetings were held in the classrooms and in the library where rules and memberships were voted and passed.

As the fraternity became better organized, it was decided that having a house would speed up the process of going national, which the college requires, and also bring about a closer relationship among fraternity brothers. Several houses were considered before the present house, at 3901 Market Street was chosen.

In order to obtain furniture to fully furnish the house, the fraternity held a furniture drive throughout the city. Numerous gifts of furniture and household items were received during the drive. The brothers pitched in and cleaned the grounds and made improvements and then held Open House shortly thereafter and several hundred people attended.

Pi Sigma Mu has been in contact with several National Fraternities, some of which have shown interest in Sigma Mu. At the present time, there are 18 members in Sigma Mu. Officers are Randy Hughes, president; vice president, Dale Loughlin; secretary, Roger Webb; treasurer, Jim Brothers; pledgemaster, Charles Benton; historian, Red Douglass; Chairman of Judicial Board, Bob Baxter; and Wayne Holly, Chaplain.

Seahawk Sponsors Straw Ballot Vote

The "Seahawk" sponsored a Straw Ballot between the presidential and vice presidential candidates, and out of 348 votes cast, 189 were awarded to Goldwater-Miller team and 157 to the Johnson-Humphrey ticket.

There was one write-in vote for Henry Cabot Lodge for president with William Scranton as vice president. Also on a write-in, Governor George Wallace received one vote, with Goldwater chosen as his running mate.

Although the number voting is not a majority of the students on campus, most of the ones interested in the national election did vote, so the sentiments expressed by the outcome, would indicate that the nominees are running neck and neck, with only 1 more days to decide the real outcome.

Students Form Language Club

The new Modern Language Club of Wilmington College held their first meeting October 21. The following officers were elected: president, Eric Stator; vice-president, Barbara Berry; secretary-treasurer, Liz Johnson. The advisors are Eugene Williams and William Lowe.

The purpose of the club is to promote among the students of Wilmington College an interest and better understanding of modern languages. An invitation to join the club is extended to all students interested in modern language. It is not required that the student be taking a modern language to join.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, November 4, at 4:30 p.m. A reminder of the meeting will be posted around the school with the room number on it.

Jean Thorpe Named Cheerleader Head

Jean Thorpe has been named head cheerleader at Wilmington College and will lead the college cheerleader squad during the 1964-65 school term. Margaret Lassiter will be her assistant.

New cheerleaders selected during the competitive tryouts at the college Tuesday, October 20, were Maxine Fladd, Julie Ann Memory, and Betty Kay Carroll. Alternates named were Cori Collins and Louise Lewis, who will join the squad in the absence of one of the regular cheerleaders at a game.

The three new cheerleaders, and two alternates, are all graduates of New Hanover High School, with the exception of Cori, who is a graduate of Summerville High School.

Maxine was a cheerleader in her ninth grade at Chestnut Junior High and was an alternate her junior and senior years at like to be a physical education teacher.

Julie Ann thinks the cheerleaders set the mood at the ball games and are responsible for getting the students to cheer, and she wanted to be a cheerleader so she could help get our school spirit really going and let the team know we are behind them.

Betty Kay was a cheerleader in the ninth grade at Roland-

Students Elect New Officers

Michael Koseruba has been named president of the freshman class at the college in an election held Thursday, October 21.

Other freshman officers named were Dennis Lennon, vice president; Jane Burris, secretary; and senators Julie Momory, Louise Lewis, Jimmy Rich, Eric Stator, and Christine Tienken.

Two other positions were filled: Ann Bryant was voted vice president of the Student Body; Ernest Fullwood was named senator of the Junior Class on a write in vote. These two positions were open because formerly elected students did not return to college this year.

Ann, whose ambition is to be a grade school teacher, is a senior at the College, and desires to increase participation in school affairs and has made this her positive plan for her tenure in office.

Ernest is a junior at the College, and is looking forward to proposing badly needed legislation and making this the best Junior Class possible.

Robert as vice-president positively plans to do the best possible job at whatever is required of the Freshman Class.

The five freshman senators have each pledged to serve the Freshman Class, and carry out their wishes as best they can in the senate.

Tom Covil, chairman of the board of elections and president of the Senior Class, reported that 368 ballots were cast, with a registration of 902.

Rotary Club Presents Paul Harvey Here

Paul Harvey, columnist, public speaker and news analyst, will be presented in a program in Brodgen hall Thursday night, November 5, at 8:00 p.m.

The East Wilmington Rotary club is sponsoring this appearance of Harvey who will speak on the subject, "The Uncommon Man."

Tickets are now on sell for the event, and may be purchased from Rotary members as well as several businesses throughout the area.

All funds earned by the Rotary club through the Harvey program, above the necessary expenses, will be contributed to the Library Fund of Wilmington College.

Rushmore Celebration Held Saturday Night

The second annual Rushmore Celebration will be held in the "Pub" Saturday night, from 9:00 to 1:00, with music by the "Plaids" from Charlotte.

The following rules have been compiled to govern student conduct at the dance in addition to those already published in the handbook:

1. No tags will be admitted to any dance unless otherwise stated.
2. School clothes will be worn to all dances unless otherwise stated.
3. Students are allowed to bring a non-student date and a non-student guest couple on their activity card. A charge of one dollar per non-student will be collected.
4. Alcoholic beverages will not be allowed either at the dance or on the campus.

First Theatre Production of Season Set For November 13, 14, 15

"Hotel Paradiso," first production of the season of the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association, is the name of the French comedy to be presented November 13, 14, and 15 at Thalian Hall at 8:30 p.m.

Written in 1886 by George Feydeau and Maurice Devalieres, considered by the French as second only to Moliere, "Hotel Paradiso" has been called a French French Farce. This means sex first, but not with the long run foremost. In such goings on, the bed is only a prop; the actual objective is bedlam.

The plot centers around Boniface (Sam Garner) who is married to a battle axe (Elizabeth Howland) and who somehow gets out from under her thumb to seek sin with a beautiful blonde lady, her husband's nephew (Bob Tilley) and a lady's maid (Rosemary Green) the husband himself (Ronald Lee), and a family friend (Wally Warr) with four innocent golden-haired daughters.

Grise and was an alternate cheerleader in the eleventh grade at New Hanover. To be an elementary teacher is her ambition.

Cori desires to be a foreign interpreter and promote better understandings between people. She continues her ambition by being a cheerleader at the college, and she has had experience both in junior and senior high schools.

Louise has had experience at Lake Forest Junior High and New Hanover High. As a cheerleader, she is looking forward to leading the crowd in the cheers. She desires to teach history.

Michelle Manning, age four, was named as mascot for the 1964-65 squad.

College Professor Speaks to B. S. U.

The Baptist Student Union met at the College on October 13. James C. Daniel, Social Science professor, spoke on "Should A Christian Be Active in Politics?"

In his speech, Mr. Daniel brought forth several ideas. Among the topics he discussed were civil rights, prayer in school, and the nuclear test bad. Following his speech, there was a period of discussion.

Due to a vacancy in the office of treasurer, an election was held, in which Linda Bordeaux was elected to this office.

The club decided to present a B.S.U. key-pin to Rose Williams, for her outstanding work as 1963-64 president. The club is also considering having individual members purchase a club pin if they wish.

The highlight of November will be the B.S.U. State Convention, which will be held in High Point, November 6-8. A good representation is expected from Wilmington College.

Opening Set For New Gym

November 15 has tentatively been set as completion date for the new physical education building. However, the building has to be inspected and approved by the state of North Carolina before occupancy.

The plans for the liberal arts building, the next to be constructed on campus, are now in Raleigh and the bid is expected to be let around the middle of November also.

The Sex Revolution

"To bed or not to bed" that is the question seemingly requiring much kicking around today, and usually finds itself unanswered under the rug. Many phases of sex conduct have been discussed over and over such as sexual relationships before and outside of marriage, but we will be concerned with the mock Shakespearean question above, but only for the young adult, specifically before marriage.

Why is the question so prominent on campus today? There are seven main reasons. The first is that youth is constantly tantalized by the exploited idea that sex sells everything, from clothes, and cars, to spaghetti and records. Secondly, sex is worshipped in the forms of such as called "goddesses as Elizabeth Taylor, whose morals are of such so called "the formula for water. Thirdly, youth is constantly exposed to the same environment that married people are. Fourth, youth has more privacy than ever before. Fifth, young adults begin dating younger and younger, and it is not uncommon today, to find a sixth grader worrying about a date. Sixth, marriage is possible at a younger age, for a girl of 16 who has begun dating at 12 is ready for marriage at an earlier year. Seventh, penicillin and oral contraceptives have removed many obstacles to pre-marital relations.

A sexual revolution has taken place which greatly affects every campus on the college scene. In men it has been a welcomed change, as far as women are concerned, because men no longer seem to demand chastity in their brides, or do they mind the abandonment of old standards of sexual morality women used to practice. Men actually encourage sexual freedom because it frees them of responsibility of marriage, and gives them a free outlet for their sexual urges.

The woman has revolutionized her thinking about sex practices, and the unmarried girl has very little shame over her affairs although she is still reluctant to discuss them with anyone. When she gets in college, she finds just as in high-school a great amount of popularity often depends on three things and unjustly so. First, the extent of her morals about sex; second, whether she will encourage her to lower her standards to such a degree until finally she figures, there is no stopping now, for I have done these things once, there is nothing to stop me from doing them over again. And so she does.

Often though, and perhaps most important, is the consequences of physical union outside of marriage, and on the college level with which we are concerned there are three grave dangers, the first of which is the loss of the opportunity for an education, through a hurried marriage. Most students cannot afford to go to school without the aid of their parents, and most parents usually let the newly weds accept the responsibility of their marriage. The second is the unwanted child, and of the 250,000 born yearly a great many are born to college coeds. One million two hundred thousand abortions are attempted or completed each year, and this statistic should drive home just how many people do not want a child. We do not say that every physical union results in pregnancy, but it "might." The third is finding yourself married to someone whom you really do not love.

Where does the college student stand on the scales of weighing the pros and cons? He stands within himself, and only a realistic look at the negative side of sex outside the sacred vows, will enable him to envision a love growing into a spiritual meeting of two minds which will culminate in marriage, as the highest and most rewarding and triumphant rung.

The Choice Is Yours

Young people have been sorely negligent in fulfilling their electoral responsibilities. In a recent presidential election only 52 per cent of people in their twenties cast a ballot compared to 82 per cent of American voters in their sixties who had voted in the same elections.

College students cannot afford to yield to complacency. College graduates are America's leaders. They must be willing to influence the future of their country and the world. This election next week will set the course of history for the next eight years.

Students often engrossed in school and social affairs often lose sight of national and world issues, and some students do not even read a daily newspaper. Students may not even vote because they do not know the proper procedures, or miss the deadline, or use the excuse that they do not know or like either candidate.

Americans have the lowest voting percentage from voting age, than do Italy, Canada, West Germany, Sweden, Denmark, France, and Japan. If just one person per precinct had altered their vote in the 1960 presidential election the fate of the election could have been reversed.

Out of the age group 21-29 38 per cent are likely to vote, and 24 per cent are likely not to register. Students must not be complacent. To combat complacency the Seahawk sponsored a straw election, and it was hoped through posters on display, that more students would participate in the forthcoming elections.

Americans are keenly interested in the coming election, and the issues are important: The Civil Rights Act, 1964, the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, the Foreign Trade Expansion Act, Minimum Wage Increase, Housing Act of 1961, Aid to Education, Foreign Policy, Communism, and Morality. Everyone on campus who is interested in the issues should vote and are qualified to do so if they are 21 years of age on the day of election, have lived in the state one year, and the precinct 30 days, and either registered October 24 or have obtained an absentee ballot. As the saying so popular goes, "Vote and you have a choice, don't vote and the choice is theirs." See you at the polls.

To The Editor:

I write this letter to all the non-athletes of this school. Those of you who have never known the glory of winning or the heartbreak of defeat, lack the fulfillment that sports participation brings. I challenge the male student body of this school to take an active interest in the intramural sports offered and the ones to be offered in the future. The recent failure of the soccer team has prompted this letter, for from the 608 males enrolled in Wilmington College, there were not eleven people who wanted to play soccer and form a team.

Sincerely,
Ronnie Sellers.

To The Editor:

The Editor of The Seahawk is to be commended for her sincerity in concerning herself with various serious problems facing the modern college student. Her methods, however, are somewhat suspect, as is her logic. For example, her implication is that Abraham Lincoln, one of our best known presidents, succeeded in life primarily because he did not drink. Aside from the fact that this statement is unsupportable, the relevance of Abraham Lincoln's drinking habits for the modern college student is questionable. The overly moral approach to the possible problems of alcohol was tried in the Eighteenth Amendment and found lacking; for this reason the amendment was repealed. The Editor's use of the same approach fails to challenge serious students at Wilmington College. Furthermore, who are the "better circles" who have dictated that drinking is not "socially proper"? Though the first two "myths" attacked in the editorial may have validity, yet to state that the "better" people have begun to avoid drinking as "out of place" is an assertion which must, to be used in an argument, be substantiated. Again, let us commend the Editor for her sincerity in recognizing the problem, but let us hope that in the future she will employ a rational argument in her editorials.

To the Editor:

Let me congratulate the editor on the profound letter from the Hon. John M. Lupton to his tattle-telling son, for the honorable state senator has gifts which are uncommon; and he answers questions of definition without ever defining. The clever senator would have the reader believe that he answered the question, "What is a conservative?" But rather than attacking the problem of definition through orthodox (or conservative) channels, the skillful senator gives us examples, eg. Patrick Henry, James Madison, and Thomas Jefferson. (It was that arch conservative Jefferson who stated, "I hold it that a little rebellion now and then is a good thing, and as necessary in the political world as storms in the physical." Jefferson spoke these words in 1787, after the American Revolution.)

But the senator displays craft par excellence as he defines "liberal." The liberal is the stealer of state power; he is the lover of government; he is the thief who would "stifle economic opportunity" (no doubt he has the dreadful TVA in mind), "then economic freedom" (he alludes no doubt to the freedom to starve because there was no FDIC to protect savings and no SEC to protect investments), "and finally personal liberty" (this must refer to the alarming first amendment which does not allow uniform prayers in school or perhaps it refers to the recent tyrannical law which outlawed second-class citizenship). From this sage presentation the reader should conclude that the conservative is good and that the liberal is bad. It is every bit as simple as that—when you do not define your words.

So much for leaps in logic and definition by default. The next role the inventive state senator assumes is that of pseudo-historian. After long and tedious research he concludes, "We know the ultimate outcome of such a course for our country. This finding should be published. Historians are anxious to discover such self-evident truths. 'We know' is a rare statement in the historical world. But the honorable state senator is quite confident that his conclusions are authoritative. The conclusion which would startle some of the more "conservative" historians would be the one that other nations followed a Pied Piper and this was the reason for their decline and fall. This fact will necessitate a lot of textbook revisions.

Really, Mr. State Senator, what have you said: What valid question have you asked? What answer have you supplied? Is a person really degraded for believing in the government of the United States? Your letter is unfit for consumption by a literate American. Could you, Mr. State Senator, have known the conclusion to your letter before you began your research and writing? Otherwise the letter makes no sense. Where is the logic? Where is the validity? Your faculty is matched only by your ability to fabricate and distort. Teachers do not condemn words such as "liberal" or "conservative" because such words have no meaning out of context. We do warn that bigots such as you who fabricate your facts to fit your own opinion and then pervert the name of conservative are a definite danger to liberty and freedom.

Forthcoming Election Evades Real Issue

On November third the 1964 presidential campaign will have ended, and with it one of the most bizarre campaigns in American history. Certainly the Republicans will never cease to wonder how they succumbed to a faction that threatened the party's existence, for certainly this group of political pirates is not indicative of the conservative element within the Republican Party during the Eisenhower administration.

Almost any other Republican candidate would have had an excellent opportunity of defeating President Johnson, but the Goldwater political philosophy is more typical of the radical Reconstruction era than Twentieth Century politics, and for this reason he has alienated himself from the electorate.

Perhaps Senator Goldwater himself realizes this, for he has concentrated more on immorality than the real issues which face us today. When he does touch on the issues, we find his statements both ironic and dangerous. He speaks of prosperity, yet he proposes the sale of the T.V.A.; he would uphold the law but not the Civil Rights Law; he cries out against the evils of big government, but overlooks the principality of Alabama where King Wallace rules supreme, and Johnson's name does not even appear on the ballot. On the international scene Sen. Goldwater proposes such schemes as diplomatic blackmail with the Soviets, attacks on Cuba, and further nuclear testing.

These ideas are the cause of genuine fear on the part of the electorate and our allies. It is no wonder that the Senator from Arizona would rather campaign or morality than the issues.

Other Republican leaders such as Rockefeller, Romney, and Scranton realize this, but are much too smart to bolt the party. Instead they, like the Republican money-holders pay only scant lip service to the national ticket. Certainly Governor Scranton's statement that "the Johnson Administration has washed away the last vestiges of the style and grace that a new generation of Americans forged in 1960 elections" emphasizes this. One could just picture a true Goldwater making such a flaccid statement.

Such an attitude on the part of the other Republican leaders means disaster for Sen. Goldwater and his followers, for soon after the election when Sen. Goldwater is defeated, a purge will begin within the Republican Party in which the old machinery will regain control.

However, Barry Goldwater will lose on November 3, not because he was not a true representative of the Republican Party and was not supported by it, but rather because he failed to capture the imagination and the confidence of the voters. A George Romney, or a William Scranton, or a Nelson Rockefeller, or even a Richard Nixon may have won this election; but not a Barry Goldwater. To win an American election the candidate must be indicative of the mood of the nation in much the same way Dwight Eisenhower was in 1953 and John Kennedy was in 1960. Mr. Goldwater is not such a candidate.

Scriptic Members Hear Noted Author

A truly amusing story on the Ups and Downs of Writing was presented to the Scriptic Society membership on October 26 in Room L-217 by Mrs. Susan Herring Jeffries of Raleigh, the author of Papa Wore No Halo. Mrs. Jeffries stated that writing a book was very much like having a baby. One puts so much of one's self into everything which one writes.

Although born near Tai Shan, China, Mrs. Jeffries has family connections in Pender County, where her queue-wearing missionary father was born, and in Wilmington where a number of cousins, among the Addison Hewlett and Jimmy and Glen Herring, reside.

Speaking with the same ready wit and authority which are evident throughout her biography, Mrs. Jeffries kept her audience at ease and intensely interested as she enumerated many amusing incidents in her own life. She awoke each morning at 5:30 to put on paper the many adventures and real-life doings of her strong-willed but dedicated Christian father.

Mrs. Jeffries was educated at Meredith College in Raleigh and upon graduation taught in the Mathematics Department for two years. Then she taught mathematics and English at Southern Seminary, Buena Vista, Va. She now lives in Raleigh where she is a statistical analyst in the De-

OPENING LEAD: Five of spades
This hand is from Five Weeks To Winning Bridge, by Alfred Sheinwald (Perma-book Edition, E5c.)

We consider this book to be the best all-around bridge book in print. It is interestingly written; tables of statistical information are held to a minimum, and there are plenty of illustrative hands.

The hand shown above is from the chapter entitled "The Holdup Play." A holdup is the refusal of the first trick or tricks in a suit, and this hand illustrates one of the reasons for employing it. On the first trick South plays the ten of spades from dummy, covered by East's king. What is South's correct play? As Sheinwald puts it, "His first impulse is to grab the trick before the mice get at it." If he does, Sheinwald goes on, he does not make the contract. The ninth trick must come from the diamond suit; and when South leads a diamond, East will grab the ace and return a spade to knock out the queen. When West wins the king of diamonds, he will run the spades. If South declines the first spade and wins the second, East will have no spade to lead when he wins the ace of diamonds. South then makes an over-trick, losing just two diamonds and a spade.

VARSITY REPORT

INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL

Intramurals are getting off to a good start. Despite the fact that only five teams were organized, the quality of play has already surpassed that of last year. The top five teams of last spring's softball league are back seeking the pigskin title. Naturally with such top-notch competition morale in the league is high.

STYLE OF PLAY

Coach Earl Allen has once again this year adopted the style of play used in the intramural program at the University of North Carolina. These rules, with a few minor alterations, change the entire complexion of the old familiar game. As noted by the publication of the rules in the last edition of THE SEAHAWK touch football as played at Wilmington College will be a combination of football, soccer and basketball. The only resemblance to the fall pastime lies in the fact that the teams use a football and run a series of downs. As in basketball there can be no bodily contact which rules out blocking. Likewise no cleats are allowed, only tennis shoes.

The game itself is wide open. Passes may be thrown from anyone to anyone from anywhere on the field. This rule promises some excitement. There will be no first downs every ten yards, instead they will be every twenty yards. Play is divided up into two 20-minute halves and unlimited substitution is allowed. If by chance the game ends in a tie the ball is placed on the 50 yard line and each team is given two chances to move it. After four plays the victory goes to the team which has managed to get the ball on their opponent's side of the field.

Rules such as these and others equally intriguing are bound to make the games wide open affairs with plenty of action. It promises to be interesting not only for the players but the spectators as well.

SEAHAWK BASKETBALL

Basketball season is just around the corner and the Seahawks are in the second week of their pre-season practice. The team is currently holding practice sessions within the familiar confines of Brogden Hall because the gymnasium on the college campus is still yet to be completed. But even one brief look at a practice session reveals the excellence and the confidence of Coach Bill Brooks' charges.

CAGE SCHEDULE

The schedule for the season shows that the Seahawks will be playing a wide variety of opponents from Mars Hill to the likes of Stetson University. The Hawk mentor also expects stiff competition from such outstanding teams as Atlantic Christian College and our old nemesis Campbell College. Both teams are reportedly improved over their last season's efforts and promise to give the Seahawks cagers a real battle this season.

THE TEAM

With a squad of seasoned veterans coupled with a group of eager young freshmen it looks like another exciting season in store for all Wilmington College basketball fans. The entire squad are anxiously awaiting the opening whistle and latest reports reveal that they will undoubtedly provide many thrills for local fans this year.

One Man's Opinion

By Sam Garner

There are times, like now, when one wonders if it is worth all the effort to take that long step toward maturity. The Opinion is herein stating that it is! College students are expected to show some maturity, in one form or another, but are the students that live in the Pub doing so? Come on and give it that old "Joe College" try people and await the results. That step toward maturity may save you.

The above paragraph probably makes no sense whatsoever to most of you and this is good because it isn't aimed at you. It is aimed at those students who make such a good impression of visitors to the College when they see the furniture that has been completely torn up by people who don't think of others. 'Tis true that the Pub and what is in it is for your use, but why destroy it?

OPINION SIDELINES:

The Top Twelve of the Wilmington College Chorus made their first appearance of the year at the Neptune Restaurant at Wrightsville Beach last week. The group, assisted by members of the College band, sang for the Convention of Women College Deans that toured the College last week. A selection of patriotic music was chosen for the occasion by director Loyd Hudson.

Rehearsals for "Hotel Paradise" are still in progress as the play opens November 13. A wild French comedy should provide an evening of entertainment for all when production dates come up. Make your date to be there. After all, it doesn't cost anything for students.

If you haven't done so, be sure to see the exhibit of art work in Hoggard Hall. The Art Department, under the direction of Claude Howell and Patty Minser, does a fine job in presenting these exhibitions for your viewing pleasure. Don't miss the chance of seeing this one.

The Debating Club enters into collegiate debate this week according to Ralph Kornegay who heads this group. It seems that this organization is going to prove to be one of the more active groups on the campus this year.

That covers the news in the departments that the Opinion should cover. Let's hope all remember to see the exhibit before it is taken down and don't forget to read all of your SEAHAWK, it's free too.

Wilco Gets First Dean of Faculty Dr. J. P. Reynolds From Florida

Dean of Faculty, Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, came to Wilmington College with the purpose of employing and advising the faculty, setting up the curriculum, and compiling the catalogue. His office is also concerned with all academic affairs involving the faculty and the college accreditation. This is the first year that Wilmington College has had a dean of faculty.

With 32 years of experience in college teaching and administration, Dr. Reynolds transferred to Wilmington College from Florida State University, Tallahassee, Florida. Dr. Reynolds was a professor of zoology and Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Florida State for 15 years.

Before going there, he taught at Birmingham-Southern College for 15 years. During this period, Dr. Reynolds took two leaves-of-absence and instructed in the zoology laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Reynold's first experience in college teaching was at Guilford College where he taught for two years.

Dr. Reynolds grew up in Guilford County and graduated from Jamestown High School. An alumnus of Guilford College, Dr. Reynolds majored in voice, piano, German, and biology. After teaching at Guilford College, Dr. Reynolds attended the University of North Carolina where he received his M. A. in zoology. He then went on to Johns Hopkins University where he received his doctorate.

While working on his doctorate, Dr. Reynolds did research in cytology and genetics. During his research on the fungus gnat, Dr. Reynolds became godfather to a new specie. Today this insect is known as Sciara Reynoldsi, after Dr. Reynolds. Recently he has published two reports on his research in human genetics.

It was while he was in graduate school at U. N. C. that Dr. Reynolds met his wife, the former Rebecca Ward of Burgaw, Mrs. Reynolds is a biologist and was dean of Judson College in Marion, Alabama, prior to marriage. Dr. Reynolds is also the proud father of two sons, Paul, Jr., and Bill. Paul, Jr. holds a M. A. in Engineering Science and is employed by Radiation Laboratory in Melbourne, Florida. Bill is a sophomore at Florida State and is majoring in biology. Dr. and Mrs. Reynolds are living at 201 Brookwood Avenue and are building a home at 1313 Azalea Drive.

Pi Sigma Mu Meets With Representatives

Monday night, November 2, Pi Sigma Mu was visited by five members and one pledge of Pi Kappa Phi from East Carolina College.

Also visiting the fraternity were Durwood Owen, national secretary; Ted Schlarfstein, assistant national secretary; Bill Dicks, national traveling councilman; and Bill Lofler, alumnus. The reason for their visit to Pi Sigma Mu was to install the members of the fraternity as a delegated colony of Pi Kappa Phi.

To become a colony of a national has been the main objective of Pi Sigma Mu since it was organized in January of 1964, and Pi Kappa Phi was the fraternity's goal. Pi Sigma Mu is the first fraternity at Wilmington College to reach the status of the national fraternity level.

Pi Sigma Mu has chosen eleven pledges. Formal Rush Week took place the week of October 4-8. Rush started with a formal smoker held at the Pi Sigma Mu house from 3:00 to 5:00, Sunday, October 4. This was a gathering of prospective pledges with the members to become acquainted and discuss fraternities in general.

The second event, an informal smoker, was held Wednesday evening, October 7. The members discussed with the prospective pledges different topics in a more relaxed atmosphere and were able to get better acquainted.

Rush Week was climaxed October 10 with a social held at Winter Park Community Center. The music was provided by the Classics. The end of the week brought forth a picture of each prospective pledge.

After a study of each prospective pledge, 11 men were chosen by the brothers to pledge Pi Sigma Mu. The first pledge class is under the fraternal leadership of Charles Benton, pledge master. The pledges have chosen as their officers Larry Lanier, president; Jim Farlow, secretary; Elmore Spell, treasurer and project chairman; Preston Brown, chaplain; and Gene Frizzelle, marshal and social committee chairman. The other pledges are John Batomus, Bobby Eakins, Leonard Harris, Bill Kerby, Don Shumehan, and Mike Taylor.

Since the nature trail needs some improvements made on it, the pledges have designated this as their pledge project. This will be completed before they are initiated into the fraternity at the end of this quarter.

The fraternity celebrated Halloween with a masquerade party at the house October 30. Bobby Baxter, chairman of the social committee with the help of the pledges provided the atmosphere and decorations for the party. The "New Goliards," a Wilmington College folk singing group comprised of Tom McNair, Roy Frantzen, and John Days provided the entertainment for the occasion. Pledge Preston Brown and his date were presented a trophy for having the most original costume.

Pi Sigma Mu has selected their sweetheart and her court for the school year 1964-65. The sweetheart is Kitty O'Brien. Kay Wells serves as senior attendant; Sarah Fussell, junior attendant; and Gloria Shephard, sophomore attendant. The freshman attendant will be chosen at a later date.

NOTICE

Thanksgiving recess will begin November 25, at 10:30 p.m. and end on November 30, at 8:30 a.m. There will not be another issue of The Seahawk until after Thanksgiving holidays.

College Student Dies In Wreck

A 21-year-old Wilmington College student was killed near Burgaw Friday, November 6, when his compact car skidded beneath a tractor-trailer truck.

Authorities identified the victim, who was driving the automobile, as Joseph B. King of Faison.

A passenger in the King car, Roger Roberts, 18, of Calypso, received minor injuries, according to State Highway Patrolman C. N. Fuller.

Plans Set For Christmas Dance

The Casuals will furnish the music for the Christmas dance at the Blockade Runner December 5.

The Christmas Dance will be held December 5, from 9:00 to 1:00 at the Blockade Runner Motor Hotel at Wrightsville Beach with music by the Casuals.

Dress for this dance will be semi-formal. The May dance will be formal according to the Student Affairs Committee.

Refreshments will be provided by the dance committee.

Students are reminded that the dance rules in the handbook and on the back of the dance card will be enforced even though the dance will be off-campus.

Students are also reminded that they must have both their student activity card and their dance card for admission; however, a charge of one dollar per non-student will be collected at the door.

A list of dates and activities that have been scheduled by the Dance Committee are:

December 5—Christmas Dance
February 4, 5, 6—Homecoming
March 6—Dance

April 30-May 1—May Festival

Students Form Debating Club; Elect Kornegay First President

An intercollegiate Debating Society has been formed at Wilmington College and is being supported by the students and the faculty.

During the past years several organizations have been formed which offered debate in one form or another. Some of these efforts included such things as local debates for civic and business clubs, debate tournaments at the high school level, and groups which attended the Little United Nations.

The first organizational meeting was held at the opening of fall quarter, and since that time a constitution has been written, officers have been elected, and work started on the season's debate topic. The topic for this season is:

Resolved: That the federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed.

Ralph Kornegay is president of the group; Bill Cyphers, vice-president; Elizabeth Humphrey, business manager. Members of the group include Miriam Koski, Cori Collins, Ed Ward, Hugh Paschall, Frank Platt, Tom Potts, Bob Kenan, and Dale Rhodes. Advisor for the Society is Miss Nancy Kendall.

Any person who is interested in joining the group is invited to do so, if he is interested in debating.

B. S. U. Members Attend Convention In High Point

Fifteen Wilmington College students attended the State Baptist Student Union convention at Green Street Baptist Church in High Point, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, November 6-8.

The students left by car about 1 p.m. Friday. While at the convention, the students were guests in the homes of members of the host church.

The theme for the convention was "When Students Worship God." The theme was carried out through speakers and through student-led discussions. The main speaker was Dr. Theron D. Price, chairman of the department of religion at Furman University. Dr. Price stated that "until men turn to God, they cannot turn to worship." Dr. Price also stressed that "worship is a meeting in which God supplies our need from an inexhaustible source."

During the student-led discussion groups, the meaning and purpose of worship was discussed. Sara Fussell, president of the Wilmington College B. S. U. was a leader of one of the discussion groups. During the course of the convention, a business meeting was held, in which there were reports of the various standing committees of the State B. S. U.

For recreation Saturday night, a Hootenanny was held. Meredith and N. C. State were in charge. Students from Meredith, N. C. State, and the "Collegiates" from High Point College entertained the students.

The State B. S. U. choir led the congregational singing and also presented two anthems for the closing session of the convention. Two Wilmington College students were selected to sing in the choir. They were Marilyn Gales and Carol Merki.

The students returned to Wilmington about 8:30 Sunday afternoon.

Those who attended the convention were: Sara Fussell, Fred Jacobs, Glenda Lennon, Carol Merki, Sonny Davis, Ethrache Warters, Ellen Gilliard, Brenda Crouch, Margaret Hansen, Marilyn Gales, Elliott O'Neal, Linda Batten, Sharon Scott, Patsy Manning and Patsy Grant.

Language Club Hears Dr. Gonzalez-del-Valle

The Modern Language Club met at the college Wednesday, November 4, at 4:30 with Dr. Gonzalez-del-Valle, of the College's language department speaking.

Dr. Gonzalez recited a poem that he had written in 1936 concerning the street vendors of Cuba. Elizabeth Johnson and Ron Mihal were present to translate the recitation into English for club members present.

Dr. Gonzalez also gave a talk on his background in teaching.

The above students are preparing to leave for the High Point meeting.

EDITORIALS:

College, Dead Ahead!

(Editor's note: This is the last in a series of three articles on problems which confront college students.)

College, dead ahead! And with it comes everything from Homecoming, to quizzes, to difficulties. What are some of them?

Academic life: If you have taken college preparatory courses, you will not be beset with major study problems. Some courses will prove difficult from lack of familiarization with the material, or because of an inadequate background; but good study habits and hard work can offset these problems.

Higher standards: Volumes of work await you upon entering college. The change from high-school to college strikes you like a bucket of ice-water hitting you over the head as you realize what is expected of you. More study is required, and deeper depths of subjects are explored. The answer? If you want the grades, do the work.

Impersonal atmosphere: High school teachers gave more personal attention, but what about the professor whom you see only an hour a day? The low student-faculty ratio here has somewhat controlled this problem, although as the ratio increases, the situation will become one of more concern. Right now, though, if you take the initiative and meet them half-way, you will find that they are competent and dedicated. Students fail to go to the very persons who are employed to help them with their problems—the dean of men, and the dean of women. Remember Adam and Eve were the only persons in creation to be born adults; the rest of us, deans, professors, and students had to grow up and go through it all.

Unsupervised study: In high school you had "study hall" in which you did your homework under supervision, or your parents supervised study periods at home. In college you are on your own. Except for the few hours of class, you can loaf the rest of the day and never study, but you will carry home the deserved results of such fruitless labor.

Pressures: Classmates will pressure you into taking part in a great many extra-curricular and social activities, which are a vital part of a college education; but if you neglect your studies you will not be around long enough to enjoy any social activities.

Cheating: It is widespread among college students and going unchecked on our campus without an honor system or any other way of curbing it. It is symbolic of the weakening moral foundations of American life. There will come a time, though, when you receive your diploma and you shake the president's hand. You will then have to shake most of your classmates hands, because had it not been for them, you wouldn't be there. The answer? "Don't sell your integrity for an unearned degree."

Conclusion: You have three choices concerning these three articles: The first is seeking to make your decisions from within yourself, resulting in your becoming a loner and withdrawing from campus activities. Second, you can seek to blend in with the crowd by likening yourself to a chameleon, who blends into whatever landscape is necessary. Thirdly you can seek your decisions not from within or from without, but from "Above."

Role Of The Seahawk

Wilbury Storey said, "A newspaper's duty is to print the news and raise hell." Joseph Pulitzer charged the newspaper editors, "Always fight for progress and reform . . . always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers . . . always remain devoted to the public welfare . . ." U. S. Secretary of Commerce Luther C. Lodge said, "Responsible newspapers are the eye of the 'eternal vigilance' which is the ultimate safeguard of our freedom in a democratic society . . ." Josephus Daniels challenged, "I . . . wish it always to be the 'tocsin' and devote itself to the policies of equality and justice to the underprivileged."

Concerning the policy of the Seahawk we first considered the roles of larger newspapers and the part they play in the lives of the more than 60,000,000 homes they enter daily. Eighteen thousand daily and 9,000 weekly newspapers circulate and are read by nearly 90 per cent of the people and play a big part in shaping opinions of the people who read them. Will Rogers said, "Everything I know, I read in the newspaper."

The Seahawk will publish letters to the editor, not in excess of 250 words, if it is in good taste, decent, and of interest to the general reader. Letters must be signed. Names will be withheld upon request, if a legitimate reason is given for the request. The Seahawk will print the news, fight for progress at Wilmington College, and alarm, warn, or inform whenever necessary. The editor will reply to letters only when the issue has been misinterpreted and clarification seems necessary.

PRESIDENT'S TASKS LOOM LARGE

Election year 1964 is over, and sighs have gone up over the nation—some in content, others in dismay. We, for one, don't envy President Johnson, although Barry Goldwater might be in that position. The task of the President is the loneliest and most responsible job in the United States.

The overwhelming problems facing the President are sufficient to make even the least informed an anxious citizen. The problems here, in the underdeveloped world, and on international scenes present a format to keep a great many people up in the wee hours.

The United States has set a record of the longest unbroken economic advance in its history, but although the outlook is good, such a trend cannot be made permanent. The President will be concerned with the tax cut, and the effects on the economy will remain to be seen. Businesses will wait anxiously to see if Government in Washington is going to reduce its role in business, or increase it, both of which will ensue many a headache.

The study on the ending of the draft will be completed in 1965, and possibly by 1967 the draft will be eliminated, as it already is in Canada and Britain. This study will certainly bring up many hours of debate and discussion.

Abroad Mr. Johnson faces the walled task of rebuilding splattered American prestige. After the Dallas tragedy, the riots, and the recent name-calling and mud-slinging, cries of war-monger and immorality, we ask who is going to scrape the mud off the walls in order to present America to the other nations as united and assert "In God We Trust"?

The Department of State, controversial Dean Rusk, and foreign policy will bear watching and cause many a comment from Americans as the war in Viet-Nam continues, and with the surety of new crises to develop.

Yes, we reiterate, we do not envy this "white collar" job of President Johnson.

Step Forward To Progress

By SHIRLEY MANNING

The people of North Carolina voted on and passed the school bond issue, and we hail this as a great step forward in the progress for better education.

The people of North Carolina desire and demand better education for their children, and they expressed their desire for higher standards. The increasing school enrollment of 21,000 more students per year is another reason voters said "yes" on November 3.

Another factor in the school bonds being passed is the shifting population of the state from rural areas to urban and suburban areas which has overloaded the urban forced to build new schools to con-area schools. The rural areas are solidate the small schools resulting from the decreasing population.

Another reason for the school bond is that many counties have reached, or are approaching, the statutory limit for school bond indebtedness, or are burdened with large financial obligations for other essential services. Lastly, the majority of classrooms built before 1930 are obsolete. These 21,701 obsolete rooms are either built of combustible materials, or do not meet present day building codes, or are inadequate to house modern educational programs.

County and city boards of education report that they need:

7516 classrooms
536 libraries
484 shops
575 laboratories
294 home economics rooms
482 music rooms
385 multi-purpose rooms
388 lunchrooms
236 auditoriums
291 gymnasiums

Classrooms are sorely needed; a total of 11,187 additional rooms "to accommodate adequately the pupils enrolled as of September, 1964."

With so great a need staring the voters of North Carolina in the eye as URGENT, the only logical thing to do was adopt the suggestion of the 1963 General Assembly to utilize $100,000,000 for this pressing need.

Nelson Dudley Exhibits Stoneware Ceramics

The ceramics of Nelson Dudley of Pembroke State College show a variety of sizes and shapes.

Nelson Dudley, who has exhibited at the College before, is well known for his works in ceramics. Dudley is a native of Greenville and a graduate of East Carolina College. He holds two degrees in art.

Dudley's works are displayed in the glass cabinets in the lobby of Hoggard Hall and they have been received so well that half of his exhibit has been sold.

Presently employed in the art department of Pembroke College he has exhibited his stone ware ceramics in most of North Carolina's major cities. An exhibit by his students was most interesting when presented last year at Wilmington College. It is evident that Dudley's teaching has had a great effect on the Pembroke students and this may be seen in the excellence of their work.

This exhibit consists of stone ware ceramics of varied sizes and shapes and the viewer may easily see the careful execution of the materials that go into the making of any piece Nelson Dudley ceramics.

SIGMA PHI KAPPA PLEDGES TWO

(Editor's note: In the first issue of the Seahawk, Sigma Phi Kappa was erroneously referred to as Pi Kappa Alpha.)

The Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternity has announced that it has pledged two more members, Tim Chappell and Richard Oranstein, who were sworn in by President Harry Rickenbacker and Vice President Will Gemmell. Sigma Phi Kappa also announces David Ansel and Ronnie Newsome as social affiliates.

Saturday night, October 11, the brothers honored their new pledges with a dance at the Winter Park Community Center with music by the Excels. The pledges and their dates were introduced during the evening and a going away gift was presented to Cam Davis in honor of the guidance and advice Davis has given the fraternity in their appeal for affiliation with the national Pi Kappa Alpha.

During the following week the fraternity played two football games. Intramural chairman, pledge Sam Smith hopes to improve Sigma Phi Kappa's 1-1 record when Bobby Greer returns, having been absent with a thigh injury.

Saturday, October 24, after a football game between the brothers and pledges, the fraternity had a cook-out and juke box party at the house. Faculty advisor Pete Daniel and his wife served as chaperones.

Due to a recent ruling of the Student Affairs Committee the house at 4802 Cedar Avenue was not approved for the fraternity's use. The fraternity is now readying for submission for approval several applications for new houses.

Veteran Cheerleaders Left Out Of Story

In the last issue of the Seahawk, the new cheerleaders for 1964-1965 were introduced, but the regular squad was not named due to a printing error.

Jean Thorpe, June Cherry, Margaret Lassiter, Gloria Shepherd, Sherry Lackey, Carol Smith, and Ann Jackson compose this group.

The tasks of these cheerleaders are two-fold in that they also attend the three practice sessions held in order to teach those trying out for the squad the yells and procedures necessary for the audition by faculty members to choose the new additions.

Three Students Participate In Senior Honors Program

A Senior Honors Program was adopted in the spring of 1964 for Wilmington College to come in effect at the beginning of the 1964 fall quarter.

Dr. Will D. DeLoach, of the chemistry department, is chairman of the Honors Program Committee. Other committee members are Dr. Lloyd O. Bishop, Dr. Amelie B. Blyth, Dean J. Marshall Crews, Frank K. Bonney, Dr. Harol Hulon, Thomas McCall, and Duncan P. Randall.

Students who have a grade point average of 3.0 (a B average) or better over the first three years, and who are recommended by their major department heads, are eligible for the honors program. This includes independent study in the major field during the senior year. This independent study, which is not to replace required work in the major program, should be research and should be started in the fall and continue throughout the senior year.

This work is to be done under the supervision of a faculty member, and each topic must be approved by the department head. Each honor student will register for two quarter hours for each quarter of the senior year and receive a grade of "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory."

There are three seniors participating in the honors this quarter: Barbara Dannaher, Phyllis Boyles and Nancy Hodges. All three of these students are Elementary Education majors. Others will be eligible as they become seniors.

A paper reporting the work must be written by the student and a copy presented to the Honors Program Committee, which will turn it over to the library after approving it. Upon completion of the paper the student will appear before the committee to discuss and defend his work in an oral examination.

Recognition will be given students who complete the honors program by marking their diplomas and transcripts "With Honors", and by appropriate statements at graduation.

Transfer students who are juniors are eligible for the honors program, providing: (1) they have completed at least one year at Wilmington College (2) they have at least a 3.0 average in all work transferred here, and (3) they have at least a 3.0 average in all work done at Wilmington College.

To receive the degree with honors, in addition to other requirements, the student must have at least a 3.0 cumulative grade point average over all four years of work for the bachelor's degree.

Pi Sig House Reopens: Obtains House Mother

The Pi Sig House was reopened after being vacant for two months since the fraternity did not have a house mother.

Mrs. Mae Keel is the new housemother. Mrs. Keel, retired practical nurse, has held positions in Charlotte, Raleigh, and here in Wilmington. Mrs. Keel helps plan the meals of the fraternity and supervises the house duties.

There have been three community welfare projects undertaken by Pi Kappa Phi. The first project is the collecting of wearable clothes for two boys who are less-fortunate. The fraternity has started selling candy; the proceeds will benefit the mentally retarded children of the area. A Christmas party for the mentally retarded children of junior high age has been planned.

Pi Sigma Mu, a colony of Pi Kappa Phi, has received a letter from Dan K. Moore, and Alumnus of Pi Kappa Phi. Mr. Moore personally thanked the fraternity for their help toward the success of his election as Governor.

Walter Thrift Displays Contemporary Art

The opening of the Walter Thrift Collection of Contemporary Art was on Sunday December 6, 1964, in Hoggard Hall of the College.

This exhibition is composed of fifty drawings, paintings, and prints from the personal collection of Walter Thrift, Virginia Beach artist. The works run the gamut from realistic to nonobjective with the only criterion used in the selection being that of cost. This is a collection which could be bought on College Theatre And Thaliens Give 'Amahl and the Night Visitors'

Gian-Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors," a warm and delightful tale about a shepherd boy who travels with the Wise Men to give thanks at the birth of the Christ child, will be presented by the Wilmington College Theatre and the Thaliens on December 17, 18, and 19 at 8:30 p.m. in Thalian Hall.

Director of drama, Doug W. Swink and Walter D. Ross, director of music at the First Baptist Church, and choreographer Dorothy Nesbitt, have combined their talents to present the second dramatic production of the season.

Jimmy McDaniel will sing the title role of Amahl, and Joy Lee will portray his Mother. Wayne Robinson as King Kasper, Bob Tilley as King Melchior, and Wally Warr as King Balthazar, are the three wise men. Jimmy Frazer plays the role of the page.

Members of the chorus of shepherds and villagers are Jimmy Allen, Susan Baggett, Robert Daniel, Rosemary Green, Janet Holden, Ike Jones, Theresa Losan, Wooten Moseley, Peggy Nofsinger, Richard Ramirez, Leona Sellers, Dian Samith, Larry Stanley, Timmy Trussell, Jane Tusch, and Lloyd Williams.

Story Of Crippled Shepherd

"Amahl and the Night Visitors" is the story of a little crippled shepherd called Amahl, who lives with his mother, an impoverished widow.

The three wise men on their way to Bethlehem stop at the hut and ask to be taken in for the night. Amahl and his mother welcome them as well as they can, and are much astonished at the splendor of their robes and the many gifts which they carry. The wise men explain that the gifts are for a newborn babe, the Christ child.

Little Amahl gives the three kings his wooden crutch, his most precious possession and in doing so he is miraculously healed of his lameness.

As dawn comes and the men prepare to depart, Amahl joins them in their journey to Bethlehem to give thanks and rejoice.

Any Wilmington College student may attend just by showing his student activity card. Tickets for these performances may be obtained at the door.

Banquet Honors Club Sweetheart

The Circle K Club held its annual banquet for this year's Sweetheart, Miss Gloria Shepherd, on November 20, 1964, at the Neptune Restaurant.

Club members were present along with three special guests. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lupton, and Mr. Joe Reeves, President of the Wilmington Kiwanis Club.

Mr. Reeves gave a talk on the history of the Kiwanis Club and Circle K.

Due to a vacancy in the office of secretary - treasurer, Hal Spencer was appointed to fill this vacancy.

Anyone wishing to join Circle K can come by H-205 on Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m.

Future Of WC May Be A Part Of UNC

Dr. John T. Hoggard, chairman of the Wilmington College board of trustees, predicts that Wilmington College will be a part of the University of North Carolina within the next few years.

"It is my hope that Wilmington College will someday become a part of the Greater University," Dr. Hoggard said.

He noted that Charlotte College's bid for a campus of the University of North Carolina was given the "green light" by University trustees on November 12.

The 1963 General Assembly granted Charlotte, Wilmington and Asheville-Biltmore Colleges senior-college status and adopted the college trio as state supported institutions.

Dr. William M. Randall. College president, said that the college here made its bid for senior status a year ago, but as far as he knows, "we aren't being considered for annexation with the University of North Carolina at the present time."

P. E. Building Ready January

College board member Fred Graham, who is chairman of the building committee, reported that the Physical Education Building is scheduled for occupancy around the middle of January.

Graham also said that no action has been taken on the proposed arts and sciences building as the department of administration was requesting that the architect make minor adjustments in the original plan.

Trustees Give Plans For Nursing Program

The proposed nursing program at Wilmington College was discussed at the November 24 meeting of the College's Board of Trustees.

The two-year course for an associate degree in nursing will begin September, 1965, if a state appropriation is granted, according to Dr. William M. Randall, president.

"We are bound to start at this time in order to close the gap in the local nursing program which will be caused by the closing of James Walker Memorial Hospital," Dr. Randall said. "But an associate degree belongs in junior colleges or community colleges and it is probably a bad idea to start a two-year program in a four-year college."

Dr. Randall said he had talked with Dr. Dallas Herring of Rose Hill, chairman of the State Board of Education, and with M. J. McLeod, president of the Cape Fear Technical Institute, in regards to turning the program over to the Institute at the proper time.

"I would suggest, that we go ahead and begin the nursing a limited budget. Many of the works in this collection are award winners."

The Nelson Dudley ceramics will remain on display through the month of December, as many of the ceramic works have been added to the Dudley exhibition.

The Walter Thrift Collection will remain on view on weekdays from 8:00 a.m. until 9:30 through January 8, 1965.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR

EDITORIALS:

Commercialization of Christmas is not all bad; in fact a whole lot of it is good. The fact that gift-giving occupies a very important place in the total concept of Christmas is good in various ways. One aspect of Christmas gift-giving is the fact that it enables us to express our love and appreciation to someone. Only when this gift-buying motive is substituted for the mere exchange of gifts, or the idea that it is expected does the commercialization become tainted.

Another good aspect of commercialization of Christmas is that it has made people more positively aware of the holiday. Advertisers instill a spirit of the approaching festival nearly a month before December 25th. We begin to tingle with excitement and expectation. Only when we fail to remember the 25th as celebration of the birth of the Lord Jesus Christ, or when the true meaning occupies last place in our minds with the other fronts moving evermore in preference to Christ's birthday, does the season take on a "bought" atmosphere.

Commercialization is good, because it brings families nearer and makes them conscious of the family as a whole. Only the power of advertising could make us envision our loved ones in the most gorgeous gown, or the most distinguished sport jacket; or our children, or brothers and sisters getting tricycles, dolls, and trains. It is only natural to want these things at Christmas time, the God instituted time of the most precious giving. Just when we forget or let it slip our minds that God is the supreme giver of gifts, is gift-giving a poor substitute for the true Christmas spirit.

If it were not for the commercialization of Christmas, our homes, churches, and stores would not be in the gala-decorated state that they assume shortly before or after Thanksgiving. People who lack ingenuity, creativeness, and imagination can visit any store and suddenly find themselves provided with a complete scheme for their homes. Only through the wonders of factories and the manufacturers the possibilities of a beautifully decorated store on a huge scale looms feasible. Thanks should go to the manufacturers for their beautiful, inspiring, thought provoking, spirit-provoking decorations, cards, stationery, wreaths, and other wonderful decorating paraphernalia.

People do not spend a fortune on decorating because it is expensive! They spend because they are filled with a sense of the beautiful feeling of love and wonder at the Christmas Spirit.

Commercialization of Christmas cannot be blamed totally on the merchant. This is the widest misconception of the Christmas season. The commercialization of Christmas is in the heart of the individual, if it is anywhere. If Christmas is too commercialized for the individual, then he must look inside his own heart to discover why. If one even has time to stop and think and dwell only on the commercial aspects of Christmas, then he should revise his own way of thinking. When he places emphasis on the true meanings of gift-purchasing, decorating, and Santa Claus, he will find that he doesn't have time to think of the commercial aspects.

Staff Sends Yuletide Greetings

The 1964-65 staff of The Seahawk would like to express its very best wishes to the student body and faculty of Wilmington College for a joyous Christmas season with a good new year to come.

The staff, composed of Shirley Manning as editor, Bill Weir as business manager, Hugh Paschal as sports editor, Ruth Ann Hamilton as feature editor and Judy Ely as news editor, would also like to take this opportunity to acquaint the students with the operation of the Seahawk.

A tentative schedule is set up for the publication of the paper, that of once every two weeks. Although sometimes due to late copy or other unforeseeable circumstances, the paper is published a few days later.

The Seahawk is sent to colleges throughout North Caroline, South Carolina, and Virginia. Bill Caton handles this transaction and is also responsible for mailing each of the trustees of Wilmington College a copy of the Seahawk. He is the exchange editor.

Don Skipper, new in the news paper business, is charged with the photography for the newspaper, and often goes beyond the call of duty to obtain a photo.

Copy for the paper is obtained through the combined efforts of all the editors, and from various representatives from clubs and fraternities. Each organization on campus is in charge of the news that will be released for his organization and should have a club reporter to relate each meeting and forthcoming events for publication.

And It Came To Pass . . .

And it came to pass in December, 1964, that a great holiday approached across the land; families began buying presents and hurrying here and there. Children began being good when somebody was looking. People began to hum and laugh, and fat men began ringing bells on street corners. Children stared into store windows at dancing bears, as orchestral monkeys repeated their acts. People began to cut trees out of the forests and put them into their houses and adorn them with bulbs and tinsel. Mysterious glances met disappearing glances. Packages and bundles wrapped anonymously in brown paper were smuggled onto top shelves in hall closets. Warnings of be good were heard, along with seeming obscure remarks. "Cheers!" rang out across the land.

One night during the nearing of the great evening, a family of Two, who had made Their way across country and endured many hardships because of Their method of travel and the Wife's pregnancy, approached a city. Having no relatives or friends in the town and being poor, They had no alternative but to beg for lodging for the night.

Looking up through the fog of snow salting the earth, They saw a sign saying Best Hotel. "Let's stop here," said He.

"Tis fine," she replied, "for I am weary and think perhaps my time is near."

But after inquiry: they were told by the proprietor of Best Hotel "I am sorry but our suites are filled with conventions, and our ballrooms are filled with parties and gay times; there is no room even in the kitchens, as they are filled with high chefs and expensive foods and tasty liquors; and the stables, as you so queerly put it, are filled with high power automobiles and attendants who uh . . . would not know the first thing about servicing your uh . . . vehicle. Uh . . . you didn't have reservations, did you? . . . I'm dreadfully sorry, but there is not room at this, our Best Hotel."

So He and She went carefully about their way through the city and finally stopped at Nicest Theater, where He applied again for a place to spend the night; but the manager, glancing rather red-faced from Him to Her, said, "I'm sorry, but you see we are filled up with war, illicitly, sex, crime, monsters, and the like; and I hardly think that the Lady would be comfortable here."

On They traveled, She being more weary with each step. Soon they came to a sign saying Court House. They thought surely They might find lodging here, but the chairman of the board answered, "I'm sorry, but we are filled with discord, discrepancy, corruption, jealousy, and — what party do you belong to? . . . well, anyway, we have no room for accommodation."

So they went on, cold with no warmth, hungry with no food, poorly clothed, thirsty without water. Continuing on through the town, They approached the Police Station. He went in and asked if They might find a place to sleep for the night. The chief replied, "I'm sorry, but our cells are filled with drunks, murderers and thieves; and we simply do not have any room for you people."

They turned away once more and slowly continued through the city until They approached a School House, where He, upon turning to face his uncomfortable Wife, said, "Surely we'll be able to find a place to stay here." The custodian answered though, "I'm sorry, but these doors are bolted and locked in defiance of a court ruling stipulating what color and race a person should be. I can't let anybody in."

So the Two went on Their way, more tired than ever, but determined to find somewhere to go in and find rest and peace. Finally They stopped at Best Restaurant, knocked, and asked the proprietor if there was a place where They might sleep. "Now I've heard of everything—a sleep-in," the proprietor said, where upon he slammed the door and went about whistling a jingling tune about another man who was very much overweight already, but whom the proprietor was certain to let in for a snack and a night cap.

Sadly He turned to his dear Wife and said, "We'll try another place." As They turned to go, they passed a man who was carrying packages and trying to hold the hand of a child. The tired Two stopped to question him as to where They might find help, but the man was so preoccupied that he did not even listen and before He could utter a word, the man pressed a handful of coins into His hand and hurried on down the street, mumbling about what the world was coming to these days.

With snow on Their eyelashes and cold fingers to brush it away, They paused and both contemplated as to where they might possibly try once more. Suddenly They looked nearby at a small shack where only one light flickered through a pane. They quickly went to the door and knocked. The distraught man who cracked the door began immediately by making apologies and excuses by saying that they did not have any money; they had no influence; they did not want to buy anything; they had no guest room; and they had very little to eat. Their mode of transportation was outdated, and once the man had kept a wallet he'd found which didn't belong to him. Their house was in disorder, the dishes were undone, and the canary was sick.

"Tis not service, money, or food that we want from you," said He. "Tis just to come in."

The door cracked further upon this simple request, and the man and woman inside peered more closely at the Couple framed against the snow. Moments passed with the falling of the flakes. Then an aura of peace pervaded the room inside, and peace in the eyes of the Couple outside was reflected in the love in the eyes of the four as the door finally was flung open wide.

VARSITY REPORT

A QUESTION OF A MEMORY

Perhaps it is fitting that the 100th point scored by the Seahawk team against the Mars Hill outfit was chalked up by a player wearing number 40 on his jersey. You see, that was the number worn by the greatest basketball player ever to don a Wilmington College uniform—Gene Bogash. It seems like only yesterday when his sure eye and steady hand led the 'Hawks to victory after victory before their loyal fans. Time after time the name of Bogash led the list of scorers at the completion of a game.

Yes, Gene Bogash was a true champion and the epitomy of sportsmanship both on and off the basketball court. He was a player to be respected by friend and foe alike, and that respect was granted by all who knew him. They couldn't help but like him. He was quiet, shy, unassuming; never one to seek the limelight, but always giving credit to his teammates because, he argued, basketball is no one man game. It requires teamwork, he used to say. Gene never had any trouble with teamwork, he used to say. Gene never had any trouble with teamwork. He knew he could always count on his fellow players and they, in turn, knew they could count on him never to "showboat" merely to hear the approval of the fans.

The fans themselves recognized the greatness of their star center and after he led the 'Hawks to national ranking in the National Junior College Athletic Association's annual basketball tournament they sought a way to express their appreciation for his outstanding effort. When it was learned that he was to realize a long-held ambition by playing for Drake University in the tough Missouri Valley Conference they decided that his memory was to be preserved by retiring permanently his jersey bearing the number 40.

This was done in an impressive ceremony before the assembled student body upon the team's return from the national tournament. At that time his name was engraved on a trophy honoring him as the team's most valuable player and he was assured that no Seahawk would ever again wear number 40.

Why then, we must ask ourselves, has this promise been broken? Why has number 40 been taken out of mothballs after only one year? Surely a team being supported by half of the entire student activity fund of the college can afford the price of a new jersey. After all, each year in the past the members of the squad have each had their names embroidered on the capes of their warm-up jackets. It would take only a few dollars to restore number 40 to its rightful place.

With the completion of the new gymnasium such a place will be provided where all can see and remember his accomplishments. This writer suggests that jersey number 40 be permanently placed on display in the trophy case in the gymnasium and that, as was promised, no other player ever be issued that number again.

Seahawks To Travel To Portsmouth Tomorrow

Tomorrow night the Seahawks journey north to take on the Lions of Frederick College at Portsmouth, Va. Coach Bob Hodges, former East Carolina College cage standout, promises to sport a seasoned and experienced squad in their duel with Coach Bill Brooks' charges.

Led by Tex Murry, one of the top 500 scorers in the nation last season, and Bernie Flynn, a native Wilmingtonian, the Lions will go against Jay Neary, Larry Edens and company.

On The Road
In their second game of the season December 1, held in Atlanta against Georgia State College, the Seahawks, after getting off to a rather slow start, controlled the backboards and came roaring back to take a 98-71 victory.

Coach Dick Wehr, a former All-American at Rice University, had his team hitting from the outside during the game's early stages but they were unable to continue their torrid pace throughout the contest. With their superior height and their opponents shooting from outside and unable to get many rebounds, the Seahawks dominated the defensive side of the game, controlling the ball and sweeping the backboards clean.

Season Opener

Earlier, on November 21, the Seahawks opened their cage season at home by handing the Mars Hill College Lions a crushing 108-81 defeat behind the 18-point effort of Jay Neary. The 'Hawks never trailed in the contest as Coach Brooks cleared the bench in using 14 players. The starting crew of Neary, Edens, Al Thiry, Butch Budd, and Marshall Hamilton accounted for only 69 of the team's total of 108 points, the subs picking up the remainder.

"Miss Nancy Ramsour has been chosen Miss Seahawk"

Christmas Tree Costs Loom

The traditional evergreen Christmas tree is quickly being replaced by plastic. Disappearing also is the custom of families chopping down trees in the forest and proudly lugging them home.

Instead, Dad goes to the corner store, any corner, and purchases a tree. He will contribute anywhere from $1.00 to $9.00 of the $155 million that is estimated to make the combined total that will be spent on Christmas trees this year. Fifty-five million of that amount will be spent on artificial trees, as three out of every 10 sold will not be a live one.

It is difficult to imagine an American not preferring a real tree to an aluminum or plastic one, but the artificial ones are becoming cheaper and are looking more natural each year, and procurement is simpler.

Government buildings, hospitals and other institutions are banning natural trees because of the fire hazard, but despite this, there are still many people left who would not think of having anything but a real tree in their homes for the Christmas season.

Will he have him a robot to pilot the wheel?

NATIVE CUBAN ADOPTS WILMINGTON

Dr. Antolin Gonzales del Valle Rios, a newcomer to the Wilmington College faculty is with the modern language department. These are his answers when interviewed for THE SEAHAWK:

Q. Please explain your Cuban ancestry and acquaint us with your immediate family.

A. My grandfather arrived in Cuba in 1830. He came from Asturias, a beautiful region of the northern part of Spain. He married a Cuban and had four children.

My parents were born in Cuba. I was also born in Cuba. My wife is a Cuban.

I have six children. Antolin is an electrical engineering student; Conchita is a science physics, and mathematics student; Kathy is a student at Ashland College, Ohio, Luis and Alicia are students at New Hanover High School, and Carlos is a student at Chestnut School.

Q. How is Christmas celebrated in Cuba?

A. You are asking me how is Christmas in Cuba. The answer to this is short: today there are no Christmas in Cuba, for this Christian tradition is not used any more there since Cuba is ruled by the Communists.

But now I shall tell you how the Christmas was in Cuba before 1959. The whole country celebrated joyfully Jesus' birth. In every home one could hear Christmas songs. In the churches masses were offered to Christ. The commercial trees were adorned artistically. The 24th of December we celebrated what we call the "Good Night" (Noche buena) by having dinner with the whole family. On the 25th we celebrated the first day of Christmas with parties and dances. On the 31st we said goodbye to the past year. On the 6th of January Christmas ended and the three Magic Kings gave presents to the children.

There were Christian Christmas and happy Christmas because Cuba was free and the Cuban family lived united.

Q. What has been the extent of your education and teaching career?

A. I have spent my whole life teaching and studying. In Santa Clara I founded and directed a private school. I was Professor of Spanish (grammar, composition, literary theory, Spanish literature) in the Normal School for Teachers of Las Villas, an when I came from Cuba I was teaching at the Central University of Las Villas.

I have some professional grades, among them:

Bachelor in Letters and Sciences, School Teacher's Diploma, Master of Arts—Ph.D. — (University of Havana), journalist, publicist, draftsman, penmanship, consultant handwriting analyst.

I was General Director of the Superior and Secondary Education of the Republic of Cuba.

I have published many books. They include:

Grammar and Composition, History of Spanish Literature, The Poetry in the School, Handwriting Analysis and Theory, Clinic of Handwriting, Reading and Language Teaching, Teaching of Drawing, Treatise of Penmanship, Course of Study of the Education College of the Central University of Las Villas, Cervantes: Critical Study, Romanarh: Speech, Handwriting (4 vol.), Architecture of the Letter and The Art in the School.

Q. What are the conditions which brought you to this country.

A. I left my native land in September, 1961, after I recognized that Cuba had lost her liberty and was a satellite of the U.S.S.R. I left Cuba because I am not a Communist and because it was my responsibility and duty to save my children from the atrocities of the Communist doctrine.

I came to the United States because it is a country of democracy and freedom.

I also came to perform my duty as an educator which is to continue teaching.

In Miami I taught Spanish, and now I am teaching at Wilmington College, which is a very good educational institution. I find myself very happy here because professors and students form a great family, a family with love, respect, a responsibility.

I live at 221 N. 25th St., and I like Wilmington very much.

Thalians Will Present 'Look Homeward Angel'

"Look Homeward, Angel," is undeniable and frequently officious such as Mrs. Marie Wolfe's autobiographical novels, will be presented February 19, 20, and 21 by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association, according to Doug W. Swink, director.

Winner of the Pulitzer Prize in playwriting and of the New York Critics' Award as the best play of the 1937 season, "Look Homeward, Angel" features a cast of 20, and tells the story of the family of Eugene Gant. Written for the stage by playwright Ketti Frings, the comedy-drama is actually a chronicle of Wolfe's own boyhood in Asheville, N. C.

In the play, Eugene Gant (David March) is a gangling restless youth of 17, who is about to go forth to meet a new life at the State University in Chapel Hill, N. C. The mother of the household, Eliza Gant (Evelyn Garvin), is a possessive, well-meaning woman who unwittingly has sacrificed the welfare of the family to the crass demands of maintaining a boarding-house.

Around Eugene swarm his roistering father, W. O. Gant (James Potter); his beloved brother Ben (Wally Carr) who is chained to a job with the local newspaper; a stout-hearted sister Helen (Rosemary Green), and her husband Hugh Barton (Art Joyce) along with the pretty boarder, Laura James (Sally Real, who opens his eyes to love).

And here are also the Dixieland boarders, whose presence

Others in the cast include Ame Elizabeth (Dorothy Pastis), Tarkington (John Day), Mad-Loke Gant (Ron Mihal), and Dr. Maguire (Sandy Carr).

For "Look Homeward, Angel" there was nothing but praise from the seven New York newspaper reviewers. Thomas Wolfe wrote the story originally, Broons Akinson pointed out in the Times, "Miss Frings has given it honor on the stage."

Stage managers for the production will be Carole Benton and Diana Smith. Sound technician is Jay Howard. Make-up artist is Gayle Foyles.

Poster Design is by Jack Lane. Assisting in scenery construction are Sterling Coward, Lee Davis, Herman Johnson, Art Joyce, Acie Kinlaw, Dolan Little, John Nelson, Edward Ward, Wray Ware, and Lionel Yow. Publicity director is Mary C. Hodgin.

Lighting is by Sandy Carr. The scenic designer is Betty Hudson.

Curtain time for "Look Homeward, Angel" is 8:30 p.m. at Thalian Hall. Admission is by Wilmington College Student Activity Card, or Thalian Membership. Tickets will also be on sale at the box office.

Landmark Of Progress

The completion of the gymnasium on the campus is a significant landmark in the growth and speeding progress of Wilmington College.

At the beginning of fall quarter, carpenters, truckloads of supplies, hammering and nailing greeted the students. Slowly the structure took shape. The finished product evokes ethnocentrism as no other building on campus.

Long have the Seahawks been an eclectic club. They have had to "borrow" Brogden Hall, the home of the Wildcats. They have had no real home court in which to host visiting teams nor a place of their own in which to practice. At long last these three ideas will be entirely dispelled as the Seahawks initiate their new home with the first game.

Although the building on the outside was no surprise since all the buildings constructed on campus will follow the traditional modified Georgian architectural pattern. The inside is awe-inspiring with its hugeness, its sparkling newness, dramatic lighting, and lastly its imparting sense of ownership as the student enters the doors and gazes at the lobby trophy case. As one continues through the doors to the main floor as the Seahawks seek victory. History will be made in the bleachers as the spectators react with gladness and sadness. Locker rooms will be the scene of history-making pep talks and instruction.

Yes, a new era opens for Wilmington College and proud we are that it is. May it be the scene of victory for the Seahawks and the other sporting teams here at the college. May it perpetuate a growing pride in the students and native Wilmingtonians of the expansion of one of the finest schools in the south.

COLLEGE GAINS IN PUBLICITY

Wilmington College is fortunate to have a public relations director.

Wilmington College has been virtually ignored by the news media as evidenced by the recent coverage given National Education Week, when every school in SENCLand was mentioned except Wilmington College.

A letter was written in protest by this editor to "Life Around Wilmington" concerning the magazine's failure to mention WC in their special issue on education. "An extensive issue on Wilmington College" was promised in reply to that letter.

Although Wilmington College does not have the enrollment that NHHS has; still there should be adequate coverage of news and events of interest to all citizens.

It was a pleasant surprise to see a full-page spread in the local newspaper recently and possibly with the future efforts of Mrs. Clare Taylor, Wilmington will become known not only as the Home of the Wildcats, SENCLAND and City of a Million Azaleas; but also as the Home of Wilmington College.

Heroic Duck Retired

By Shirley Manning

The little green duck has retired from H-225 involuntarily, but permanently, according to its owner Claude Howell.

The duck has a background that would make any student on campus seem dull in comparison. The duck, long a favorite object as evidenced by its frequent appearance in drawings around the campus, has been the victim and the object of affection by various students beginning last year.

A committee, after careful consideration of the state of the duck's coat decided that it needed painting. So a carefully selected few painted the duck, not nature's color suitable for a duck like he was, but green.

Next time after a little rest, the duck became the object of another incident during which a mobile was created. Some exceptionally talented students were looking for just the right thing to include in their creation, and by the process of elimination or some other process unknown to this reporter, the head of the duck was removed and included in the mobile along with a cigarette butt, pieces of yarn, and hung from the ceiling in the art room.

The last episode involving the duck happened this year in which the art students received a M.D. report (missing ducks). Object of a frantic search, but to no avail, its owner and friend, anxiously awaited some news of the ducks' whereabouts.

Finally an anonymous note was delivered into the hands of its owner and since no ransom was asked, Mr. Howell sought the aid of two of his students to retrieve the duck. But upon their learning of where the duck was, plus their having classes, the two could not immediately rescue the duck. Finally through the heroic efforts of two other students he duck was returned to Mr. Howell who promptly took the duck home — to stay.

The duck had been hoisted to the top of the Student Services Building, beak pointed gallantly toward the Library Building, and left there to weather nature's elements as best it could.

The committee who appointed itself to this daring feat was questioned as to why they took the duck. They simply answered, "Because it was there."

Grant Discusses Bridge Manners

Bridge is not an actor's contest. Using mannerisms to fool opponents is a part of poker or blackjack; but it is frowned upon at the bridge table, because your partner is entitled only to the information conveyed by your bid or play, not the manner in which you made that bid or play.

The selection that follows is entitled "A Primer of Bad Bridge Manners" by T. B. Gracy quoted in The Mad World of Bridge by Jack Osen.

"Before making a doubtful bid or pass-hesitate. With a good hand make a snappy bid. Groan and pass very quickly when you hold a worthless hand. Make business doubles in a firm tone of voice. Make weak informative doubles doubtfully. Glare at partner when his lead does not suit you. Criticize freely partner's bidding and play. Never admit your own mistakes. Credit good playing by your opponents to good luck. Explain in great detail after each hand how skillfully you played it."

We have been guilty of some of these transgressions, especially the last four. What about you?

Another practice at the bridge table which annoys us is the use of time-worn clichés. This poem by Berton Braley, also quoted in the same book illustrates what we mean.

"You're bound to meet him, more or less,
The bird who says, 'Who dealt this mess?'"

To him it's always fresh and new

He pulls it every hand or two
And seems surprise this bit of chaff

Does not, at all times, win a laugh;

And if it never does he will Indubitably, say it still.

Someday somebody is going to rise

And punch his beak and close his eyes.

And spread him 'round the place, with glee.

(Perhaps "somebody" will be me.)

And when his late remains are found

Scattered about upon the ground,

The coroner will say, "Ah, yes;
The question is 'Who dealt this mess?'"

PROGRESSIVE ERA LOOMS AS NEW PLANS DEVELOP

Kenan Building

College officials are moving ahead in advertising bids for the proposed $50,000 Sarah Graham Kenan building.

Both the physical education and the Sarah Graham Kenan buildings were designed by the Associated Architects Leslie N. Boney and Ballard, McKim and Sawyer.

Funds for both structures were appropriated by the 1963 General Assembly, although part of the funds for the physical education structures were supplemented by state funds which the college had when it became a state institution on July 1, 1963.

Construction on the Kenan building is expected to begin March 5, with bid openings set for February 2 at 2:30 p.m. at the college.

This facility was named the Sarah Graham Kenan building in honor of the local benefactress.

The Kenan building will consist of a teaching auditorium for drama and choral study, a music library and recording facilities for use by the music, drama and modern language departments; and about 14 faculty offices.

The new structure will provide for stronger programs in the fine arts and foreign language.

Drama Theatre

The drama theatre will have a seating capacity of 300 and will feature the most modern stage facilities. Light and sound controls, property storage and equipment for "flying pieces of property and scenery" will be provided for with dressing rooms and space for wings and backstage areas.

The art department will have painting and sculpture classrooms, weaving and ceramics labs, and the lobby of the building will have gallery and exhibition space.

College Groups Invited to Perform at New York State Exhibit at World's Fair

Hailed as the "Star of the Show" at the World's Fair, the New York State Exhibit, which last year featured over 67,900 performers from over 1,800 New York non-professional community groups, is inviting college organizations throughout the United States to appear in the Exhibit's huge "Tent of Tomorrow" during the 1965 season of the Fair (April 21st to October 17th, 1965).

College bands, orchestras, choirs, glee clubs, quartets, drum and bugle corps, drill teams, gymnastic teams, combos, hootenanny groups, and virtually all types of college group performances are invited to perform as part of the Special Events program in the mammoth "Tent of Tomorrow". Over 60,000 people witness performances each day.

College organizations wishing to perform are asked to contact the Director of Special Events, New York State Commission on the World's Fair, 1270 Avenue of the Americas (Room 304), New York, New York 10020.

New Gymnasium

The physical education building, inspected by state officials January 12, was approved and it was supposed to open January 18.

However a delay was caused, and it is not definite just when the gym will be in full operation.

The new building is in the traditional modified Georgian architectural style and boasts a gleaming, large regulation court for basketball.

Special arc lighting gives a daylight effect in the large gym area, which will have a special scoreboard listing each player's name.

Two spaces beside each player's name inform spectators when a player enters the game and how many fouls he has.

Above the main floor of the gymnasium area, behind the sliding bleachers, will be two gymnastic areas.

The physical education building also has a smaller gym for handball and girls basketball; hallways lined with pastel tile; offices for coaches, officials, and a nurse; locker and shower rooms for men and for women; a concession stand and trophy case. Georgian marble has a prominent place in the decor of the main lobby.

Popular Quotes

The following quotes are those most widely used in connection with resolutions. Perhaps some will be familiar as 1965 is already one month old we might reflect how our own resolutions match these.

"I will sit down now, but the time will come when you will hear me."

Disraeli-Maiden Speech in the House of Commons.

"I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse—I will not retreat a single inch and I will be heard."

William Lloyd Garrison

"I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all Summer."
Ulysses S. Grant—
Dispatch to Lincoln

"Tell your master that if there were as many devils at Worms as tiles on its roofs, I would enter."

Luther

"Never tell your resolution beforehand."

Life and God are the only superior. God, being an anthropomorphism leaves Life to the test of Genius. Therefore Life is the only "real" Genius. Man is only an interpolator and contingent of Life. The self (man's self) be it solipsism or awareness is inferior to Life. Death is encountered when solipsism penetrates Life. Self is destroyed and awareness try to emulate or when it attempts to extroject. Self never ceases being self but merely ceases. It reaches the Death barrier when it tries to be Life (tries to break the solipsism). Of course Death is a figure meaning limitation. The exact death is brought on through the complete expenditure of an isolated energy system (individual death).

Campbell In New Gym?

Hawks Play Host To Frederick Saturday In Brogden Hall

Fresh from a 90-78 victory over Pembroke here Tuesday night, the Wilmington College Seahawks take on the Frederick Lions in Brogden Hall tomorrow night. Game time is 8 p.m.

The game tomorrow night between the Hawks and Lions will be their third meeting of the year. Each team has one victory.

Revenge will be on the minds of Coach Bill Brooks charges when they take on Campbell College's Camels in the Homcoming contest here Saturday, February 6. It is hoped that the contest can be played in the new gym on the College campus.

Tournament Recap
Prior to the trip south, the Hawks played host to the first annual Wilmington Holiday Tournament and promptly walked off with all the honors by defeating Asheville - Biltmore and Frederick. Frederick, of Portsmouth, Va., copped second place honors while Catawba secured third place by downing Asheville - Biltmore. Guard Jay Neary, the home team's leading scorer, with a 23.7 points per game scoring average racked up the most valuable player award despite seeing only limited action in the two-day affair. The success of the venture practically assures Wilmington basketball fans of an exciting holiday tournament for years to come.

The Pembroke game marked the start of the Hawks last home games which will carry them to the end of the season without another road trip. They will play host to Frederick for the third time this season on January 30. Following this game will be return engagements with Campbell on February 6, Newport News on the 12th, Georgia State on the 19th and Asheville-Biltmore on the 20th for the seasons final.

Most Valuable Player

Flashy Seahawk guard Jay Neary receives congratulations from Dr. William M. Randall on his selection as MVP for the first Wilmington Holiday Tournament.

Bob Hartman — Asheville - Biltmore

Bill Brooks and Earl Allen - Wilmington

Bob Hodges — Frederick

Freshmen Cagers

With Coaches Bill Brooks and Charles Sproles engaged in varsity basketball and wrestling respectively, Coach Earl Allen has turned his attention toward the organization of a freshman basketball team for the Seahawks.

Although under NAIA rules which the Wilmington College Athletic Department has adopted prior to becoming associated with it, freshmen may compete on the varsity level. It is readily apparent to the Seahawk fans that only the most well qualified first-year players will be able to break into the varsity line-up. Therefore, in order to give as many freshmen as possible the experience they will need in order to win varsity berths, a freshman squad is a virtual necessity.

With this in mind, Coach Allen recently set out to organize the team and secure a schedule for the fledglings. The squad members are as follows: centers — L. D. Smith, Ed Straughan, forwards — Jerry Bron, Chuck Lewis; guards — Wayne Bray, Clyde Markley, Mark Young, and Wynn Moore.

The fledglings' next outing will be against Campbell College in the new gymnasium February 6.

THE SEAHAWK will have a special issue on "Freedom" and invites students to express their views on any phase of freedom in the form of a letter to the editor.

VARSITY REPORT

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

The Question of a Memory, II

The response to the last "Varsity Report" has been overwhelming. From all quarters have come like sentiments and equal desire to make things right regarding the memory of the greatest Seahawk. Not since Gene Bogash himself was here has so much interest been displayed in a Wilmington College athlete. The response has indeed been rewarding.

Members of the Hawk basketball team who played with Gene have been especially eager to have him remembered the way his fans intended. They recognize his greatness perhaps more than any of the rest of us because they were his team mates and knew him better than most. Coach Bill Brooks, whose teams Gene paced for three years, is also sympathetic toward the plan to honor his former star. Yet he cannot retire number 40.

Can't Retire 40

It seems that it is no longer practical to retire a number in basketball. Under an almost universally accepted agreement, home team uniforms bear even numbers. Single numbers are generally not employed. Also, in order to facilitate the referees' signals to the official scorer, no single number shall exceed five and there shall be no combination totaling more than ten. This ruling eliminates all but fifteen home-team numbers: 10, 12, 14, 20, 22, 24, 30, 32, 34, 40, 42, 44, 50, 52, and 54. With only fifteen numbers available, it is hardly practical to retire one from service.

Permanent Tribute

Nevertheless, the jersey can be put on display for all to see and remember the performances of the player. Such a tribute will be paid Gene Bogash. Jersey number 40 will be put on permanent display in the new gymnasium's trophy case. Near it will be another tribute, this one to the NJCAA baseball champions of 1963.

Thus it seems that Bo will at last receive his just reward and all will be satisfied—including this columnist who, in the future, will check into the situation thoroughly before mounting his white charter.

Coach Sproles Organizes Seahawk Wrestlers

There's a new sport on the Wilmington College campus these days. It's known as wrestling, and a team comprised of approximately 12 dedicated young men has been formed. Coach Charles Sproles in his first year at the college has been given the task of organizing a grunt 'n groan outfit to compete on the intercollegiate level.

Coach Sproles faces a difficult task, especially this year, in that he has only two boys on the team who have any experience whatsoever in the sport. While this is the case there are, nevertheless, several former varsity high school athletes in the squad little easier. All of this in addition to the fact that many of the schools in the area which might serve as opposition to the Seahawks' fledgling team are themselves in the same boat: on the schedule, is in the process of forming a team.

In wrestling there are eight classes or groupings arranged according to the participants' weights. Weights begin a 123 pounds and rise periodically to the unlimited weight classification," Coach Sproles stated recently. Like the golf team, the wrestling team will be organized according to a ladder with only the top contestant in each category being eligible to compete in tournaments.

The team is basing much of its hope for a successful first season on the performance of 6-0, 150 pound David Askins of Goldsboro, who, in 1958, placed third in the state in the 98 pound high school class, and Richard Hudson, a 5-11, 150 pound freshman from Virginia Beach. Hudson, while prepping at Virginia Military Academy last year, won several varsity matches and the league championship in the 147 pound class. There promises to be quite a battle for the right to represent the Seahawks in the 167 pound class this year.

"Maybe I should have been a piano player."

"Hey, here I am, over here."

"You can sit back and relax when you're winning."

"Oh, why did I ever get in this business anyway?"

Art Winners Named

Winners of the Third Annual Lower Cape Fear Art Exhibition at Wilmington College were announced with college art students taking most of the recognitions.

Dr. Joseph Sloane, head of the Art Department of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill judged the show. Out of 130 entries, only 35 were selected for the show. Over 100 southeastern counties were represented by the entries.

Two students from the college received honorable mention: Archie Alderman for his print, "Ocean Side," and Linda Woody for her sculpture, "Composition No. 2."

According to Claude Howell, head of the Wilmington College art department, there will be a one-man showing opening next in Hoggard Hall on March 7. Anne Pollard from Winston-Salem will exhibit a collection of prints, and drawings.

Dr. Sloane also spoke on "The Destruction of the Renaissance" to the art classes while here at the college.

OPEN HOUSE OBSERVED

Sigma Phi Kappa opened its doors, February 7, from 2:00 a.m. to 5:00 a.m., to the citizens of Wilmington.

The brothers of the fraternity were happy to show their newly furnished home to the public. However, it was not just the idea of showing their new home, but to show the appreciation for the furnishings presented to them by all the good people of Wilmington, according to the brothers.

Gloria Shepard is crowned Homecoming Queen

The annual Wilmington College Homecoming got off to a big start Thursday, February 4, 1965 with a bonfire, pep rally, and a variety show sponsored by the cheerleaders.

The bonfire and pep rally at 7:00 p.m. started festivities, and the ball players were introduced. The variety show, from 7:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m., started with Carol Smith doing a modern dance, and Cori Collins doing a snake charming act. The Homecoming Court was then introduced, followed by hula dancers Margaret Lassiter, Ann Jackson, Louise Lewis, and Jean Thorpe.

After a jazz dance by Magne Fladd, Betty Kay Carol and Sherry Lackey did a comedy routine. Folk singers Tom McNair, John Day, and Roy Frantz entertained next. Afterward, a group of clowns led by Gloria Shepard appeared. Master of ceremonies was Sam Smith, and the fat lady was Julie Memory. An informal dance in the Pub with music by the Shufflers ended the night's festivities.

Friday night a folk concert featuring the Huntsmen and the Coachmen was held in the new gym. At intermission, Gloria Shepherd, sponsored by Circle K, was crowned Homecoming Queen. Members of the Homecoming Court and their sponsors were: Pat Beasley, the Cillegate Civitans; Barbara Berry, Modern Language Club; Jo Ann Bostic, B.S.U.; Ans Bryant, Engineers' Club; Parker Bryant, Student N.E.A.; Janis Burris, Panmathan Society; Betty Kay Carroll, Cheerleaders; Cori Collins, Scripps Society; Jan Darby, Sigma Phi Kappa; Patsy Futchs, Alpha Chi Sigma; Sally Johnson, Westminster Fellowship; Miriam Koski, Debate Club; Margaret Lassiter, Fledgling; Carolyn Mosely, WILC radio; Kitty O'Brien, Pi Sigma Mu; Marthana Rhue, Pep Club; Jean Thorpe, Seahawk; and Camilla White, Student Senate.

Saturday night started with an exciting but disappointing game between the Seahawks and the Campbell Camels. Campbell won 91 to 88 in overtime. Following the game a dance was held in the Pub with music provided by the Kingbees. Thus ended the 1965 Wilmington College Homecoming.

David March, former Wilmington College student, will star in the forthcoming production of "Look Homeward, Angel" to be presented by the Wilmington College Theatre and the Thelians. Production dates are slated for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, February 19, 20 and 21 at Thalian Hall with the curtain at 8:30 p.m.

David, a pupil of Uta Hagen, now resides in New York City where he has done extensive work in professional theatre, television and summer stock. In television his most notable performance was with Lauren Bacall in "Mr. Broadway" and he has also taken supporting roles on the popular daytime serial "Edge of Night." His Off-Broadway credits include "Carousel," "Black Monday" by the creator of "The Defenders" and "Goli Soursoup." In summer stock David has appeared with Howard Morris in "You Never Know" and in "Captain's Paradise" with Ray Heatherton. At Stowe, Vermont Playhouse, he starred in "A Taste of Honey" and "The Beautiful People."

One of his most worthy contributions to theatre has been in the field of children's shows which he has written, directed, and produced for the benefit of the handicapped children in various hospitals throughout New York City. He is now at work on a children's Easter program to be presented sometime in April.

NHC Leads Enrollment

With 612 men and 414 women, the Winter Quarter enrollment at Wilmington College totals 1,026.

New Hanover county leads with 656 students, Brunswick is in second place with 92, and Pender third with 59.

Forty-one counties and 15 states are represented. Virginia leads with 13 students. South Carolina with 8, and New Jersey third with 6 students.

The freshman class is the largest with 267 men and 121 women making a total of 388.

The sophomore class is second in number with 252 students, of whom 172 are men and 80 are women.

The senior class is the smallest. Including 61 men and 38 women there is a total of 99 in that class.

Eighteen nurses are present this quarter and 44 special and unclassified students are enrolled, with 57 participating in extension classes.

Mr. March concedes that his early training in dramatics at Wilmington College earned him a scholarship to Butler University in Indianapolis. While a student here, David appeared in "He," "Give Us Time to Sing" and two Wilmington College Straw-Hat productions.

Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid" and Sandy Wilson's musical-comedy "The Boy Friends."

In "Look Homeward, Angel" David plays the part of Thomas Wolfe during a turning point in the young author's life. Appearing as his mother and father are Evelyn Garvin and Jim Potter respectively. Thomas' brothers are portrayed by Wally Warr and Ron Mihai with Rosemary Green as his sister. The boarders of the Dixie-land Boarding House include: Mary C. Hodgkin, Bill Weir, Eliza Collins, Betsey Talley, Tina Forester, William King, and Deedie Bullock. Thomas' first love Laura James is played by Sally Rea and Art Joye is seen as his brother-in-law. Sandy Carr appears in the role of the doctor while Dorothy Pastis as Madame Elizabeth cavorts with Tarkington, played by David Stone. Ray Talley plays the scheming Wil Fentland.

Stage managers for the production are Carole Benton and Diana Smith with Calvin Doss acting as Technical Consultant. Jay Howard is handling the sound with Sandy Carr and Hoxie Foster doing the lighting; and Deedie Bullock and Eleonore Howland, the costumes. Betty Thison designed the set and with the aid of Ann Smith and June Swart is serving as scenic artist. The two-story house is being constructed by Sterling Coward. Lee Davis, Herman Johnson, Art Joye, Acie Knudsen, Dolan Little, John Nelson, Edward Ward, Wray Ware, Anne West, and Lionel Yow. Mary C. Hodgkin is serving as publicity chairman and Gayle Foyles and Sam Garner are the make-up artists. Jack Lane has designed the poster. The Thespians of Hanover, New Hanover High School will serve as ushers.

Doug W. Swink, head of the Department of Dramatic Arts, is the director of this third production of the joint efforts of the Wilmington College Theatre and Thelians for this season. College students will be admitted free on their Student Activity Card. Tickets will also be on sale at the box office.

Controversial Speaker Law Necessary Ban For Campuses

Does the freedom of speech give a person the right to stand up in a crowded theater and yell "Fire"? Of course not—not any more than the freedom of speech gives a communist the right to stand on a college campus and calmly exploit the overthrow of the United States Government!

The speaker ban law, controversial as it may seem, takes its place right along with every other law that has been passed in that they are also controversial. There has never been, isn't, and never will be, a law that pleases everyone. Contrarily today, the more controversial a law is the more it is deemed in error. This is not so, but rather the importance of a law can more truthfully be judged by the amount of controversy. If this be the case, then the speaker ban law is a very important one in the eyes of those whom it affects.

Let's look at the distinction made by Joseph Stalin in propaganda and agitation. He pointed out that the purpose of propaganda is to "appeal to and win over individual, militant, members..." The purpose of agitation is to "win the masses."

What is important about propaganda? First the lie, outlined by Hitler and Goebbels, is the basic principle of Nazi propaganda. Second is the low level of appeal. "Hitler believed that propaganda had to be geared to the most limited mind." Thirdly, the task was to "simplify issues by presenting them in the most simple and direct way." Certainly we know how successful Nazi propaganda was: it was very effective.

Perhaps a quote of Hitler on propaganda would be useful at this stage of this article: "If one's own propaganda even once accords just the slimmest of right to the other side, then the basis is therewith laid for doubt regarding one's own cause." The masses are not able to distinguish where the error of the other side ends and the error of one's own side begins. (Mein Kampf, p. 200-201.)

Where then does a communist, now that we have a full understanding of what propaganda and agitation is, want to propagandize? In about half a dozen ways and means he intends to propagate all the propaganda possible. First the use of the mass media. Second, and the one which we are concerned the most, is through the use of schools. The communists have great faith in the youth, and are "meticulously careful to expose young people to the kind of schooling the Party considers right..." This statement was made in connection with schools in Korea where the aged were not required to attend, but the young people were.

The communists will also use face-to-face methods which simply involve regular meetings of the communists to report, to read communist literature, or engage in denunciations, plus confession. Another method is called spectacle and display. Using posters, parades, open-air demonstrations, and any pictorial and spectacular communication the communists can think of.

Fifthly, he will use with great skill, "a public confession of sins against the philosophy or practice of the state." Similar to the Oxford movement and other public confessions, this type of propaganda is very effective.

Lastly he will use surveillance information in which spies spy upon spies, government agencies upon another, and the information will be used as propaganda.

Why then would a communist want to come to speak on a campus to a group of college students? Why would a person who has been indoctrinated with the above methods and countless other means want to speak on a campus?

Because he is a dedicated communist, it is his job to speak, and to reach the masses in the most effective way. It is useless to assume that a communist is going to come to a campus just to explain communism as a favor because we want to learn! He is coming for the explicit purposes of propaganda and agitation! Even if he speaks on a subject which to us seems far isolated from communism, remember the words of Hitler: "the very correct principle that the size of the lie always involves a certain factor of credibility..." consequently, even from the most impudent lie something will always stick..." It would be assuming that he might use the opportunity to lie or to speak about communism. But what about the other communists who haven't written a book accepted as valid text, but have spent most of their lives learning and believing the propaganda set forth by Hitler and Stalin. What would these communists speak about? The line had to be drawn with the speaker ban law.

For those who believe that a communist deserves the same rights and liberties as Americans do, then they must be reminded that the constitution written in the name of freedom will not work under a communist regime, but only in a democracy for which it was intended. Why should a communist, whose main object is to overthrow the U.S. government, be allowed any freedoms in this country? Would we dare think of going to a school or college in Russia, and expect to observe the same freedoms we have in America? Not unless we were prepared to spend many years of our life in a cold climate!

We reiterate that a communist does not deserve the same freedoms in America that our forefathers have fought and died for, because they are prepared to fight and die to take away those same freedoms. A communist will lay down his life for communism. All he wants is a license to help the cause. The speaker ban law if it is repealed, will be another step forward in gaining just a license.

BILL TO REGULATE VISITING SPEAKERS

Session 1963 H.B. 1395
INTRODUCED BY: Representatives Godwin, Delamar and others.
Sent to Senate A BILL TO BE ENTITLED AN ACT TO REGULATE VISITING SPEAKERS AT STATE SUPPORTED COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES.

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

Section 1. No college or university, which receives any state funds in support thereof, shall permit any person to use the facilities of such college or university for speaking purposes, who:

(A) Is a known member of the Communist Party;

(B) Is known to advocate the overthrow of the constitution of the United States or the state of North Carolina;

(C) Has pleaded the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States in refusing to answer any question, with respect to communist or subversive connections, or activities, before any duly constituted legislative committee, any judicial tribunal, or any executive or administrative board of the United States or any state.

Section 2. This Act shall be enforced by the Board of Trustees, or other governing authority, of such college or university, or by such administrative personnel as may be appointed therefore by the Board of Trustees or other governing authority of such college or university.

Section 3. All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

Section 4. This Act shall become effective upon its ratification.

Do You Support Or Oppose The Speaker Ban Law?

Will Gemmell: "I think that a speaker should be able to speak about anything he wants to, regardless of what it is about. I don't think a talk on communism would sway the whole school, or anybody who wasn't previously inclined toward communism before hearing the speaker."

Jackson Boyd: "The fifth amendment is a constitutional provision and anyone should be able to use it, this shouldn't be grounds for preventing anyone to speak."

Bob Kernon: "It's simply a matter of the legislature's adopting tactics of the communists by denying the basic freedom of speech."

Tommy Simmons: "I oppose it. How are you going to learn about communism? They're not going to teach it in school."

J. Lizor: "I oppose it. I think it's a rather poor premise by which to judge one's totality, because the state legislature is disavowing itself of the very inalienable rights of the individual."

Barbara Berry: "I oppose it 100 per cent. Our country was founded on the freedom of speech. If a speaker isn't allowed to speak on a certain topic, how is the public ever to learn? We're slowly but surely losing all of our original freedoms. Why speed it up?"

Betty Carroll: "I support this because we hear enough from the communists without letting them enter our colleges."

Susan Furchs: "I oppose it. We are exposed to communism and I think that the best place to learn about communism is in the school."

Jack Batson: "I oppose the law. I think in order to be for or against a doctrine a person should hear both sides of an argument and make up his mind. How can a person be against a doctrine if he does not know what he is against."

Elliot O'Neal: "I oppose it! Our education system is set up to broaden the mind. A law such as this is in sure conflict with our systems' intentions. The individuals that are inclined to lean to communism would with or without the help of speakers on our college campuses."

ACADEMIC FREEDOM BEING QUESTIONED

"The mechanism used to safeguard the autonomy of educational institutions is academic freedom. This means that schools are to be run by their own authorities rather than being directly subservient to other institutions and that professors are free to conduct research, publish, and teach their findings without fear of reprisal if the results of research should prove unpopular."

"From the point of view of educators, academic freedom is the passport to their search for truth wherever it may lead. From the viewpoint of society, this means of assuring educational autonomy may at times prove embarrassing to other institutions whose leaders feel they have not received the proper support from the school. Its merit lies in the assurance that both students and the general public will receive what is actually the truth as the professor understands it, rather than some position to which the professor is forced to subscribe because of pressure. (Sociology, by Horton and Hunt)"

A group of students at Wright Junior College in Chicago recently complained about being required to read Another Country, by James Baldwin, a negro author. His book, first published over two years ago, was placed on the compulsory reading list by the dean.

Two arguments ensued, one concerning the academic freedom of the professors, and the other taken up by the parents of some of the students, specifically Raymond Snyder, who brought the matter to the attention of the public. He and others felt that the book was plain filthy and were aghast that their sons and daughters be required to read it.

The book was successfully banned. What was in the book that provoked such criticism and raised the moral cry from the parents? Primarily the book was concerned with inter-racial sexual relations, homosexuality, all types of per-

LETTER FAVORS LAW

To the Editor:

The Communist Party, liberal press, socialists and now the North Carolina League of Women Voters have joined hands to play ring around the speaker ban law. The people seek to have the law repealed, when instead it should be strengthened.

The Communist party is not simply un-American; it is anti-American; it is anti-American... Its members are not simply pro-Soviet; they are deliberately and intentionally an active part of the inflexible Soviet empire. These emissaries of Red fascism are engaged in an intensive campaign to subvert the minds and win the support of American youth. Among the activities being directed against our nation's young people is a new Communist-oriented youth organization, the DuBois Club of America, and a continuation of the campus speech program which has contributed so successfully to the party's efforts.

Why are Communist spokesmen so anxious to appear on college campuses, yet so tight-lipped before grand juries, committees of Congress, and in our courts of law?

The Communists speak a different language from true Americans. They speak in glowing terms of academic freedom, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, while advocating a system dedicated to destroying the rights and privileges we Americans enjoy. What the Communist party actually wants is license, not freedom.

J. Edgar Hoover stated "We are at war with the Communists and the sooner every red-blooded American realizes this the safer we will be," and from the hot war in Viet Nam to the old-war on American campus this is never more evident.

version, and contained all four letter words known. But we are not concerned with the contents so much as the fact that a bitter cry was heard from the professors who said that if they were forced to strike the book from the list that their authority and academic freedom is challenged and endangered.

When the book was successfully banned? We say it was. There will always be a few unqualified people who consider themselves qualified to judge literature, just as in the other fields of art and music.

Considering the fact that professors who are teaching in college and require a controversial book to be read, probably have very good reasons for choosing that particular piece of literature. We are of the opinion that the educated minds of these professors should be respected in their selections. Certainly many of the great books and writers contain obscenity and vulgar descriptions, but by high standards they are considered great works of art. It hardly seems fitting that the courtroom is the place for this question to have terminated, but it did. When will the line be drawn and where?

Who will decide what is to be read, what is good, and what is not? In the opening paragraph it implies states the only logical conclusion to the matter, that being "... schools are to be run by their own authorities rather than being directly subservient to other institutions" and we might add to this, and to people who are unqualified to judge the proper reading material for students having no education along this line, our knowing the intentions of the professor on whose list the object of controversy appears.

We are of the opinion that a person should be able to read anything that he wants to, spend his money for any books that he might want to include in his library, and be free to accept or reject any idea foreign to his beliefs which he might encounter in his readings.

We are of the opinion also that professors should be able to use their judgment in selecting any books they deem necessary to full understanding of the concept of the course, or that they feel is pertinent to the all-around shaping of a person's reading background.

For a group of rate housewives and businessmen to dictate to a school board which books are proper and those that are not, seems to be a stepping out of their bounds to this writer. Other books have been banned for such reasons as the picturing of a black bunny, fraternizing with a white bunny, others banned because of so-called filthy padding. All the ban does for the books is to insure that the book will become a best-seller and bestow success upon its author.

Letter Opposes Gag Law

To the Editor:

The law as stated does not dictate what the speaker must not say. It simply refuses this speaker the permission to lecture. Professor Linus Pauling of California Tech has taken the fifth amendment several times. By the standards of the gag law, Prof. Pauling could not speak on North Carolina State property—on anything. It just so happens that Linus Pauling is one, if not the, backbone of the chemical renaissance. The chemistry books, in general, are oriented toward his concepts. Yet he cannot come and say the same thing that his books do.

As far as communistic lectures themselves, I think the student should be able to see some live propaganda. It is not exactly wise to ignore your enemy. Sometimes a student will get a better concept of what he believes by seeing the negative side of things. Should a Christian be afraid to hear an atheist?

Seahawks Seek Winning Record As Season Ends

The Seahawks seek to end their season with a pair of wins as they face Georgia State and Asheville-Biltmore Colleges tonight and Saturday night at Brogden Hall.

The Seahawks, who recently suffered three straight losses at the hands of Campbell, Asheville-Biltmore, and Mars Hill, will be seeking a season's total of 13 wins against 10 losses. They will be playing without the services of their co-captain and starting center, Al Thiry, who suffered a lacerated left arm as a result of an encounter with a window following the "Hawks" homecoming contest against Campbell.

Georgia State of Atlanta will rely heavily on their three big men, Eddie Cool, Bill Epps, and Jimmy Edams, a combination which accounted for a total of 53 points in their last outing against the Hawks on December 1.

Jay Neary, the flashy Hawk guard from Cambria Heights, N. Y., who has surpassed the 30 point mark several times this year, will definitely see action for the home crew.

Marshall Hamilton and Jim Braxton, two of the most consistent members of the Hawk attack, will see action. Braxton, who rarely starts but is relied heavily upon in trouble spots, has proved to be one of the big guns in the Hawk offense. Hamilton's 6-8 frame has enabled the junior from Washington, D. C., to continually rank high in the rebound column.

Larry Edens, playing despite a painful shoulder injury, has stepped in and provided the valuable spark of leadership that has carried the team to many victories. Always dangerous on the basketball court, Larry has developed into a valuable playmaker.

Wray Ware has been seeing a lot of action at a forward post and is a likely starter.

Butch Budd and, more recently,

Duke Baker have provided Seahawk fans with welcomed surprises as a result of their fine play in their freshman outings. Budd, a former NHHS standout, and Baker, a native of Muncie, Ind., are perhaps the most improved members of the squad.

Co-Captain Larry Edens will play his last basketball games in a Seahawk uniform Friday and Saturday nights against Georgia State and Asheville-Biltmore at Brogden Hall.

College Wrestlers End Home Season With Win

All factors considered, Wilmington College's entry into the sport of wrestling has proved to be a rewarding venture. While on the surface the team's record as of February 12 was an unimpressive 1-3-1, the true picture goes much deeper than the record indicates.

As Coach Charles Sproles, the team's mentor, is quick to point out, a beginning team rarely wins a match in its first season. It seems that experience is the key factor in wrestling, and that while strength, coordination, and conditioning are vital, it is experience that most often tips the balance.

Only two members of this year's squad have ever wrestled previously. David Askins who competes in the 147 pound class received his training at Goldsboro High School. Dick Hudson, a 157 pounder, is a recruit from Hargrave Military Academy of Chatham, Va., where he and Coach Sproles combined efforts to produce a 7-2 record last year.

Collegiate wrestling is considerably unlike the gaudy falsefiness characteristic of the professional variety. No attempt is made to make it appear to be something it is not. In the opinion of the sport's extremely dedicated fans there is excitement and thrills enough. And indeed there are.

Wrestling is without doubt an excellent spectator sport. The thrill of individual competition and com-centrated team effort is readily apparent. And, contrary to popular belief, wrestling is a fast moving sport where with the turn of a head or even the blink of an eye can result in failure to witness the lightning fast moves on the part of the competitors. Because of these facts the sport here at the college has attracted a small, but rapidly growing following.

While the sport is demanding and the work is hard, the rewards are still gratifying to the participants. The satisfaction received from participating in hand to hand combat is avidly sought by the members of the team.

David Askins competes against Ed Barbe of Pembroke in the 147 pound classification. Barbe won as did the Braves, 25-5.

VARSITY REPORT

By HUGH PASCHAL
Sports Editor

This weekend marks the end of the 1964-65 basketball season at Wilmington College. But this is no ordinary season's end; it is unique in several ways. First of all, the games this weekend will determine whether or not the Seahawks will post a winning record for their second season of senior college competition. Secondly, the games will, in all likelihood, mark the last regular season games the college will ever play within the confines of Brogden Hall. By the time next season rolls around the Hawks will have moved into permanent quarters on the campus.

Important as these events are, there is another which should be mentioned. Two Seahawks will don their uniforms for the last time this weekend. Larry Edens and Al Thiry have both contributed four years of valuable service to the varsity squads of Coach Bill Brooks. No one knows more than he of the hours of dedication and hard work that these two young men have devoted to the success of basketball at Wilmington College. In recognition of their devotion to the team and the sport, the members of this year's squad paid them their highest compliment by naming them co-captains for the season.

There was a unique devotion for when Wilmington College was still a junior college both boys used their allotted eligibility and could no longer compete. Yet they had faith that the North Carolina General Assembly would grant four-year status to the college. As a result of this faith both Larry and Al interrupted their educations and waited out a year until senior status was awarded their alma mater. With this new status came two more years of eligibility, and once again they went into action under the guidance of Coach Brooks.

It is the opinion of this column that such devotion and sacrifice should not go unrewarded. While it is doubtful that Al will see action this weekend due to a badly cut arm, Larry will lead the team against the competition for the last time. Varsity Report urges all Seahawk fans to avail themselves of the opportunity to show their appreciation to these outstanding athletes in their last collegiate appearances.

ANSWERS:

- 1) 3NT. I'd shoot a partner who bid like this and then couldn't make three no trump, with my hand as dummy.
- 2) DOUBLE! Someone is oversteating his values, and it is not partner. With a little luck, we'll get this one for 800.
- 3) Pass. If we are in the wrong contract, the pass will accomplish one of two things: (a) it will cure partner of making strange, unreadable bids, or (b) it will cure me of playing with this particular partner.
- 4) Three hearts. This bid shows a very strong hand, with first round control of hearts. A word of warning—don't use this bid with a strange or inexperienced partner; you might find yourself in a rather embarrassing contract.
- 5) 3 NT. Why bid the clubs? You intend to play in no trump so don't give the enemy information. Who knows, they may even lead a club.
- 6) One spade. Do not be awed by your weak hand. Partner has asked for your best suit—don't insult him by passing.
- 7) Pass! I fully realize that you can take the first five tricks, but if you double, the opponents will probably run to four hearts and make it. Never double the only contract you can beat, and never help the enemy correct a bidding misunderstanding.

I am for freedom of religion and against all maneuvers to bring about a legal ascendancy of one sect over another. Jefferson, 1799.

And we shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. John VIII, 32.

Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves and under a just God cannot long retain it. Lincoln.

... That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom. Lincoln—Gettysburg Address.

Since the general civilization of mankind I believe there are more instances of the abridgement of the freedom of the people there are more instances of the abridgement of the freedom of the people by gradual and silent encroachments of those in power than by violent and sudden usurpations. Madison.

The only freedom which deserves the name is that of pursuing our own good in our own way.

Seahawk Defines Freedom Areas

Probably more has been said in the cause of freedom; more have died in the cause of freedom, than any other cause or name in America.

Two areas of freedom which interest college students especially are: academic freedom, and the Speaker Ban Law; for in these fields one must ask himself what freedom is. When he decides for himself what it means, only then can he declare whether he thinks freedom is being used justifiably or misused.

Voltaire said, "I don't believe a word of what you're saying, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." Freedom has always, since the beginning of time, been a life or death matter to man. He has never accepted slavery, a subservient life, or a dictatorship as being the ideal life. Though perhaps forced to live under suppression from the Egyptians to the present dictatorships, man has always been dissatisfied if he did not think himself free.

Our forefathers left England in order to find freedom, not only of speech and religion, but of their whole lives; for if only one aspect of our entirety is lacking in freedom, then all is not well.

Academic freedom is being questioned at different places throughout the United States. The right of a professor to choose outside required reading and the right to teach a subject as he sees fit has been carried to the courtroom.

The controversial Speaker Ban Law finds itself under fire with a five point resolution to have it repealed being passed by Davidson College and gaining support.

Further reading on this page will present views on both the Speaker Ban Law and academic freedom, with further reading on freedom in general.

so long as we do not attempt to deprive others of their or impede their efforts to obtain it. John Stuart Mill.

We must be free or die, who speak the tongue That Shakespeare spake; the faith and morals held which Milton held. Wordsworth.

No amount of political freedom will satisfy the hungry masses. Lenin—Speech, 1917.

I would rather sit on a pumpkin, and have it all to myself, than be crowded on a velvet cushion. Thoreau—Walden.

WRITER SPEAKS OUT

It is very irritating to be met with an exceedingly hostile attitude by some of the administrative officials at the college. It often appears that some have obtained the idea that they are doing us, the students, a great favor by working for the college and allowing us the benefits of their administrative abilities.

This is a gross misconception on someone's part. Many of the students work regularly to provide themselves with income and to provide their families with the necessary financial means to exist, and at the same time they are making an effort to advance their education.

To the Editor:

Intellectualism or Dogmatic Egotism? It was once said, jokingly, that "Those who can, do! Those who can't, teach!"

After many years of laughing at that statement, I have finally realized the horrible truth contained therein.

There was a time when teachers through objectivity were able to give to students a great understanding of history. They relied on men of proven greatness to explain the motivations of historical figures. But the day when Charles Beard or George Bancroft were accepted as authorities has passed.

Still they are considered incompetent by the administration of this institution. And in being incompetent they are treated rather shamefully by the administration. This is deplorable.

The occupational endeavors of these students are of keynote importance to the individuals and are most necessary to their existence, so why the antagonism toward them? Have they not shown that they not only desire an education, but are willing to make sacrifices for it? And furthermore have they not proven their responsibility by channeling their efforts in those most worthy directions? Or have the efforts of these students been spoiled by the ideological outlook of educators?

Ibby J. Lancaster III

Today, any Master of Arts or Ph.D. with a position at Podunk U. takes upon himself the divine right, or intellectual duty, to do his own interpretation of history. They are no longer required or even encouraged to rely on men of proven calibre, but are permitted to decide their own meanings of history. How very presumptive it is for a professor in 1964 to say that Charles A. Beard didn't know what he was talking about when he wrote in 1913 about the fathers of the constitution who lived in the 1780's and 1790's.

During the recent election year, we heard many arguments concerning the power of the Supreme Court to interpret the constitution. This supposed "power" has been praised, degraded, cursed, and discussed by all levels of politicians. Yet, if a professor chooses to interpret the constitution in a way contrary to the accepted manner, we say nothing. This in spite of the fact that students of today are the teachers, politicians, and possibly the Supreme Court Justices of tomorrow. Do our professors have that implied "power" which we would deny our Supreme Court?

The most logical conclusion to this trend would be for history books to be forgotten and for us to rely on our professor's opinions and ideas. If this trend were followed, over a period of time, there would be no need for political argument on Supreme Court Power. Instead, our professors would interpret history in such a way as to give the courts this power. (Or deny such power, as the case might be!)

Of course there are those professors who would still use history books to teach, but they would who would rather interpret than soon fall before the charge of those learn.

These mental midgets who believe that history is as it was written would soon be converted to the view that historians such as V. L. Parrington, A. D. Lindsay, W. O. Douglas, and Walter Lippman are of little importance when in conflict with an associate professor of history at Welkheit U!

As I close, let me point out that I am not entirely opposed to valid interpretations of history. What I oppose is a professor who subjects his students to his own stagnant interpretations and excludes those opinions of proven historians.

Perhaps these professors with such profound opinions, should quit teaching at the college classroom level. They should write their opinions in book form and have them published. But there is the possibility that these opinions and interpretations might conflict with those of an associate professor of history at Podunk U., and so the book would be wasted.

Art Students See Exhibition

Nelson Dudley, Assistant Professor of Art at Pembroke College, accompanied a group of his art students to Wilmington on a sketching tour and to view the Annual Lower Cape Fear Art Exhibition in Hoggard Hall.

Two winners of the Exhibition were among the 15 students making the trip, Ronald Howell and Philip Allen. Both expressed pleasure over the show and felt that it was a nice exhibition.

Both Howell and Allen were surprised and pleased upon learning of placing in the show. Allen said, "I very nearly ran the four-minute mile to tell the others that I had won."

Dudley, whose work has been featured at Hoggard Hall, commented on the quality of the art shown. "I think that the work shown was very professional and of excellent quality."

After touring the show, the group left to tour the waterfront and Wrightsville Beach.

Making the trip were Robert McKenzie, Cliff Dunston, Whaley Hunt, Gil Gibson, Dot Rogers, George William Rusher, III, Anne Byrne, Geneva Charris, Allen Cross, David Godwin, Jack Howell, Lou Herring, and Terry Herring.

Civitan's Give Scholarships

Each quarter the Collegiate Civitan of Wilmington College sponsors a half-tuition scholarship for the amount of $37.50.

To be eligible for the scholarship, a student must have a minimum quality point average of 2.0 and be a member of the senior, junior, or sophomore class. In selection of the recipient, the club has set up a selective point system based on financial need and scholarship achievement. Applications are first considered by the administration's Scholarship Committee and then passed on to the club.

The club raises funds for the scholarship by conducting car washes and now has plans for setting up a refreshment booth downtown during the Azalea Parade.

The recipient of the scholarship for this quarter was Nellie Vdovich. Those who are interested in applying for the scholarship for this quarter may obtain applications from the following club officers: Everett Ward, Elliot O'Neal, C. F. Hudson, and Noberto Machiran.

As a service project for community betterment, the Collegiate Civitan Club of Wilmington College is offering its membership facilities to any civic organization in New Hanover County that needs assistance in fund drives, community betterment programs, or any other project that will benefit the surrounding community.

Any organization who desires aid in a project should contact one of the following club officers:

Louis Adcock
T. A. Price 763-0852
Everett Ward 763-9819
Jimmy Jordan 763-8532
Elliot O'Neal 763-1794
Noberto Machiran 763-1056

The Collegiate Civitan Club is a service organization for college men with an objective based upon its motto: "Builders of Good Citizenship." The Club promotes good fellowship and serves on the College Campus and in the community in varied ways. It provides an opportunity for leadership training through service and develops training for a more intelligent, aggressive, and serviceable quality of citizenship.

The Collegiate Civitan Club is sponsored by, but not a part of, the chartered and active clubs of Civitan International, a non-profit association of civic service clubs scattered throughout the United States and Canada. The clubs are composed of leading business, institutional and professional men who sponsor activities for the betterment of their respective communities.

The parent club keeps in contact with and advises its college namesake with an appointed Civitan Counselor who sits in on meetings with a faculty advisor and furnishes advice and counseling as it is requested. Collegiate Civitan Clubs serve their respective communities in many ways. Any project that meets the approval of the faculty advisor and the president of the institution in which the Collegiate Civitan Club is operating, and having the approval of the club counselor, may be adopted. Usually the club carries out several projects during the year.

In the past year the Wilmington College Civitan Club has assisted in the school book store presented Christmas baskets, assisted the New Hanover Heart Fund Drive, and served as guides and ushers on the campus. The Club has also donated money to the North Carolina Azalea Festival Committee.

The officers and members of the Wilmington College Collegiate Civitan Club are as follows:

Everett Ward, president; Elliot O'Neal, vice president; C. F. Hudson, secretary; Jimmy Jordan, Secretary pro tem; No-berto Machiran, treasurer; Charles Duncan, Sonny Davis, Phillip Galloway, Fred Little, Manuel Macherian, Wolfgang Michel, Macrae Padgett, Mike Shea, Horace Sikes, Felton Skipper, Bobby Greer, Eric Staton, Ronnie Staton, and Kenneth Stanley, all members.

All members of the club extend an open invitation to any male student who is interested in serving his school through a service organization. There are two meetings a month: one business, at which is discussed various business agencies and one program meeting which features a speaker and refreshments.

Trans-Atlantic Student Association

A new organization to revolutionize coed student travel has been launched from New York City. It is the Trans-Atlantic Student Association with offices at 387 Park Avenue South.

The Trans-Atlantic Student Association (TRASA) was formed by a group of recent college graduates to remove the frustration of student travel and to bring overseas travel within the budget of every student in the United States.

Special features of the TRASA plan include financing for vacations, air transport arrangements, group tours, and accommodations in major European cities for TRASA members. In addition, the organization will operate a student night club in New York City and will provide students with a wide variety of travel services, advice and publications. It has reciprocal club facilities in major European cities where its members can meet European students and take part in genuine European student life. In this way, TRASA's organizers believe a European visit will become more enjoyable and more worthwhile. The aim is to achieve integration with European student activities and not to make gawking tourists out of American students.

The organization will publish twelve travel guides this summer and plans to arrange travel for some twenty thousand students to Europe, the Caribbean and Israel between June and August this year.

A representative of TRASA described its functions this way: "More and more, travel is an integral part of the college curriculum and any student who does not venture abroad finds himself not only having missed the pleasure and excitement of a vacation overseas, but also is at a decided disadvantage in his studies."

The spokesman went on to explain that TRASA would be able to achieve uniquely low travel prices because of its large membership and comprehensive approach to the problems of students when traveling.

Editorials:

Vandalism Spreading

Instructors and students are becoming increasingly disturbed over the uncured vandalism that is growing in frequency and intensity on the campus.

Not only has valuable property been thoughtlessly and maliciously destroyed, but also stolen.

What kind of thinking prods these juvenile clods into such irrational acts? It is hard to conceive of someone destroying materials which were purchased with his parent's tax money. It is equally impossible to conceive of someone's stealing something of which is no value to him, but of great aesthetic value to its owner.

Recent cases of plagiarism, plus the aforementioned childish stunts, point up the need for a closer look at the need of an honor code at Wilmington College. While taking such a closer look, better check your pocket-book; it may be missing.

These students are walking the halls at Wilmington College. They are sitting next to you in class. Their acts are going unchecked but certainly not unnoticed. They are responsible in their own way for the rising cost of education, and they are laughing as the authorities probe the mischief and vandalism. It is certainly hoped that these immature would-be comedians will be apprehended, and then maybe the honest student will have the last laugh.

Apathy Growing On Campus While School Pride Wanes

Wilmington College has no school spirit.

There is little pride in our college. There is a growing school of thought fast approaching that of "don't care, and furthermore couldn't care less" attitude.

This is not something that has just started. It has been going on for a very long time, but instead of growing pride there has been growing apathy.

Why should this be the case when Wilmington College is growing every year in recognition and size? The growth in number of students should mean that that many more students would take part in school affairs, but this is not true.

Students don't half vote, and more so care less about who is running for office. It makes no difference that they might not know anyone who is running, what does make a difference is that they take little time or trouble to find out.

School sponsored functions are attended by a few. A faithful few come to the school dances and enjoy them. The rest either just don't want to, or don't care to make the effort.

Ball game attendance is way down according to the number of students enrolled. Many who like sports just don't make the effort to go out and support the team. If they do go, the cheerleaders receive scarce response for their mighty efforts to evoke some spirit.

The student senate might as well have dissolved itself into the hole (if the pun will be permitted) for all it has done to promote anything other than order at its traumatic meetings. It should assume its rightful function of operating as a governing body, charged with maintaining academic standards and regulations.

Yes, there is a prodigious amount of things that have been started and never finished. Plans underway for the proposed gate for the college entrance have gone awry. What happened?

A half-finished structure at the rear of the college stands untouched and half-forgotten. What happened?

It's nearly impossible to get someone to run for office. Some offices have been filled by a write-in vote since no one else chose to run for that office.

Where shall we start to remedy the situations? There's small choice in rolling apples, but it would seem that each who complains, but states "don't ask me to do anything about it!" should remember the words of Matthew Henry—"Those who complain most are most to be complained of." They should start doing instead of not caring and complaining."

Library Is Social Hall

Miss Helen Hagen has repeatedly expressed concern over the noise problem in the library. "It has grown to such an extent that I am afraid stricter measures will have to be taken in order to curtail the noise," Miss Hagen stated.

The possible measures considered for such curtailing ranged from expulsion from the library to library probation. Should a student be expelled from the library a certain number of times he would be placed on probation.

Of late the library door has been closed, not to keep the hall noise out but to keep the students in the library from disturbing the outside.

Despite an act passed by the Senate to curb noise in the library, which was a noble act, but useless; the students still continue to carry on conversations, and socialize while a few would really like the library to be what it should be—a place in which one can go to read and study.

It is a shame that when students reach the college level that they must still be reprimanded like junior high students. By now they should know to remain quiet while inside the library. But, shame as it is, forthcoming action will be taken by the library staff if quiet isn't maintained.

Student Poll Taken On Senate

Liz Johnson: "I feel that they are doing the best they can, but the students don't seem interested. Without student backing their capacities are greatly limited—they can do little or nothing."

Marshall Smith: "The Student Senate is necessary to the organization of the student body and the student-faculty relationship. For this reason I feel that our college benefits from their existence."

Lily Donath: "I think that the Student Senate must make more of an effort to acquaint the students with its objectives and goals. Simply publishing the minutes on the bulletin board is not enough. More attention should be directed to it."

Dale Rhodes: "I think it's comprised of a lot of dedicated students who are really doing their best, but the institution is made ineffectual by our administration who insists on ignoring it."

Frank Pratt: "Any organization which bans parliamentary procedure from its meetings for political expediency necessarily leaves itself open to criticism."

Student Senate Is Floundering

The Senate has not been worth much this year. Bugged down by 25 rules of proper procedure on how when, and who can present a bill, the Senate has not enacted one major bill of legislation this year.

The Senate did pass an act titled "An Act to Control Noise in the Library" which is a farce in that it has served no purposes in controlling said noise. The library remains the last place a student wishes to go if he is seeking a quiet atmosphere in which to concentrate.

Perhaps the student body should consider a recall of all the senators from their respective classes who have not presented a piece of legislation, within a given period of time, although scant time is left with only two more weeks of this quarter remaining.

A LIE OR TWO

Bill always did have a fear of high places. Somehow he managed to get vertigo every time he stood on top of a Pepsi-Cola crate. One afternoon he stood on top of one of the taller buildings to be found in Charlotte. Well, he was, at the time, a projectionist at one of the local movie theaters, and he stepped out of the projection booth to get a breath of fresh air. The booth door opened directly onto the roof of the theater, otherwise you couldn't have dragged him up there by any means.

Anyway, Bill stepped out of the projection booth to get some fresh air and he noticed a bird hopping around on the edge of the roof. Bill immediately became dizzy and turned to his partner, who was calmly enjoying the view, and said to him, "Presson You know, if that bird ain't careful he's gonna fall off this building and get his foot self killed."

This same Presson, who was Bill's partner projectionist in Charlotte, told me something about his childhood life on a farm in rural North Carolina. He maintained that his father always managed to have a few turkeys around. The turkeys were usually pretty unfortunate around Christmas and Thanksgiving, but that's another story.

Presson's Father suspected that one of his turkey hens was nesting, but search as he might, he couldn't find the nest. Why it was necessary that the nest be found wasn't explained, but the search became so frantic that Presson decided that he better put his powers of observation to work before his father had a nervous breakdown.

Presson started observing the old hen and he noticed that every morning she headed out across a field and into the nearby woods. As soon as the turkey entered the woods there was no hope of following her, but Presson decided that her nest was in the woods.

Early one morning he got up and went to the edge of the woods where the turkey entered. Sure enough along came the turkey and went into the woods and disappeared. Presson got down on his hands and knees and went into the woods right behind the turkey.

Shortly thereafter he returned home and announced to his father that he had found the turkey's nest, and sure enough he had. His father was, to say the least, amazed. He naturally wanted Presson to explain how he had found the turkey's nest, and sure enough he had. His father was, to say the least, amazed. He naturally wanted Presson to explain how he had found the nest.

Presson stated that he observed where the turkey had entered the woods, then he stalked out the entrance and waited for the turkey to come by. When the turkey entered the woods he got down on his hands and knees and tracked the turkey to her nest.

"But how did you track the turkey?" his father asked, "You can't smell like a dog."

"I know," Presson told him, "but I felt the ground with my hand still I found the warm spots where the turkey had put her feet when she walked by." "By feeling the warmth of the tracks I was able to follow her just as good as if I could smell." Hearing this, the family hound dog ran up and bit Presson.

Directors Speak About Foundation

The following is a speech given by the local board of directors of the Wilmington College Foundation to the civic clubs.

Wilmington College will graduate its first senior class this June. Wilmington College has now become a four-year institution, an accomplishment of which all of you can be proud, for without your efforts as a community, it would not have been possible.

However, this added status brings with it added responsibility both academic and financial. Wilmington College is a fast growing educational institution. Yet, as is true with all state supported institutions, the college cannot be expected to provide a full and excellent academic program on state support alone. All colleges and universities need a request supplementary funds which come from gifts or special requests. For example—Charlotte College which is another of the State's new four year colleges, has already accumulated, since 1961, an endowment of a million and a quarter dollars.

For this reason, Wilmington College foundation has been organized. Through this group, interested citizens can help provide an education program which will better meet the needs of the area and the students served by Wilmington College.

We are most anxious to have financial support. There are several areas in the college program that only private funds can fill properly!

Perhaps the most beneficial investment in education today is the endowed professorship. This is an investment of trust funds in the donor's name, the income from which pays a professor's salary. By this means, the donor can recognize excellence in teaching or further the success of the department in which he is interested. Endow a chair and bring to Wilmington College the excellence in teaching our students deserve. Faculty chairs are often established as memorials, an enduring and vital way for the donor to honor an individual. At this time, there are no endowed professorships at Wilmington College. This is an urgent need.

Wilmington College must add 20 members to its faculty next fall, to match the accelerating college enrollment. But with this increase in students has come greater and greater competition among colleges and universities for the services of academic personnel.

Industry, too, attracts large numbers of men qualified for instruction at the college level. For these reasons, colleges throughout the country have found it necessary to look for private funds over and above their normal income sources.

Wilmington College must also do this to bring faculty salaries up to a level which will attract and retain teachers of ability and dedication. If Wilmington College is to provide a quality education and allow its graduates to compete on an equal basis with those of other institutions, it must have the means to supplement faculty salaries.

Young men and women who have chosen the career of college level teaching need help, too. M.A. and Ph.D. degrees are essential now for furthering an academic career. But often it is difficult for young instructors with families to take a year off from work to obtain these degrees. Fellowships to provide the means to research while not actively teaching are necessary. Help these young dedicated teachers by underwriting this vital year of study.

BY SHIRLEY MANNING

Editor's note: In the interest of approaching exams a dozen members of the faculty answered a questionnaire concerning many phases of the exam. Their comments were compiled and are given below. Those participating were: Miss Virginia Walsh, Mrs. Charlotte Brown, and Miss Shannon Morton, all English teachers; A. D. Gorham, Thomas R. Lupton, and J. Scott Parsons, all of the math department; Walsler Allen, E. T. Townsend, and Thomas V. Moseley, of the Social Science Department; Dr. Fred Hornack of the chemistry department; Dr. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty and professor of biology; and Doug Swink, of the dramatic arts department.

These questions from "The Flat Hat" of William and Mary College were asked:

1. How should students study for exams?
2. Should students be encouraged to express their own interpretations of material on exams?
3. How much should exams count in relation to other grades toward determining the student's final grade?
4. Should exams accurately show whether students have read the assigned material in detail and were able to comprehend it fully?
5. Which form should an exam take, objective or essay and why?
6. Do you believe exams are a true measure of a student's knowledge?

HOW TO STUDY

Several agreed that students should study all during the quarter. Dr. Reynolds is of the opinion that "students should keep up with course studies day by day during the term so that a review only is necessary immediately before exams." Mr. Swink states, "Students should have studied for exams because it is not a last minute item one does in college." Mr. Moseley agrees that students should study for exams by "steady application the entire quarter." Dr. Hornack sums up the opinions of his colleagues: "Study the material as it is presented during the course. Then as exam time approaches, ascertain the boundaries of the body of knowledge which will be required and spend additional time on it."

All were agreed that cramming was out. Miss Morton says "students should study in a logical manner (not cramming), and attempt to see the course as a whole. . . ." Miss Walsh expounds

"As a college education becomes increasingly more urgent, so it becomes increasingly more expensive. Over 50 per cent of the students at Wilmington College are working either full or part-time to help obtain their degrees. A local college such as Wilmington College makes it possible for these youngsters who could not afford to go away to school, to live at home and work."

But sometimes even working is not enough. Through the years, the scholarship program of Wilmington College has enabled many worthy students to obtain a College education. These college graduates are already returning "dividends" on the scholarship funds invested in them. As the enrollment increases, the need for scholarship funds also increases. Additional annual scholarships and endowed scholarships must be established.

Wilmington College, from its beginning, has been a community endeavor. Now that you perhaps understand more fully the specific needs of our college, I am hopeful that you will find the means to make a truly worthwhile investment in the youth of our area.

Theory Of Exams Explored on this by stressing the student's need for keeping up with his daily readings, assignments, and discussions and then "he need only put all the parts together to see the whole course and the relationship of the parts."

Several placed emphasis on reviewing. Mr. Allen says "Review all material covered and organize the same." Mrs. Brown concurs "Review all class notes, marginal notes in text and introductory units covered." Mr. Lupton advises, "Begin getting organized as to how much time will be spent on each subject at least a week ahead of the first exam, then begin studying in advance." Mr. Townsend says the student should "scan the text, review notes," and adds, "discuss with his fellow students." A different twist was presented by Mr. Parsons: "Outline all of the material in your own words." Mr. Gorham, who advocates reviewing concludes with the advice, "Relax."

Students' Own Interpretation
Mr. Townsend emphatically states, "Certainly, when background is adequate, students should be encouraged to express their own interpretations of material on exams." Miss Brown felt that the student should make interpretations "provided that their views can be supported with specific examples." Miss Morton was in agreement on the whole, and "certainly in literature. But their interpretation should have a basis in fact and reason."

Both Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Parsons felt that the "students should make it clear that it is their own personal interpretation." Mr. Swink and Mr. Gorham averred that it depended on "the subject matter". Mr. Gorham stating further, "and the object of the course and the course itself."

"Yes, the student should be encouraged to express their own interpretations, but the immature poor student, however, will suffer on this score," warned Dr. Hornack. In conclusion, Mr. Allen stated that students should, "only if specifically asked to do so."

How Much Should Final Exams Count?

Opinions on this question ranged from one-half to one-fifth. Dr. Reynolds, Mr. Gorham, and Mr. Allen felt that the exam could count up to one-half toward the student's final grade. Dr. Reynolds holds that "this will vary considerably depending on the nature of the course. If the exam is comprehensive it may well count up to 40 or even 50 per cent of the final grade." Mr. Allen said that it could count "from one-fifth to one-half." Mr. Gorham specified from "one-fourth to one-half."

Three specified that the exam count one-half to one-fourth; six said that it should count one-fourth; three said definitely not over one-third; two said one-fifth.

In summing up, Miss Morton stated, "In Wilmington College it is generally conceded that exams count approximately one-fourth of the quarter's grade."

Student's Comprehension

Answers to this question were varied with most stating affirmatively but on certain conditions. Mr. Townsend said in reply to the question, "Should exams accurately show whether students have read the assigned material in detail and able to comprehend it fully?" that "perhaps the exam should." Dr. Reynolds felt it should "only if assignments are reasonable." Dr. Hornack asserted "yes, if this is the announced intention of the exam."

Mr. Moseley felt that they should "if possible." Mr. Allen clarified his answer with "to a certain extent—that is, by means of certain questions." Both Mrs. Brown and Mr. Lupton stated, "yes" to the question. "It depends upon the course" stated Mr. Gorham.

Miss Walsh said, "Exams, should be a challenge to the student to recall, organize, and use the material in the solution of a problem." As for the exam being based on assigned material and the student's range of comprehension, Mr. Parsons says "Exams should be on basic ideas and their understanding." Miss Morton concurred that "Both discussion and fact questions should be based on assigned material and ideas and conclusions logically drawn from its comprehension."

Objective Or Essay

Mr. Townsend cited the need for both, "Objective to test knowledge; essay to check comprehension," in answer to the question, "Which form should an exam take, objective or essay and why?" Agreeing with him on both points was Dr. Hornack, "I believe both are necessary. Factual knowledge, expression and interpretation are parts of almost any course of study." Averring to this was Mrs. Brown who says it should be "objective about half—essay half." Mr. Parsons concludes "both, where each fits the material."

Mr. Moseley and Miss Morton thought "a combination of the two was good." It depends upon the situation," stated Mr. Moseley, "a combination can be effective. The time element is a factor." Miss Morton said that "It depends upon the purpose of the course. Usually a combination offers the best form for testing the student's information and his ability to think. Essay form is indispensable in testing his ability in expression."

The worth of every man,
The purpose of living,
The importance of giving,
The necessity of loving—
Through your clear mind,
I thought on these things.
I knelt with you,
And I saw your devotion
Not aimed toward me,
And I heard your confessions,
Though not confessed to me,
And I shared in your thinking,
Though not the object of your thought,
Through your Faith,
Belief, Devotion,
Dedication,
Love—
I think,
I almost believe,
I felt,
I heard,
I saw—
I became aware of Him

"In my case, the only type is objective. The only way to show that you understand math is to do problems," replied Mr. Lupton.

Mr. Gorham prefers objective, "If the student will be required to use the information in his profession or trade. Again, it depends on the course."

Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Allen preferred essay. Mr. Allen stated, "Primarily essay, with the possibility of some objective." Dr. Reynolds said, "Essay is preferred. Here a student has a chance to show scholarly development, and a chance to use English as a means of communication."

From Miss Walsh's viewpoint, "the form depends upon the instructor and the course of study and the realizations of its objectives."

True Measure Of Knowledge

Miss Walsh was most specific in her evaluation of the question, "Do you believe exams are a true measure of a student's knowledge?" "An examination is not primarily a testing of a student's knowledge of facts; it is an experience of development, testing a student's ability to organize and apply his learnings to the solution of the problem before him."

In answering the same question, Miss Morton believed that "no one method is a true measure. Exams, combined with other measures is desirable in the whole program of a student's learning; information, ability to think, and power of expression." Also expressing the desirability of the exam, but not holding it as a true measure of the student's knowledge was Mr. Allen, who indicated the exam was "a reliable indicator, nevertheless."

Mr. Gorham thinks "not necessarily, but the best method yet obtained for testing on course content." Dr. Reynolds states briefly, "Likely," and Mr. Moseley equally as brief, "Not necessarily."

Several were of the opinion that a lot depended on the exam itself. "If exams are made correctly and the student can take it accordingly without tension it can be a good measure," to quote Mr. Parsons. Elaborating on the student's part, Mrs. Brown said, "If they are designed to be and are taken with no cheating."

Mr. Swink emphatically states, "Of course not," while Dr. Hornack says "Not necessarily, but a good student will usually get a good grade. If a good student gets a poor grade the instructor has failed in his efforts to create a meaningful examination (and vice-versa)."

Other Comments

Mr. Lupton finds that "exams change very few averages held by students prior to the exam." Miss Morton sums up her opinions by stating the best preparation for exams "constantly applied study throughout the course." Mr. Allen further clarifies his opinions by explaining that "All of his opinions would be subject to variation from course to course, and particularly from department to department."

Probably more a maxim than an opinion, Mr. Gorham says, "You will be examined for the rest of your life so learn to live your life as a thing of beauty and a joy forever!"

In Conclusion

If, indeed, we are to be examined the rest of our lives, truly we should do all we can now to help ourselves make the best of our exams. Probably if we have failed to diligently apply ourselves this quarter as several of those interviewed stressed to be so helpful, then it will be of no use to cry over spilled milk. Those interviewed have been helpful in giving hints on how to study, so perhaps these words from the wise will be beneficial for the future. "The words of the wise are as goads" states Ecclesiastes.

The emerald sea
That rippled and ran from
The elfin breeze,
The golden yellow
Of the buttercup,
My daffodil, the dandelion—
And other floral nymphs,
The nuptial white
Of the blossoms, blushing,
Of the fleece of heaven,
The azure

Of nature's ceiling—
Through your eyes,
I saw these things.
I talked with you,

The haunting melody
Of tears,
The triumphant strains
Of confidence,
The harmony of serenity,
The dirge of sorrow,
The lilt of life—
Through your sensitive ears,

Debate Team To Be On TV

The Debate Team of Wilmington College has been invited to participate in a televised debate-discussion series, Great Decisions—1965.

Wilmington College was invited along with such colleges and universities as Clemson College, Duke University, University of North Carolina, Appalachian State Teacher's College, and Davidson College. Wilmington has been given two of the eight current, and controversial issues that are selected by the Foreign Policy Association.

February 8 Frank Pratt and Miriam Koski represented Wilmington at Charlotte, where the program was video-taped at the studios of WBTV. The topic of discussion was Germany—Key to Europe? Frank and Miriam presented the affirmative side of the issue while two debaters from Appalachian State Teacher's College presented the negative points. The program was on the air February 14 on Wilmington's channel six.

March 8 Cori Collins and Manny Friedman will travel to Charlotte to debate negatively on the question "The United Nations—an asset or liability?" Clemson College will present the affirmative side. This program will be televised March 14 on WECT, channel six, also.

These debates will be televised in four states: North Carolina,

South Carolina, Virginia, and Tennessee.

The Debate Team has entered several other activities. February 19, for example, they sent a two man team consisting of Ralph Kornegay, the club's president, and Manny Friedman, to the University of Richmond. Ralph and Manny debated both negative and affirmative sides of the national college debate topic as they entered the tournament as a varsity switch team.

March 4, 5 and 6 the team will be participating in a tournament at Lenoir Rhyne College. There will be a negative and an affirmative team attending, and several members will be entering in other classifications of competition such as extemporaneous speaking, after-dinner speaking, and news broadcasting.

The members of the team will sponsor and judge the high school regional debating championship March 27. At this time they will be recruiting the best debaters for next year, offering half tuition scholarships.

Finally, in April the Debate Team has planned their own tournament here at the College. This tournament will be inviting several schools in the surrounding area and states. The debates will be open to spectators, both faculty and students.

"Angel" Set And Players Make Hit

Pi Kappa Phi Beats Sigma Phi Kappa

A basketball game between the Pi Kappa Phi and Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternities was played on February 20 with Pi Kappa Phi winning 63-49.

Pi Sigma Mu colony of Pi Kappa Phi started the game with a surge of points, but was challenged by Sigma Phi Kappa and was down six points at half time. During the third quarter the game was tied up and a real battle developed until the middle of the fourth quarter when the Pi Kap's broke the game open and coasted to victory with a fifteen point lead. Ray Bordeaux, pledge for Pi Kappa Phi, led their scoring with 16 points, Forest Brown, pledge, and Tom McNair followed with 13 points apiece. Eddie Wilson, Roger Webb and Jim Brothers made up the remaining points. Johnny Gore played an extraordinary defensive game. Sigma Phi Kappa's points were lead by Franklin Fales with 20 points and Bob King with 8 points.

"Look Homeward, Angel," produced by the Wilmington College Theatre and the Thallians, scored a terrific theatrical triumph when presented here. The show played to packed and appreciative audiences each night. Box office receipts were claimed to be the highest in the history of Thalian Hall.

A great part of the success of the show was due to David March, guest star from New York, whose moving and sensitive portrayal of the restless Eugene was truly a polished and professional performance. If quality and depth are the true measure of an actor, David March should be slated for stardom.

Others in the cast are to be commended for truly remarkable performances: Evelyn Garvin as Eliza Gant gave a superb interpretation of the dominating mother and yet evoked the sympathy of the audience. Ben Gant, played by Wally Warren, was excellent in a role rightly geared for his talents while Rosemary Green as the stalwart sister Helen showed a remarkable dexterity in creating a part. Sally Rea as Eugene's love interest, Laura, brought maturity as well as a sweet simplicity to her role. And W. O. Gant, James Potter, as the father obsessed by his failures was believably poetic at times as well as roisterous in his demands on the family. Mary C. Hodgkin played "Fatty" Pert as one of the boarders and was always full of compassion and sympathy for Ben and proved herself to be in control of her role.

Each character in the play was outstanding in that each established a separate identity. Such was the case of the boarders played by Eliza Collins, Bill Weir, Betsey Talley, Tina Forester, William King, and Deedie Bulluck. Equally good in their respective parts were Art Joye, Ray Tolley, Sandy Carr, Dorothy Pastis, Ron Miral and David Stone.

All of the above characters, without exception, brought to life a powerful and vital play against a background setting of the Dixieland Boarding House which was artistically well done to create the mood of the play. Credit for the stage set and the construction must be given to the Wilmington College Stagecraft Class who did a remarkable job in executing the set which was tastefully designed by Betty Hutson.

To onlookers, this production of "Look Homeward, Angel" by Ketti Frings was a memorable evening in the theatre and to the director, Professor Doug W. Swink of the Dramatic Arts Department of Wilmington College, and all concerned with the performance credit must be extended for providing the Wilmington audiences with the highlight of the theatrical season.

VARSITY REPORT

By HUGH PASCHAL, Sports Editor

Editor's Note!

It seems that a great deal of controversy has arisen over the publication of the Student Activity Budget. Many people have expressed the opinion that an expenditure of $8,422.83 is too much to dole out on athletics for a sevenmonth period. Because of this THE SEAHAWK is publishing the "Varsity Report" of February 5, 1964. We feel sure that when the critics realize the value of a successful athletic program at Wilmington College they will reconsider their objections to these expenditures.

Quality Costs

This old adage is proved over and over again and the Wilmington College athletic program is certainly no exception to the rule. However, by the time one reaches the collegiate level you should have realized that you don't get something for nothing; success is often expensive.

Such is the case with the Seahawk athletic program. It is an acknowledged fact that the athletic budget takes the lion's share of the student activity fee — 50 per cent to be precise. Thus the questions naturally arise. "Is it all worth it?" "Are we getting our money's worth?" "How valuable is a successful athletic program, anyway."

It Is Worth It

Athletics are an integral part of practically every institution of learning in this country — whatever the level. The benefits to the institution are boundless, especially if the program is a successful one.

Athletics serve as a focal point for scholastic life. Sporting events are one place where everyone in the school has a common interest. Loyalty to the school transcends other interests and as a result students are drawn together in a mutual bond which serves to promote a greater spirit of unity and pride of accomplishment.

Educators everywhere recognize the importance of a healthy psychological attitude on the part of students and are aware of the role if athletics in fostering such an attitude. Thus the answer to question number one is definitely in the affirmative.

Look at the Record

In ascertaining whether or not Wilmington College is reaping adequate benefits from its investment, let's look at the record. In the two major sports—basketball and baseball — the Seahawks have compiled enviable records.

Taking a look at basketball first we find that the Seahawks have been ranked among the top ten junior college teams in the nation for the past two years. They participated in the NJCAA Basketball Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., both years capturing tenth and six places in the double elimination grids.

The record in baseball is even more impressive. As a junior college outfit the Seahawks have hustled their way second the other year. Always one of the top contenders, Wilmington College has consistently walked away with outstanding honors at the NJCAA tourney in Grand Junction, Colo.

That's a good score in anybody's game!

We've Had Our Greats

How about the individuals helping compile these records—the players? In the past three years Wilmington College's athletics have been noted not only for their athletic prowess but for their irreproachable conduct as well. They have indeed been a credit to the college and excellent representatives of it.

The list of Wilmington College All-Americans is indeed impressive and worthy of comment. Who can forget such outstanding athletes as: Dave Miller and Lou Howard of the 1961 national champion baseball team, Flea Coward and Tommy Cole of the 1963 national champions? Of course, everyone remembers big Gene Bogash, perhaps the greatest performer to come out of Wilmington College. Their accomplishments were, and continue to be, magnificent and they all played at Wilmington College.

Nobody Loves A Loser

One of the biggest drawing cards a school can have is a well-known and respected athletic program. It is a big advertisement and something both the students and the alumni can point to with pride. Not only are athletics terrific advertisements, they also, in many cases, help finance other aspects of the curriculum equally important but perhaps less glamorous.

As to the value of a successful athletic program witness the plight of our sister institution—Wake Forest College, the Wake Forest administration realized that one of the most valuable assets to the school would be a successful athletic program. They realized that just having an athletic program was not enough; it must be a successful one. A losing team is worse than none at all. Nobody loves a loser.

As a result of his sentiment just last week Wake Forest's president, Dr. Harold W. Tribble, tired of being the doormat of the ACC, stated, "We'll do just about anything to win."

We Are Lucky

Wilmington College is indeed fortunate to have such an outstanding athletic program. Granted it costs money and lots of it, but the results bear witness to the fact that the investment is being well-spent. Furthermore, the results, both immediate as well as in the future, will doubtless sustain this observation.

If you have a suitable credit rating and know someone who is a member, you can play bridge at the Cavenish Club in New York City. In the open room at the sedate old club (affectionately called the Lions Den by those who play there) you will be given an opportunity to play some of the greatest bridge players the world has ever produced. As golfers flock to Augusta, and sports car fans to Sebring, the rubber bridge player feels he has "arrived" when he plays at the Cavenish.

Women rarely play at Cavenish—in fact few of the fairer sex are considered worthy of the title "expert". Many reasons have been given for this fact, but the one most often advanced is lack of killer instinct. They do not play for peanuts at Cavenish, and it is poor economics to be charitable. The hand above, however, is an exception; it was played by a woman who is a fully arrived expert. We think you will agree after you see the play she gave this hand. Declarer was Mrs. Barbara Tepper of New York.

Mrs. Tepper ran from six spades because she figured the spades were stacked. She was right—six spades can never be made. On the lead of the king of hearts she saw the diamond suit was blocked by the ace and she could never get back to her hand to cash the suit once she played the ace. So she let the king of hearts hold the first trick! Mrs. Tepper produced the queen throwing dummy's little spade and the board was good. We are glad we do not have to play this woman for a living.

Young Americans For Freedom Form Chapter On Local Campus

A new club, Young Americans for Freedom, has been chartered at Wilmington College.

Young Americans for Freedom was founded at a conference in Sharon, Conn., on September 9-11, 1960. Over 100 delegates, representing 44 colleges, universities, and communities from 24 states met to seek ways and means of mobilizing the growing Conservative sentiment among America's youth toward political education and action. The result of these deliberations is Young Americans for Freedom, commonly known as YAF.

The purposes of the organization are expressed in the Sharon Statement which was adopted at the conference. By-laws for governing the new organization were drafted and approved. Officers were elected to provide leadership for the new group.

The Sharon Statement says "In this time of moral and political crisis, it is the responsibility of the youth of America to affirm certain eternal truths."

As young conservatives, they believe: "That foremost among the transcendent values is the individual's use of his God-given free will, whence derives his right to be free from the restrictions of arbitrary force; that liberty is indivisible, and that political freedom cannot long exist without economic freedom; that the purposes of government are to protect these freedoms through the preservation of internal order, the provision of national defense, and the administration of justice."

Also that "when government ventures beyond these rightful functions, it accumulates power which tends to diminish order and liberty; that the Constitution of the United States is the best arrangement yet devised for empowering government to fulfill its proper role, while restraining it from the concentration and abuse of power; that the genius of the Constitution—the division of powers—is summed up in the clause which reserves primacy to the several states, or to the people, in those spheres not specifically delegated to the Federal Government."

The Sharon Statement also specifies "that the market economy, allocating resources by the free play of supply and demand, is the single economic system compatible with the requirements of personal freedom and constitutional government, and that it is at the same time the most productive supplier of human needs; that when the government interferes with the work of the market economy, it tends to reduce the moral and physical strength of the nation; that when it takes from one man to bestow on another, it diminish-es the incentive of the first, the integrity of the second, and the moral autonomy of both.

It concludes with, "We will be free only so long as the national sovereignty of the United States is secure; that history shows periods of freedom are rare, and can exist only when free citizens concertedly defend their rights against all enemies; that the forces of international Communism are, at present, the greatest single threat to these liberties; that the United States should stress victory over rather than coexistence with, this menace; and that American foreign must be judged by the criterion; Does it serve the just interests of the United States."

The chapter at Wilmington College met for the first time in the Student Services Building, February 23. A movie was shown featuring Ronald Reagan. A. C. (Red) Beale spoke on YAF. The club is bi-partisan and invites students on campus who agree in principle with the Sharon Statement and the general objectives of the organization, to join. The objectives of the club are defined according to the pamphlet, "Join Young Americans for Freedom, Inc." It states that: "the primary objective is to stem apathy on the part of America's young people and to stimulate and mobilize sincere Conservative political action."

Howell To Speak

On March 26-27, Claude Howell, head of the art department of Wilmington College, will be discussing the role of art in the colleges with the others who are participating a workshop conference at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The North Carolina Art Education Association is sponsoring the workshop for art teachers.

Foundation Week Observed Locally

The week of February 21-27 was observed as Wilmington College Foundation Week. This date was officially set aside for this purpose by Wilmington Mayor, O. O. Allsbrook.

"Building a Better Tomorrow" is the motto of the Wilmington College Foundation, Inc. The board of directors for this non-profit organization are: Dr. C. E. Hartford, chairman; Fred Coville of Atkinson, and John Fox, Fred Graham, Dr. John Hoggard, Henry A. Marks, Harry Payne, J. Fred Rippey, B. D. Schwartz, and L. Bradford Tillery, all of Wilmington.

The organizational purpose of the club is to spearhead the collection and distribution of supplementary funds, coming from gifts or special bequests, for the improvement of the college academic program.

The Foundation is endowed with the authority to administer funds in both designated and undesignated forms. Various forms in which a gift may be given are: stocks and bonds, life insurance, real estate, bequests, and gifts from organizations and private citizens. The club advocates that no gift is too small in advancing the program of the college.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The first and only formal dance of the year will highlight the Wilmington College May Weekend festivities, Friday night from 9 until 1 a.m. in the pub, with Russ Carlton and his orchestra playing for the event. The May Queen and her court will be presented at the dance.

According to Tim Chappel, co-chairman of the dance committee, the Fine Arts Committee hopes to present some foreign films during May Week at the college. Chappel also announced that the Huntsmen will present a concert Saturday night, April 30 and a hootenanny.

Plans are also underway to have Sunday, May 1, proclaimed as Wilmington College Day in the city of Wilmington.

A freshman student at Wilmington College, Ethel Diana Smith, was the first runner-up in the Miss Wilmington contest, which was held in Brogden Hall on March 13.

Diana, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Muri E. Smith of 566 Castle Hayne Road, was asked to enter the contest early in December.

Very reluctantly, she turned in her application in January. During the months before the contest, Diana and the other contestants practiced the modeling procedures to be employed in the contest and also their talent presentations. Occasionally, the contestants appeared on WWAY, WECT, and WKLM.

In the contest Diana sang and danced "Sixteen Going on Seventeen" from the Sound of Music for her talent. As an added selection, she drew four pictures representing certain stages in her life. She also competed in the evening gown and swim suit events.

Miss Sara Kay Kittle was crowned Miss Wilmington, and also, Miss Congeniality. As first runner-up, Diana is eligible to participate in the Miss 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg in May.

Also in May, Diana will participate in the Miss World 600 Festival in Charlotte.

At Wilmington College Diana is seeking a major in English. She would also like to major or minor in drama and thus may transfer to U.N.C. at Chapel Hill or East Carolina College. Diana is a member of the Wilmington College Theatre, and she is also a member and Fellowship Chairman of the Westminster Fellowship.

Quite accomplished in acting, Diana has won several drama honors. While a student at New Hanover High, Diana attended the North Carolina Drama Festival at Chapel Hill and was presented the Best Actress Award for 1963-1964 by the National Thespian Society.

She was also presented the Thalia-Henderson Award for Best Actress of high school age by the Thalian Association.

VOLUNTEERS START RECRUITING DRIVE

DO YOU MEASURE UP? This is the key phrase in the North Carolina Fund's 56-campus drive to recruit students for a summer Volunteer program involving them in community action against poverty problems. The students shown here are Stan Winborne, one of last summer's Volunteers, now attending Wilmington College. Carol Smith, not pictured, was also a volunteer worker. Carol is presently attending Wilmington College.

DURHAM.—The North Carolina Fund this week starts a 56-campus recruiting drive for an expanded North Carolina Volunteers summer program involving college students in community action against poverty problems.

The 1965 Volunteers program will involve 250 students. After a three-day orientation period, the students will form into teams of 15-20 students each, and move in to about 15 North Carolina communities.

In announcing the new Volunteers program, Terry Sanford, board chairman of the North Carolina Fund, said "The decision to run a new and expanded North Carolina Volunteers program this summer, reflects the outstanding achievements of the 100 students who worked so successfully in last year's program.

After talking with leaders from communities where Volunteers worked last year, we are convinced that college students can make significant, permanent contributions to community action programs in North Carolina communities.

This is the people-to-people part of the new move against poverty. It is an inspiring thing to see a college student willingly take his full vacation time to give a new feeling of hope to a child, to teach a class of adults to read and write, or to tramp through a neighborhood helping to improve homes and make better places in which to live and rear their children."

Each North Carolina Volunteer team will work in a community that has made a specific request for Volunteers for this summer. The North Carolina Fund currently is inviting communities to submit proposals outlining their plans for using Volunteers, and facilities available for housing and feeding the students.

Last year, the initial North Carolina Volunteers program involved 100 students, working in six community action projects. The students started adult-literacy programs, gave pre-school training to disadvantaged children, drove bookmobiles into isolated mountain areas, worked with mentally retarded children, and built and repaired houses, to name just a few of the jobs they tackled.

The 1965 Volunteers effort will be administered by the North Carolina Fund, with Jack P. Mansfield acting as North Carolina Volunteers director and Frank Rush and Bill Harris acting as field supervisors. Campus contact work will involve many of last summer's Volunteers.

Every college campus in the state will be visited by a special Volunteers recruiting team from the North Carolina Fund headquarters in Durham. Recruiters will show a special documentary film on the 1964 Volunteers' work, pass out information on the 1965 program, and answer questions from interested students.

The 1965 program will last 11 weeks. Volunteers will receive room and board, plus a $250 honorarium at the end of the service period.

Throughout the 11-week period, each team of Volunteers will work under the direction of adult advisors, and local public service agencies.

The recruiting-selection-training timetable, some of it still in the planning stages, looks like this:

Thalians Hold Tryouts for Play

Wilmington College Theatre and the Thalians held tryouts for the fifth and final production for this season on Monday and Tuesday night at 8:00 p.m. at Thalian Hall. This end of the season spectacular will be "Around the World in Eighty Days."

This is a play in two acts based upon the famous novel by Jules Verne. The year is 1872. Phileas Fogg and his side-kick, Passepartout, set out from England to win their bet of being able to encircle the world in 80 days. A stop is made in Paris to hoist a balloon. Then by way of Suez, Bombay, Calcutta, Tokyo, the plains of the then new United States of America they finally arrive back at their starting point.

Within these two acts the author has packed terrific action and moving drama. It is truly a circus of fun, in space and speed. Jules Verne, almost a hundred years ago, wrote this book about going around the world in eighty days, and the situation, laughed at. The situations encountered by the characters in this play are more to be laughed with.

There are parts for 12 women and 17 men in addition to two little boys and one girl. Casting will be done strictly from tryouts. Those wishing to help out backstage are also urged to attend tryouts.

The Wilmington College Theatre-Thalian production will be produced on May 21, 22 and 23 at Thalian Hall. The director will be Doug W. Swink of the dramatic arts department of Wilmington College.

Editorial:

A PARTY SYSTEM ON CAMPUS

The Technician has announced the possibility of a student political party at State. Butch Fields explained how such a student political party would work, and what it is hoped it will achieve.

"The formation of the 'University Party' as a Student Government political party . . . which would endorse candidates with their approval in the upcoming elections and to announce a basic platform for these elections. The Physical makeup of the party will consist of a ten-member executive committee to co-ordinate the party's efforts in the upcoming elections. Efforts will be made to channel individual initiative into a party force in the administration of student government during the years to come . . . many of our students will be glad to see a strong political party in SG. With this first step we are on the way to a true political party system here at State. Our goals are high. We want SG to become an actual voice of the student body and a full service to the student body. We are ready to approach these goals . . ."

"For the 'University Party' to become a registered party, it will have to be endorsed by 100 signatures, and presented to the chairman of the Elections Committee prior to the opening of the nomination books."

Our national government and our state government party system works well; why not try the same at Wilmington College? This is intended just as a suggestion without weighing the pros or cons, but it would seem that it might be worth investigating more than continuing rounds on parliamentary procedure. The possibility of two parties vying for office in an election looms exciting. Perhaps it would gain more interest and with a platform already adopted as mentioned above, a student would not enter office merely as an individual with no plans whatsoever, but with a clear-cut program of what his followers and party members expect him to accomplish.

As it stands now, nobody knows what he is going to do when he gets in office as evidenced by the hand-out which the newly elected officers were asked to fill out at the beginning of the Winter quarter. The question: "Explicitly, what do you expect to do for your class, now that you have been elected?" Such vague answers were given as "make my class the best yet" or "try to arouse more interest." These were far from definite, so none of the answers were printable because they didn't say anything.

As it also stands now, the floor in the senate seems to be dominated by the loudest and the best orators.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor: Freedom of speech is a freedom granted to all citizens of the United States by the Constitution. In order to retain this privilege, it is very important that it is not misused. Though freedom of speech sounds like a broad term, we are governed by a stipulation. A person may not speak in such a way as to cause masses to riot or cause other civil disorders.

Necessity the speaker ban law is a necessary precaution to prevent possible disorder. However, a great disadvantage may be found in this precaution. Educated persons need, and often demand, to hear more than one side of a given story. A classical example of "gagging" speakers on an important subject is communism.

The statement is often made that persons who confess to be members of the Communist Party should not be allowed to speak on the campus of a state supported school. (He would explain the benefits of his belief.) Quite a different point of view was voiced by several students in this paper. They evidently see no danger in hearing a speaker who is denied to them because he is of opposing political orientation. Many persons realize that communism, due to its economic organization, actually works well in countries suited for it. Communism is a world organization, and if we deny it or shroud it through "gag" laws we are not being truthful to ourselves. How can we claim to be an intelligent society if we deny the existence of a world organization? And why must a democratic society, founded in the interest of personal freedom, use communist tactics to keep information from its more educated citizens? Plato once said that a child could be forgiven for being afraid of the dark, but the real tragedy of life comes when men are afraid of the light.

It is possible that this law applies to the wrong group of listeners. Perhaps college students are more capable of listening to a communist lecture and making the proper adjustment than the uneducated masses would be. If not, our educational system leaves something to be desired. Many students and legislators must realize that throughout history suppressed organizations have risen to great heights. This rarely happens in a high. If students demand information, maybe it would not be so hard to provide it for them. It would be important to remember that information, not legislation, is desired.

New Interest In YAF Gains In Popularity

By Willard Edwards (Chicago Tribune Press Service), Washington, D. C.

A two-story white brick house in the Capitol Hill area ought to be a silent and deserted structure these days, haunted by memories of the November 3 election debacle.

Instead, it's a scene of high-spirited activity. Seven or eight sacks of mail are delivered each day to this headquarters of the conservative youth organization known as Young Americans for Freedom.

The mail contains applications, supported by checks for dues, from hundreds of young men and women seeking affiliation with Y.A.F. and the right to establish new chapters in the colleges and communities of the 50 states.

Upsurge of Interest

A political phenomenon is being recorded—a startling post-election upsurge of national interest in a youth movement which, together with all conservative groups, was presumed to have suffered a dismaying setback on election day.

Instead of apathy and despair over the Johnson landslide, a substantial segment of the nation's youth has responded to the defeat with increased enthusiasm for the conservative philosophy. New membership records are being set daily.

Interest Is Whetted

While their elders have been quarreling about the reasons for the G.O.P. defeat, and debating a retreat from Goldwater's principles these young citizens are already making plans for the 1966 campaigns and 1968. They contemplate no retreat.

Most of them participated in a presidential campaign for the first time this year in such groups as Youth for Goldwater and now seek a permanent organization to focus their efforts. Their interests in politics appear to have been whetted, rather than dulled, by the election returns.

Book Stack

YOUR LIBRARY GROWS

by John Eakin

Perhaps you have noticed the great number of books which have been added to the library since the first of the school year. However, for those of you who have not, since October 1, around 3000 titles have been added to raise the total book collection to more than 20,000.

An average of 500 books have been added each month since school opened. Therefore, if you fail to find information on a subject one time, you may be able to find it later in the books that have been added. Besides these new books already added to our collection over 3000 books are in the process of being added and should reach the shelves in a short time.

Many of the additions have been in the reference section, and the rest have been distributed among all of the different departments of the college. The books which are ordered come from lists made up by the faculty members, so that you may be sure the bulk of the new books are related to the courses you will be taking here.

Do not think for a moment, however, that your entertainment is being neglected and only books for study are being added to the library. The library has a fund to order books, and from it are ordered popular fiction and other books for your general reading enjoyment as well as for reference books. Miss Helen Hagan says that

"Conservatism is faltering in this area," read a letter from Rockford, Ill. "It is up to the younger generation to revive it."

"I was shocked by Goldwater's loss," wrote a young man from Lebanon Church, Va. "I want to join an organization which will fight for victory next time."

Hundreds of Pledges

There were hundreds of statements . . . some from age 18-22 now attending college.

The post-election spurt in applications admittedly startled the national leaders of Y.A.F. Robert E. Bauman, national chairman, and David R. Jones, executive director, described the daily flood of mail since November 3 as fantastic.

The organization founded in 1960 is now on a sound financial basis with 20,000 dues-paying members and an additional 35,000 occasional contributors listed as associates, sponsors, and advisers. The growth previously had been steady, but not sensational averaging an increase of 400 to 500 members a month in 1963.

A New Deluge

During the summer campaign months of 1964, more than 5,400 new members were enlisted but after the November 3 debacle, a period of inactivity had been expected. Instead, there was a fresh deluge of membership applications, totaling 1,850 in the first weeks following election day.

Nearly 100 new chapters have been established since July, Jones reported, and there are now over 700 campuses where members attend college. Two hundred additional chapters are contemplated. After their initial surprise, the headquarters staff began analyzing the contents of letters accompanying membership applications and came up with some conclusions of possible benefit to older citizens.

Not a Decisive Campaign

"Most of the members do not regard the recent campaign and election as a decisive confrontation of the liberal and conservative philosophies," Bauman reported. "They regard it as one step in a long chain of events that will eventually restore conservatism to a dominating position in America."

"The Goldwater candidacy, gave young conservatives an opportunity to place themselves in leadership positions in a presidential campaign for the first time. This campaign was a starting point—not the climax."

The two young men, and others subsequently interviewed, confessed some disenchantment with Goldwater. They complained that he spoke in generalities which did not permit the issues of freedom versus socialism to be clear-cut. With President Johnson refusing to debate the issues, it was up to the G.O.P. challenger to set the pace and he did not meet the test.

Failed in Presentation

The youth organization's monthly magazine, The New Guard, now entering its fifth year under the editorship of Carol Bauman, remarked that Goldwater was "the first candidate in many years to take a definite stand on every controversial issue of the day (but) he managed to leave the impression that he had no program." The post-election editorial concluded:

"We would have to agree . . . that the conduct of the campaign in many ways, failed to prove Goldwater's qualifications to be president."

"What it most emphatically did not prove was that conservatism is dead as a political philosophy. Conservatives have proved their strength and can no longer be regarded lightly by their adversaries, the liberals."

Buckley Eases Blow

A speech by William F. Buckley, Jr., delivered more than a month before the election, contributed to the high post-election morale of the leaders of the youth organization. Buckley is editor of National Review, a publication of Conservative opinion, and YAF was founded at a meeting on his estate in Sharon, Conn.

Buckley conditioned his listeners to the forthcoming downfall of the Republican presidential candidate. His prediction of Goldwater's defeat was attacked, at the time, as "defeatist" but the hopeful tone of his remarks is now being cited by former critics as one reason for determination to carry on.

The speech was off-the-record when voiced in September. As now published, it is revealed as a persuasive argument for continuing the conservative battle despite the prospect of defeat at the polls in November.

Cites Entranced Lassitude

To pre-suppose Goldwater's victory, Buckley said, was to assume that a majority of the American people would suddenly overcome a generation's entrenched lassitude.

"The Goldwater movement," he declared, "is in the nature of an attempted prison break. It is so preposterously urgent that the effort be made, gloriously encouraging that we are mobilized to make the attempt. But direfully boring to proceed on the assumption that we will succeed, or to reason that if we do not, the attempt to reach safety cannot ever succeed."

To critics who might accuse him of "demoralization after November 4 I fear that the morale of an army on the march is the morale that is most easily destroyed in the unanticipated event of defeat."

"There are weeks and months and years ahead of us and I do believe Goldwater would be the first to deplore the rise of any spirit of synthetic optimism which might result in a national demoralization of the conservative movement the day after the campaign ends."

Substantive Alternatives

"The successful fight to nominate Sen. Goldwater has required the opinion-makers to consider more seriously, if no less so, (Continued on Page 3)

Over the exam break, we went to Cleveland to play in the Spring Nationals. We played in the Open Air, which was the largest event of its kind in history. (There were about 1500 participants.) We will not discuss how well we did in this event, but it was a lot of fun. Above is one of the few hands where we did get a good result.

We played three no trump from the South hand, after an auction that is best forgotten. The hand we left had bid spades, and the hand to our right had bid hearts. The opening lead was a small club to the ace, and then a little club. East was in, but couldn't lead hearts because of the queen-five. He shifted to a spade, which we took with the ace. We then took our ten tricks and lost. The hand is interesting for two reasons. If we ever take a lesson, we cannot make the hand; and East can defeat the hand by leading the king of clubs under the ace. (Then his partner could get on lead with the club-queen and lead another heart through the queen.)

Roger Webb Elected To Office At Annual Circle K Convention

The president of the Wilmington College Circle K Club, Roger L. Webb, has been elected Lt. Governor of the Eastern Division Carolinas District of Circle K International. Webb was elected at the 4th Annual Convention of the Carolinas District of Circle K International held in Greenville at East Carolina College.

Six members of the local Circle K club attended the convention. Registration was held on Friday, March 26, the opening day of the 28th Annual Convention of the Carolinas District of Circle K International. Candidates of district offices campaigned and on Saturday Dudley Saleeb, Jr. called the opening session to order. At the second session the guest speaker was O. E. Lawton, governor of Carolinas District, Kiwanis International.

Fund raising and service workshops were held during the convention which was climaxed by a Governor's Banquet. A district Caucus was also held at which all district candidates were interviewed.

The convention ended Sunday after the business session and divisional caucuses, convened and the election reports were given. The new officers underwent a training period of two hours. Others attending the convention were Hal Spencer, Eston Brinkley, Richard Baldwin, Bobby Eakins, and Gene Frizzelle.

The Circle K Club held a membership drive the week of April 5-9 for all eligible and interested men at Wilmington College. There was a display in the lobby of the Student Services building where application blanks may be obtained. The following week there will be a Smoker in order to acquaint prospective members with the ideals and principles of the Circle K program.

Two new benches at the front of the college have been donated to the campus by the club as their yearly project to the school. During the year the club has been active in community projects such as the March of Dimes, the Heart Fund, and the rummage collection for the Salvation Army.

The club members will usher at commencement and will also have new directional signs painted for the campus. They also plan to field a softball team in intramural sports this spring.

Nature Trail Valuable To College Students

by Cori Collins
The nature trail of Wilmington College in spite of all it has done for the science and art departments is virtually unknown among the majority of the students. Its value is certainly of enough consequence to be made better-known to the students of Wilmington College.

The nature trail was originated so that the science department of the college could better use the natural resources that were so close at hand. The trail also offers value to high school students and elementary students who make field trips there.

So as none of nature's wonders will be overlooked, the plants and trees on the trail are identified and labeled with aluminum tags with the help of a registered forester. Some of the outstanding features found along the trail are a crow's nest and, often a blue heron. Also, pitcher plants and Venus's flytraps, which are unique in that they are found only along the coasts of North and South Carolina, are plentiful.

The nature trail is located just behind Hoggar Hall, where the sciences are taught, and extends for approximately two miles. Its actual construction is to be accredited to Calvin Doss of the education department.

The trail has also been found to be of value to other departments in addition to the science department. For example, the art department uses the nature trail for various problems involving outdoor scenes. The art students have been required to do various scenes along the trail both in general and in detail. Other departments and professors have shown interest and offered their help to make the trail a great value to the college.

According to Mr. Doss, "The nature trail is only a beginning. Plans are already in progress to expand to an area deeper into the woods and to branch off from the main trail and to include nearby areas of interest. Also in the planning stage is an arboretum." Mr. Doss summed up his comments on the nature trail by saying, "I feel that this project will be used for many years by the faculty and the students of Wilmington College, by the public schools in the area, and by the community."

"The point of the present occasion is to win recruits not only for November 3 but for future November; to entitle us to look about us, on November 4 not at the ashes of defeat but at the well-planted seeds of hope, which will flower on a great November day in the future, if there is a future."

"On November 4 in the likely event that the walls stand firm against our assault . . . we must emerge smiling, confident in the knowledge that we weakened those walls, that they will never again stand so firmly against us. On that day, we must be prepared to inform Lyndon Johnson that we too will continue."

Newest Fashions a 'Strike' for Campus Bowling Date

VERSATILE SKIRT for casual comfort transforms Bermuda shirt to short ensemble into a solid and print combination that's great for a bowling date. Dacron cotton and lycra skirt features zip-front. About $14. Shoes by AMF.

A wonderfully young, lean and leggy look theme Karen Dahlgard's newest group of bowling date co-ordinates for the Spring '65 "Flex" Pro-Shop collections of McGregor-Doniger. Created with America's collegiate fun loving bowlers in mind, above-the-knee hemlines and freedom of action dominate throughout.

The collection features an exciting new fifty-fifty blend of avril and cotton that has the fashion-important look of mobby textured linen and just enough stretch to 'give' when action calls for it. The new fabric is known as Linapad and Miss Dahlgard teams it with a soft-to-the-hand dacron and cotton broadcloth in a meadow fresh sweet clover print in echoing pastel shades.

Several breezy variations of the theme are highlighted in the collection, authorized and approved for bowling by the American Machine & Foundry Company, producers of bowling equipment. Shoes, bowling balls and bags are from the AMF Fashion Line.

33 years later, he got the bug.

We're glad that most people don't wait 33 years to buy their first Volkswagen.

But Albert Gillis did, and maybe he had the right idea all along.

He didn't buy a new car for 33 years because he didn't happen to need one.

He and his 1929 Model A Ford did just fine by each other.

He always did his own repairs and even jacked it up at night to save the tires.

When he needed a new car last year, he went out and bought a Volkswagen.

"I heard they hold up," he explained.

Does he like the VW?

Mr. Gillis is 78, a Justice of the Peace, and not given to hasty decisions.

"Your inspectors sure do a good job of inspecting," was as far as he would go.

But he did mention that he and Mrs. Gillis took a trip for their 54th anniversary.

They drove their new VW 6,750 miles and spent $62 on gas and $54 on oil.

"I didn't think they were supposed to burn oil," he said.

"TEN FROM TIDEWATER" NOW SHOWING

"Ten from Tidewater" is the exhibit now showing in Hoggard Hall at Wilmington College. Ten artists are each exhibiting works in oil sculpture, graphics, and watercolor.

The artists are Yetta Bornstein, Nancy Camden, Dick Cossitt, Kenneth Harris, A. B. Jackson, Victor Pickett, Ed Porter, Charles Sibley, Walter Thrift, and Fay Zetlin.

Victor Pickett is a member of the art faculty of Old Dominion College this year and his exhibit is of metal sculpture.

Charles Sibley is head of the art department at ODC. Ed Porter and Fay Zetlin also teach there.

A. B. Jackson is head of the art department at Virginia State College. Dick Cossitt, who is also exhibiting metal sculpture, conducts a sculpture workshop at Virginia State College.

Kenneth Harris is well-known for his watercolors. Walter Thrift, who has exhibited at Wilmington College before, has probably won more prizes—including best in show on the Boardwalk in 1961, in the Virginia Tidewater show in '62, and in the Virginia City Park last year—in more shows than any artist in Virginia.

Yetta Bornstein and Nancy Camden have exhibited frequently in the state of Virginia and have had much success.

This show has been exhibited by the Fredericksburg Gallery of Modern Art, the Midtown Gallery in Richmond, the Greenville Art Center, and is now at Wilmington College.

United Student Aid Funds Offers Loans To Students

NEW YORK—United Student Aid Funds, Inc., a nonprofit organization financed by private contributions and college deposits, is now guaranteeing low-interest bank loans to needy college students at a rate of $30 million a year, according to a year-end report just released here. Its total loans guaranteed to December 31, 1964 were $37,691,400.

At a time when the reported high default on Federal National Defense student loans is beginning to arouse serious concern, Allen D. Marshall, USA Funds president, states that "less than 1 per cent of USA Funds loans reaching the payout stage are in poor standing. Our record compares favorably with the best of the several private and state-supported guarantee programs whose reports are published."

Mr. Marshall points out, however, that since both the government and the USA Funds programs are comparatively new, the wide disparity between apparent defaults of 16.5 per cent on loans due under the federal program and less than 1 per cent for the private plan should not be considered conclusive.

United Student Aid Funds is the largest privately-supported nonprofit operation of its type in the United States. As of December 31, it had made 65,069 student loans. Of this total, 13,121 loans (representing $10,864,027) were either fully repaid or being repaid.

FACTORS CONSIDERED IN ELECTIVES CHOICE

Recently, the Seahawk became interested in what factors the students consider when they choose an elective and how they go about selecting courses which are neither required nor part of their major.

The most spontaneous answers, of course, were "How easy it is!" Nancy Ramsaur and Kay Carlton both answered this question with a smile. On second consideration Kay expressed the idea that it might be most beneficial to select an easy course to gain quality points which are always helpful. She admitted, however, that she had found it extremely difficult to find a "crisp" course here at Wilmington College.

Nancy, thinking again seriously, agreed with Cheryl Potter who selects electives which are most interesting to her and those she thinks she will enjoy the most. Elizabeth Humphrey agreed with this concept by saying, "My electives are almost chosen for me—for example most of them deal with drama and other creative aids for an education major."

Ralph Kornegay chooses his electives according to interest, also, but in his experiences at other colleges his electives were almost "required." Frank Pratt considers the qualities of the instructor before selecting his electives.

Also mentioned were schedule arrangements. Often schedules demand certain electives that fit in with the time arrangements.

For those of you who really have no criteria or particular purpose in selecting electives, Thomas R. Lupton of the mathematics department recommends to his students those subjects he will in some way aid his major area of study. For example, a math major should select electives in the fields of the physical sciences such as chemistry and physics.

Bowling Fashions

When dog bites man, it's not news.

But when a machinery maker goes into women's fashions, it's as much news as when man bites dog.

The step into college fashion has been made by American Machine & Foundry Company, producers of the Monorail atomic reactors, and automatic equipment for the tobacco, food, gas and oil defense and space industries.

AMF developed and introduced the Automatic Pinspotter more than a decade ago and since then bowling has enjoyed a phenomenal growth. Over 39 million Americans are bowling in some 11,000 modern tenpin centers today. Because many of today's bowlers are women,

AMF turned its attention to haute couture.

Clothes that are too tight cramp a bowler's movement, and those that are too loose can obstruct delivery of the ball and affect style.

Realizing a college woman's natural instinct for style, color and fashion, AMF commissioned leading designers in the United States and Europe to develop a line of young sportswear that would be attractive, ideally styled for good bowling and suitable for casual campus wear.

The Spring '65 line has just been introduced under the almost endless label "Her" McGregor Pro Shop Collection Of Active Sports Fashions Approved For Bowling By AMF. While the name may be long, the clothes are not short on style. They were designed to harmonize with a rainbow of color selections of bowling balls, bags and shoes in the AMF Fashion Line of bowling accessories.

Many are mix 'n match reversible ensembles suitable for campus wear and casual dates to the bowling center. Emphasis in '65 is on linspan, and dacron and cotton fabrics.

IDEAL DATE

Throughout the country, a bowling date is fast becoming one of the most popular off-campus activities. This is because it is just as heavy on fun, as it is light on the perpetual student budget.

Cramped-for-cash collegians have to look far before finding anything that offers so many hours of fun for so little money. For about three dollars, one couple on a bowling date can roll three games each, including use of bowling balls and shoes, and enjoy two or three hours of fun. Refreshments are extra, of course. Double dates and group parties cost the same per couple, but are even more fun. Now it's fashionable to go bowling.

GREAT FOR A DATE Bowling is fun, fashionable and inexpensive, too. With the College girl in mind, fashions are now designed by McGregor - Doniger with AMF Fashion Line accessories to match.

SEAHAWK LINKSMEN GO TO ATLANTIC CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

Coach Earl Allen takes five of his best golfers to Wilson today to compete for honors in a three-day tournament at Atlantic Christian College.

The 'Hawk linksmen, victorious in their last four outings, will be seeking to add another scalp to their belts as they take on teams from Atlantic Christian, East Carolina, Lynchburg, North Carolina Wesleyan, Pfeiffer, and St. Andrews Colleges in the six-team match. The match will be played on three different courses in the Wilson area with each team playing a different layout on each of the three days. Host clubs are the Happy Valley, Wedgewood, and Wilson Country Clubs.

In their first three outings this spring, Coach Allen's charges emerged victorious over the teams from Atlantic Christian, Pembroke, and Western Maryland Colleges despite adverse weather conditions.

Hawks To Go To Elon

Coach Bill Brooks will take the Seahawk baseball squad to Elon College on Monday. The game will mark the 'Hawks' first encounter with the highly-touted Bishops this year.

Seahawk fans remember last year's encounters with Elon here at Brooks Field as Wilmington College lost two games in the last innings after leading in both contests. It is just such an explosive quality that has given Elon the reputation of having such an outstanding team. However, Coach Brooks plans to throw his ace mound corps against the Bishops in an effort to down the Bishops.

After being sidelined for much of the early spring due to inclement weather, the Seahawks downed Frederick College behind an eight run attack and split a two day affair with powerful Williams College of Massachusetts.

On Thursday, April 1, the 'Hawks took on the Davidson Wildcats of the Southern Conference in a twin bill. In the first game, the Seahawks pushed across three runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to clinch a 6-4 decision for their ace left hander Eddie Lemon. The second game of the double header saw the Seahawks rally behind the pitching of Vic Johnson to help give him a 5-1 victory.

The pair of wins boosted the Wilmington College mark on the season to five wins against only one defeat.

It is worth noting that the Seahawks were rained out in four of their first five scheduled games this spring.

Book Stack

he will be pleased to take suggestions from the students and asks that those of you with any suggestions for books come in and give them to her. She will do her best to please.

Besides these two methods of adding books to the fast growing collection, the library has received numerous gift volumes from faculty members, students, and local people who are interested in the college. It occasionally seems that everyone has a book to donate, and you may be sure these gifts are appreciated.

At the present rate of growth, there should be three to five thousand more additions by the beginning of next year. This will be quite an increase from what we started with this year. With this increase of source material, there may be only one bad effect for the students: Instructors will expect the quality of term papers to increase accordingly.

'Hawks Drop All

On Saturday, March 13, in their first match of the season, the Seahawk golfers downed a fine Atlantic Christian team, 15-9. Captain Ricky Berman halved his match with Anderson, 2-2. Ford McDonald lost his match to ACC's Fulp, 1-3. Paul Bergen defeated Autry, 2 1/2-1 1/2, and Mike Peterson downed Doyle, 4-0. Dean Allen lost his match to Alford, 1 1/2-2 1/2, and Jim Henderson dropped Cole of ACC, 4-0. Low medalist for the round was Atlantic Christian's Peterson posting a 77 for the day.

The match against Pembroke College on Tuesday, March 30, saw the Wilmington College linksmen eke out a narrow win over the Braves, 14-13. Ricky Berman halved his contest with Pembroke's Clark, 1 1/2-1 1/2. Freddie Day lost to Howell, 2 1/2-2 1/2, and the team of Berman and Day lost to Clark and Howard, 0-3. The 'Hawks' Paul Bergen lost to McIntyre, 0-3, but Mike Peterson beat Frye, 2 1/2-1/2. The team of McIntyre and Frye dropped Bergen and Peterson, 2 1/2-2 1/2. Ford McDonald beat McDonald of Pembroke, 3-0, and Robert Parker downed Ritter, 3-0. The team of McDonald and Parker dropped the team of McDonald and Ritter, 3-0.

Western Maryland Bows

In their second home match, the Seahawk golfers braved the elements to defeat Western Maryland College, 25-2. Ricky Berman lost to Reck, 1-2. Freddie Day beat Hill, 3-0, and the team of Berman and Day defeated Reck and Hill, 3-0. Paul Bergen dropped Patrizio, 3-0, and Mike Peterson defeated Fulton, 3-0; Bergen and Peterson downed Patrizio and Fulton, 3-0. Ford McDonald defeated Little, 3-0; Robert Parker beat Fiegelson, 3-0, and McDonald and Parker downed Little and Fiegelson, 3-0. Low medalist for the Seahawks was Ford McDonald with a 76.

Outstanding Rookie

Doug Kennedy promises to be the best of the new comers to the 'Hawk lineup.

United Student Aid Funds Offers Aid To Students

Only 80 loans (representing $55,414) were in poor standing.

USA Funds endorses loans made by students' home town banks. It does not lend directly. To support its endorsements, USA Funds maintains an 8 per cent reserve fund contributed by private philanthropy and deposited by colleges. Banks lend to students at no more than 6 per cent simple interest, a nonprofit rate calculated to cover only costs. Borrowers pay off the loans after graduation over a period negotiated with the lending bank, normally about three years.

With a record 5,000,000 students enrolled on United States campuses and twice as many anticipated within the next five years, a growing number needs to borrow in order to stay in school. USA Funds believes that, through its instrumentality, the thousands of cooperating banks can cover the entire loan need.

Varsity Report

By HUGH PASCHAL,
Sports Editor

Although spring took its time showing up this year, it has finally arrived. No one is happier to see the warmer weather and the clearer skies than the Wilmington College athletes. Since the first of March they have been laboring long hours in an effort to whip themselves into shape for the climactic end to the athletic year.

Players Work on Conditioning

Practically each afternoon, no matter what the weather, has seen Coach Brooks' charges conditioning themselves for their baseball campaign. Experience has shown that there is no real substitute for long hours of wind sprints and concentrated calisthenics. As a result, those athletes who had not participated in basketball found themselves with much ground to make up before the regular practice sessions began.

Now that the season has begun, however, the team finds that, rather than conditioning, the task now is to sharpen their individual skills in an all out effort to win. Even the veterans returning from past seasons' squads have found the competition for starting berths rugged and demanding of their best skills.

'Hawk Rookies Aid Needed Strength

Such outstanding newcomers to the Seahawk roster as Jackie Booker, Ray Fraley, Doug Kennedy, and Elmer Maley have already nailed down starting assignments for the 'Hawk nine. Players such as these make the loss of several of last year's stars somewhat easier to bear. Although the Birds will miss the big bat of Larry Edens, Ray Fraley promises to aid the 'Hawk cause at first base. Perhaps the most promising addition to the 'Hawk lineup, however, is Doug Kennedy, a transfer student from Wilmington College's old rival, Frederick College of Portsmouth, Va. Doug, a former student at North Duplin High School, returns to his native locale to hold down second base for the Seahawks. Doug is reputed to be the best defensive player in the locals' infield.

Jackie Booker has stepped in to fill the shoes of Bill Harris, the 'Hawks' outstanding shortstop who was injured a few weeks ago. A former UNC athlete, Jackie has filled the gap quite admirably. Elmer Maley from Alexandria, Va., rounds out the completely rebuilt Seahawk infield as he holds forth at third base. A top-notch defensive player, Elmer possesses the strong arm necessary to make the long across-the-diamond throw.

Other Hopefuls to Aid Mound Staff

Other rookies hoping to make the grade with the Seahawk nine are: Wayne Bray, Tom "Blimp" Foy, Dave Lowery, and Clyde Markley. These players promise to give the Wilmington College attack the reserve strength Coach Brooks' teams have always been known for. Another perennial strength for the 'Hawks is once again evident this year. With such proven hurlers as Eddie Lemon, Sam Page, Doyle Whitfield, and Vic Johnson Coach Brooks has a remarkably strong mound corps. These four are backed up by Percy Wood, Wray Ware, L. D. Smith, and Jim Braxton, the bull pen baron.

Hitting Poses a Question

Much of the success of this year's baseball team, however, will, of course, rely on hitting power. So far this season the 'Hawks have not hit the ball with their accustomed power or consistency, but they have shown signs of breaking out of this slump. The members of the team feel that with more warmer weather providing more practice time their hitting will improve. All signs point to end of the hitting drought.

Debate Team Achieves Honors

Wilmington College, along with 14 other Southern colleges and universities participated in the debating tournament that was held at Lenoir Rhyne College March 4-6. The contests were held at St. Andrews Lutheran Church on the campus of Lenoir Rhyne. Director of the tournament was Professor Russell E. Brown of Lenoir Rhyne faculty.

The tournament opened on Thursday afternoon with the first round of debate. On Friday the teams met each other in day-long competition beginning at 8:30 a.m. and ending about 5:00 p.m. The sixth and last debate was held early on Saturday morning.

When the results came in on Saturday afternoon, the Wilmington College Debate Team consisting of Ralph Kornegay and Manny Friedman affirmative; and Cori Collins and Frank Pratt, negative, had scored high. The first place affirmative award went to Belmont Abby and Wilmington College tied with Emory in won-loss records for second place. Also Bill Lunstford from Emory was named top debator with Ralph Kornegay, from Wilmington, ranking among the top ten debaters in the tournament.

There were several other competitive fields available in the tournament such as after-dinner speaking, extemporaneous speaking and poetry reading. Ralph Kornegay took first place in the Men's After-Dinner Speaking.

This tournament left the first year debating team satisfied with its accomplishment of having compiled a 7-5 won-loss record.

Ann Carter Pollard Shows Art

A one-man art show by Ann Carter Pollard opened at Hoggard Hall, Wilmington College, on March 7.

Miss Pollard was born in Winston-Salem and studied at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro where she received her bachelor of arts and master of fine arts degrees. She also received the Kendall grant for a year's study in Europe in 1958.

The works of art exhibited included paintings, woodcuts and etchings. Miss Pollard exhibited some of her works of art from her award-winning show held last month at the North Carolina Museum of Art. Included was her painting "The Highway" which won the award at the show in Raleigh.

Miss Pollard is at present assistant to the curator of the Weather- spoon Art Gallery at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Job Opportunities Abroad For Foreign Language Students

EAST LANSING, Mich.—Students can study French, German and Spanish in Europe this summer by enrolling in a Michigan State University overseas language program.

Three credit courses will be offered in Paris, France; Cologne, Germany, and Madrid, Spain, under the auspices of MSU's American Language and Educational Center (AMLEC) and the College of Arts and Letters.

The courses, taught or supervised by Michigan State language professors, will each carry nine credits.

Noncredit language programs will also be offered in Paris; Lausanne and Neuchatel, Switzerland; Barcelona and Madrid, Spain; Cologne, and Florence, Italy.

Both the credit and noncredit courses are scheduled from July 5 to August 20.

Students will be housed with private families in all but the Paris program, according to Dr. Sheldon Cherney, MSU's AMLEC director. He feels that the family setting will result in more frequent use of the language.

Dr. Cherney adds that both the credit and noncredit courses will be supplemented by optional lectures and trips to points of historic, cultural or geographic interest.

Fees for the AMLEC programs are extremely modest when contrasted with similar overseas language courses. This has been made possible through the family housing arrangements and special charter air rates for round-trip travel.

Dr. Cherney reports that costs for credit courses will range from $625 to $750, and include tuition, transportation, orientation program, housing, two daily meals and other incidentals. Noncredit programs will run between $525 and $675, he adds.

An optional eight-day tour following the course is $125, and a 13-day tour, $225. These prices include travel, housing, three meals daily, services of a skilled tour leader and certain other extras.

Additional information on either the credit or noncredit programs can be obtained by writing AMLEC, Kellogg Center, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mich.

MAY WEEKEND BEGINS TODAY Formal Dance And Concert Slated

The Highwaymen are today considered, by the "experts" and their fans around the world, to be perhaps the most energetically original and technically polished "folk group" in the music business. The group augments its wide range of vocal interpretations with a variety of precise instrumental techniques and a highly original humorous outlook toward their musical contemporaries. The humor which is at the core of their act, is constantly surprising audiences, and frequently surprises themselves.

The Highwaymen, a group of young men, under the musical direction of David Fisher, who founded the group along with their manager Ken Greengrass, have made their own style of folk music internationally famous. They hold the distinction of hitting the jackpot with their very first recording, "Michael," an original version of the old spiritual, which sold over 1,000,000 records.

During a concert, The Highwaymen may use a score of musical instruments. Coupled with a skill, both individual and collective, in the languages and dialects of the peoples of the world, The Highwaymen bring international sophistication to every song in their repertoire.

Their ability to communicate an enthusiasm for the songs of the world in such highly entertaining arrangements is the foundation on which their success is based.

Currently one of the most sought-after folk singing ensembles in the entertainment business, the group now consists of Alan Scharf, Renny Temple, Mose Henry and Roy Connors, four young men who topped over 400 singers and instrumentalists in a national search for the exactly right combination.

Alan Scharf, a native New Yorker, is a graduate of Brooklyn College, with a B.A. degree in speech and theatre, he is considered to be an outstanding "singing actor," having studied drama with Uta Hagen, and voice with several outstanding coaches for four years. He has appeared in over 15 summer stock productions and is a veteran of the off-Broadway stage and television dramas. Alan is an outstanding pianist, violinist and guitarist.

Renny Temple, is the son of Rear Admiral H. B. Temple and has traveled to nearly every state in the U. S. He was born in Portsmouth, Va., and attended the University of Florida, where he met Mose Henry, and the two students started to cultivate their interest in folk music together. He is a master of the six and 12 string guitar and banjo.

Mose Henry, was president of the St. Petersburg, Fla. High

The Highwaymen, directed by David Fisher, are composed of Alan Scharf, Renny Temple, Mose Henry, and Roy Connors. Probably best known for their recording of "Michael," the four will appear in a diversity of entertainment composed of singing, playing, and comedy.

Tickets for the concert were made available to the students Monday, and may still be picked up at the gym. Student tickets are free, with student date tickets priced at $1. The public is invited to attend this event and may purchase tickets at $1.50.

School Band and Chorus, while working week-ends with a local jazz group. He plays 15 different musical instruments: percussion, strings, wind instruments, and is a prolific writer and arranger. Mose worked to help pay his way through college (University of Florida) in a rock 'n roll group called "Moses and the Prophets." At that time he met Renny Temple and they put together their first folk group "The Balladeers," which later became "The Vikings Three."

Collegiate Civitan Awards Scholarship

Cynthia Lee Floyd, a third quarter freshman from Thomasville, Georgia, was recently awarded the Collegiate Civitan Scholarship for the spring quarter. While residing with relatives here in Wilmington, Cynthia missed the Dean's list in the fall quarter by only three tenths of a point. However, she made up for that deficiency last quarter by achieving a 3.03 quality point average. As a third quarter freshman, she plans to major in math and minor in either physics or education.

The Collegiate Civitan Scholarship Award is presently given each quarter. They are Sam Smith, John Nelson, Billy Huggins, Ralph Justice, and Doug O'Hara.

Among the many activities Sigma Phi Kappa is planning are a boat party, a roaring-twenties party, a toga party, a crab party, and a formal dance at Airline Gardens.

The sound of wedding bells are ringing throughout the Sigma Phi Kappa House. Brother Horace Johnston was recently married to the former Miss Wanda Caines of Wilmington. June 20, Ronnie Staton will marry Wilmington College co-ed Jean Thorpe. Sonny Craft has announced his engagement to Jerri Gallagher.

quarter to a worthy student. The Club bases the recipient of its scholarship awards on a point system. Each applicant is granted a number of points for academic achievement, financial need, teacher's recommendation, and extra-curricular activities. Upon review of applications by the Club's Good Citizenship Committee, determination of the winner is based on the student with the highest number of points. The Club then presents a check of $37.50 to the college from which the student may draw credit, either in the Bookstore or for tuition.

The Scholarship is open to third quarter freshmen and upper classmen. By achieving good marks and participating in extra curricular activities a student has an excellent chance of winning. For an application see any Collegiate Civitan Club member. In the past there have been very few participants and any student who applies has a very good chance of winning. Students are encouraged to make application for next fall's scholarship immediately at the end of the spring quarter.

ELECTIONS COMING

The general election of student body officers, class officers, and senators, and the judicial council will be held Thursday, May 13.

On May 6, the primary will be held. All candidates are required to meet on Monday, May 10, as this will insure the candidate that his name is appearing correctly on the ballot.

Speeches by the candidates will be given in the Student Services Building May 12 at 10 o'clock. After the election on Thursday, the winners will be announced on radio and also in the paper Thursday night and Friday morning.

The inauguration of the new officers and senators will be held at the Senate meeting on Monday, May 17.

Anyone needing information concerning placement of posters or any other election rule should consult Tom Covil, who is chairman of the Board of Elections. Covil says, "There are other members of the board who also can be of help to any person electing to run for office. They are Thelton Skipper, Jim Henderson, Forrest Brown, Marilyn Mack, Martha Vaughn, Jerry Randall, Anita Rogers, and John Meshaw, Jr."

Covil also expressed hope that students would support the elections and the Student Government Association by making an effort to both support the candidates and to vote.

Great Society Or Great Awakening

Efforts are underway by Secretary Udall and the Bureau of Public Roads to renew, beautify, and conserve our natural resources.

Perhaps legislation is not in the too distant future to maintain beauty and to help conserve our rivers and guard against pollution, for two congressmen were elected on the conservation and river-protection ticket.

Ninety per cent of Americans live in town and have the use of an automobile. As each new traffic improvement takes place more traffic occurs. We have become enslaved to the asphalt aisle and concrete and steel as natural beauty bows out to the bulldozers to the tune of more than a million acres a year.

In some places our natural heritage is being preserved, cultivated, and assuredly, appreciated. On a small scale parts of the country tend gardens such as in our own state, the formal gardens at Tryon Palace, and our own Greenfield lake. But in other parts of the country such as in New York, backers are trying to smash an expressway through one of the most picturesque parts of New York City.

In San Francisco there is madness underfoot to locate a freeway through the Golden Gate Park. Ancient Linnithgow in Britain is virtually being destroyed, along with the seventeenth-century town of Stockholm, not to mention Spain, where instead of having laws to protect the heritage, it all too often lines pockets of developers and architects.

The Nature Trail behind Hoggard Hall prompted this editorial in that concerted efforts have been woven in order for the Trail to remain natural and unaffected while at the same time serving a more practical purpose of enabling Biology students to see life firsthand. Perhaps through legislation, local ordinances, and federal regulations (in moderation), our natural heritages will be preserved all across the country.

Are Our Natural Heritages Destroyed For Progress?

Congressman Adam Clayton Powell has protested against paying a poverty program director working in connection with President Johnson's war on poverty, more than the mayor of the city in which the director worked. All this comes under the heading of Great Society math which does not add up to a Great Society.

Sargeant Shriver hired 54 aides to combat poverty in Washington and their pay ranges from $18,000 to $30,000. In Monmouth County, N. J., the anti-poverty fund is $67,000 with $52,000 of that amount designated for bureaucrat's wages!

Powell said that director's salaries are "excessively high, wildly unrealistic" while Shriver says that "there have been a few complaints that the salaries weren't high enough." We say that the poverty program should combat poverty instead of paying huge salaries and taking the little left over to help a few poor.

In the President's budget message, he called for a quadrupling of expenditures in his war on poverty. Legislation is in progress now to double its annual funds "up to $1.5 billion."

In the same message he provide for a 75 per cent increase in outlays for his education program, to be doubled in 1966. He gave a list of bureaucracies to carry out the program.

How about Social Security spending at $127.4 billion—a rise of $6 billion over the present fiscal year? The government now accounts "for close to a quarter of the nation's entire product, and at the rate it's going it must be asked how soon it will reach a half or more.

This should give some idea of the size of the government which seems bent on getting into everything regardless of the cost to the taxpayer.

When President Johnson asked his task force to sum up their ideas of what constituted a Great Society, he asked them to tune up their thinking to the year 2000. The dreams of such a society that might reach reality by then will come out of the taxpayer's pocket now. Truly we are heading for the Great Awakening instead of the Great Society!

Boom World Causes Amazements And Wonderment Of "What Next?"

(Editor's Note: The following article will be used as a feature in the "News and Observers" 100th Anniversary edition, May 16.)

by SHIRLEY MANNING

With all the events that take place in the world, we continually wonder, "What next?"

One reads of man's determination to fight the erosive winds and tides of the ocean resulting in a 15-foot-high dune which will push the world's second largest ocean back 300 feet.

We've read of Bunker Hill in 1775, Pork Chop Hill, and Chapel Hill, now it's Ugly Hill, the name given to the long climb upward in trying to quit the cigarette habit.

At a time when words are apt to change faster than our ability to modernize our vocabulary, we find it is necessary to clarify ourselves in order to avoid confusion. For instance when we speak of war, we must indicate whether it is the war on poverty, ignorance, crime, racial discrimination, ugliness, or in Southeast Asia.

Well America is on the move, and it looks like not only to the suburbs, but out of the country when we consider the estimated 10.3 billion dollars invested in Europe, and the mention of the new 100 million dollar assembly plant to be located in Belgium by GM.

How about all the phrases that are worth a book nowadays? For instance the population explosion, implosion, unemployment, the economic and scientific revolution. How about that new science called bioastronautics which deals in the research of space exploration?

The wonderment continues as we find that chewing a toothbrush could someday be the "in" way to clean your teeth. And take the Gallup Poll just for measure. Not only do they tell us who will be president of the United States long before many people have gotten off from work to go vote, but now they tell us that of all the women interviewed 83% use disinfectants with one out of every five using it to kill germs!

Did you hear about that class being taught in Raleigh called "Understanding Your Auto"? It is an all woman class.

Well the president called up Mr. Salk and invited him up to Capitol Hill to thank him for his "immeasurable contribution" and now they'll probably be experimenting on a cure for the "panty-girdle syndrome." In case you're not familiar with that new ailment, it is confined to women who wear their girdles too tight, consequently their ankles swell, and the only cure is to stop wearing too-tight girdles which the ladies refuse to do and on it goes.

Let's not leave out fashion. Consider the chest now, devoid of amplification or adornment; the navel exposed in evening wear and the sports line. And now the idea is to wear raincoats on the sunniest days because the material is so fashionable.

Has the world given up reading about famous men? Of course not. In one edition of the paper alone, such notables were mentioned as Abraham Lincoln, LBJ, and Aly Khan, the latter being credited with a thousand conquests (estimated to be a conservative estimate). In a recent book about the conqueror he declined to print the names of his loves because "hundreds of husbands, families, and empires would suffer!"

High Standard Concerts Scheduling Fall Tours

With the Highwaymen appearing this week-end on campus one is reminded of the excitement in concert. We should be especially aware of the groups and soloists available, for they are now scheduling their fall college tours. Wilmington College should look ahead toward this fall and begin to arrange for well-known groups to appear on campus. We have the enrollment and the accommodations to support up-and-coming vocalists and groups.

There are 5,000,000 students enrolled in more than 2,000 colleges who last year bought about 18,000,000 albums and 6,000,000 singles. Half of these students have their phonographs at school. The musical tastes of collegians are varied with about 1 per cent liking pop vocalists and 16 per cent favoring folk music. Fourteen per cent prefer rock and roll, and 7.5 per cent prefer country music. About 13 per cent like classical and jazz, each.

Collegians listen to music about 22 hours a week by radio, phonographs and dances. Since this represents about a third of their leisure time it is evident that students are shaping their musical preferences right now. It is up to the college in part to provide the students with reputable music. How can this be done?

Let's take a performer, for instance Al Hirt, who last year received the Billboard Favorite Solo Jazz Instrumentalist of Campus Award and who appears at college one-nighters. His manager says that in "terms of net profit, nothing beats college dates."

Hirt played about 100 colleges last year at around $4,000-5,000 guarantee against 60 per cent of the gross. Tickets usually sell for $4.50-$5 top. After Hirt is booked, his manager sends reproductions of interviews, and albums of the artist and biographies for the college and local radio stations. Albums are sold at most of the concerts either before or afterwards at a department store. After playing Tulane University, Hirt sold over 700 autographed albums in a New Orleans department store. His manager displays posters plugging Hirt's appearance at a concert. He also sees that local newspaper and other dealers are contacted before the concert.

The Brothers Four, after being booked, go more than half way in seeing that their concert is a success, and even mail out a brochure entitled "How to make your Brothers Four Concert a Success." It discusses each step to be taken by the sponsoring group. They also send 100 large posters and 1,000 handbills and passes for disc-jockeys who plug the concert on the air. Promotion records are made available for juke boxes on or near campus.

Available for tour this fall are many groups and vocalists such as the Platters, Freshmen, June Christy, Roy Hamilton, The Ink Spots, The Dolphins, Bobby Hackett All Stars, Sil Austin Trio, Earl Bostic and his Orchestra, Little Willie and the Hand Jive, Mickey and Sylvia, Count Basie and his Orchestra, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, Flatt and Scruggs, and the Foggy Mountain Boys, and Bob Eberly, not to mention the Serendipity Singers, and Brenda Lee.

The cry will go up that Wilmington College is too small to have high priced talent but the answer lies in the "talent package." The Krugen-Carroll concert series packages such artists as "Bob Gibson, Dick Gregory, the Smothers Brothers, and the New Christy

With over half the world going to bed hungry at night, U. S. wives are feeding their husbands to death because of the high fat content and kind of fat in their cooking. This ultimately results in their husbands being overweight, making them more susceptible to heart disease and finally dying younger than their wives.

With so many people on welfare, and what with work camps, and poverty-declared areas, we learn that 55,000 Air Force personnel are eligible for relief benefits, but are too proud to accept them.

It used to be that autographs were reserved for books of the same name, but now the fad is to don a bikini, and have the sought after star autograph the lady's stomach.

And as if there isn't enough trouble in France with the Leaning Tower leaning more all the time, some American lady writes a formal protest about the kind of paper available in the restrooms at the Louvre.

And how about the race to the moon? The Russians are building a space ship to accommodate 100 people. It'll never leave the ground but will house guests to see a show of what the earth looks like from a space ship. The age of the "Spacatorium" is here. Stick around, you may be able to drive over and see the show. Oh, didn't you know? Alaska has asked the Department of Agriculture to investigate the feasibility of building a tunnel under the Bering Straits to Russia.

You've heard of people shooting the bull? Did you know you can earn $19,000 for riding one in a rodeo? There are all kinds of contests today from Demolition Races to Watermelon-Seed-Spitting Contests to mention a few.

The era of the "rained-out" baseball game is over in Houston, Texas, with the new domed stadium in its first season now. The comforts of home are everywhere.

Well, wonders never cease. A woman had a jeweler duplicate an authentic medieval chastity belt complete with lock and key the other day for a gift.

We wonder, what next?

Minstrels. This provides a diversity of talent suitable to nearly every range of customer interests.

If space should become a problem, promoters suggest that the student be given a dance along with name performers and then the price of the ticket upped and less sold, for the students will be obtaining an inexpensive evening of dancing and listening to good music.

Perhaps our Fine Arts Committee, which has fallen through this year due to the appointment to the committee becoming a political one rather than one involving someone who is interested in the arts, will be organized again next year and get busy and get some real big talent on the campus. It can be done.

Peace Corps Offers Aid

College juniors who wish to use the summer before their senior year to prepare for post-graduate Peace Corps service now may borrow up to $600 to help pay their senior year school expenses. Loan repayment may be deferred until after Peace Corps service has been completed.

The loan program, announced by Peace Corps Director Sargeant Shriver, is the product of an agreement between United Student Aid Fund, Inc. (USA Fund) and the Peace Corps Volunteers Fund, a non-profit foundation established by the Peace Corps National Advisory Council.

Privately funded, the loans are guaranteed by USA Fund, a non-profit corporation providing loan (continued on page 4)

Trail Offers Pathway Of Discovery

Pictured on this page are just a few of nature's wonders to be observed on the trail, green snakes, birds, flowers and frogs.

By SHIRLEY MANNING

The Nature Trail, located behind Hoggard Hall serves a two-fold purpose on campus, that of providing biology students a place to observe nature first hand, and that of a place of enjoyment where one can go at random and observe the phenomena of nature.

The trail is cut through thick vegetation with the paths penetrating dense growth due largely to the efforts of Calvin Doss, Frank Allen, Walter Biggs, Jack Dermid, and college maintenance personnel. The winding trail the paths follow was planned in order to show as many natural plant communities as possible.

As one enters the trail, there is a dense pond-pine bay community. It is a thick area where the crooked pine grows, a tree common to this area and one of moisture.

Further on one reaches the first ditch, which is a slow moving one filled with various aquatic plants; algae, sedges, mosses, and literally brimming with crayfish, frogs, and salamanders, all of which lay their eggs in this favorable surrounding.

Then the trail enters a gum forest. These trees are large with many nesting cavities for squirrels and roosts for bats. It is rather open with ferns abounding. The cinnamon fern is prevalent throughout. All last summer in this forest a skink lizard lived in the same tree and was frequently observed.

The gum forest gives way to a canebrake. The cane is a native plant and at first observance appears to have been cut off by someone, but upon closer scrutiny it is revealed that rabbits have nibbled at the cane, indicative of a large number of rabbits on the trail.

On through the canebrake, a moist fire lane appears. Sun dews flourish there, along with pitcher plants. Sun dews are tiny little flowers whose leaves secrete a sticky substance to trap insects. It is a carnivorous plant. The pitcher plant is also carnivorous with a modified leaf filled with water. Insects are attracted to it, fall in, and are digested by the plant's enzymes. Little minute hairs form a barrier to escape for the insects. Also prevalent at this spot is the Venus flytrap which is flowering now. Its modified leaves also attract insects who trip a trigger hair inside the leaf. If this hair is triggered once, nothing happens, but if it is triggered twice, then the leaves fold.

Another type of pitcher plant growing on the trail is the tall trumpet which traps and digests insects inside a tube. The plant secretes enzymes which kill and digest the insects, although certain species of mosquitoes lay eggs and their larvae appear inside the tube, so it actually serves as a breeding place instead of a grave.

Across another ditch, referred to as the main ditch, which drains into Bradley Creek, tracks of raccoon, and mink, and other mammals which use the creek as a feeding pathway may be observed.

Next we penetrate a turkey oak and long leaf pine community. We

Miss Seahawk Chosen

Our lovely "Miss Seahawk" for this issue of the newspaper is Miss Patsy Futchs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Futchs of 427 Decatur Drive.

Patsy is a sophomore at Wilmington College and has added much to its charm. Patsy is 20 years old and attends the Lutheran church. She is majoring in secondary education and is a member of the Student Senate of Wilmington College. She is also both assistant editor and feature editor of the school annual the Fledgling. The current "Miss Seahawk" is a member of the dance committee and Alpha Chi Sigma. Patsy graced the Homecoming Court also. Her hobbies are sewing and reading.

find plants adapted to a very dry situation, quite a contrast to the moist area along the ditch.

Life is less abundant here, and the ground is carpeted with wire grass, referred to as "living toothpicks," because of its high fiber content. This species presents a constant fire hazard.

Birdhouses dot the trail. Mr. Hurst has made over a dozen for the area, which is home to many songbirds: Carolina wren, Red-eyed Towhee, mockingbird, cardinal, yellow-shafted flicker, and more. Indicative of the wildness of the area are the crow's nests. A walk through the trail impresses upon one the diversity of living organisms of flora and fauna as many wild Irish, yellow jasmine, red-hot pokers, and snake-mouth orchids are seen. There is truly a world of nature to be discovered if one will but take the time to see it. It lies within each of our means and offers a place of retreat, relaxation, as well as a self-instructing course on the beauty of nature and wildlife.

(Editor's note: We extend our thanks to Jack Dermid for the pictures appearing on this page and for further information on the Nature Trail. Not only does Mr. Dermid teach biology, but he makes it come to life in his own right through popular pictures appearing in magazines and through movies concerning the world of nature.)

33 years later, he got the bug.

We're glad that most people don't wait 33 years to buy their first Volkswagen.

But Albert Gillis did, and maybe he had the right idea all along.

He didn't buy a new car for 33 years because he didn't happen to need one.

He and his 1929 Model A Ford did just fine by each other.

He always did his own repairs and even jacked it up at night to save the tires.

When he needed a new car last year, he went out and bought a Volkswagen.

"I heard they hold up," he explained.

Does he like the VW?

Mr. Gillis is 78, a Justice of the Peace, and not given to hasty decisions.

"Your inspectors sure do a good job of inspecting," was as far as he would go.

But he did mention that he and Mrs. Gillis took a trip for their 54th anniversary.

They drove their new VW 6,750 miles and spent $62 on gas and $54 on oil.

"I didn't think they were supposed to burn oil," he said.

guarantees to students on 700 campuses, with the participation of more than 6,000 banks throughout the United States.

The loans are expected to enable more third-year college students to enroll in the Peace Corps Advanced Training Program, a two-phase plan that provides intensive Peace Corps training during the summer months between the junior and senior year, and just after graduation. May students who have had to work during summer months now may participate in the Peace Corps Advanced Program.

Allen D. Marshall, president of the USA Fund, called the loan program "A unique relationship between two private organizations (USA Fund and the Peace Corps Volunteer Fund) jointly benefiting a unique agency of our Federal Government."

Trainees in the Advanced Training Program begin their Peace Corps training in June. They receive travel allowances to cover transportation to and from the training center, and a living allowance while training. Selection for the Advanced Training Program is the same as that used for all Peace Corps applicants, based on an evaluation of the candidate's background as revealed in the Peace Corps Questionnaire, Placement Test results, and character references.

Evaluation continues during the summer training program, and final selection is not made until the end of the second stage, following college graduation.

Following the eight-week summer program, Advanced Training participants return to their regular college, where they may continue language study on an individual basis. No specific course requirements are made.

After graduation, participants return to a training center for eight weeks more of intensive instruction. Those who successfully complete the final training program then will begin their work abroad as regular Peace Corps Volunteers.

The members of the Peace Corps National Advisory Council who were instrumental in originating the Peace Corps Volunteers Fund are Ralph Lazarus, president, Federated Department Stores, Inc.; Donald Petric, Chairman, Executive Committee of Avis, Inc.; the Rev. John J. Conscience, director, Latin American Bureau, National Catholic Welfare Conference; and former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Arthur Flemming, now president, University of Oregon.

"Theatre Presents Last Performance"

For the final production of the season the Wilmington College Theatre and the Thaliens have chosen Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days." French novelist, Verne, was an absolute pioneer in the wide literary genre of "voyages imaginaires." The delightfully extravagant adventures of one Phileas Fogg (Kirk Ward) along with his counterpart Passepartout (Willie Loughlin) and a mixed entourage on a trip around the world should prove to be highly entertaining spring fare.

Today, Jules Verne's novelty of dreams in 1872 have become a reality. Helping to make the fictional characters come alive will be Dorothy Pastis as Aouda, Rosemary Green as Mrs. Murchison, Carole Benton as Mrs. Fanny Fix. Others in the cast include Mr. Fix, Randy Del Lago; Stuart, Richard Cribb; Sibyl, Claudia Smith; Dundan, Ronald Lee; Smedley, Sandy Carr; Newsboys, Alan Hill and David Porter; Jenny, Tina Forrester; Gertie, Virginia Sonshy; Blackstone, Sam Garner and Framji, Art Jove.

Also in the cast as Bose is Wayne Robinson; Judge Obadiiah, Jim Porter; Col. Stamp Proctor, Wally

Festival Art Show Has Student Work

In the beautiful surrounding of old brown-stone buildings, bright colored flags, and blooming azaleas, local artists and those from other parts of the state displayed their work for the Azalea Festival visitors at Cottage Lane.

Cottage Lane is alive with excitement and color during the festival as many people throng to view the works of art that hang on the sides of historic buildings and stone fences.

Wilmington College student artists are represented each year and these photographs are of paintings of Sam Garner, art minor at the college. The paintings are oil on canvas and these two were seen by many Festival guests at Cottage Lane.

The small alley that is usually forgotten by the people of Wilmington during the winter is truly one of the most beautiful attractions in the spring.

Cottage Lane is becoming the most looked for attraction of the festival each year and the quality of work by artists seems to improve each time the Lane is opened in the spring.

A highlight of the festival, an entertaining place of beauty, and an attraction that one should not miss—this is Cottage Lane during any festival week-end.

Annual Art Show Offers Variety

The Annual Student Show sponsored by the Art Department, and under the direction of Claude Howell and Miss Patricia Minser, will be held around the first of May.

Only students from Wilmington College may enter as the best problems have been selected from the student's work.

The categories of design, color, construction, life drawing, graphics, oil, water color, and collages, will be represented in the show. Around 200 entries have been chosen.

There will be an open house to view the exhibit which will be in Hoggard Hall shortly after the show is hung. The show is non-competitive.

BSU Announces New Officers

The Baptist Student Union of Wilmington College announces the election of new officers for the school year of 1965-66. They are: president, Elliot O'Neal; vice-president, Carol Merki; secretary, Linda Batten; and treasurer, Sharon Scott.

Several of the B.S.U. members attended the North Carolina Baptist Student Union Spring Leadership Conference at Wingate College April 23-25. While there they attended workshops and heard addresses by prominent leaders in North Carolina Baptist work. The topic of discussion at this year's Spring Conference was "The Kingdom Beyond Caste" which dealt with the race problem in this nation and state. Those also attending elected the State officers for the B.S.U. for the year 65-66.

For those who are not familiar with the B.S.U. here on the Wilmington College campus, it is a young but growing organization. Recently, the group has been petitioning the churches of the Wilmington Baptist Association to help it purchase land for a Baptist Student Center. This center would provide students with a place for relaxation, study, or just meditation.

Some of the goals the B.S.U. seeks to accomplish on each campus are: "to promote the religious growth and spiritual development of individual students through sustained Bible study, prayer, personal soul-winning, mission study and activity, meditation, worship, fellowship, and active church life."

Also, "to provide an attractive, inclusive program of organized Baptist religious work for an impact on the total campus, "to include all Baptist students and all Baptist religious organizations on the campus in one co-ordinated program,

"To interpret the work of all boards and agencies of the denomination, as it should be understood and appreciated by the students."

Warr. Sally Norris, Eliza Collins; Bertha Brown, Eleonore Howland; Henry Brown, Stephen Burnett; Train Passengers, Margaret and Sandra Burnett; Indians, Fred Crouch, Dolan Little; Outlaws, Ron Mihal, Bill Weir; and French Girls, Pamela Garney, Gail Hutson, Gail Long, Ellen Olsen, and Diana

Smith, Billy and Joy Lee Bordeaux will play the priest and priestess.

Director Doug W. Swink will be assisted by Martha Loughlin. Scenic Design is by June Swart and Sam Garner. Scenic Artist is June Swart. Work has already begun on scenery as there are 19 different sets to be constructed.

This fifth production for the 1964-65 season will be presented May 21, 22, and 23 at 8:30 p.m. in Thalian Hall.

'Hawk Linksmen To Play St. Andrews At Muni

Paul Berman, the freshman sensation of the 'Hawk golf team, prepares to drive during a recent practice round.

Coal Earl Allen's golf team will take on the linksmen of St. Andrews Presbyterian College Monday at Wilmington's Municipal Golf Course. The match which will begin at 1:00 p.m. will be the second meeting of the two teams in as many weeks. The Seahawks, who won their first six matches this spring will be seeking to keep their record intact as they take on the Laurinburg team.

Berman Captains Squad

Ricky Berman, a 5-9, 140-pound senior, captains the 'Hawk golfers. Widely acclaimed as one of the foremost young amateurs in the state, Ricky boasts an impressive array of accomplishments.

Rickey's many titles include: first flight winner in the 1959 Wilmington City Open, Pine Valley Junior Championship in 1960, runner-up for the city championship in 1961, city champion in 1962, and first flight runner-up in the North Carolina Junior Championship in the same year. Ricky has captained the Seahawk golf team since his sophomore year.

Bergen Medalist

Paul Bergen, the 6-4, 170-pound freshman member of the 'Hawk squad, has catapulted himself into the number one spot on the team. A 1964 graduate of New Hanover High School, Paul also has a long and distinguished record of golf successes. He is the three-time Sears Jr. Tournament champion having won in 1962, '63, and '64. Consistently shooting par or better, Paul has also chalked up victories in the Carolina Golf Association's 1964 tournament held at Wilmington's Cape Fear Country Club.

In 1963 Paul won the Wilmington Jr. Chamber of Commerce tournament. The highlight of Paul's relatively short golf career came when he was a senior at New Hanover High School. In the Interstate Schoolboy Meet held at Wilson Paul's 71 earned medalist honors for the one day tournament. Paul attributes much of his success to good fortune, but the fact remains that he can be found on the golf course on just about any afternoon in which the weather permits him to play.

BASEBALLERS TO PLAY MONDAY

Coach Bill Brooks' baseball squad returns home to do battle against the Marines of Camp Lejeune Monday night at 7:45 p.m. The game to be played under the lights will mark the resumption of play here at the college after a four game road trip in which the Seahawks met teams from East Carolina, Wesleyan, Campbell, and St. Andrews Colleges.

'Hawks Down Frederick

Coley's drive and Page's pitching combined to give the Seahawks their eighth win of the season against seven losses. The Fred marked a 5-6 record for the Frederick Lions.

After Monday's game the 'Hawks will face Pembroke on Tuesday in their last away game of the season. They will then return to the friendly confines of Brooks' Field where they will play host to the Camp Lejeune Marines, East Carolina, Pembroke, Wesleyan, and Campbell Colleges.

Success Story

With ten teams signed up, the intramural softball program promises to be this biggest athletic success story of the spring quarter. Never before has such enthusiasm been displayed by so many would-be ball players. Such support of the program by the student body reflects the hard work and dedication to such a program in past years by Coach Earl Allen and his staff of officials. Coach Allen has always been noted for the efficiency and organization of his intramural programs. This accounts for their tremendous popularity with the students.

Good Attitude

The attitude of the participants in the intramural programs in past years is likewise deserving of praise. There has been an almost total lack of poor sportsmanship on the parts of all concerned. While the competition is indeed demanding, everyone realizes just what the program is designed for, and tempers cool rapidly. In all instances of disagreement representatives of the teams have been willing to discuss their differences calmly and come to mutually satisfactory agreements. Such evidence of a spirit of cooperation goes to show that there are still some groups around possessing this rare quality.

Expansion Possibilities

With the success of past years to rely on it is almost a certainty that the intramural program will be expanded to include basketball next year. Had the new gymnasium been completed in time, it would surely have made intramural basketball an actuality this year. It seems that the only limiting factor in the program will be the interest shown on the part of the students.

As it looks now there will be at least three intramural sports being indulged in next year: football, basketball, and softball. Such sports as handball, soccer, and volleyball might be included in the picture also. If this year is any indication whatsoever of the reception they will receive next year, things could hardly look brighter. It is not difficult to envision at least a dozen teams entered in each sport—a true indication of the value of a good intramural athletic program.

Ten Teams Sign Up For Intramural Softball

Coach Earl Allen has announced that ten teams have registered to participate in this spring's intramural softball activities. Judging from the enthusiasm shown by those interested in playing this season, the program seems destined to be the best yet.

As director of the proceedings Coach Allen has set up a few rules to speed up play and make the game more enjoyable for participants and spectators alike. All games will be played on campus between the west parking lot and Brooks' Field. There will be two games played simultaneously on adjacent fields.

One pair of games will be played at 4:00 p.m. and last for approximately 50 minutes. The second games will begin at 5:00 p.m. All contests will be officiated by trained student umpires. The umpires will undergo a training period climaxed by a test of their ability before they are allowed to officiate the games. All regularly scheduled games will be played on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Teams and their managers which have signed up are as follows: Collegiate Civitan Club, Everett Ward; Faculty, Pete Daniel; Husks, Neal Borrelli; Pi Kappa Phi, Dale Laughlin; Sigma Phi Kappa (Blue), Albert Corbett; Sigma Phi Kappa (Red), Reggie Tucker; Sluggers, Dwayne Flowers; Wilson's, Wilson; WVPS DJ's, Ralph Kornegay.

Summer Agenda Announced

Registration for the summer session is just around the corner and Wilmington College has made plans to make it a most profitable one for both the students of Wilmington and students who will come from other colleges and universities.

A fairly large range of subjects will be taught, pending sufficient enrollment. They are in such fields as English, art, business administration, chemistry and physics, mathematics, foreign languages, music, and history.

The college has already made preparations for the usual large number of students attending another institution as they already have forms of application for them in the office.

There are two summer sessions. The first session will begin on June 14 and continue until July 22. The second term starts on July 26 and ends on August 31. A student may not receive more than ten hours of credit in any one session.

The fees are much the same as the regular three quarters. A registration fee of $5.00 will be charged, and there will be a charge of $5.00 for each quarter hour of credit.

This summer program will also help teachers who live and work in this area. With this program they will have a chance to renew their certificates and earn additional credits during the summer.

Vacation Plans Made

Summer is quickly approaching and with it the students of Wilmington College make future plans with growing anticipation.

There are many, as there always are, who plan to make the summer profitable. Some aren't exactly sure where they will work, like Eddie Lipsius: "I'm planning to work somewhere."

Of course, there are always a few who are lucky (or maybe unlucky) and have a secure job working with their father. Jim Parmenter is one of those lucky, or unlucky as the case may be. Kay Carleton plans to work at the beach this summer. She has submitted several applications and has high hopes. Mike McGinnis also plans to work, but in the big city, New York.

At this time of the year there seems to be a traveling urge. This urge has gripped the sensitive souls of many of our students. For the out-of-town or state student it will probably mean going home. But for people like Ann McGarry, who will have a glorious summer if everything works out it will be a couple weeks in Washington visiting. Eddie Lipsius also plans to travel at the end of the summer to sunny Florida, or maybe up north.

Summer can also mean a chance to pick up some more credits and of course Wilmington College holds summer school sessions. Sharon Scott will probably attend summer school. So will Cheryl Potter but it will be more enjoyable for her. She plans to live "at the beach" and do some "serious contemplating."

There are always those, too, who simply don't know what they're going to do. Glenda Hayes summed this feeling up beautifully, with "It's no telling!"

Whatever you plan, or don't plan to do this summer, the staff of the Seahawk would like to take this opportunity to wish everyone a very happy summer. Perhaps it is a little early but we've got spring fever too! Have a good time!!

ECHOES

By TONI COLLINS

In all the hustle and bustle of the halls so many remarks echo . . .

"The library is getting noisy again, and those people who chew gum . . . do they have to smack their lips?"

"Those coke machines never work! Will they ever fix them?"

"I got ten crackers for a nickel yesterday. Sh! Don't tell Jimmy!"

"Tell Miss Burksdale I can't make it to class today. I have such a bad cold."

"Going to class is bad enough, but in Hoggard Hall, thanks to the Chemistry students, it's intolerable!"

"Oh great. It's Wednesday and I've got to play Robin Hood again!"

"Did you know that none of my teachers know that classes are out at 25 minutes after the hour?"

"Has anyone noticed how many engagement rings there are around? How come I haven't gotten one?"

"Oh, no! Was that due today?"

"Don't talk to him! I saw him go around the circle the wrong way!"

"I wonder if anyone else paid their parking tickets?"

"Hey, who wants to play some bridge? Come on, you don't need to study."

PI SIGMA MU ACTIVE IN ALL PHASES OF CAMPUS LIFE

The Pi Sigma Mu colony of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity is currently active in many phases of school and community activities.

Monday night April 19, at the regular meeting, new officers and administrators were elected to replace the administration from the past year. The leading position, that of Archon, was filled by James Farlow a junior majoring in biology. Robert Eakins was elected to the position of treasurer. Bobby is a junior majoring in business administration.

The office of secretary went again to Roger Webb, who is also a junior, majoring in history. The position of Warden and Pledge-master is filled by Elmore Spell, a junior majoring in biology. The new chaplain is Forrest Brown, a sophomore and the newly elected historian is Graham Dail.

Rush week ended Saturday night April 19, with a Rush party at Eastwood Home Demonstration Club. Music was provided by the Impacts. Monday night a discussion of Rusbees and a vote was held with the result of the acceptance of the following persons into pledgeship: Nelson Allen, Larry Bohannon, Butch Budd, Lin Rodgers, Jay Neary, Roger Vanderberg, Chuckie Walker, and Steve West. Currently the pledges are in the process of electing officers, choosing a sweetheart, and deciding on their pledge class projects—one for the college and one for the fraternity. These pledges may be seen carrying a home-made paddle which is to be signed by all of the brothers and later serve as a memento of their pledge education.

On Saturday night a cookout was held at the Pi Sig house attended by brothers, pledges, and their dates. Music was provided by the New Golirds, a folk group comprised of Roy Frantzen, Tom McNair, John Day.

Intramurally speaking, the fraternity is fielding a team. Four practice sessions have already been held. Team members are: Bill Weir, Randy Hughes, Graham Dail, Roger Webb, Tom McNair, Don Sahannahan, Roy Frantzen, James Stinson, Gene Frizzelle, Johnny Gore, Mike Taylor, Preston Brown, and the manager and pitcher, Dale Laughlin.

The current projects of the fraternity are refinishing and refurbishing a room at the retarded children's school; saving, schoolwide, of empty cigarette packs to procure needed items for disabled persons; and the world-wide search for suitable bunk beds to furnish the fraternity's house.

A message of importance to sophomore men

If you've got what it takes to be an Army Officer, you may qualify for this new on-campus training program

A new Army ROTC program starts this coming Summer for sophomore men who apply prior to May 1—only 3,000 applicants to be accepted

If you're a sophomore now attending one of the 247 colleges and universities that offer Army Officer training—or you plan to transfer to one of these schools next Fall—you may qualify for the new two-year Army ROTC program.

This new program—designed especially for college men who have not taken Army ROTC during their first two years—will commence with six weeks of field training this coming Summer, beginning June 14. Then you'll have on-campus training during your junior year . . . six additional weeks at camp during the following Summer . . . and more on-campus training during your senior year. Even flight training is offered at some schools.

ROTC training is really a process of learning to organize and direct others—to be a leader. Consider how important this ability can be to you throughout life; yet, to acquire it you will spend relatively little time in the ROTC classroom. You'll obtain valuable junior management experience . . . a fuller and richer campus life . . . extra spending money ($40 per month during your junior and senior school years, and even more during Summer training) . . . and, when you graduate, an Army Officer's commission as Second Lieutenant. Then you'll normally spend two interesting years on active duty, often abroad with opportunities for travel.

Talk to the Professor of Military Science on your campus about this opportunity. Ask him to describe this new short program in detail.

Or send in the coupon below for complete information. There's no obligation involved, and you'll not be subjected to any "hard sell" recruiting effort. The kind of men the Army wants can decide for themselves if this new opportunity is right for them.

If you're good enough to be an Army Officer, don't settle for less. Sign up now for Army ROTC.

Send in this coupon for more information on this new two-year on-campus Army Officer training program.

Vol. VIII, No. 11

Wilmington College, Wilmington, North Carolina

DEBATE TEAM WINS HONORS

The Debate Team of Wilmington College met and defeated Princeton University, the University of North Carolina, and four other schools winning first place in the Old Dominion College Tournament at Norfolk, Virginia, held April 5, 6, and 7.

Wilmington College was represented by two 2-man teams. In the novice-switch division were Frank Pratt and Manny Friedman, and in the varsity-switch division were Ralph Kornegay and Cori Collins. Cori was the only woman debator at the tournament.

In switch debating, the teams alternate sides of the issue which was: Resolved: "That the Federal Government Should Establish a National Program of Public Works for the Unemployed." In the first round of debate, the varsity team debated in the affirmative and in the second round on the negative side against Gardner-Webb College.

The Debate team also met debaters from the University of Maryland, and the University of Richmond during the tournament.

Ralph Kornegay placed second in the best speaker awards. Manny and Frank tied for second with the University of Maryland, in the novice division.

Student Art On Exhibit

The Annual Student Art Show, on exhibit at Hoggard Hall, features the best works of 35 art students in many media including design, color, construction, life drawing, graphics, oil, water color, and collages.

Students whose work is represented are Archie Alderman, Eddie Anderson, Pat Gibbs, Ronnie Sellers, Don Fox, Geraldine McGinnis, Red Douglass, Jane Cherry, Linda Woody, David Walker, George Howarth, Caroline Walker, Catherine Henriksen, Russell Thompson, Jackie Lewis, Hilda Echols, Bebe Blomme, Gladys Peterson, Louise Lanier, Sam Garner, Jeannie Gaskins, Jimmy Fenger, Helen Ward, Avarad Sproul, Iris Smith, Janet Johnson, Yvonne Easterling, Julie Memory, Juanita Boggs, Mike Peterson, Linda Finney, Ed Lorek, Dennis Williams, and Sandra Hensley.

"It's a pretty good show," commented Claude Howell, who is art director at the college. He suggested that the viewer of the show start with number one and then they would be able to see the progression of problems which go to make up a work of art.

The show will hang for a month and is the last one for the 1965 term.

universities, the community, and the nation.

Circle K is an opportunity for college men because it provides a means for the same type of leadership in college communities which service clubs are giving in the business and professional world.

As in Kiwanis, the Circle K motto is "We Build"—building for justice, liberty, democracy, and a better world in which to live. The Circle K club is not merely an organization but a driving force, a developing leadership for tomorrow while it creates a better college or university community today.

QUALITY POINT STANDING UNDERGOES MAJOR CHANGE

The policy of Wilmington College concerning retention of students as to academic standing this year has been that in order to remain in good standing, students must meet the following quality point average requirements on all work elected at the beginning of the indicated quarter:

Quarter	Minimum Requirement
4	1.50
7	1.75
10	1.90

This policy, however, will be changed as of next year according to the Dean of Admissions, J. Marshall Crews. In order to remain in good standing at Wilmington College next year, the following quality point average will be required:

Total quarter College Attempted at Wilmington Hours	Unconditional Retention Maximum Quality Point Deficiency Below a "C" (2.0) average allowed	Retention on Probation Range of Quality Points below a "C" (2.0) average	Academic Suspension Quality Point Deficiency Below a "C" (2.0) average
0-15	15(1.0)	16-26(.26)	27 or more
16-30	21(1.3)	22-30(1.0)	31 or more
31-45	18(1.6)	19-30(1.33)	31 or more
46-60	18(1.7)	19-30(1.5)	31 or more
61-75	15(1.8)	16-30(1.6)	31 or more
76-90	none(2.0)	1-27(1.7)	28 or more
91-105	none(2.0)	1-21(1.8)	22 or more
106-120	none(2.0)	1-12(1.9)	13 or more
121-135	none(2.0)	none(2.0)	1 or more
136-grad.	none(2.0)	none(2.0)	1 or more

Provisions will be made for those students who entered under catalogs listing the old quality point requirements. These provisions are that every student has a year to raise his grades to the present requirement level. In other words a freshman leaving the spring quarter with a 1.50 average may return in the Fall quarter, however, by the end of the seventh quarter he must raise his average to the level on the new chart. This applies to all students.

Students are also reminded that their grade averages must be up to those listed in the current catalog in order to return next year. All averages will be computed at the end of this spring quarter, and students who are deficient must attend the summer session and raise their averages high enough to meet the minimum requirement. All students interested in knowing what their averages are at this time are urged to see Dean Crews.

Hard at work completing the scenery for "Around the World in 80 Days" is the properties and background committee. Over 20 sets will be used.

Last Play Of Season Opening

For your calendar next week and be sure to check May 21, 22 or 23 for the final Thalian-Wilmington College Theatre production of "Around the World in Eighty Days" at Thalian Hall, curtain time, 8:30 p.m. The delightfully extravagant adventures of Phileas Fogg should prove to be a light-hearted springtime fare and an enjoyable evening of theatre for all who attend.

Working feverishly have been the behind-the-scenes groups who form the backbone of any theatrical production. Scenic artists Sam Garner, Ron Mihal, and June Swart have been pouring forth ideas, sketches and scaled drawings for the multi-scened play. The construction of these twenty sets has been the responsibility of a hard working team composed of Robert Andrews, Jack Booker, Robert Carr, Fred Day, Robert Greer, James Hebron, James Keifer, Robert King, Dolan Little, Robert Roberts, James Rochelle, and Reginald Tucker.

Jay Howard has been busily splicing tape and piecing together all of the sounds from jungle elephants to boats, to horse and carriage, to music for the suttee rites. Calvin Doss and Louis Adcock are acting in the capacity of engineering and special effects consultants, respectively. The lighting problems have been delegated to Sandy Carr. The plot is concerned with the fun and frivolity of a wager made by Phileas Fogg (Kirk Ward) that he and his valet, Passepartout (Willie Loughlin), could encircle the globe in 80 days. The bet is made between him and Dunstan (Ron Mihal), Stuart (Richard Cribb), and Smedley (Sandy Carr).

In London the audience will be entertained by Mrs. Murchison (Rosemary Green), Jenny (Tina Forrester), Certe (Virginia Sonsky), two newsboys (Alan Hill and David Porter) and Sibil (Claudia Smith). In Paris our heroes run

Circle K Elects New Officers

By ROBERT LANIER

The Circle K club of Wilmington College, at its regular biweekly meeting on Wednesday, April 28, 1965, held the election of officers for the forthcoming year. The newly elected officers for the Circle K club are: president, Eston Brinkley; vice-president, Horace Best; secretary, Eddie Lawler; treasurer, Richard Baldwin; chaplain, Gene Frizzelle.

A banquet for the installation of the new Circle K club officers was held on May 7 at Whitey's Elberta Restaurant. The installation ceremony was conducted by Noah Burrow, who is the chairman of the committee on Circle K of the Kiwanis International club of Wilmington. The featured speaker of the evening was Johnson Harris, first vice-president of the local Kiwanis Club.

History of Circle K

The idea for special service club work with college men originated at Pullman, Washington, in 1936 with Jay N. Emerson who in 1946 was elected President of Kiwanis International. This led to the development of a local Circle K fraternity which was sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Pullman for ten years.

From this original project there gradually developed the concept of local Kiwanis clubs not only providing help and guidance for college men but the creation also of a service club for the college and university campus. In 1947 the first Circle K club was organized at Carthage College, Carthage, Illinois, as a local Kiwanis club project. Other Kiwanis clubs soon became interested in the activity and sponsored similar organizations in their own communities.

As the number of Circle K clubs gradually spread throughout the United States and Canada, the need for coordination of the activities of the local clubs brought about the beginning of an International organization under the sponsorship of Kiwanis International. This was achieved in October 1955, and in May 1956 a special department in the General Office of Kiwanis International was created to correlate various facets of the Circle K program.

What Is Circle K?

The Circle K club is not a social fraternity; it is a service organization for college men operating on campus and is similar to Kiwanis and other civic service clubs. It is a leadership and character-building group which serves the campus and the community.

The Circle K club is a unique organization. Its unique quality will be apparent after examining the opportunities which Circle K offers to the students, the colleges and

On Our Gun Law Controversy

When J. Edgar Hoover gave testimony before the House Subcommittee on Appropriations in 1964, the subject of gun laws was mentioned, especially concerning mail order of firearms. In Mr. Hoover's reply relative to a proposal of a national law requiring the registration of all firearms, he indicated he felt a strong urge for Congress to enact such a measure, aided by action on the state level, to alleviate the dangerous situation. He revealed that "In all too many places in this country, one can buy a gun without giving one's name. Some places have rather tight laws, but most do not."

Sadly, 8,400 willful killings were made in 1962. Fifty-four per cent were committed with the aid of a gun. Seventy per cent of these with a revolver or handgun of some kind. One hundred thirteen law officers were killed in the years 1960-62 with 109 being murdered with handguns.

The Dodd Bill, requiring registration of all firearms is being met with some opposition from people who argue that the right to bear arms is constitutional, and that America was won with the aid of firearms. But this is the twentieth century when men are using guns to kill in order to rob banks, commit rape, and other atrocities, even to slaying a president. The constitutional right to bear arms is certainly a valid one, but more valid is the right of lawmakers to come to the defense of the same public for whom the Constitution was meant to protect.

Although the Dodd bill would not even affect he type gun used to kill President Kennedy, it still might clamp down on some people who had no more business with a gun than a baby. The rest of us need no longer fear the Indians, or rustlers, bears, and the like.

Fine Arts Committee Negligent To Student Body

The Fine Arts Committee has really let the student body down this year. Only one presentation was offered—a poorly attended lecture.

What happened? Was there no co-operation among the committee members? Or was there just plain disinterest and an unwillingness to work? We highly suspect the latter.

It is difficult to find students who will work, and it is work to try to schedule programs of calibre and then advertise it. Perhaps this particular committee should be on a volunteer basis. Then the truly interested person will apply for a seat only if he is willing to work.

It is imperative that Wilmington College sponsor interesting, educational, and entertaining programs if we are to take our place as a leader in the community.

The television stations expressed a willingness to work with the college in promoting special events last summer, but there have been no events to utilize this kind offer.

Perhaps the Fine Arts Committee should work in conjunction with the Friends of Wilmington College or a civic group in order to achieve a more efficient group, just as the Straw Hat theater works with Thalian members, a union which has certainly proved favorable in the past.

Arch and Spire

Youth is not a time of life—it is a state of mind. It is not a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips, and supple knees; it is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions; it is a freshness of the deep springs of life.

Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite of adventure over love of ease. This often exists in a man of 50 more than in a boy of 20. Nobody grows old merely living a number of years. People grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair—these are the long, long years that bow the head and turn the growing spirit back to dust.

Whether six or 60, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the sweet amazement of the stars and the starlike things and thought, the undaunted challenge of events, the unflinching childlike appetite for what is next, and the joy of the game of life.

You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt, as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear, as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

In the central place of your heart there is a wireless station. So long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, courage, grandeur, and power from the earth, from men, and from the Infinite, just that long and no longer, are you young.

When the wire are all down and the central place of your heart is covered with snows of pessimism and the ice of cynicism, then you grow old indeed.—Author unknown

Frogs And Cats Meet Doom In Lab In Interest Of Science Research

By SHIRLEY MANNING

Frogs and cats have a way of getting their several parts exposed for scientific examination.

Enough frogs have wound up in the labs at Wilmington College to treat most of the student body to a prodigious frogleg banquet. The number of cats who inadvertently became anatomical specimens, were they alive today, would be able to rid New Hanover County of all its mice.

Frogs are chosen for study because they are easily dissected and too, they show the basic body plan of vertebrates. Cats are chosen for similar reasons in that for particular courses such as human anatomy and physiology, they serve as a comparison for human systems and show the relationships.

Teachers, nurses, medical technicians, and biology majors advance to the dissection of the cat, while the introductory course of Biology 101 is limited to the frog.

The Carolina Biological Supply usually provides the prepared frogs and cats which are shipped in buckets of pharmaldehyde by truck. Leopard frogs cost about 30 cents each while bull frogs which are injected with colored latex in their arteries and veins in order for the student to be able to trace the circulatory system, cost about $2.20 each.

Cats are a little more expensive. A prepared feline carnivorous mammal costs $5.75 each.

Organizations often buy specimens for sale to institutions and students can pick up extra money while fishing or out collecting. A book is published in Chicago which tells what specimens are needed and those that will be bought.

Jack Dermid, Frank Allen, and Walter Biggs, all of the biology department, had many things to tell about cats and frogs. Mr. Allen in particular related tales about his student nurses who he said, "Often name their cats, especially after their boyfriends." "They also take the skins of cats home sometime to make small rugs out of them," said Mr. Allen.

Mr. Biggs said that the girls wore gloves sometimes while dissecting. "And talcum powder too," interjected Mr. Allen, who also said the nurses sometimes put perfume on the cats to make their work a little more pleasant. "One girl," declared, "Mr. Allen, 'even brought goggles to class because of the offensive odor or the burning sensation around the eyes.'"

Cats have been misplaced, dismembered, and one was even sewed up with all the instruments inside by a jesting lab partner.

Asking for final comments from these three teachers, Mr. Allen concluded with his pet peeve, and that concerned "freshmen girls who wear too much mascara and cloud up the eye piece on the microscope while they are observing."

We conclude with:

ODE TO A CAT

Seated one day at her organs I was bleary and ill at ease. And my scalpel wandered idly Over her greasy kidneys. I knew not what I dissected. It may have been a cow When I struck one cord of the larynx.

There resounded a great "meow."

It may be the cats bright angel Will sing in biology lab. It may be that death's bright angel Will sing that "meow" again. For this may have been his first departure.

For as the story goes I may hear him cry again For he'll still have eight lives to go.

Students Are Asked Opinion On Crisis

With the still-fresh crisis in the Dominican Republic, the Seahawk was interested to know how the student body felt about it.

Gene Frizzle: "I think that the situation is bad but I'm glad the U.S. sent troops there. If they hadn't we would have another Cuba."

Bob Kermion: "I think that the U.S. should have gone in—very definitely. However, I think that they should have made an agreement with the O.A.S. before and then gone in much stronger."

Robin Graybeal: "I approve of the U.S. going in to the Dominican Republic. The Monroe Doctrine was let down in Cuba. I don't think it should happen again."

Jimmy Rich: "The U.S. couldn't afford not to go into the Dominican Republic but they can't afford to stay now without threat of interfering in the sovereign rights of the country."

Fred Newburn: "Any sovereign state should be allowed to select any form of government they choose without foreign interference."

Danny Lewis: "The U.S. has a right to fight against Communist aggression to protect themselves. Until the Dominican Republic has enough stability to select their own form of government the U.S. should stay."

Butch Budd: "It's a hard life."

Larry Bohannon: "The U.S. shouldn't have gone in at all. These same tactics were used by Russia with Hungary in 1956."

Linda Adams: "It stinks!"

Roger Webb: "I'd like to be there to help the U.S."

Preston Brown: "If President had sent Marines there and other places instead of the Peace Corps we wouldn't be in this mess."

ANNUAL STUDENT ART SHOW PRESENTS DIFFERENT MEDIA

The Annual Student Art Show now on display in Hoggard Hall is one of the most interesting and different shows that the department has presented this year.

There is work in every type of media and in every type of design. Line, color, value, shape, all of these are represented in this show and quite well at that.

The work of Don Fox and Linda Woody, not to mention others, has impressed this critic. Fox is very

Steve West: "The U.S. should have gone in definitely. They are doing the best thing right now. Perhaps, however, they could turn it over to the U.N., if it would act immediately."

One of the faculty had something to say about the situation. Dean Thomas P. Brown said, "It's complicated."

Harry Batuyios: "The U.S. is doing all right. I believe, however that the civilians should be allowed to make up their own minds, unless Castro is sending in Communist agents. If this is the case the Dominicans deserve the help of the U.S. so that they may be free of Communist influence and may choose of their own will."

Lindsay Westell: "I don't think that we should have sent the Marines, but we really didn't have much of a choice."

Carol Lassiter: "I wouldn't like to be there."

good when it comes to sketching and free hand drawing. His street scene and still life compositions in pencil and pen and ink are interesting, neat, and well presented.

Miss Woody definitely has a style all her own. This style of abstracting a rather realistic bit of subject matter is interesting and well executed. One can almost pick out Miss Woody's work after seeing the first one that she has done. It is true that a certain style could become rather monotonous after a while but Miss Woody's variation of this style rescues her work from this fate.

Graphics and Life Drawing is also represented in this show. Ronnie Sellers' "Marilyn Mack Our Model" has caused quite a bit of comment by viewers of this show. It should be recorded that this comment has been made with interludes of appreciative laughter.

Archie Alderman's rendering, previously shown at another exhibit this year, is still as attractive—gallery TWO as it was four months ago. Silk Screen prints and woodcuts have always seemed to hold the interest of this reviewer; the ones in this show tend to make one appreciate the work that goes into this type of art.

The oil paintings in this show are few in number. The only one that comes to mind was Bebe Blommee's painting of the beach which has interesting texture due to the use of sand in the paint. The show is therefore lacking in representative oil paintings of student work. Maybe students aren't doing that much work in oil.

It is an interesting show none the less and this reviewer feels that all who get the chance should see it. The good work far outshines the bad but no review would be complete without making mention of both kinds. — by S.L.G.

Alpha Chi Sigma Awards Scholarship

Alpha Chi Sigma of Wilmington College is offering a scholarship to some deserving girl presently enrolled in the college. Anyone who is interested may pick up an application blank from Dean J. M. Crew's office, and then it must be turned in to Miss Shannon Morton.

Through the organization's various projects during the year, the money has been raised for such a project. Each spring Alpha Chi Sigma donates something to the College. This year it was decided that a scholarship would prove beneficial. It is the goal of Alpha Chi to continue a partial scholarship throughout the year.

On Saturday, May 7, the Alpha Chi's had a bake sale at Wilson's Supermarket. The proceeds will be used for the scholarship.

Any girls wishing membership into Alpha Chi Sigma may get their application blanks from any of the present members. New members will be voted on at the first meeting in May.

College Chorus Goes On Tour

The Wilmington College Chorus under the direction of Loyd Hudson and the College Band under the direction of Bill Adcock held the annual spring musical tour from April 26 to May 6.

The varied selections by the chorus and band made the tour a great success as they sang and played at Shallotte High School, Southport High, Atkinson, Whiteville, Burgaw, and Dixon High School in Jacksonville.

This spring tour was also presented to the student body on Tuesday, May 11 at 10:30 a.m.

The chorus sang music of varied style and class while on tour. Pictured here is a rehearsal scene for "Sit Down, You're Rocking the Boat" in which Sam Garner took the bass solo. "Come to Me, Bend to Me," "It's Almost Like Being in Love," "Me and My Shadow," and many other popular songs were used.

To change the pace of the hour long program, two folk singing groups were used. "I Understand" and "Ferry Cross the Mersy" were the offerings of these two groups. Sherry Lackey sang "Until the Twelfth of Never" which was received with cheers and much applause by the high school audiences.

The college band played numerous selections including "Theme in Pastels," "Eight Days a Week," "Hot Toddy," "Autumn Leaves," and "Standing on the Corner Watching All the Girls Go By." Wayne Robinson took the solo in this song.

Each time this concert was presented, the chorus and band closed the program with the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and the college Alma Mater.

Legion Presents Flag To College

The home of Post 10 of The American Legion was the site of a ceremony marking the presentation of an American flag to Wilmington College. Mr. Jack Hart of Post 10 made the presentation. David Ansell and Martin Grant, both members of the Young Americans for Freedom, accepted the flag on behalf of the College.

The Legion has a plan which makes it possible for them to give flags regularly to organizations which need them. This is part of an overall program by the Legion for the promotion of patriotism in America.

The flag will stand in the lobby outside the library. It will be available to any club or organization which wishes to use it for meetings or programs.

The Seahawk wishes to express appreciation to the Legion on behalf of Wilmington College for the flag. We are always glad to see members of the community take an interest in the activities in the College.

Air Force ROTC has now been updated to fit into today's busy undergraduate schedule.
Here are the facts about the new two-year AFROTC Program.

Who is eligible for two-year AFROTC? Any male undergraduate who still has two years remaining in college. It's an especially good break for junior college students who plan to complete their baccalaureate requirements at a four-year institution.

What's the curriculum like? It's been thoroughly revamped. You won't find past answers and traditional ritualized solutions to problems. New instructional methods teach the student to arrive at his own conclusions, and to test them against those of his classmates and instructors. Symbolic of the change is the new title — Department of Aerospace Studies.

How will students for the new program be chosen? First, you must pass the Air Force Officer Qualifying Test and have a medical examination. Then you meet with the interview board of senior Air Force officers, who will decide whether you are to be selected to attend the Field Training Course. This will be held during the summer before your junior year. Its purpose is two-fold; to let the Air Force judge you and to let you judge the Air Force. Only after you are both satisfied will you be enrolled in the program. So you see, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by applying now. But you must act fast — applications will be closing for next year's juniors. Forms are available from the Professor of Aerospace Studies, or from Headquarters Air Force ROTC, Maxwell AFB, Alabama.

As an AFROTC cadet, will I receive pay? Yes, you will be paid for the Field Training Course which will amount to approximately $120. During the school year, you will be paid $40 a month, and you will also get free uniforms.

Will I have a chance to fly while I am in AFROTC? Senior graduates are eligible for the Flying Instruction Program. This involves 364 hours of flight training and 35 hours of ground school. Successful completion earns you a civilian private pilot's license.

Bowling deserves a place in the Olympics. For thirteen years now the Association of College Unions has conducted an annual tournament adhering to the strictest rules of amateurism. Last year the men's ACU International Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament found 13,000 collegians competing to qualify for the eventual finals event, won by 19-year-old Gunnar Volts of Wisconsin State.

The latest surveys indicate there are 39-million people who bowl in leagues and casual play in the U.S., by far the most popular participation sport in the nation. For collegians, it means one doesn't have to be a muscular varsity star, just as long as the ball hooks in that 1-3 pocket. Any student can apply for the ACU men's, and ACU women's, tournaments coming up next April.

Judo and volleyball were added to the 1964 winter Olympics agenda. Why not bowling? It's now played in 50 nations of the world. ▼

May Dance Success

Friday, April 30, a formal dance at Wilmington College was held in the Pub from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Music was presented by the Russ Carlton Orchestra.

The scene of a spring garden ornamented by Grecian architecture was carried out by the dance committee, headed by Joe Crutchfield, Tim Chappell, and Vickie Tienken.

The crowning of the Queen of May and presentation of her court began at 10:30. Master of Ceremonies, Ronnie Staton, introduced the Queen's court and the escorts. The freshman attendants, Louise Lewis, escorted by Bud Sullivan, and Janis Buris, escorted by Charles Jones were peach dresses. Carol Smith, escorted by Ray Bordeaux and Sherry Lackey, escorted by Butch Watts represented the sophomore attendants, wore blue dresses. Also wearing blue were the junior attendants, Pat Beasley, escorted by Shannon Abbott and Memory Farrar, escorted by Tom McNair.

In dresses of green were the senior attendants: Kay Wells, escorted by Larry Lanier and Pat Stiles, escorted by Bob Barks. Maid of honor, Bonnie Daniels, escorted by Pete Daniel appeared in a rose dress. All of the attendants carried crescents of carnations matching their dresses.

Highlighting the evening was the presentation of the Queen of May, Miss Kitty O'Brien. The Queen wore a white gown and carried a spray of red roses. She was escorted by John Henry Brunius. Tim Chappell crowned the Queen. After the crowning, a dance was held in honor of the queen and her court.

A concert featuring the Highwaymen was presented on Saturday, May 1, at 8:30 in the Wilmington College Gymnasium. The four hundred and fifty attending the concert were entertained by the familiar folk songs and humorous antics presented by the group.

SHUFFLERS TO CUT NEW RECORD

A new musical group made up of several members from Wilmington College has been formed. Roy Frantzen, Tom McNair, and John Day, make up the background, with Greer Craig as the vocalist. Gary Patterson plays the lead guitar, with Ray Hawk on the drums. Roy Webb handles the bass guitar with Lane Holt on sax. Dr. Heber Johnson plays the piano and also manages the group which hasn't been named yet, but is a merger of the Goliards and Shufflers.

The group has been in practice for about three months, and made their first record called "I'll Be True" backed by "For Always and Forever" with Greer singing the former, and Ronnie Brock featured on the latter. The record was cut at the Arthur Smith Studios in Charlotte on the Southern Sound Label and has been on the market for about a month.

The group plans to return to Charlotte June 12 to make another record and two tapes, "Peanut Butter" and "Don't Tell Me You're Sorry."

West to Receive Ph.D. from Duke

E. M. West, who teaches retailing and business policy at Wilmington College, has fulfilled the requirements for his doctorate in education and administration from Duke University.

Dr. West will receive his degree at the graduation exercises June 8, although technically he completed the requirements April 6.

He is married to Geraldine West, a teacher at New Hanover High School and has two children, a daughter 15 and a son 10.

Dr. West is a member of the Pine Valley Country Club and enjoys golf when he has time for it. "As far as other activities are concerned, I'm afraid I'm not too active. That's the price you pay for a doctorate."

He also enjoys stockworking with guns and has a few collectors items.

For the future, Dr. West plans to stay on at the college and will teach business law and also salesmanship in the fall.

Miss Kitty O'Brien and Bill Weir above, were recently elected to the top offices of the Student Body.

Catherine Collins O'Brien is the newly elected president of the student body.

Miss O'Brien is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. O'Brien and resides at 158 Colonial Circle. In 1962 Kitty, as she is known, was graduated from New Hanover High School. A first quarter senior, she is majoring in Spanish. Kitty plans to attend graduate school and then to teach. She works part-time at Ed Fleishman and Brothers and also in the College Book Store.

At Wilmington College Kitty is a member of Alpha Chi Sigma, Telephone Directory Committee, and she resigned as May Queen during May Week. Kitty was Secretary of the Student Body for the past year.

When asked about the program she would like to carry out as president of the student body, Miss O'Brien replied:

"My greatest aim as president of the student body is to create more interest in the Student Government, thus arousing more interest in the students. I want to help the members of the Senate work cooperatively and produce effective legislation. I want to promote a general good feeling between the administration and the student government. I plan to reorganize the Interclub Council, so that it can be made an effective organization. Also, I want to create an effective cabinet, building around strong committees. The Fine Arts program will be strongly improved. I plan to work with the fraternities and any other groups that show the same interest and enthusiasm. To sum it all up — I want to create the Student Government Association in a new image to the students who support it."

Elected to the office of vice-president of the student body was William F. Weir, the son of Colonel and Mrs. Robert R. Weir of Camp Lejeune. In Wilmington Bill resides at the Pi Sigma Mu fraternity house on Market Street.

Bill has had quite a varied educational background. Before graduation from Francis C. Hammond High School in Alexandria, Va., Bill attended 13 different schools. Before transferring to Wilmington College, he attended the University of Virginia. Bill is now majoring in business administration. He plans to attend graduate school in a northern college and then apply to Officer Candidate School in the USAF. Bill works part time at the Saddle Shop at Scotts Hill and is in the U. S. Naval Reserve.

At Wilmington College Bill is a member of the Junior class and serves as business manager of the Seahawk. He is active in the Wilmington College Theatre and currently had part in "Around the World in Eighty Days." Bill is House Manager of Pi Sigma Mu fraternity and was voted most outstanding pledge of the pledge class.

Miss Morton Will Retire With 18 Years of Service

Miss Shannon Morton, dean of women at Wilmington College is retiring.

Having been with the college since 1947 when the college first opened, Miss Morton will terminate her duties at the end of this quarter. Miss Morton laughingly refers to the number of years it has taken her to graduate. "I often say it has taken me 18 years to graduate. I started with the first freshman class, and I am now leaving with the first graduating class."

When Miss Morton first started with the college she was head of the English department. "I worked in this field until 1963," recalled Miss Morton, "and for part of this time, from 1955 to 1963 I held both the positions of head of the English department and dean of women."

Miss Morton resigned from the English department to devote her full energies to dean of women last year. "As dean of women, my main purpose has been to offer help to the women students in any way I could. For example, I frequently have recommended places where out-of-town women students could stay."

General Election Returns Announced

On May 31, 1965, general elections were held at Wilmington College. Elected as officers of the Student Body were Catherine C. O'Brien, president; William F. Weir, vice president; Memory A. Farrar, secretary. The senior class officers were Martin S. Grant, president; Robert H. Stephenson, vice president; Parker H. Bryant, secretary. Senior senators were Tim Chappell, Jim Brothers, Jim Farlow, Larry Honeycutt, and Ernest Fullwood.

For the Junior class Thomas R. Debnam was elected president; Charles W. Hawley, vice-president; Albert Jewell, secretary; T. Preston Brown, Greer B. Craig, Jerry M. Thompson, Franklin L. Pratt, and Sidney M. Salling, senators.

R. Dennis Lennon was elected Sophomore class president. Other officers included Dennis M. Frisbee, vice-president; Julie Memory, secretary; Corlis T. Collins, Barbara Berry, Louise Lewis, Larry Bohannon, and H. C. Johnson, senators.

Elected to the Judicial Council were: At Large, Michael P. Shea; Men: Bobby King, Roger Webb; Women: Sally Johnson, and Charita Butler.

When asked about his election as vice president and his plans in fulfilling this office:

"I have had minimal student government experience but have made a study of the college constitution, rules of parliamentary procedure in order to preside over the Senate.

"It is my immediate goal to provide a more efficient and active student government. This I feel is enough — any new legislation to be passed is the job of the senators. I will promote necessary new legislation among the senators and the student body.

"This summer members of the student government and I are going to work on the Constitution and develop several necessary amendments. We plan to work with the administration and offer these changes to the students in the fall. As for what the senate does, I would simply like to see them enact some major legislation."

Miss Morton who has a B.S. and a Master of Arts degree also teaches an English class, besides engaging in the duties as faculty advisor of the Scriptic Society since its organization in 1948. Originally called the Pen Pushers Club, Miss Morton supervised the first issue of the literary magazine, "Pen in Hand."

Miss Morton also takes an active interest in the Alpha Chi Sigma service organization. She also has been a frequent chaperone at many club activities and has worked in conjunction with the dean of students on these occasions.

Miss Morton in reflecting back over the years says that she has "always encouraged the girls of the college to get to know one another. I have entertained them in my home and had girls over to talk or play records and have really enjoyed them all."

In summing up her experiences at the college Miss Morton stated, "I have learned a great deal about students and the functions of a college. It has been very stimulating to watch the growth of the college, knowing that because I have put a great deal of myself into the college I have been a part of it. I have loved being associated with the college and I don't look forward to the separation with my girls. After all these years of the daily routine I think I will enjoy my new freedom. I will still be living in Wilmington and I hope to continue my interest and aid to the college."

Doctorate Degree To Be Conferred On Mr. Randall

A member of the Wilmington College faculty, Duncan P. Randall, has recently completed the requirements for his Ph.D. in geography.

Dr. Randall is professor of social science and the chairman of the social science department at the college. He teaches geography courses. Dr. Randall has had a full education background. He received his A.B. from the University of Georgia, his M.A. from Northwestern University and completed the requirements for his Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill on May 10. His doctorate degree will be conferred in August.

Born in Chicago, Dr. Randall lived there until 1945. His family lived in Virginia, Georgia, and New York until 1951 when they settled in Wilmington. After college and the Air Force, Dr. Randall began teaching at Wilmington College in 1958.

Dr. Randall and his wife, Mae, live at 4106 Edgewood Road. He is the father of two boys, Allen, 9, and Steven, 3. The family has membership at St. James Episcopal Church. Whenever possible, Dr. Randall enjoys golf.

EDITORIALS:

On Miss Morton's Retiring

Seldom does one devote the better part of his life giving rather than receiving. In the case of Miss Shannon Morton, dean of women at Wilmington College, we have an exception.

After 18 years of untiring service to the English department and to the women students of the college, Miss Morton has announced her retirement.

The faculty gave a tea honoring Miss Morton last Sunday. The countless number of students Miss Morton has helped will be unable to pay a worthy tribute to her in that her influence will be felt in years to come and the good feeling of knowing someone as kind and dedicated as Miss Morton will be a source of perpetual happy memories.

As the day nears for her departure, students and faculty alike can perhaps feel the overwhelming sadness that will come as Miss Morton walks down the hallowed halls for the last time in her official duty. Our loss will be society's gain for truly Miss Morton's friends, relatives, and associates will benefit as Miss Morton assumes a more extensive role in her community.

Congratulations To 1965 Graduates

Best wishes are extended to the graduates of 1965.

June 13 will represent long years of work, homework, time spent and time wasted; but more important it will represent the culmination of concerted efforts to get a degree and embark finally on a chosen profession or career. To others it will represent only a brief interlude as they go on to do graduate work. Whatever graduation day represents to the participants, it will be a memorable one, met with mixed emotions of relief and joy, sadness and a feeling of days gone by never to be recaptured.

Cicero said, "When you are aspiring to the highest place, it is honorable to reach the second or even the third rank." The 1965 graduating class will represent as many aspirations as there are students. Some will achieve their goals. It is hoped that all will; but even upon receiving a degree, if the graduate lacks a motive or a drive, the best of partially given efforts will fail. Only when he established his place in life, and this perhaps in many years to come, will he be able to look back on his college days at Wilmington College and reflect the real meaning of a college education and to realize that the hopes and dreams he pondered in his head during commencement exercises have finally come true.

There is something about the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" that strike chords in our hearts with fondness. Truly as this graduating class walks down the aisles it will be no different. The air will be tingling; there will be smiles and tears lingering, not wishing to come, but rather content to be just tears of deep feeling reluctant to make their path down the happy emotional face of the graduate.

There will be shaking of hands, merry congratulations, rapid exchanges of pride among friends and relatives. Bells will ring in hearts as truths are spoken on this auspicious occasion. Truly a night to remember for any senior. Again best wishes and congratulations to the 1965 Graduates of Wilmington College.

Debate Team Holds Demonstrations

The Debate Team of Wilmington College has remained active even though the debate season officially ended with the Old Dominion College Tournament in which they were victorious. They have given two demonstration debates for Sunset Junior High School.

The main purpose of the debates was to show the classes the essence of debating. Cori Collins explained the debating process to the junior high students before the debates were given. The debates were largely of an entertaining nature, and the topics were approached from a humorous aspect.

The classes submitted several topics to the debate team. The groups of debaters, then, selected the topics most suitable and prepared them for the classes.

The first demonstration debate was given on Monday, May 17. The topic was "Resolved: That Woman Should Hold the Highest Elected Office." On the affirmative side of the issue were woman debaters, Cori Collins and Barbara Berry. Debating the negative side were men debaters, Frank Pratt and Manny Friedman.

The second debate was given the following Thursday morning.

B.S.U. Holds Beach Retreat

On May 21, the Baptist Student Union of Wilmington College held a retreat at Wrightsville Beach.

This retreat was held to provide an opportunity for recreation and religious inspiration. The activities began with a hamburger supper on Friday night. This was followed by an hour of discussion and dialogue led by Reverend George C. Lewis, pastor of Masonboro Baptist Church. The evening was closed by the musical presentations of group members.

The planning session for the coming year was held on Saturday. Leading the meeting was the incoming president, Eliot O'Neal. During this meeting, a schedule of meetings and a tentative list of speakers were outlined. All those attending agreed that the retreat offered a very rewarding experience in fun and fellowship.

The topic for this debate was "Resolved: That Teachers Should Date Students." Frank Pratt and Barbara Berry took the affirmative side of the issue while Cori Collins and Elizabeth Humphrey debated the negative side.

Letter To The Editor

In the recent issue of the Seahawk there was an article by the sport editor which pointed out the many "admirable performances" of the intramural staff. As a representative of one of the teams that recently signed up for the softball season, may I point out that so far there has been a definite lack of any such performance on the part of the staff. Indeed, I feel free to farther say that had it not been for a few students who pieced together a very inadequate supply of balls and bats, and combined these with a cow's pasture for a playing field, we would not have played any games whatsoever. The number of forfeits that have occurred thus far are an evidence not of a lack of interest, but a disappointment in the organization of the whole intramural program.

We, as students, realize that in a school such as ours there are going to be growing pains, and that although we are "over-burdened" with activity that comes out of our activity fee, we still feel that it really wouldn't take so much to cut the grass and give us some equipment whereby we may play a little ball. If the gentleman in charge of maintenance was as interested in aiding the students as he is in writing tickets and threatening us with suspension from school, and if the gentleman who is supposedly in charge of the intramural program and who was given so much credit in the last issue of the Seahawk was really as interested in the intramural program as he is in spending his afternoons on the golf course or arranging to take trips that our activity fee is paying for; if these gentlemen would "together" show a little more interest in our desires, we may feel that "all is not lost." But until then, we will continue to hope that somewhere, sometime, we will be able to look back at our college years and say, "those intramural games sure were fun." We surely can't say this now.

Gun Law Letter

I must contest the editorial on gun laws which appeared in the last issue of "The Seahawk." The statement by J. Edgar Hoover relative to a need for firearms registration laws is a bit inconsistent with FBI research, findings of which appear annually in the Bureau's Uniform Crime Reports for the United States. In these reports are listed a number of factors which affect the crime rate in any community. Included are such variables as composition of the population with reference to age, sex, and race; climate; educational, recreational and religious facilities; and the number of police officers per unit of population. These reports, straight from FBI records, have never listed firearms restrictions as having any effect on the crime rate.

It is true that many persons are murdered with a firearm of some type. Still, authoritative studies incline to come such as Patterns in Criminal Homicide by Dr. Marvin Wolfgang, reveal that . . . "few homicides due to shooting could be avoided if the firearm were not immediately present, and that the offender would select some other weapon to achieve the same destructive goal."

If the editor must combat a bill; for instance, the Dodd Bill; she could at least find out what the bill is about. The Dodd Bill does not require registration of all firearms. It flatly prohibits all mail-order sales of firearms to individuals, except licensed dealers. The Secretary of the Treasury then edicts who may or may not be trusted with the license. A gun shipped for service repairs could only be shipped under Treasury regulations and then only for "authorized" service.

This bill could lead to administrative red tape which would totally discourage and eliminate the private ownership of all guns. Imagine how the present crime rate would soar when the lawless

Student Elections Conducted Wrongly

The recent student elections set a precedent never before achieved at Wilmington College, that of being the most haphazard, irresponsible, and ill-conducted election held thus far.

The Election Committee should share the responsibility for allowing such a chaotic floundering at the election booths, for the committee neither maintained order, nor performed any of its duties in an orderly manner. Instead of forming lines for the voters so that some order could be achieved, there was crowding and pushing and sheer confusion at all the voting boxes.

The students running for office behaved in a deplorable manner. Not only was there "vote-grabbing" at the last minute, but general high pressure applied to an indecisive voter. Candidates should have been outside the student services building except upon entering to cast their own votes, but instead they were inside, badgering people to vote for them and in many cases looking over the shoulders of the voters and even exerting the unheard of audacity of suggesting that a vote already cast, be erased and cast for someone else, either themselves, or a friend.

The conduct of write-in candidates was particularly juvenile and downright aggravating. These last minute "coward candidates" who don't have enough gumption to place their name on the ballot and work up a platform but depend on last minute pressuring of voters to put them in office is, we think, taking the matter of running for office as a lark. Not knowing the deadline is no excuse. It was posted in plenty of time, and even if a person thinking of running for office didn't see the notice, he knows in general when elections are usually held and should have had enough forethought to make it his business to find out when the deadline for filing was. Occasionally a write-in candidate is a good thing, but the situation which upped itself in the last election resembled a circus.

The friends of candidates running for office and the voters themselves behaved in a manner that makes one question the validity of any of the officers who are supposed to have won the election. Perhaps it would be wise to check the ballots cast against those who were supposed to have voted to assure the student body that proper procedures were followed at all times. This is not insinuating that the people who won did so dishonestly. Votes might not have been given where they were intended, due to the pressure applied by friends of people running for office.

The tactics, especially of the fraternities, usually a precedent setter on campus and more or less the leaders, are certainly to be questioned. In fact the whole election was a farce and an insult to democratic voting.

Hurry Up Summer!

It is not unusual at this time of year for school to become nearly unbearable.

Sitting in class and gazing out the window at the warm sunshine while the professor talks of approaching exams, with E day only six days off, and book reports and research papers due; it becomes increasingly hard to concentrate on the multitude of work piled up as it always does when the quarter's end approaches.

Random thoughts associate themselves in our cluttered brain as we try to decide which would be more feasible, to be out on the beach sipping something cool, or to organize our English notebook and review for exams. As the days get hotter and longer, it's not unusual to tempt the hand of a good grade on that course, and exert a slight laziness that the first days of summer bring.

We spend time in reverie, daydreaming, and occasionally wishing we had done a little better but ever dreaming about the good old days of summer and the unfulfilled thoughts which usually accompany the season of sun fast coming when we will be out in June and able to enjoy them to the fullest.

Oh, the summer day

Has a smile of light

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun.

among us realized that the law abiding citizen had only a baseball bat with which to defend his home and family against robbery, rape, or murder. True, this is the twentieth century, and the enemy has changed; but the effect is the same. Indian or rustler, burglar or rapist; what difference from which death comes?

William J. Pate, Jr.

Editor's note: If the writer will read the editorial carefully, he will see that I did not combat the bill, rather I advocated the bill. Quoting from J. Edgar Hoover the bill does require registration of all firearms. Also the editorial doesn't suggest that no one have a gun to defend himself, this idea being foolish even in its suggestion; merely that guns be kept out of the hands of irresponsible persons. My source of information was J. Edgar Hoover's direct testimony to the Appropriations Committee.

VARSITY REPORT By HUGH PASCHAL, Sports Editor

BROOKS COMMENTS ON ATHLETIC DEVELOPMENTS

The Year in Reflection

It seems that each year about late May a certain uneasy sentimentality and vague sense of nostalgia settles over a select group of the population known as students. The most significant result of this phenomenon is an almost uncontrollable urge to reminisce. We must admit to falling victim to this strange but often delightful malady, especially since this is out only the last "Varsity Report" of the year but it is also the last one this writer will have the pleasure of writing.

Good Year

Yes, it has been a good year in many respects for the Wilmington College athletic department. For many years Coach Bill Brooks had to be content to struggle along by himself as he sought to develop an athletic program for the Seahawks. The fact that he did remarkably well indicates his devotion to his work. Last year, however, the powers that be finally awarded him an assistant, and together he and Coach Earl Allen, an alumnus of Wilmington College and the Seahawk baseball squad, struggled along. The 1964-65 term saw revolutionary changes brought about in the department. A program of physical education was added to the curriculum; three new coaches were added to the staff in the persons of Coaches Judith Lewis, Virginia Mobley, and Charles Sproles; and the new gymnasium was finally opened to the student body though it still was not fully completed and still isn't.

The new physical education plant introduced a new phase of education at Wilmington College, and this addition proved to be rather expensive to organize and operate as a big boost in student fees indicated. A $7.50 physical education fee was added to the $8.50 activity fee. Of course, there was a great deal of resentment leveled at the new fee for a service which wasn't even offered until the middle of the winter quarter, but Coach Brooks is quick to point out its necessity.

Why the P. E. Fee?

"The expense involved in getting started in a program such as this is pretty high, and it all has to come from the students because the state won't pay for the services we offer. Any student can come to the gym, and we'll supply him with a sweatshirt, shorts, shirt, socks, and a towel—everything but shoes. He can use the facilities we have available in the gym and weight room anytime between 8:30 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. provided we aren't holding classes in there. All this is in addition to the same service for those in the physical education classes. That's really quite a bargain when you stop to consider it. You can't provide each person in the student body with a clean uniform and keep him in soap and towels on $22.50 per year. But we figure it averages out all right. Only freshmen and sophomores take physical education, and all the juniors and seniors don't use the facilities even though they pay for the privileges.

"The fella at Carolina (UNC) said we couldn't offer this kind of service for less than $10.00 per quarter, but we're trying it out at $7.50.

Athletic Fund

"It's the same way with the activity fee that everybody pays. The three dollars per student per quarter we get from that is totally separate from the physical education fund. For that three dollars the student gets free admission to about twelve home basketball games, about twenty home baseball games, plus the wrestling, and next year we'll have intercollegiate soccer. Of course, we know that not everybody takes advantage of their activity cards, but they're much better off here than they are at Carolina where they pay almost twice as much in activity fees and all their student activity card does for them is allow them to buy a student ticket—so they wind up paying twice."

Intramural Problems

Commenting on the intramural program, Coach Brooks stated, "I've heard some complaints that it isn't as well organized as it was last year. There's been a little dissatisfaction with the umpiring, but the truth is we haven't been able to attract as many boys with athletic experience to officiate as we had last year. And no amount of training sessions is going to make good umpires out of those boys; only experience will do that.

Now last year when there was only Coach Allen and me here we were able to hire Jerry Thompson to help us run the program, and he did a good job. But this year they wouldn't give us the money, and Coach Allen had to do it. We still pay the umpires a dollar a game, but Coach Allen has his other duties and can't devote all of his time to the program as Jerry could. There's also the playing area; we've tried to get the grass cut, but the mower was broken for a long time. And sometimes it's like pulling eye teeth to get those people to mow those fields. The machine we used to paint the lines broke down, and we had to do it by hand. And to top it all off, it rained the next day and just about washed them all out. So you see we've had our problems.

Hopeful for Summer Lull

"I hope there'll be a lull this summer so I can get to work on the backstops for the softball fields. I've got the wire, but I need the time and help to set them up. After that maybe we can get around to having three tennis courts built by fall so we can have a tennis team next year. But as far as a track is concerned, as much as I'd like to have one, it costs about $20,000 to build one, and you can't get too far on a project like that without producing some cash. I'm afraid it'll have to wait a while.

Soccer Next Year

"We know we're going to have a soccer team next year. Coach Sproles has already set up the schedule. We'll play such teams as Pembroke, Belmont Abbey, and Campbell. Campbell's got a good team; a lot of their foreign students participate for them, and they're going to be tough to beat.

Review and Outlook

So it looks as if Wilmington College has laid down a solid foundation for a continually productive and successful athletic and physical education program. Despite a few minor disappointments this year which already seem to be in the stages of remedy the outlook for next year looks bright indeed. This writer wishes the department the best of luck and will be watching the progress with a great deal of interest and pride.

COACH BROOKS' LIFE GUIDED BY FATE

Fate has played a major role in the career of Coach William J. Brooks. In fact it was only fate that guided him to a coaching career rather than one in engineering.

Coach Brooks' intriguing career began in high school in Wilson, where he won All-State honors as a high school quarterback. After graduation he attended Wake Forest College where he studied engineering and played football. But during the 1941-42 season he sustained a leg injury which was to eventually change the whole pattern of his life.

Marries at Low Point

The death of his father, the injury preventing his participation in football, and the war caused him to leave Wake Forest to work for an engineering concern. Because of his injury he was repeatedly turned down by the services and in 1943 at the low point of his career he met and married Margaret Bunch.

At that point things began to brighten for him. The injury healed and he was accepted into the Air Force in 1944 and became an aviation student at Oklahoma A&M. After completion of his training there he was scheduled to become an aviation cadet. But because the end of the war was in sight and the quotas were full he became an "on-the-line trainee" at Enid Air Force Base.

While at Enid he played baseball and basketball for the "Enid Airmen" sparking them to second place in the nation in basketball and the national championship in baseball.

Gets His Degree

After the war Coach Brooks left the Air Force and tried to enroll at North Carolina State College to resume his education in engineering. However, the overcrowded conditions resulting from the war forced him to enroll at Atlantic Christian College where he obtained his A.B. in 1948.

While at Atlantic Christian he played baseball and basketball in the Coastal Plain League.

Upon receipt of his degree he began teaching school and coaching football, baseball, and basketball in Cole Run during the school term for two years. Also as a player-manager for a semi-pro baseball team in Nova Scotia he guided his team to three championships in five years from 1949 to 1954.

In 1951 Mr. and Mrs. Brooks came to Wilmington from Miami where he had completed most of his work toward his M.A. degree. On the faculty at New Hanover High School he was passing coach for the football team and instructed Sonny Jurgensen. As baseball coach at NHHS he guided the Wildcats to two consecutive championships in 1952 and 1953.

Leaves NHHS

Leaving NHHS entirely in 1954 he introduced the Seahawks to baseball in the then large and powerful Virginia-Carolinas Conference. The young and inexperienced teams faced rough sledding for a few seasons until the 1957-58 campaign in which the Seahawk eagles sported a 10-8 record to capture second place in the conference and the baseball team took the conference title it held ever since.

Coach Brooks kept the balls rolling, both basketballs and baseballs, with five consecutive conference titles and two tournament championships as well as three second place finishes in the Virginia-Carolinas Conference basketball competition.

Wilmington College teams participated in four National Junior College Athletic Association baseball tournaments and two basketball tournaments. In competition with the best junior colleges in the nation Coach Brooks' charges captured tenth and six place finishes in basketball and fourth and second places in baseball; in 1961 the Seahawks won the NJCAA baseball championship at Grand Junction, Colorado.

Coach Bill Brooks' devotion and dedication to the high ideals of the sports he coaches has earned him the respect and admiration of both players and coaches alike. An insight into the esteem in which he is held by the students and administration of Wilmington College as well as the people of Wilmington was seen when the baseball field on the campus was dedicated Brooks' Field.

A MONKEY'S TALE

Three Monkeys sat trees
Discussing things that to be Said one to the other —
You see
There's a fence round a be true
That fence around a Noble fence
The very fence around
No Monkey ever

Starves, his bones and her life
And you've never known mother
To leave her babies with others to bunk
Oh pass them on from one to an-

Till they scarcely know who is their

And another thing you'll never see—
A Monk build a fence 'round a cocoanut tree
And let the cocoanuts go to waste,
Forbidding all other Monks to

Pi Sigma Mu Sells Bread For Project

The Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity reports a most successful bread sale this past weekend. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings, the pledges and brothers sold bread at twenty-five cents a loaf to raise funds for their project of repainting and refurbishing a room for retarded children in the Washington - Catlett School. Wilmington citizens responded admirably to the sale and the fraternity reports a 100% sale.

To top off the college year, the Pi Sigs held a party on Saturday night at the northern end of Wrightsville Beach. Food and beverage were provided by the fraternity and all in attendance report a successful evening.

Tom McNair and the social committee deserve a vote of thanks for planning and execution of a well organized party.

The size of the fraternity has doubled this past year, the house and grounds are in outstanding shape, considerable progress has been made in going national with Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, several of the brothers have been elected to student government offices and plans are in the offing for more progress in the 1955-66 term.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

This is the last of this madness for this year and it seems only fitting that we print the last opinion of the year. Usually, we talk about what's going on in the fine arts departments of our college here in this column and so, not to rebel by printing anything out of the ordinary, let us take a final, critical, and possibly trite look at this year in the arts.

The biggest farce, as well as the largest disappointment in the arts this year, was the fine arts committee. This committee started out on the right foot, so it seemed, but did not take another step all year. It is indeed sad to see six hundred dollars that could have been used to improve ourselves through fine arts programs go by the bores and be used by some other department. We should have had such a program this year and more than one student has felt that he has been cheated.

We have seen a great improvement in the music department. The Night of Opera was well received by a small group of people who had enough pride and interest to attend. The Spring tour was informal and very, very well received by all of the high school students who saw it. The chorus kept its name as good will ambassador for the college and it is good to see a department at work; that works for the image of the college as the chorus does. The chorus and band has shown themselves to be a growing branch of fine arts and we do congratulate them.

The drama department has done its usual fine job again this year. The department was with the Thalian association for the second season and Thalian Hall was filled to the brim for many plays. "Look Homeward, Angel" would get our award as the best drama presented this year and "Hotel Paradiso" for the best comedy. The work that is done in this branch of fine arts is always seen any time the curtain goes up, and the work is good. All people concerned with drama should be proud of their work and we salute these chosen few.

All glory and honor to the Debate team! The College debaters have proved that speaking and discussion should be considered an art. This was the first year for the debate team and let us hope that it will not be the last one. In this one field, the college has progressed this year. It is fine work and hard work that has gone into making our college a recognized name on the inter-collegiate debate circuit, and we can only admire them and thank them for their work in behalf of the college.

Again this year, the art department has proven that it is an invaluable asset to the fine arts department. Many varied shows were presented to a student audience that is finally catching on that there is something hangin' in Hogard Hall other than the picture in the lobby. The student show in itself is enough to show anyone what state the art department is in and it is gratifying to see such good work and progress.

You see, it has not been such a bad year but it has not been the best year in some ways. Student interest and participation could have been better but most of our departments have done their best. After all, these departments could

New Officers Engineers Name

May 22 saw the conclusion of a year of fun, interesting tours and campus service for the Wilmington College Engineers Club, with its annual banquet at the Rex Restaurant. The featured speaker was R. J. Rough, superintendent of Riegel Paper Corporation's new Louisiana plant.

Officers for the forthcoming year were also introduced. They are: president, Bill Pate; vice-president, Tom Tinney; secretary, Larry Mitchell; treasurer, Reid Larson.

During the past year, the Engineers have hosted a number of speakers at their monthly supper meetings. In addition, tours of several local industries, including Babcock & Wilcox, the Saline Plant at Wrightsville Beach and Ideal Cement have been arranged under the leadership of Adrian Hurst and Col. A. D. Gorham, club advisors.

Between tours and lectures, the Engineers found time to serve as guides to the District Science Fair; held here this spring, plan and build the bonfire for the homecoming ceremonies, and to assist in the decorations for the May dance.

SRO PLAYERS

The Wilmington College Theatre this year has enjoyed the most successful season since its initial debut with "The Silver Whistle" in 1957. As of last year the college theatre teamed up with the local little theatre group in presenting plays for the Wilmington audiences.

The season began on November 13, 14 and 15 with the imported French farce "Hotel Paradiso." Its mad-cap ending of Act II is still remembered with chuckles by those who witnessed the performance.

Following quickly on its heels was the beautiful and moving opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors" by Carlo Menotti presented on December 17, 18 and 19. For this Walter Ross, minister of music at the First Baptist Church, was asked to direct the musical portion of the production. Undoubtedly it proved to be the best musical show presented in Wilmington in many years.

In February another high point in theatre was reached. David March, Broadway actor, was invited to the campus to appear as Eugene Gant in "Look Homeward, Angel," and deliver lectures on the campus to the drama classes. All box office records were broken with this stirring drama of a noted North Carolina family. The production was beautifully mounted and superbly performed.

To close the season on May 21, 22 and 23 the light-hearted experimental extravaganza "Around the World in 80 Days" was presented. This proved to be a technical achievement within itself. Martha Loughlin, a graduate of Wilmington College, was invited to serve as assistant director.

As for other accomplishments, the college theatre was instrumental in purchasing for the little theatre plant, a sky drop, new tor-

BOOK STACK

The Library is now the proud possessor of a Recordak Microfilm Reader-Printer. This is a gift from the Junior League of Wilmington. Having this gift, we can now buy and use back issues of periodicals and newspapers in microfilm. The New York Times, for example, can be secured on microfilm from its first issue in 1851 to the present. The Library is presently acquiring the past three years of this newspaper in this form. It would be interesting, as funds become available, to get some of the especially strategic and interesting years such as those during the Civil War and subsequent wars and during interesting election years.

Our machine is the very latest thing in microfilm readers. The newspaper or magazine has been photographed on 16mm or 35mm film or on a microfiche which is a sheet of film rather than a reel. As it was filmed it was reduced, usually 20 to 24 times. The microfilm reader blows the image back up to its approximate original size and projects it onto a screen for the user to view. An added attraction of our machine is the "printer." If you are viewing a page of particular interest and would like to have a copy of it, you push a button and about thirty seconds later your copy comes rolling out of the machine on an 8 1/2 x 11 sheet of paper. Since there is the cost of paper, fluid, and service to consider, some small charge will be made for copies. If you would like to see the machine, ask at the circulation desk.

mentors (curtains for the stags), a new dimmer control for the lighting, dressing room lights for make-up, and for this past show a heavy-duty curtain track. All of these are items found in any theatre and do nothing but enhance and enlarge the possibilities of what can be achieved on the stage.

This summer the Wilmington College Straw-Hat Theatre will present its customary show but Director Doug W. Swink declined to state what, when or where. Last summer the tribute to William Shakespeare, an original play written by the Wilmington College drama students, was presented at the Greenfield Amphitheatre, and entitled "Happy Birthday, Bill!"

Some plays under consideration for this summer and next fall are "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolfe?," "Tartuffe," "Blood Wedding," "Janus," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and "The Fantasticks."

Next season the Wilmington College Theatre coaching staff will double with the addition of Mrs. Anne M. Fitzgibbon who is leaving Ottaway University. She will be a great asset and will surely add a great deal to furthering the cultural development at Wilmington College.

Teacher's College Quiz

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Pedeguese is a language roughly similar to English. It is the mumbo-jumbo spoken by some doctors of education and others engaged in professional education.)

The scene is the dean's office at Grassroots State Teachers College. Dean Percy Pedeguese is interviewing a prospective student.

Dean: Miss Jones, after looking over your transcript I am sure you will fit in nicely at Grassroots, but I always like to have a little chat with candidates to test their professional vocabulary. I might begin by asking you what the curriculum of the modern school is designed to meet?

Miss Jones: The child's interests, needs, and abilities.

Dean: Fine. Now can you tell me how such a curriculum is determined?

Miss Jones: By what research tells us about the developmental needs of the child.

Dean: Can you tell me what sort of goals we have in education?

Miss Jones: Democratic goals. Dean: Don't these goals extend beyond education?

Miss Jones: Yes sir, they extend to the larger society in which we live. And beyond that they have international dimensions.

Dean: Excellent. Here at Grassroots we like to think we are pioneering in presenting new knowledge. What is this called?

Miss Jones: It is called working on the frontiers of knowledge.

Dean: And what is the knowledge aimed to meet?

Miss Jones: The new demands of our times.

Dean: The thrust of the program here is directed toward what?

Miss Jones: A major breakthrough.

Dean: What kind of concepts are we interested in?

Miss Jones: Insightful concepts, or meaningful concepts.

Dean: Very good, Miss Jones. Now can you tell me what we call the bright child?

Miss Jones: He is known as a deviate, sometimes as an exceptional child.

Dean: And the less bright?

Miss Jones: He is a slow-learner, a low-achiever.

Dean: The slum child?

Miss Jones: We refer to him as culturally deprived, economically underprivileged, socially handicapped, academically disadvantaged.

Dean: Thank you, that's enough. Now in order to meet current educational needs we are taking a certain kind of look at the curriculum. What kind of look?

Miss Jones: A hard second look.

Dean: Correct. And as one result of our hard second look what has been born?

Miss Jones: A revolution in educational techniques.

Dean: What kind of revolution?

Miss Jones: The electronic revolution.

Dean: One final inquiry. Do you know about what might be called the medical syndrome in education, that is, the necessity of making educators sound like doctors? And if you are aware of this can you give me an example of the vocabulary?

Miss Jones: Yes, sir if I want to become a diagnostician at the reading clinic I will first have to serve an internship at the laboratory school.

Dean: Excellent, Miss Jones, excellent. I can see that you are truly professionally oriented and would make a fine teacher — or should I say a fine director of learning activities?

Duplicate Bridge, where several persons play the same hand, is considered by many to be more of a challenge than rubber bridge. Duplicate is scored on the basis of how many teams you beat who held the same cards you did. Such duplicate contests are held on Monday and Wednesday night in the Pub, and any interested student is invited to come out and play.

Children's Theatre Garner Directs

Many students do many interesting things during the summer but one of the most interesting summer occupations is that of Sam Garner. Sam is director of Children's Theatre for the State Theatre of North Carolina in Flat Rock, N. C. This will be his third season with the Vagabond Players; and this season will be like all of the others, very hard but pleasing and gratifying work.

As director of Children's Theatre, Sam must design, build sets for, cast, and direct three children's shows during the summer. He also teaches Creative Dramatics to children, ages 9 thru 15.

Last year, the Children's theatre had such a good season that a stage was built for them and a tent was used by the actors as their theatre. The highlight of the season was their production of the musical, "Winnie-the-Pooh." This A. A. Milne classic was produced by this organization in a manner that was very professional and very well received.

This summer's offerings will be "Rapunzel and the Witch," the musical "Adventures of Brer Rabbit," and "Many Moons." Sam's plans are to remain with the Vagabonds for quite some time and we are sure that his work is to their liking.

Sam Garner is well qualified for a career in the theatre having studied and worked in drama from his sophomore year at high school until this day. He was a student with the Vagabonds for one summer; with Doug Swink for four years; with John Guthmann for a year; he has had six years of work in the musical field with Bob Alexander and Loyd Hudson, and he teaches private speech lessons here in Wilmington.

More challenging still is a par contest, where a hand is carefully composed to illustrate some technique of bidding or play. The largest par contest is the National Inter-collegiate, played every spring at many campuses throughout the country. Today's hand is from the 1963 Inter-collegiate.

To make seven no trump, declarer must win the first trick with the spade ace, play the queen of spades and ditch the ace of hearts! He must then cash dummy's high hearts, throwing the Ace king and Queen of clubs from his hand! Now he cashes the jack of clubs and when the ten falls, he plays all the remaining clubs and pitches the Note further that the prescribed small diamonds from his hand.

Notice that this rather elaborate line of play is necessary, since the bad diamond break defeats the hand if it is played any other way. Note further that he prescribed line of play has to be correct, since it gives declarer the chance for any 3-1 or 2-2 diamond split, plus the chance to drop a singleton ten of clubs. Any other line of play gives him only the chance for a favorable diamond split, which is not the case here.

Circle K Winds Up Year

By ROBERT LANIER

The end of the current school year is rapidly approaching, and in spite of the serious thought being given exams, the thoughts of most students have already turned to the fall quarter and a new school year. The members of the Circle K club are no exception. As we terminate our club activities for the current year, we are making plans and laying the groundwork for the 1965-66 school year.

All the Circle K club members have great expectations for the club and its work during the forthcoming year. However, we realize that as members of Circle K, we have a great responsibility to our school and community. For ours is a service club and serve we must — in any way we can — our school and our community.

As we in Circle K look forward to next year, we cannot help but look back at some of our activities during the past year. Some of them were: our "annual" car wash, the banquet for the installation of new officers, the purchase and placement of the stone benches on campus, the sale of mums for homecoming, and the sale of plastic covers for the Fledgeling. The members of the club also plan to marshal for commencement this year. The grand finale of the year for Circle K members will be the Circle K International Convention to be held in Miami Beach, Fla., from August 30 to September 2.

VW Service is as good as the car

Our service shop operates on this principle: We'd rather service your vehicle than repair it.

When you buy a Volkswagen from us you get a coupon booklet that provides for two free inspections, plus regular preventive service for the life of the vehicle.

Our mechanics, who perform this service, are trained in exacting VW methods. We have special tools and hoists to save their time and your money. We have a full supply of Genuine VW Spare Parts and factory-rebuilt assemblies on hand or immediately available, all moderately priced. And so does every other Authorized VW Dealer you'll meet in your travels.

Perhaps that's why Volkswagens stay young so long, and why VW owners usually speak well of us. Talk with one and find out for yourself.

FLEDGLING STAFF BUSY WITH PLANS

The Fledgling staff has already begun work on this year's annual, which will be bigger by about 30 pages over last year and to contain some colored pictures.

Gwen Culbreth is the editor of the Fledgling, with Patsy Futchs as the assistant editor. Class co-editors are Maxine Fladd and Clara Horn. Faculty editor is BeBe Bloome. Sports editor is Margaret Lassiter. Editor of the student life section, the first section of the annual, is Marie Lassiter. Feature editor is Patsy Futchs. Sam Garner and Liz Johnson are serving as co-editors of the activities section of the year book.

Faculty advisor for the staff is Gerald S. Rosselot, English teacher at the college. "The yearbook will be printed by the Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas, the largest publishing company of yearbooks in the world," said Mr. Rosselot, who also stated that "this year's annual will have around 208 pages and be a bit livelier."

Membership Drive Opens

The membership campaign for the Wilmington Community Concert Association will open with a supper meeting on October 18, during which the members will renew their reservations for membership and begin their campaign for new members. The campaign for new members will last for five days.

Important points that are suggested to the college students is that there is a special price of $3.50 for the season to students; tickets are available through Mr. Lloyd Hudson of the music department. The headquarters for the campaign are in the St. James Parish House, and the campaign closes on Friday, October 22, at 9:00 p.m.

The artists which have been scheduled for this season are Sando Konya, Metropolitan tenor, tentative date, December 6; The National Ballet of Washington, January 26; The Monte Carlo Orchestra, March 19; and Gold and Fisdale, duo-pianists, April 13. Remember also that all memberships are transferable, and reciprocity is good with several neighboring towns. Single admissions to any one concert are not available and it is suggested the students act now to get their membership.

Work continues on the Sarah Graham Kenan Liberal Arts Building to provide 30,000 more square feet of needed space.

WORK PROGRESSES

"We all consider this new facility . . . to be a significant indication of the growing service of the college to the community, the region and the state. The completion of this building . . . will do much to relieve the present difficult situation with respect to space for the teaching of an evergrowing number of students," stated Dr. William Randall, president of Wilmington College, at the groundbreaking ceremonies for the new Sarah Graham Kenan Liberal Arts Building last spring. Also present at that time was Mr. Frank Kenan, nephew of Mrs. Sarah Graham Kenan, after whom the liberal arts building was named.

This building will provide much needed space as a result of the addition of senior college courses to the curriculum and the increasing number of students. It will contain the Art, Music, Drama, and Language Departments, a faculty lounge, and 30 faculty offices. There will be a total of 15 teaching stations. A new addition which will be of great importance to Wilmington College is a lecture room with a sloping floor. It will have a seating capacity of 100 students.

The Art department will consist of painting laboratories, a graphics classroom, art studios, an art library, a ceramics and sculpture laboratory, and a weaving crafts studio.

One of his sons, Brick, will be played by Wally Warr and his wife Maggie, "the cat on a hot tin roof," will be portrayed by Sally Rea. The other son, Jasper, and his wife Mae, will be played by George Deaton and Martha Loughlin, respectively. Alan Hill, Ellen Olsen, David Porter and Deborah Rogers will be their children.

Cast in the roles of Big Daddy and Big Mama are Jim Potter and Linda Somersette. Friends of the family are Frank Hall and Randy del Lago, portraying Rev. Tooker and Doctor Baugh. Others in the cast playing workers on the plantation will be Gayle Foyles, Roland Joye, Willie Loughlin, Artie Markatos, Brooks McEachern, Bill Wahlgren, Gary Weatherby and Robert Wood.

Stage managers for this production are Carole Benton and Bill Wahlgren. Jay Howard will be on sound, and Sandy Carr will handle the lighting effects.

Serving as technical director will be Anne Fitzgibbon and Doug W. Swink, the director.

This play by Tennessee Williams won both the Pulitzer Prize and Drama Critics Circle Award for the 1954-1955 season. For the remainder of this year the Thaliens and Wilmington College Theatre will combine forces on "Tartuffe" by Moliere in February, "The Lady's Not for Burning" by Christopher Fry in March and "The Man in the Dog Suit" by Beich and Wright in May.

Announcement

The Seahawk wishes to announce that clubs, organizations, and other groups on campus will be responsible for submitting club news to the Seahawk. It is suggested that each organization elect a club reporter to be responsible for publicizing its particular events. Offices for the Seahawk are located in the Student Services Building next to the bookstore. The paper is published bi-monthly, so the deadline for copy is the first Thursday after the paper is issued at 12 o'clock if typewritten, and by Wednesday after the paper is issued if handwritten. Copy may also be submitted to Thomas Lupton, the advisor for the Seahawk.

the uncrating of traveling exhibits and a large exhibition space will be provided in the lobby with specially treated walls for hanging pictures. Space will also be provided for other types of displays.

WELCOME IS EXTENDED AS NEW QUARTER BEGINS

The Seahawk would like to welcome everyone back for another year at Wilmington College. We are very proud to welcome also 400 of the nation's 1,004,500 freshmen enrolled in colleges this fall.

We would like to extend a welcome to the more than 20 new teachers now on the faculty and say hello to all the other faculty members who are going to grin and bear it with the students once more.

The buildings at Wilmington College have been scrubbed and waxed, the desks washed as clean as possible, and the parking places neatly marked off. Everything is all set to go for another quarter, including students who by now are in with both feet, standing in line at the bookstore usually.

Perhaps freshmen feel a bit awed, and probably keep waiting for the bell to ring, plus feeling very small and insignificant around so many other people who seem to know exactly where they are going. It should be consoling to remember that these students too were freshmen once and that upper classmen are usually very helpful to newcomers. Wilmington College is still small enough to invite a personal atmosphere and the longer you stay the more the friendliness will become apparent.

Freshmen Are Urged To Vote In Election

Elections will be held soon, and everyone is urged to get out and vote. Only through voting can you have an active say in how school policy and events are to be handled and developed. If you do not vote, then you have no right to complain about inadequacies you feel are present, nor to express dismay over failing of things to go like you think they should. To most people voting is a lark, but if you vote each time as if you would be working with that particular person, sometimes this will eliminate voting solely on the basis of popularity. This sometimes serves as voting criteria that is valid, but certainly not in every case. The polls are open long enough today to enable everybody eligible to cast their votes.

Just Rambling

By SHIRLEY MANNING
Superstition and Registration

Are you superstitious about registration day or feel any qualms about it? I do. I'm very superstitious about the first day of anything, but especially school. It serves as sort of a forerunner of how the days ahead are to be. Thus I try to see that that day runs smoothly, but such isn't always the case. For instance this last registration day, I misplaced my pen and tried to pass my application form off in pencil and had to write it all over again. I had an unkind remark said at the beginning of the day which really hurt my feelings, and I forgot to dress appropriately for pictures and couldn't complete registration without that stamp. I couldn't get into a course I really needed, and I wondered what else could go wrong. If the whole quarter turns out that way, I give up.

Oh, Autumn, with summer you've flirted;
Hope you're satisfied, now she's skirted.

Recuperating

Claude Howell, the art director at the college, is still recuperating at home... doesn't seem the same without him... best wishes for a speedy recovery.

Warning Given To Freshmen

(Reprinted from

The East Carolinian)

By HENRY WALDEN III

In late August of this year it was estimated by the Office of Education that 54.2 million students will fill our nation's classrooms this school year. Of this figure, 5.4 million will be enrolled in colleges representing an increase of over 8 per cent from last year's college enrollments. Likewise, college freshmen are expected to total 1.45 million, continuing to sustain the increase of their number over the increase of upper-classmen.

The significance of the above estimated figures, which will probably be determined later to have been underestimated, is worthy of consideration by every freshman at East Carolina College.

When the 8 per cent increase in college students is viewed in the context of the inability of colleges to expand sufficiently enough to absorb this increase, plus the subsequent administrative action required to limit the number of acceptances in order to maintain quality education for all, then an all-too-common phenomenon remains to be justified.

This phenomenon, specifically, is that a substantial percentage of this year's freshman class at East Carolina College will fail, in spite of the abundance of repeated admonitions about the mounting academic requirements and pressures, and admonitions about the increased facility with which our own administration will welcome the departure of any incompetent freshman to make room for a more grateful replacement.

Initially, it is imperative to realize that college study takes priority over any other school endeavor.

The Bookstack

The Library extends a hearty welcome to all new students and all returning students. We hope that this year will be an especially happy and successful one for you.

There have been a number of changes in the Library since last year. Shelving has been placed around the walls of the Library to take care of the growing book collection. The reference books have been moved to these shelves. Additional shelving has been made available for the current periodical collection. These shelves have been labeled with the name of the periodical. Please return the periodical you use to the right space on the shelves as soon as you are through with it. This will make it more quickly available for the next person who wishes to use it.

Two new librarians have been added to the Library staff. Miss Betty Sue Westbrook, who has a Master of Science Degree in Library Science from Florida State University, joined the staff in July as cataloger. Some of you will remember Miss Westbrook who taught in the Chestnut Junior High School in Wilmington. Miss Mary Louise Galphin came in September and has charge of the Circulation Department. Miss Galphin has a B.S. degree with a major in Library Science from East Carolina College. For the past four years she was librarian of the Wilson Junior High School in Charlotte.

Except for notorious social conduct, academic failure constitutes the predominant reason for freshmen departing college today. Accept the assumption that study comes first in all activities, and act accordingly.

Secondly, after deciding to spend the time required to master your subjects, realize that your quizzes and examinations measure your understanding of the course matter, and not your ability to pour your successfully personal and family woes on a sympathetic professor. Many upperclassmen here will frankly tell you that some of the most "understanding" professors will flunk you without a second thought, providing the course requirements have not been met and aggravating factors were not established as weighing importantly on inadequate efforts expended. Also, if you must gripe, see the appropriate guidance counselors in the psychology department or volunteer for work on The East Carolinian, where you may learn more about the rational articulation of grievances.

Relative to the above suggestion, it should be encouraging to realize that here at East Carolina College the major portion of the faculty stands ready to do more than lecture; namely, most faculty members are very willing to offer numerous worthwhile suggestions as to your scholastic improvement in their courses. By all means inquire of them as to what is the important matter essential for retention and understanding as well as the specific procedures you, yourself, should follow in acquiring mastery of the subject matter.

Above all, never seek academic assistance from your professor shortly before the exam, if you have never approached him on an earlier occasion when you initially confronted difficulty. For one thing, you may not find his office room in time. But more important, if you do find his office, you will probably arouse his ire to the point where your consultation will cause more academic harm than good.

Thirdly, good grades depend on religiously subscribing to the following brief but important study tips:

1. Listen in class as if you will never hear that particular facet of the subject again (which, in fact, you will not).

2. Take legible class-notes in a composition book devoted solely to information about that one course.

3. After class, study your difficult subject first and your easier ones last.

4. Get a minimum of seven hours sleep per night, fluctuating your sleeping schedule only if studies require additional time and not if extracurricular activities prove time-consuming.

5. Unless you are a superior student, do not run for class offices.

Finally, the most important study guide to remember and practice is regularity. This writer fervently believes that most college students at most colleges today can maintain a "B" average merely by doing homework assignments regularly. Determine to utilize specific hours each day for tackling each course.

And remember, whatever your academic difficulties, "Vouloir, c'est pouvoir."

THE FINE ARTS

By SAM GARNER

The Fine Arts Committee has made rather big plans this year for you. You will have the opportunity to see many interesting programs by which you will certainly profit.

The Philadelphia Ballet will perform on Monday, October 25. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Men's Chorus will sing in concert on Wednesday, November 17. There will be a foreign language film in January. Mrs. Heather Ross Miller will speak on literary arts; a violinist and cellist will perform; and a film from the museum of art will be presented.

All of these fine arts presentations have been planned and programmed by the committee for your pleasure, and it is up to you to attend each of them. Without your support, the program is worthless. Take full advantage of what is being offered to you by the committee and other departments of the arts this year.

Each month there is a new art exhibit in Hoggard Hall presented by the college art department. In the past, the exhibits have ranged from handicrafts to the best in oil paintings. The traveling show of the Associated Artists of North Carolina and the annual Student Exhibition at the end of the year are always highlights of the showings by the art department. Like the fine arts programs, you will not want to miss any of these exhibits.

The Wilmington College Theatre will present four outstanding plays this season. The first, "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" will be a must for everyone. This Williams' classic features local actors brought together for the sole purpose of entertaining you. You are sure to be entertained and impressed by the quality theatre which the college offers each year.

The music department always holds the joy and interest of good music for you. During the year, the chorus presents a spring concert and performs at various civic occasions and on television. Last year's "Night of Opera" was interesting, and well performed, to a small but appreciative audience.

Small audiences are entirely unnecessary. These departments are working to bring you programs that are a major part of your college career and education. Anyone who does not take advantage of the lectures, exhibits, plays, and musicals are definitely missing out on half the enjoyment of a year at Wilmington College.

It will be the purpose of this column to report the news in the arts and, from time to time, offer critical evaluations of the programs that are presented. It is not important for you to read the writing that will appear under this header; the important thing is that you take full advantage of a fine, well-planned, and interesting program which is being presented this year for you in the arts.

Closely allied to football, soccer is a fast moving game

SOCCER ON VARSITY AGENDA

One of the two new varsity sports at Wilmington College this year will be soccer. Although the schedule calls for only three home games, Coach Charles Sproles expressed hope that the team would receive the active support of the student body.

Tracing its origin back to the days of ancient Rome, soccer is a fast moving sport which provides many thrills to player and spectator alike. Football fans, watching soccer for the first time, can readily see that the two games are closely related.

Wilmington College will be building this year, and no one will try to predict the outcome of the first season. The team boasts only two players with varsity experience—David Ansell who played in the tough Prep School League, and Bob Vaughn who played soccer in high school. A number of the other players have had experience in either P.E. courses or intramurals.

Coach Sproles expressed hope that more students would come out for soccer. The team needs about six more members to round out the roster.

Great Sports Figures

+ JIM THORPE +

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on great sports figures. Future issues will spotlight the lives of such figures as Babe Ruth, Ben Hogan, Althea Gibson, and Knute Rockne.)

Jim Thorpe was the greatest athlete the world has ever known. There are Olympic track and field stars. There are major league baseball players. There are professional football players. Thorpe was all of these.

Thorpe began his career as an athlete on the campus of Carle College. First he participated only in track and field, in which he did everything except run the distance events. Later he played baseball, but his chief claim to fame as a collegian was football. With Thorpe at the helm, the Carle Indians topped the giants of the era, and at the end of his senior year the name Thorpe was practically synonymous with "All-American."

Following college, Thorpe went into training for the Olympics. In Copenhagen in 1912, he astounded the sports world by winning both the decathlon and the pentathlon. He was brought home in triumph and given the traditional ticker-tape parade through New York. The name "Thorpe" was a household word throughout the world.

Then disaster struck. The Olympic Committee found out that one summer while a student, Thorpe had accepted room, board, and expenses in return for playing baseball in an obscure tobacco league in eastern North Carolina. To the Committee this arrangement constituted professionalism, and in a still controversial decision they voted to take away Thorpe's Olympic medals and strike his records from the books. Thorpe never quite got over the loss of his Olympic records, and he was bitter about it the rest of his life.

After the Olympics, Thorpe played a couple of years of baseball with the New York Giants. He could not get along well with the manager (a fellow named McCraw) so he left to go into the then brand new sport of professional football. Thorpe played for several teams during his career and helped start the sport on its way to its present popularity.

Jim Thorpe, the Indian boy from Oklahoma, left a mark on the sports world that will never be forgotten. Throwing out the first baseball of the season, the kickoff of the first NFL game, and the lighting of the Olympic torch are among sportsdom's most exciting moments. More than any other single figure, Jim Thorpe helped to make them so.

Open Letter

An open letter to the fishermen and surfers at Wrightsville Beach:

Gentlemen:

There was once a time when men valued sportsmanship above all else. The ancient Greeks declared truces in their wars, so that the young men of the city-states could go to the Olympic games.

All of you love the great outdoors—the sea in particular—and all of you will endure a great deal of discomfort to participate in your chosen pastime. You are also proud of the title "sportsman."

Why, then, all the controversy? It is a pretty sad state of affairs when you need the police to settle a controversy among sportsmen. It does not reflect credit on either group, and there should be no self-righteousness on either side.

Let there be a meeting between your respective club leaders, and try to iron out the problems. With a little more maturity on both sides, we think the necessity for outside intervention will cease to exist.

Until that happens, we do not think either group can use the title "sportsman" with a clear conscience.

TENNIFLEX TIME IS COMING

The Athletic Department has announced that the new tennis courts are nearing completion. If weather permits, the courts will be available for play in about three weeks.

The final step in finishing the courts is to surface them with Tenniflex. This material may only be put down under certain conditions of temperature, however, and the surfacing may not be possible until spring. If conditions do not permit the final surfacing, the court will be lined so that an asphalt court will be available for the first two quarters.

An intramural tennis program is planned, as well as P.E. courses in the sport. A varsity team is planned for the future, and any student interested in this sport is urged to contact Coach Bill Brooks. The Seahawk will announce when the courts will be available for the general use of the student body.

New players begin work on rudiments of the game.

Noose Suggested for Bridge Cheats

Bridge will continue to get full coverage in the Seahawk as a sport. We do not feel this is exactly a pioneer effort—Sports Illustrated has been doing the same thing for years.

Since last May, a number of students have asked us about the bridge scandal at Buenos Aires. Here are the facts: Big-time bridge was indeed rocked to the core by a cheating scandal last spring. Terrence Reese and Boris Shapiro, both of England's International Team were unquestionably conveying illegal information concerning their hand patterns. The matter was reviewed by the World Bridge Federation and the evidence was turned over to the British Bridge Federation, which has not yet acted upon the matter.

The scandal may hurt bridge as much as the Black Socks scandal of 1919 hurt baseball, and the point shaving scandals hurt basketball.

A lot of great men and women have devoted a lot of time and money to build bridge into the great pastime it is today.

We hope the British Bridge Federation will make a just disposition of the case. Whatever they do it will not satisfy us. British law makes no provision for hanging people who cheat at bridge.

Selective Service System Sends Letter On Induction

STATE HEADQUARTERS
SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM
Raleigh, North Carolina
Circular Letter No. III-123
Issued: January 22, 1964
As Amended: July 13, 1965
Subject: Classification and/or Postponement of Induction of Students
To: All Local Boards

1. Each student deferment and/or postponement granted prior to receipt of this circular letter will remain in effect until the expiration date of such deferment or postponement.

2. A high school student should be classified in accordance with Attachment No. 1 to this circular letter on the basis of the information contained in SSS Form 100 or SSS Form 127, or any other written information that he is a high school student. Any other student will be classified on the basis of the school's certification.

3. A registrant will be classified in Class I-S(C), in accordance with section 1622.15(b) of the regulations, if his local board receives information that on the date the order to report for induction was mailed, he was a satisfactory, full-time college student.

4. If a local board receives information that a registrant, other than a high school student, became such a student after the order to report for induction had been issued, he should be inducted. If a registrant whose induction had been postponed becomes a full-time student, he should be inducted rather than have his postponement extended, or his case reopened.

5. When initially classifying a registrant, the local board should consider deferring him until October 15, if he completed his current school year in May or June and has indicated in writing over his signature that he expects to continue his education in September, (I-S(H) if returning to high school and will not be 20 before October 15; if at least 20 years of age on October 15, II-S). If graduated from high school, he would qualify for II-S.

6. No postponement or deferment will be granted to a registrant who is not in attendance during a normal school year, because he dropped out of school, even though he plans to enroll at a later date.

7. When a local board receives information that a registrant is no longer qualified for a student deferment, his case should be reopened.

8. Some colleges operate off-campus college centers; therefore, if the college certifies that the registrant is a full-time student, this should be sufficient for consideration of the registrant for Class II-S.

9. We do not feel the local board would be justified in deferring a registrant to study toward a second undergraduate degree. This is not applicable to a law student.

10. A student who has been accepted to the class next commencing in the school of medicine, dentistry, or veterinary medicine should be continued in Class II-S until October 15 following the date of the class next commencing.

11. A graduate who graduates in less than the normal required time, and who has been accepted to graduate school commencing not later than the following September should be placed in Class II-S until October 15.

12. A graduate school student should be considered for Class II-S regardless of the number of hours he is taking but should not be deferred for more than two years for the first graduate degree, plus three additional years for the Ph.D. degree. (Ref. Operations Bulletin No. 46).

13. A student enrolled in the business education program of Guilford College, Downtown Division, Greensboro, should be considered for deferment provided he meets the requirements set forth in Attachment No. 1 (private business schools), even though SSS Form 109 may show non-college credit.

14. Local boards should cite this circular letter as their authority, under section 1632.2 of the regulations, to make postponements suggested in Attachment No. 1.

Pi Sigs Plan Rush

This past summer was a busy one for Pi Sigma Mu fraternity. Summer jobs, summer school, reserve duty, trips to faraway and nearby places were just some of the activities of the Pi Sigma Mu men. The main activity, however, appeared to be listening to wedding bells. Elmo Spell, Randy Hughes, Graham Dail, and Larry Lanier were married this summer, with many brothers taking active parts in the festivities.

In preparation for the 1965-66 Rush season, a rush brochure was prepared by the fraternity and mailed to freshman men. By pointing out the varied aspects of fraternity life with regards to scholarship, community projects, socials, and brotherhood, it was hoped to further the fraternity system at Wilmington College.

Two new officers were elected by the fraternity at the first meeting held during the school term. Mike Taylor, junior, was elected to the office of secretary and Nelson Allen, sophomore, to the office of historian. As part of his duties Allen will edit the fraternity newspaper, Sigma Sayso, which will be published in October.

During Rush Week, October 4-10, two smokers were held on Tuesday and Thursday nights for rushees. Many men came by the fraternity house and were introduced to the brothers. Elmo Spell is pledge master.

Greater support of all college activities will be a trademark of Pi Sigma Mu this year at Wilmington College.

'Miss Seahawk'

Miss Seahawk for this issue of the paper is Janet Faye Moore, 18 years old, and a freshman at Wilmington College. Janet was graduated this year from N. H. S. where she was very active in R. O. T. C. as an Honorary Cadet Captain for Company "A". She was also a member of Hanover Singers and was among the five finalists in the Teen-age Princess Contest. Janet works part-time but spends most of her time at the college where she is majoring in Elementary Education.

Announcement

The Athletic Department urges all students to take advantage of the facilities which are available for use. Students are reminded that the use of the gym is not limited only to those taking P.E. courses.

The basketball court, weight room and handball courts are available any time they are not in use for classes or varsity practice. For safety reasons use of the archery, and gymnastic equipment is limited. Interested students are urged to contact the Athletic Department to find out the rules governing the use of these facilities.

Of the $16 activity fee each student pays, $7.50 goes to the college sports program. Any student who does not take advantage of the program is paying for something he is not getting.

Capable of speeds better than 2,000 mph, the YF-12A is the hottest aircraft around.
Now Maj. Walter F. Daniel, test pilot for the YF-12A, answers your questions about the world's fastest manned airplane and America's Aerospace Team.

(Maj. Daniel, a test pilot since 1954, is a member of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots. He received a B.S. degree in Aeronautical Engineering from the University of Oklahoma. In February 1962, he set world class time-to-climb records in a T-38 jet trainer.)

Is the YF-12A the world's fastest manned aircraft?
It certainly is. On May 1 of this year the YF-12A (formerly known as the A-11) reclaimed the world absolute speed record from the USSR. It was clocked at 2,062 mph over Edwards Air Force Base.

How big is the YF-12A?
The exact dimensions of the YF-12A have not been released yet. But it's approximately 100 feet long, with about a 50-foot wingspan. That's half again as big as our present interceptors!

Is the Air Force training many men as pilots these days?
Yes, very definitely. In spite of all you hear about unmanned vehicles, the human pilot is still very much in the picture. As a matter of fact, the Air Force pilot quota is on the increase.

What other kinds of jobs does the Air Force offer?
Since it's one of the world's foremost technological organizations, the Air Force has plenty of openings for scientists and engineers. There are also many challenging and varied administrative-managerial positions.

What do I have to do to become an Air Force officer?
Air Force ROTC is the best way to get started as an Air Force officer. The new two-year Air Force ROTC program makes this method available to men who have already completed a year or two of their college education. For college graduates, if you did not take advantage of ROTC, you can still get started through Air Force Officer Training School (OTS), a three-month course open to both men and women.

Can I keep up my studies while I'm in the Air Force?

The Air Force encourages its men and women to continue their educations. For instance, you may qualify to study for a graduate degree during off-duty hours, with the Air Force paying a substantial part of the tuition.

What kind of future do I have in the Air Force?
A bright one. As we move further into the Aerospace Age, the Air Force is going to grow even more important. And you can grow with it!

The Playboys To Provide Music

Wilmington College will have its Rushmore Dance November 6, with music furnished by the "Playboys" from Wesleyan College at Rocky Mount.

This combo has previously been backing "Martha and the Vandellas." The dance will be held in the Student Services building from 9:00 to 1:00. Dress for this dance will be school clothes. Students must have their activity cards to be admitted to the dance.

It is illegal to bring alcoholic beverages onto the College property or consume them there. The College does not permit the serving of alcoholic beverages at any officially sponsored College dance. These regulations will be strictly enforced.

If students attending the college wish to bring an outside date, they may do so free of charge; however, if any outside couples are invited the admission of one dollar per person will be charged. Students bringing any outside date or couple will be responsible for their guest's actions and conduct.

First Art Exhibition Of The Year Now On Display

The Associated Artists of North Carolina 1965-66 Traveling Exhibition will be the first art show hung at Hoggard Hall, Wilmington College, for the current year, Claude Howell, head of the art department, announced. The exhibition opened Sunday with a reception in Hoggard Hall from 3 to 5 p.m. and will be open for the month of October from 8:30 a.m. until 9:30 p.m. weekdays.

The traveling show of 40 drawings and prints was chosen from the original AANC juried exhibition held at East Carolina College last spring and will tour North Carolina colleges and universities for the next year.

Out of the 40 prints and drawings on exhibition, Mr. Howell has two that were chosen to travel with the show entitled "The Pier" and "The Boardwalk." Miss Patricia Minser, art instructor at the College, also has two works traveling with the group - "Study Session" and "From the Tide."

Dr. Randall Speaker At Senate Meeting

The Student Senate of Wilmington College held its first meeting of the school year Monday night, October 4, with Dr. William M. Randall, president of the college, as the main speaker.

Dr. Randall described the organization of the college as a state institution and the role of the Board of Trustees and administration as well as the state agencies under which the college operates.

"The Budget for the current 1965-66 year is $1,087,508 dollars," Dr. Randall said, "with student fees amounting to $321,272 and state appropriation $766,236. As you can see, students at Wilmington College pay less than one-third of the cost," he pointed out.

In speaking to the students, Dr.

Thoughtful attention was given to all the speeches. Here Thelton Skipper, Kitty O'Brien, and Bill Weir listen intently while Marty Farrar, candidate for Freshman vice-president, appeals for votes.

Walter Thrift, whose private collection of Southeastern artists was on display at Wilmington College last year, also had two pictures selected for the exhibition entitled "Plateau Canyon #2" and "Piel Study."

The art department of Wilmington College has scheduled monthly art exhibitions for the entire college year, Mr. Howell said. Among some of the tentative exhibitions planned for the current season at Wilmington College are: November - American Indian Art from the University of Oklahoma; January - Associated Artists of North Carolina Annual Traveling Exhibition; February - Fourth Lower Cape Fear Annual Artist's Exhibition; March - Winston-Salem Printmakers; April - Ruth Clark, of Greensboro, one-man show; May - Annual Student Show. There will also be a ceramics exhibition by Roy Minnis, art instructor at East Carolina College.

Randall stressed their importance as campus leaders. "You are the liaison between the student body and the administration," he said. "You are the rallying point for opinion, student solidarity, and student expression."

Communication between the students and the administration is vital, Dr. Randall said. He also urged the Senate to remember the importance of representing the students on campus. "Particularly those who are silent."

Mrs. Clare Taylor, public information director for the college described the functions of the college relations department and how it can be of use to the Student Body.

Freshmen Candidates Appeal For Votes

The Freshman class held their first meeting of the year on Tuesday, October 12. Its purpose was to present the candidates for class officers for this year.

President of the student body, Kitty O'Brien, opened the meeting by welcoming the freshmen to Wilmington College. She explained how important it is to pick good officers, and brought attention to the fact that out of 400 only 99 freshmen voted in the primary.

Thelton Skipper, chairman of the board of elections, explained the qualifications that freshmen in order to be elected must meet. They must maintain a 1.5 quality point average throughout the fall and winter quarters. At the end of the spring quarter they must have a 2.0 average. Write-ins must meet the same qualifications. Each candidate must be verified by the secretary of the student body before assuming office. Skipper drew attention to the ruling of posters. No posters are to be hung on plaster walls or on woodwork, in the library, on staircases, or around the art exhibit in Hoggard Hall.

The candidates for senator were presented by Thelton Skipper. They are Larry Lapovitch, Joyce Pelland, Lou Pelland, Mildred Bowen, Thomas Bradshaw, Gaye Godwin, Greta Scott, Gail Harris, Philip Keller, Murray Batson, Gayle Sanderson, Marilyn Watson, Kenneth Weathersby, Lana Lewis, Karen Sawyer, Elaine Beal, and Vicky Hill.

Miriam Taylor, candidate for secretary, was introduced by Louise Lewis. Miriam was a member of the student government at New Hanover. She asked for the vote of the class and promised to "uphold the tasks" of class secretary if elected.

Janice Burris introduced Carrie Davis, candidate for vice president from Freemont High School. During high school Carrie was a class officer, cheerleader, and was on the newspaper staff. She drew attention to the fact that Wilmington College is growing, and bringing many to further their education. Carrie advocated progress by putting a variety of ideas to work, and by full representation of the class in the student government.

William M. Farrar, candidate for vice-president, was introduced by Robin LeLoudis. He served on various committees and clubs at New Hanover High School, and represented his church at a national conference at Montreat. Marty was vigorously against the allotment of parking for upper classmen, stating that he was not "going to park in the woods." He advocated the renewal of the student information bulletin; expansion of student services; supporting and advertising of activities; and the use of money from projects to add books to the library.

Elmore Whitman introduced James MacDonald, candidate for president, who stated, "I would like to see a bigger and better Wilmington College. I will try to do my best." He added that his main aim was to instill spirit in the class, and to attain an air of understanding and brotherhood. Jim ended his appeal for votes by saying, "Together we are strong, separated we are weak."

Albert Banadyga, candidate for president, was introduced by Bob Stephenson. Bob said that Buzz would pay for votes "not with carrots but with services." Buzz promised unending devotion to the needs of the class. He advocated more social functions, projects to be decided by the class, and more meetings. He said that if elected the class would be more informed.

A final note was added by Miss O'Brien who urged the students to "select a man you think will do the best job."

Freshman Recipient of New Scholarship

David Earl Allen, a freshman at Wilmington College, has been awarded a full tuition scholarship by the Wilmington based Piedmont Airline Pilots, Thomas P. Brown, acting dean of admissions and dean of students announced today.

Funds for the scholarship were raised among the pilots by donations, and David Allen is the first recipient of the new scholarship. The presentation was made by Capt. W. M. Whitley for the Piedmont Airline Pilots.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Allen, Sr., of Route 2, Box 360, Wilmington, David graduated last June from New Hanover High School, where he was an officer with the ROTC. He also played in the New Hanover High School Band for three years.

Sigma Phi Kappa Honors Pledges And Dream Girl

Sigma Phi Kappa held rush week October 4 to October 9. "It was a very successful rush," Thomas R. Debnam, president of Sigma Phi Kappa told the SEAHAWK. "We have three excellent upperclassmen to form a nucleus for a pledge class, and we anticipate more pledges when the second quarter starts and freshmen can be pledged."

Rush activities included two smokers during the week and pledging ceremonies at the end of the week. A party was held on Saturday night, October 9, honoring both the new pledges, Greer Craig, Larry Everett, and Jack Harrell, and Patsy Futches, Sigma Phi Kappa's Dream Girl. "The Trojans" entertained at the party. Two of the new pledges, Greer Craig and Jack Harrell play in the combo.

Sigma Phi Kappa is planning to participate fully in intramurals this year according to Bobby Greer, fraternity athletic director. "We have a strong football team this year," Greer told the SEAHAWK, "and prospects look good for the other sports. We are especially looking forward to defending our softball championship."

The selection of Miss Patsy Futches as Sigma Phi Kappa Dream Girl was announced on October 9. Patsy is a 21-year-old junior from Wilmington. A dean's list student, she is currently serving as assistant editor of the Pledgling. Her other activities include Alpha Chi Sigma Sorority, Sophomore Senator, and Homecoming Court.

New Freshman officers are happy over their victories. They are Marty Farrar, Gaye Godwin, Elaine Beal, Joyce Pelland, Lou Pelland, Lana Lewis, and James MacDonald.

POPE'S VISIT EPIC EVENT

In recent statements concerning the Pope's visit to New York many commentators hailed the visit as epic in history of peace-seeking.

In comparing the words of Pope Paul VI in Yankee Stadium with that of the Prince of Peace, it is hard to believe that a mere plea for world brothers to join in peace is significant compared to the promises of the Lord Jesus Christ who promised peace among men through the kingdom of God as in Psalm 46:9: "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth" or in Isaiah 2:4 "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Pope Paul VI was flown to New York in an airplane. Jesus walked to the Holy City of Jerusalem. Pope Paul VI was dressed in fine garments of wonderful hue with lace and velvet, while Jesus Christ was clad only in the simple cloth garment of the day. Pope Paul VI was guarded by as many as 300 guards at one time and it cost the city of New York $1,000,000 for police protection alone for the Pope for one day. Christ wasn't guarded by people on earth although he was constantly under surveillance by those intent on putting him to death. Pope Paul made his triumphant entry into Yankee Stadium in a huge limousine, while Jesus Christ rode into Jerusalem on a donkey.

Perhaps the world is confused over just who is King, the true Prince of Peace. One needed four passes to get into the receiving line to shake Pope Paul's hand. No passes are needed to get in touch with Jesus; there is room for all.

Did Erikson Ramble Sooner?

The controversy over whether Lief Erikson discovered America before Columbus is an interesting one especially since Yale University has come up with a map which they say proves Erikson discovered America some 50 years before Columbus. It just proves that you can't say anything anymore, hardly, without saying "As far as we know now."

Homework Hardwork

An interesting discussion took place in psychology class the other day in which students were asked if they believed in homework, and if so how much per subject per night. With my being the only one in the class who did not believe in homework, it was interesting to see that everybody in class voted yes and the time per night ranged from an hour and a half per subject to not less than a half hour with a few saying it should vary. The professor figured it out that with a schedule of eating, sleeping, and going to and from school that a child would only have two hours to himself in which he would get his homework, eat supper, and bathe and dress for bed. Someone suggested that he might save time at night by getting his shower during his p.e. class at school! This survey concerned junior high school students, and when the subject of college homework was broached, dissenting voices were heard especially from students who must work and go to school too. Their complaint was that too many teachers overlook this fact and make no allowances for working students or students who have other classes also.

Statistics

North Carolina ranks in the top ten states in payment of federal taxes . . . yet North Carolina's teachers last year had a starting salary of $3,900 while Johnson's Poverty Program declared that a salary of $4,000 made one eligible for aid! . . . Only 49% of the teachers who graduate in North Carolina stay here to teach . . . the rest leave the state, because North Carolina is 47th in teachers' salaries.

The Army and Verse

With so many students interested in the Army nowadays, or rather in keeping out of it, I ran across a little item which said that during the Korean war many soldiers hated to give up their jobs, and usually their sweethearts, so they made up a song about a fictitious character named Jody on whom they vent their hostility.

"We been eatin' Spam without a break, While Jody's munchin' on a steak,"
"There ain't no use in going back—Jody's got your Cadillac."
"Ain't no use in feeling blue,
Jody's in the army too."

President Johnson has predicted that "in time" 3,000,000 men will be in uniform. Looks like Jody won't be the only one going.

Russia, Atheism, and Barbie Dolls.

Recently Tass, the official mouthpiece of Soviet Russia, denounced the Barbie Dolls as a Capitalist plot because the dolls encouraged little girls to think only of one's self and that the children saw themselves in the dolls. This was bad because to think so selfishly was bad.

General Eisenhower has disclosed that avowed atheist Nikita Khrushchev used to be an altar boy in a Greek Orthodox Church and commented that people who were supposed to have entirely forgotten the Lord often said such things as Khrushchev such as "As God is my witness." It seems that Nikita came very close to attending church services with Ike once but was afraid that he might be misunderstood when his interpreter would have to explain what was going on and possibly disturb someone. "Waging Peace," Ike's new book about leaders he has met, will include such items and this writer will anxiously await its arrival in our own library.

Friends Of College Presents Gift To Strengthen Library

A gift of $7,500 recently presented to Wilmington College by the Friends of Wilmington College is being used to secure the basic and standard works "No good library should be without," Miss Helen Hagan, head librarian, announced. The new purchases will strengthen the library's book collection in all fields of study.

"We are using this generous donation to build up the areas in the book collection that are now weak," Miss Hagan said, "and the faculty is aiding the library staff in securing the best possible books in all classifications by submitting lists of the needs in their subject areas."

"We want a collection that will meet the needs of the faculty and students for study and teaching and that will be meaningful for the students in opening up many avenues of learning for them to explore," Miss Hagan said. "The funds provided by the Friends of Wilmington College will, in a large measure, make it possible for us to have this kind of collection."

The accelerated growth of Wilmington College as a four-year institution has necessitated an expanded library staff, according to Miss Hagan. The college library now has six full-time workers: Miss Hagan, head librarian; Mrs. Linda Hollis, reference librarian; and Mrs. Gertrude Cameron, librarian assistant. Miss Betty Sue Westbrook, cataloguer, also full-time, joined the staff this year. Miss Westbrook comes to Wilmington College from Chestnut Junior High School where she taught history and English.

Also added to the library personnel this year is Miss Mary Louise Galphin, who is in charge of the circulation department. Miss Galphin has a B.S. degree with a major in library science from East Carolina College. For the past four years she was librarian of the Wilson Junior High School in Charlotte, Mrs. Catherine Walls is presently working full-time as a clerical assistant. There are also 20 student assistants who work part-time in the library.

Miss Hagan also announced that books received from individual donors this summer included gifts from Marsden Bellamy, Mrs. Grover C. Bordeau, Thad Eure, secretary of state, North Carolina; James Hudgens; Senator Everett B. Jordan; Rolla G. Nelson; Dr. William M. Randall; Winter Park Baptist Church, Wilmington; and Sea Level Association, North Carolina Rural Letter Carrier's Association.

"We greatly appreciate these gifts," Miss Hagan stated.

Students Comment Pope Paul's Visit To This Country

Here are a few comments made by students concerning Pope Paul VI's visit to the United Nations on a mission for peace.

Jim Jackson: "I don't think it did any good. I'm sure he had a nice time."

Myra Rochelle: "It may accomplish something as far as leading the Catholic people to strive for peace. It may influence other leaders, but I don't think any recognizable good will come."

New Building Includes Drama Labs, Theatre

The drama department will have a small theatre-in-the-round area for teaching purposes. A drama laboratory, and combination drama shop and classroom will also be in the building.

Plans for the Sarah Graham Kenan Liberal Arts Building were started in 1963. The 30,000 square foot building is located to the northeast of the existing Library Building.

Basically, it is a one-story structure with a portion of the area two-story. The second story will hold faculty offices and two classrooms. The exterior will be of brick with Flemish bond design.

Terrazzo floors and acoustical tile ceilings will add to the usefulness and beauty of the air conditioned building. Adding to the beauty of the campus will be a landscaped rear court.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Has it ever occurred to you that comprehending 600 words per minute as apposed to 200 words per minute could save you three out of every four hours normally spent on reading? To put it another way, if you still spent the same amount of time reading, then you could read four books while before you only read one. So what does all this mean to you? Nothing unless someone teaches you to read 500 words per minute. Will someone please check on why we don't have a course in SPEED READING. How about it Student NEA?

THE FINE ARTS

By SAM GARNER

The second presentation by the Fine Arts Committee for this year will be two films on art. These films are from the North Carolina Museum of Art and are entitled, "Art in the Western World" and "Understanding Modern Art." Both films are 30 minutes long.

"Art in the Western World" is a fine film showing the treasures of the National Gallery of Art in Washington. Starting with the 13th century, this film tells the highlights in the development of western art. The most important schools of art and cross-currents are represented, including the development of art in the United States.

"Understanding Modern Art" is a series of five seven-minute films: Cubism: multiple viewpoints, illusions of transparency, flat space, repetition of design, interpenetrating forms. Impressionism: simplification of the form, heavily painted surfaces, generalization of objects, broken color techniques. Nonobjective Art: basic elements of line, shape and color; nonobjective art in industrial design. Expressionism: powerful contrast of color and value, swirling movement, distortion used creatively. Surrealism: unusual combinations and settings, strange concepts of time and space, mysterious symbolism.

These films are two of the best that the Museum has to offer and have been chosen by the committee for your pleasure. This program is FREE to all college students and their guests. ALL of the Fine Arts Programs are for you, and you are admitted at no charge. You have already paid for these programs through your student activity fee; therefore if you do not take advantage of them, then you are getting cheated. No one wants to pay for something and then not get what they paid for. Why cheat yourself?

The Associated Artists of N.C. Print and Drawing show is now on exhibit in Hoggard Hall. There are many interesting prints and drawings including examples of Claude Howell's and Patricia Miner's work. Be sure to take a few minutes and stop by Hoggard Hall to view this exhibit.

Next month the Men's Chorus of the U.N.C. at Chapel Hill will present a concert in the Pub and the College Players will present "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof."

There is a great deal for you to enjoy this year in the arts and let us remind you again, if you don't attend these presentations you're missing out on an important part of your College Life.

SOCCER COMES TO WILCO

We have long felt that Wilmington College needed a fall sport to round out the varsity schedule. Now there is one: soccer. The soccer team will play the first home game in history on Saturday afternoon, October 23, at 2 o'clock. That is tomorrow. We sincerely hope that there will be a suitable turnout.

The student body at Wilmington College has always supported the major varsity teams by attending the home games. It has long been a source of pride to us that the attendance at our baseball games was better than could be expected at schools eight or ten times as big. We see no reason to anticipate the soccer team will receive less enthusiastic support from the student body.

In a lot of countries soccer is "the" sport, and anyone who has seen one soccer game can see why. It is a fast moving sport with plenty of action, providing a good test of both athletic ability and coaching strategy.

This is the first time Wilmington area sports fans have had a chance to see a soccer game. It is an opportunity we are looking forward to. See you on Saturday.

THE END OF AN ERA

"It's not whether you win or lose—it's how you play the game." This oft quoted old adage surely has its place in teaching good sportsmanship and fair play to young sportsmen. But in the cold, cruel world of professional sports good sportsmanship is practiced only to the degree necessary to keep one from getting fined, and the financial rewards go to the winners.

We have always thought this situation was deplorable, and for this reason we are pleased to see the end of the Yankee domination of the American League. A league of fairly evenly balanced teams is much more interesting to the fans. Witness this year's National League race, the closest in years.

Do not interpret our statement to mean that we do not appreciate a fine team—nothing could be further from the truth. We had great admiration for the team that added the term "Superstar" to baseball's vocabulary. The roster that struck terror to the opposing pitcher's heart provided some of sportdom's greatest moments. (Do you walk Maris and Mantle to load the bases and then face someone like Howard or Tresh?)

Perhaps our sentiments are best expressed by the late, great Connie Mack. Over a quarter of a century ago, his "Million-dollar infield" had just led Philadelphia to the pennant and the World Championship, and he astounded the sports world by selling them all, each to a different team. "I sold them," he said, "because they were too good for baseball."

Great Sports Figures

+ Ben Hogan +

In February of 1949, Ben Hogan had everything going for him. He stood at the zenith of one of the most successful golf careers in history. He had led the list of top money winners for four of the last ten years. His admiring galleries had followed him to dozens of victories throughout the forties and there seemed to be no stopping "Bantam Ben."

But on the night of February 2, 1949, Hogan's automobile collided head-on with a bus near Van Horn, Texas. Hogan suffered a broken collar bone, fractured pelvis, fractured ankle and a broken rib. Thrombosis developed, and an operation was necessary which involved tying off the major blood veins to his legs. Many doubted that Hogan would live, but one thing was sure: his golf career was at an end.

But there was one thing they didn't figure on and that was the spirit of Ben Hogan. As soon as possible he began the exercises necessary to rebuild his broken, pain-wracked body. It was July before he could go outdoors, and it was December before he could play a round of golf.

In January of 1950, Hogan entered the Los Angeles Open. Confident stared open-mouthed as the grim-faced Ben hammered out a 73-69-69-69—280 to bring home a tie for first. The fact that Hogan lost the play-off was immaterial. He had done it! The man the doctors thought would never walk again could win at professional golf.

And win he did. Golf in the early fifties was dominated by the fiery little Texan. He went on from Los Angeles to win the U. S. Open that same year. In later years, he tied Bobby Jones' record of four National Opens. He won every major title in golf. Hogan was actually more successful after his accident than he had been before. Today let us pay tribute to a man who would not quit—Ben Hogan, professional golfer.

EDITORIAL

A MISSED OPPORTUNITY

We find it ironic that Wilmington College, which has such an ideal location for such a program, has no water sports in the curriculum of the P.E. department.

With 15 years experience in racing sailboats, we feel we can speak with authority when we state that Bank's Channel, behind Wrightsville Beach could not be more ideal for the sport if it had been designed with that purpose in mind. The same thing holds for skiing, and the fact that surfing goes on 12 months a year speaks for itself.

Several objections are possible to such a program, none of them valid. The first objection would probably be lack of funds. Well, most popular classes of sailboats cost about $500 to $1,000, an outboard suitable for skiing would be about $1,000, and surfboards are about $100. Say five sailboats, two outboards, and a dozen surfboards for a total of about $7,000. A lot of money, but have you priced a gymnasium lately? Or a tennis court?

Another objection might be lack of qualified instructors. When a new poet or author becomes prominent, does the English department have nobody to teach it? Did the math department have any trouble getting instructors to teach the "new math"? No, we think any instructor on the P. E. staff would jump at a chance to learn a new sport.

Finally, we do not think anyone would object to finding transportation to the beach. A drama course is taught five miles from the campus now, and the courses would be electives, anyway.

Sailing is already an Olympic sport and the surfers of the world hope that the sport soon will be. Skiing is one of the most popular participation sports in the country. It will be a shame if these three sports are not soon included in the P.E. department's list of courses.

INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL

The deadline for registering intramural football teams will be Monday, October 25, at noon. Any group, organization, or individual wishing to sponsor a team should contact Coach David Miller or Coach Bill Brooks before that time.

Four teams have been organized so far, two by campus organizations and two by individuals. Sigma Phi Kappa and WVPS will both be represented by a team and there will be two "independent" teams — Jimmy Rich's and Steve Coley's.

All four teams have been practicing this week in anticipation of the first games on Monday. The schedule calls for games at four and five o'clock each Monday and Wednesday until the Thanksgiving break.

BASKETBALL PRACTICE

Practice for both freshman and varsity basketball began on October 15. It is still not too late, however, for interested students to try out for either team.

"A lot of boys come to us the week before the first game, or even after the season starts." Coach Bill Brooks told the SEAHAWK, "and since they do not know the patterns, and have not worked with the team, they get little or no opportunity to show what they can do. As a result these latecomers seldom get a chance to play."

Interested students should contact any member of the staff at the gym to find out when the next practice will be held.

Soccer Team To Host Pembroke

Wilmington College will achieve another first on Saturday when the first home soccer game will take place against Pembroke. Game time is 2 o'clock, and a large turnout is expected.

Since Fall quarter begins later at Wilmington College than most places, the Hawks have been handicapped by less practice than their early season opponents. In a sport as strenuous as soccer, lack of physical conditioning through pre-season practice can be a serious problem. This problem eliminates itself later in the season, however, and the Seahawks are favored to beat Pembroke, in spite of an earlier loss to that team.

Two other home games are scheduled for the soccer team this year: St. Andrews on October 30, and N. C. Wesleyan on November 2.

Students Assist Thalians In Seasons First Performance

In a short period of time, busy hands have been at work constructing the set for the forthcoming production of Tennessee Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association.

Progress has been swift in that the stage crew has already constructed a platform stage above the level of the Thalian Hall stage, and the entire production is now ahead of the work-schedule. Dates of the actual performances of the play will be November 19, 20 and 21.

According to Technical Director Anne Fitzgibbon, the design of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" is termed an "impressionistic-open set" and should do much to establish the cage-like atmosphere of the play—an aristocratic plantation home on the Mississippi Delta.

Those who are building this unique set are: Eston Brinkley, Albert Corbett, Robert Foy, Robert Greer, Marshall Hamilton, Bill Harris, Jerry Hooks, Dick Hudson, Elmer Maley, Danny Martin, Jim Morton, Hank Poisson, Tony Sellers and Tom Tyler.

Serving as stage managers are Carole Benton and Bill Wahlgren and Toni Reynolds is the assistant stage manager. The master electrician will be Sandy Carr and the sound effects will be handled by Jay Howard. Those concerned with make-up are: Phalbe Henriksen, Sophie Hilburn, Ralph Justice, Ronald Lee and Nancy Ramsaur. The properties committee is headed by Elizabeth Bridges.

Though students of Wilmington College are admitted to the plays free of charge on their activity cards, at present a drive is underway to sell memberships tickets to the four productions this season. These memberships may be obtained by either writing to the Thalian Association, Box 1111, City, or by calling RO 3-7922.

Director Doug W. Swink states that this season "promises to be one of the most enjoyable and rewarding in the history of the Wilmington College Theatre."

Student Photos To Go On Sale

This past year there has been a demand for packages of pictures from students, mostly seniors, and some of the faculty. For the first time in several years, the Fledgling will offer pictures for sale.

The package will contain one 4x6 enlargement, and 12 billfold sizes. The pictures will be the same as the one appearing on the student activity card with the exception that the pictures in the package and yearbook will be retouched. The picture on the student activity card will not be retouched due to the necessity of speed in issuing them.

The price is two dollars per package. The continuation of this offer will depend on the response this year. The pictures will be sold at the bookstore later this quarter.

NO PARKING

The parking problem has caused quite a stir at Wilmington College. Students resent having their cars towed away when they have parked in places which are not marked "No Parking." Students also resent having to walk so far to class, and upperclassmen are particularly upset when underclassmen get the choice parking spaces first.

Students should stop and think, though, before jumping off the handle. They should consider the parking problems of other bigger schools and realize how fortunate they are not to have to walk a half mile to class. With Wilmington College the kind that it is, freshmen have to be allowed cars on campus, whereas at other schools they are not, but these schools have dorms. Freshmen should especially be thankful for this.

This parking problem will be the easiest we will have, for those students in years to come will really have the problem as the campus spreads and classes become further apart. We are more inclined to think that the biggest problems about parking now are the ones concerning late-comers, or late scheduled class-comers who just can't find a parking place. Certainly it is distressing to have to walk from the lot behind the gym to the Library Building, and it will be worse when it's raining and cold. But cheer up. Think of yourself as on a physical fitness program, and we guarantee it won't help the situation one bit. It's going to get a lot worse, but we won't be around to see it.

Dale Anderson
B.A., Wittenberg University

At many companies the opportunity to work on challenging projects comes after many years of apprenticeship and a few grey hairs. Not so at Ford Motor Company where your twenties can be a stimulating period. There are opportunities to prove your worth early in your career. Dale Anderson's experience is a case in point.

After receiving his B.A. in Physics in June, 1962, Dale joined our College Graduate Program and was assigned to our Research Laboratories. Recently he was given the responsibility for correcting cab vibration occurring on a particular type of truck. His studies showed that tire eccentricity was the cause of the trouble. Since little change could be effected in tire compliance, his solution lay in redesigning the suspension system. Tests of this experimental system show the problem to be reduced to an insignificant level.

That's typical of the kind of meaningful assignments given to employees while still in the College Graduate Program—regardless of their career interest. No "make work" superficial jobs. And, besides offering the opportunity to work on important problems demanding fresh solutions, we offer good salaries, a highly professional atmosphere and the proximity to leading universities.

Discover the rewarding opportunity Ford Motor Company may have for you. How? Simply schedule an interview with our representative when he visits your campus. Let your twenties be a challenging and rewarding time.

Seahawk Interviews Two New Teachers

The SEAHAWK will be spotlighting two of the new faculty members in each issue. This is the first of the series which is to better acquaint the students with them.

Dr. Edward Eli Horne of the psychology department received his bachelor degree from the Citadel and his masters and doctors from U. N. C. at Chapel Hill. Before coming to Wilmington, he taught at the Citadel in Charleston, S. C., as a graduate assistant, Western Carolina, and North Mecklenburg in Charlotte.

He enjoys reading and participating in sports. His future plans include buying a farm and building a house. Being a versatile carpenter, Dr. Horne has built boats, shelves, and tables.

Huntington Road is where Dr. Horne resides with his wife, Dawn, and three children. The oldest child, a boy, is in the first grade. Next is a daughter, 16 months, and the most recent addition, another daughter, born October 8.

Dr. Horne stated that so far he was greatly impressed with the students—they seem to be interested in learning. Concerning facts, he encourages "spontaneous individual behavior as long as it is socially acceptable, and social acceptability should be fairly broad."

Victor B. Bailey, instructor in economics, is originally from New Haven, Conn., although he lived in Miami for 16 years. Eventually he plans to go back to graduate school. For the present, he plans to enjoy himself at Wrightsville Beach, where he resides, and to occasionally drive up north.

Mr. Bailey, a recipient of honorable mention for the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, attended the University of Miami where he got his A.B. degree. He received his masters from Purdue University, where he taught for two years.

His main interest is in international trade and economic development. However, in his spare time, he enjoys collecting stamps and coins, and writing to people in various countries.

As to his opinion of Wilmington College: "I like it. I don't know much about the students yet. They are friendly. The faculty is young and knows how it is to be a student. They help by being more understanding." Teaching seems like a vacation to him. Mr. Bailey made one strong comment, "I am glad that no boys in my classes have Beatle haircuts."

Dr. Reynolds Speaks At Guilford College

Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty at Wilmington College, traveled to Guilford College, Greensboro, Friday, October 22, to give the Founder's Day Convocation address. A new member of the Guilford College Board of Trustees, Dr. Reynolds spoke on "A Challenge to the Educated."

This is the second time that Dr. Reynolds has been asked to give the Founder's Day Convocation address at Guilford. He spoke in 1948 on the "Problems in Human Genetics Research." He also attended a board of trustees meeting while at the College.

Dr. Reynolds graduated from Guilford College in 1928 and taught there until 1931. "Our family has been closely associated with the College since it was founded in 1837," Dr. Reynolds said. "Guilford is the oldest co-educational institution in the South, and two of the first students to attend were a great aunt and a great uncle of mine."

NURSING FACULTY COMPLETES PROGRAM

The Wilmington College Nursing faculty of the James Walker Memorial Associate Degree Program traveled around the country last week as they completed setting up the new program in effect at the college.

Miss Luetta N. Booe, acting director of the program at Wilmington College, and Miss Mary Alice Whitfield, R.N., assistant professor of nursing, attended the sixty-third annual convention of the State Nurse's Association in Durham October 27-29.

Miss Dorothy Dixon, R.N., assistant professor at Wilmington College and director of the terminating nursing Education Diploma Program at James Walker Memorial Hospital attended a week's study session for nursing faculty on the Associate Degree Program in nursing at Manatee Jr. College, Bradenton, Florida. She attended the session from October 29 thru November 5.

The Manatee Junior College department of nursing provided this opportunity because of the rapid increase in associate degree nursing programs and the concurrent critical shortage of prepared faculty, according to Miss Booe. The department of nursing at Manatee Junior College was established in 1959, and it served as a demonstration center in the study program and is now supported by a grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

In describing the study session, Miss Booe said the emphasis was placed primarily upon the particular characteristics which differentiate these programs from other types of nursing education programs. The overall focus of the study visit was on how the theory and philosophy of associate degree nursing programs are implemented in an actual college curriculum.

DEAN BROWN REPRESENTS SCHOOL

New York City was the site of the annual meeting of the College Entrance Examination Board which was held on October 26 and 27. Dean Thomas P. Brown attended the meeting as a voting representative of Wilmington College.

Chairman for the meeting was Joshua A. Fisher, Director of the Graduate School of Education, Jeshiva University, New York City.

Catherine Proctor, Patsy Futchs, C. F. Hudson, and Vicky Tinker are busy working on the decorations for tomorrow night's dance

The third annual Rushmore dance will be held tomorrow night from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. in the Student Services building.

This year's theme is "Rushmore Goes Surprise." Credit for the theme and the decorations goes to Joe Crutchfield and Vicky Tinker.

Other Students Assist

Other students assisting Crutchfield and Vicky are C. F. Hudson, Patsy Futchs, Gayle Sanderson, and Mike Koseruba. Janice Burris, Catherine Proctor, Sherry Lackey, and George Hodnett.

History of Dance

Three years ago the dance committee decided to have an annual affair during the first week of November. Mt. Rushmore was used as the theme at that time. The following year the name Rushmore was continued.

Chairman of the Dance Committee, Tim Chappel, stated that he expects a large attendance at the dance. He added that it should be one of the best dances this year. Presently he is making arrangements for other events this year such as the Winter Festival and Homecoming.

Admission by Activity Cards

Dress for this dance will be school clothes. In order to be admitted to the dance, students must have their activity cards which are issued at the main office.

Students should remember the College ruling that no alcoholic beverages are to be brought onto or consumed on the college property. The serving of alcoholic beverages at an officially sponsored college dances is prohibited. These regulations will be strictly enforced.

"Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" by Southern playwright, Tennessee Williams, won the Drama Critics Circle Award and the Pulitzer Prize in the New York 1954-55 season. Since then it has been quite popular having been performed on most university and college campuses and viewed by the movie-going audience with Elizabeth Taylor and Paul Newman in the lead roles.

For its Wilmington showing, Sally Rea will portray Maggie the Cat and George Deaton her star-crossed husband, Brick. In the role

Swink states that the setting, designed by Anne Fitzgibbon and executed by the stagecraft class of the drama and speech departments of Wilmington College, "is almost finished and will be one of the most unique stage settings to have been mounted on Thalian stage."

Scholarship Fund Increases

Dr. William M. Randall, on behalf of Wilmington College, was the recipient of a $400 check Monday night from the Wilmington unit of the American Contract Bridge League.

The presentation was made in the Student Services Building by Mrs. Juanita Henderson, unit president. For several years, the unit has supported the scholarship fund, to which this latest contribution will be added.

CIRCLE K ADDS NEW MEMBERS

Although early in the year, one of the college's service organizations, Circle K Club, is looking for another year of service. The club has eight new members: Kent Robertson, Micky Corcoran, Billy Wall, Robert Prince, Billy Alexander, Norman York, Andy Futrelle and George Hodnett. New member Billy Wall has been elected as representative to the Inter-Collegiate Council along with older member Roger Webb.

The club has planned a banquet for installation of these new members November 5, at which time the president of the Kiwanis Club will address all members and their guests. Other guests attending will be Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Lupton the campus advisor, and Mr. and Mrs. Noah Burrow, the Kiwanis advisor. Also at this time membership pins will be awarded to new members.

This year the Circle K Club will participate in selling mums for homecoming, covers for the yearbook and will place benches around the campus.

During the week of Oct. 30 to Nov. 5 the club participated in the annual Circle K Club week. Further plans for the projects will be announced at the next meeting.

In the coming week or so, you will probably be approached by a Circle K member and asked to buy a ticket to the Kiwanis Minstrel Show. This show will be put on at the New Hanover High School Auditorium November 11, 12 and 13. So for an evening of fun, purchase your tickets from any member and come on to the Kiwanis Minstrel Show.

Pi Sigs Have Full Social Calendar

The social calendar for Pi Sigma Mu has its weekend dates fully loaded for the remainder of the fall quarter.

Last Friday night the fraternity had a combo party featuring King Louie. The party was held at the Wrightsboro Clubhouse. A Halloween party at the house Saturday night highlighted the weekend for the Brothers and their dates. Lavish decorations and a wide variety of costumes certainly brought out true Halloween spirit.

Already scheduled for the coming weekends are three parties at the fraternity house, one combo party, one road trip, a hayride and an oyster roast.

King Strikes At Justice

King, who is in the foremost position of any Negro leader, should spend his energies, we think, in much more constructive action than marching. Even if he did receive the Nobel prize, that would lose some of its distinction when one remembers that during the time German scientists were teaching Aryan race superiority as a science, 12 of them were also awarded the Nobel prize. Perhaps King should be awarded the Olympic Torch Medal, which would certainly be more in keeping with his proper achievement.

Then in the five remaining minutes before class time he can frantically take either of two routes to class. He can run all the way around to get to class on time, or he can desperately climb over or under the fence to the rest of his clothes. This incidence doesn't do much for

College Trustees Favor Building Outdoor Track

The possibility of an outdoor track for Wilmington College was mentioned at the meeting of the College Board of Trustees meeting on Monday, October 25. Although the idea is still in the planning stage, the members of the board who were at the meeting seemed to favor the idea. A quorum of the membership was not present.

There is some money available for "athletic buildings and/or equipment" and Coach Bill Brooks had previously mentioned the idea of an outdoor track. Dr. William Randall, president of the College, brought the idea before the meeting.

B. D. Swartz, member of the board later told the Seahawk that it was "fairly well assured that a track would be available next spring." At present Wilmington College has no facilities for outdoor track.

TRACK

It certainly is heartening that the Board of Trustees expressed favor at the idea of an outdoor track. Track is a fast growing sport, and it will be good if the college can soon have this sport in the Athletic Program.

Although definite action could not be taken on the track at the board meeting, we see no reason to suppose that the idea will not be approved as soon as possible. This is another step in the right direction, for if things keep progressing, the day will not be long in coming when the college will have the well-rounded athletic program we need.

Track, field, and swimming dominate the coverage news media give the Olympics. We are glad to see that one more of the great sports may soon come to the Wilco.

OLYMPICS

People who live on the North American continent will have the opportunity of a life-time when the Olympic games are played in Mexico City in 1968. It is not a bit too soon to start thinking about plans to attend.

We have always had the ambition to see three athletic events in our life: an America's Cup Race, a Gold Cup Race, and the Olympics. For most of us, 1968 might be the last chance to see the Olympics. Most people, when they become saddled with the responsibility of a home and family do not take off and go half-way around the world to see a sports event. But most of us now at Wilco will still be relatively free of responsibility in 1968; in fact, most of us will still be in school. A trip to Mexico is not at all out of reach, if planned far enough in advance, and there will probably be many opportunities to obtain reduced fare transportation. We are going—hope you can make it too.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON

As the twentieth century dawned, one of the sports which held the public eye was yacht racing. This was a hold-over from the days when most of the big sports of today were either unborn or still in infancy. The great event of the yacht racing world was any challenge to the America's Cup.

In 1851, one yacht from the United States sailed to England to race with a fleet of yachts from the British Royal Yacht Squadron. The race was sailed around the Isle of Wight in southern England, with seventeen of Britain's finest ships participating. Queen Victoria was in the audience for the race. When the first ship rounded the point of the Isle on the final leg, the Queen asked her captain which boat held the lead. "Your Majesty," he replied, "it seems to be the American." The queen asked about the second place boat, and after consulting his telescope, the captain replied, "There is no second."

The jubilant crew brought the cup home and enshrined it on the mantle of the New York Yacht Club. It is still there today, in spite of many efforts made to dislodge it. Millions have been spent on building both challengers and defenders, and the cup race over the years has provided some of sportdom's greatest moments. But the one figure in the history of the races who inspired the greatest public interest was not one of the long line of skillful captains who went out and successfully defended the cup, but a man who challenged unsuccessfully for it five times—Sir Thomas Lipton.

Lipton was born into a poor Irish family. Through skill and hard work he built the tea empire which today bears his name. After acquiring his fortune, Lipton's interest turned to yacht racing, and he decided to bring the America's Cup back to Britain.

The rules governing the sailing of the races imposed quite a burden upon any challenger. He had to sail to America and she had to race any of several defending yachts, the actual defender being chosen on the day of the race according to wind conditions. Lipton challenged in 1898, and went down to swift defeat in three straight

Tennis Courts Ready For Use November 15

Coach Bill Brooks has announced that the tentative date for opening the new tennis courts to the students and faculty is November 15. The coach also told the Seahawk that the rules governing the use and hours of the courts are not yet complete, but the rules will be posted prior to the opening of the courts.

The final surfacing of the courts with tenniflex compound will be delayed until Spring, because warm temperatures are required for several days before the surfacing. As soon as the fences are complete, the present asphalt surface will be lined so that the courts will be available.

Tentative rules call for a system whereby courts will be reserved by individual students for specific hours. Brooks urged interested students to consult the rules as soon as they are posted.

Tennis is not on the P.E. schedule for Winter Quarter, but a course will be taught in the Spring. No plans have been made for a varsity team in the sport, but an intramural program may be offered if interest is sufficient.

His sportsmanship, however, inspired a brief revision of the rules. At this time the rules were written in such a way as to favor big boats with narrow hulls. And big boats were built—ships that stood as high as a seven story building, with sails big enough to cover eight basketball courts. Gradually changes were made and the rules on challengers liberalized, so that in 1928 on his fourth attempt, Lipton seemed almost certain to win the cup. His boat had won two races and needed but one more victory to take the cup. The day broke warm and calm, favoring the challenger, but Lipton's captain agreed to a postponement of the race at the last minute. The reason for this strange action was never understood—after consulting the captain, Lipton would not say. The weather changed the next day, and Lipton's yacht went down to three straight defeats.

Lipton returned in 1930 for his final challenge. He was an old man now—he walked with a limp and used a cane. He knew, and the world knew, that this would be his last challenge. The game little Irishman had so captured the heart of the public with his wit and sportsmanship that the big northern cities were strewn with banners openly expressing the hope that Sir Thomas would beat the American defender. "Go, Tommy," they proclaimed. "Good luck, Sir Thomas."

But it was not to be. A man named Harold Vanderbilt captained the American ship to four straight victories, and Sir Thomas, always a sportsman, said, "The best boat won." Ring Lardner wrote, "There is not a dry eye in an American speakeasy tonight."

Lipton died the next year, but as long as men go down to the sea in ships, as long as men still race yachts, as long as the spirit of the racing yachtsman lives, the name of Sir Thomas Lipton will not be forgotten.

Wrestling Practice Begins November 8

Practice for both varsity and freshman wrestling will begin on November 8 at 3 p.m. This will be the Hawks second year in competition. Coach Sproles told the Seahawk that he hopes for a large turnout for the opening day of practice. "I want it emphasized," Sproles said, "that no one has a position on the team, and that none of the starting positions are 'filled.' We will begin practice with the fundamentals, so we hope that any interested students will come out even if they have no experience. In wrestling, it is possible for a boy with no experience at all to be on the starting varsity team his first year."

Wilmington has lost several of its starters from last year, among them team Captain David Askins. Returning for the second season will be lettermen Wolfgang Michel, David Morgan, Dickie Hudson, Neal Borrelli, Roger Vanderburg, Jim Joyce, Jim Rich, and Tom Simmons.

Also expected to participate are a number of boys with high school experience, among them Stuart Smith, Roy Jones, Eddie Radford, Kennie Cobb, Wayne Barker, and Jim Morrissey.

Eight matches have been tentatively scheduled, and about four more are expected to round out the schedule. Among the teams the Hawks now have on the schedule are the East Carolina freshmen, UNC at Chapel Hill freshman, Pembroke, Wesleyan, and Saint Andrews. If possible, matches will also be scheduled with William and Mary, Richmond Polytechnic Institute, and Hampton-Sydney.

Basketball Squad Prepares For Opener

Freshman and varsity basketball practice is progressing satisfactorily, according to Coach Bill Brooks. Practice began on October 15, and the first game is scheduled for November 20 in Wallace against Campbell. "We have about 22 boys practicing now," Brooks told the Seahawk, "and of these, 12-14 will probably be on the varsity."

Brooks also indicated that it was easier to conduct practice now that the Seahawks are able to use their own gym. Before construction of the gym on campus, the Seahawks practiced and played their home games at Brogden Hall. He added that more of the scheduled time can be devoted to actual practice.

So far, most of the practice sessions have been devoted to conditioning and systems. Later practices will be spent more on scrimmage-type work.

Faculty Members Interviewed

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Eason, a native of Venezuela, is a new member of the college Spanish department, specializing in the Golden Century.

She received her Master's degree from the University of Arkansas, and at present, has completed all the requirements for her Ph.D. Her Doctorate Thesis has been approved, and a final draft is now being processed. The topic of her Thesis is, "Tragic Sense of Life in Theatre Lope de Vega and Shakespeare in an Attempt to see the Renaissance Theatre of Spain and England from an Existentialistic View."

Mrs. Eason has three daughters. Annabelle, a student at New Hanover High School, is 16. Melissa, 14, attends Roland-Grose Junior High. Bettina is 5.

For three years, Mrs. Eason wrote short stories and columns for newspapers and magazines in Latin America. The subject of many of these articles concerned United States customs and politics.

When questioned about her opinion of Wilmington College, Mrs. Eason replied with such adjectives as "open-minded" and "progressive." She is very impressed with the faculty's interest in the individual student, a quality she feels stems from the size of the college.

Mrs. Anne Mackie Fitzgibbon, new drama instructor, received her bachelor and Masters degree from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

She was assistant professor of drama at Ottawa University in Kansas. She has served as technical director and designer at Duke University, has taught art in the secondary schools in Savannah, Ga., has taught in a high school in Durham.

Coming from a family of teachers, Mrs. Fitzgibbon describes teaching as a "family curse," but added, "I would rather teach than anything else. I like it."

Mrs. Fitzgibbon is now the technical director for the Wilmington College Theater and Thalian Association production of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." Always having participated in drama for "fun," Mrs. Fitzgibbon believes drama is interesting, challenging, and fascinating.

Although Mrs. Fitzgibbon enjoys many things, she says that she actually doesn't have any hobbies. She does enjoy painting and drawing pictures. "My favorite hobby is sleeping—I stay busy," she stated.

"I enjoy the coast and was glad to return," said Mrs. Fitzgibbon, who was born in Chapel Hill.

"Wilmington College is up and coming," she stated. She believes "The students here are alert and a great deal more adult than other college students I have seen."

Mrs. Fitzgibbon lives in Pine Valley with her 12-year-old daughter.

Building Plans In Making

At a meeting on Monday night, October 25, the Wilmington College Board of Trustees approved tentative plans for two new additions to the college—a $1,552,000 library building and a $885,000 science building.

Applications for federal funds to finance the project will soon be submitted to Raleigh. The proposed library building is to be located north of Hogard Hall near the Sarah Graham Kenan Building, with the science building slightly northeast of the library.

FACULTY MEMBERS TRAVEL

Three members of the Wilmington College faculty traveled to Goldsboro October 25 for a conference with Dr. M. M. Vitols, superintendent of Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro.

Miss Luetta N. Booe, acting director of the James Walker Memorial Associate Degree Program in Nursing at Wilmington College; Miss Mary Alice Whitfield, assistant professor of nursing at Wilmington College; and Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty at Wilmington College were at Cherry Hospital to investigate their facilities for teaching the nursing of psychiatric patients, as part of the James Walker Memorial Associate Degree Program in Nursing at Wilmington College.

The Wilmington College B. S. U. is leaving today to attend the B. S. U. State Convention in Charlotte.

Attends Meeting

Mrs. Helena Cheek, dean of women at Wilmington College, was in Fayetteville, October 26, for a meeting of the Eastern Association of Women Deans and Counselors.

The delegation, which met at the State Teacher's College, was addressed by Dr. Luther Raymond Taff, associate professor of education at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. Dr. Taff's address was entitled, "What Counseling is, and What Counseling is Not."

The Book Stack

For some time our bookstacks have needed current recreational books. Now something is being done to fill this gap on our shelves. A committee composed of Dr. Will S. DeLoach and Thomas C. McCall of the teaching faculty and Miss Betty Westbrook of the library staff is responsible for the selection of currently published books of a recreational nature.

Ten books have been selected and were purchased in October. The following books are among those recommended by the committee.

Is Paris Burning? by Larry Collins and Dominique Lapierre is the story of how Paris miraculously escaped being reduced to ruins in August 1944. It tells of events involving Prussian generals, General de Gaulle, and the ordinary people of Paris which led to saving the city in spite of Hitler's vow to leave the city "nothing but a field of ruins."

Hotel by Arthur Hailey provides the reader with an opportunity to spend five eventful days in a great New Orleans hotel. A master storyteller shares with you the fortunes, conflicts, and intimacies affecting the hotel, its guests, and its management.

Day of Trinity by Lansing Lamont gives you a full and understandable account of the successful explosion of the first atomic bomb. It is the story of the scientist who put the bomb together.

Intern by Doctor X gives the reader an inside account of modern medical and hospital practice. It is a true account of what makes a doctor a doctor and how he feels about his patients.

Other current books added to our bookstacks are: The Source by James A. Michener, Thomas by Shelley Mydans, Don't Stop the Carnival by Herman Wouk, Miss MacIntosh, My Darling by Marguerite Young, The Honey Badger by Robert Ruark, and Journal of a Soul by John XXIII, Pope.

You are invited to submit titles to the committee for consideration.

Presents Art Films

The student Fine Arts committee of Wilmington College presented an evening of Art Films from the North Carolina Museum of Art on Wednesday, October 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Services Building. A coffee hour was held afterwards.

This was the first of a monthly Fine Arts Series to be held by the College for the community as well as students. There will be no admission charge for any of the Fine Arts presentations.

Two films on art were presented. Art in the Western World, from the National Gallery of Art in Washington. The film started with the thirteenth century and told the highlights in the development of western art. The most important schools of art and cross currents were represented, including the development of art in the United States.

Understanding Modern Art: These were a series of five seven-minute films; Cubism - multiple viewpoints, illusion of transparency, flat space, repetition of design, interpenetrating forms. Impressionism-simplification of form, heavily painted surfaces, generalization of objects, broken color techniques. Nonobjective Art - basic elements of line, shape and color; nonobjective art in industrial design. Expressionism - powerful contrast of color and value, swirling movement, distortion used creatively. Surrealism - unusual combinations and settings, strange concepts of time and space, mysterious symbolism.

The Fine Arts Committee will present the University of North Carolina Men's Glee Club under the direction of Dr. Joel Carter, on November 17.

Hobbies Of Students Vary

By VIRGINIA BAYSDEN

It was quite amusing and very interesting to note the various hobbies of many students listed on the activities sheet during registration. Some students listed the usual hobbies such as sports, but many were very "truthful" such as one person who enjoys "figuring people out."

Here are some more hobbies of Wilmington College students: scouting, jug-bands, teaching guitar, motorcycling, collecting guns, archeology, "anything interesting," bridge, drag racing, and bowling. Others enjoy meeting interesting people, exploring caves, sky diving, traveling, Karate, game hunting, mosaic art, and wood-working. Most of the women's hobbies consisted of sewing, knitting, crocheting, needle work, and baby-sitting.

GIRLS—A HOBBY?

One girl and one boy said that dating was their only hobby. Maybe these two will meet and add some more varied recreation to their "monotonous" lives. Another boy had only one hobby—girls! They must occupy a lot of his time. He's probably still trying to figure out what she meant when she did not say what he thought she was going to say. That last sentence is for those who don't have anything to do—try figuring it out.

There are several collectors on campus. They collect such items as records, coins, stamps, shells, wind chimes, playbills, and music boxes.

The more artistically inclined students enjoy painting and sketching, creative writing, dancing, folk singing, playing the piano, acting, and poetry. Many of these amateurs are very talented.

SPORTS INCLUDED

Fishing, water skiing, surfing, swimming, sailing, and boating are some of the water-sport hobbies. Other sportsmen (women included) enjoy football, basketball, golf, volleyball, tennis, riding, soccer, archery, boxing, and playing pool.

An IBM Computer would probably match the girl who enjoys talking and the boy who enjoys listening to others as being a compatible couple. But wonder what would happen if one decided to talk instead of listening or vice versa.

Staff Selects Miss Fussell

Miss Seahawk for this issue is Miss Sara Alice Fussell, a senior from Warsaw, and presently of Wrightsville Beach.

Sara is a business major but finds time aside from her studies to participate in extracurricular activities. She was president of the Baptist Student Union, a junior senator, Alpha Chi Sigma, Pi Sigma Mu Sweetheart Court, secretary of the Interclub Council; all past activities.

Her time is taken this year as parliamentarian of the Student NCEA. Sara attended the University of North Carolina and completed the dental assistance course and worked as a dental assistant before entering Wilmington College.

One person, who may or may not be admired, said that working is his hobby. A lady simply stated that she did not have time for hobbies because she had three children plus homework. Maybe one of the baby sitters will take over for her someday and enable her to seek some pleasurable hobby.

Students Gather In Support of Vietnam Policy

On Wednesday, November 4, approximately 150 students gathered by the college flag pole to show their support for the United States policy in Vietnam and for the U. S. servicemen there.

The pro-America stand, as students publicly displayed their draft cards, affirmed action of the Senate earlier in the week.

During the November 1 Senate meeting a resolution, which had first been introduced by sophomore president, Mike Koseruba, and later amended by the Student Activities Committee, was adopted by the Senate supporting the action the United States was taking in Vietnam.

Resolution

The resolution states, "This being our sincerest ideal and desire to let our feelings be known to our fellow Americans and to the world as Wilmington College Students;

"Now therefore be it resolved: That the Student Body of Wilmington College deplores and condemns the recent draft card burnings;

"That we understand the commitment of our Government on Vietnam;

"That we support and look with pride and admiration on the actions of our servicemen in South Vietnam, in line with our tradition of support and furtherance of freedom and democracy at home and abroad;

"And be it further resolved: That this resolution be written in the form of a letter with copies for the Commander in Chief of the United States Armed Forces (the President), the commander of the American forces in Vietnam and the press."

The resolution was signed by student body president, Kitty O'Brien, and secretary, Memory Farrar.

Following the resolution, the American Legion Post 10 of Wilmington sent a letter to the college, congratulating the college on its recent resolution. "You . . . are to be commended for expressing your approval of our troops' gallant activities in their action in Vietnam," said the letter.

THANKSGIVING DAY

And thanks unto the harvest's Lord who sends our "daily bread."

New Cheerleaders Are Added To Squad

Tryouts for the new cheerleaders were held Wednesday night, October 20, in the Gym. The judges were Miss Virginia Mobley, Mrs. Judith Lewis, David Miller, Kitty O'Brien, Miss Melba Rhue, Walter Allan, Mrs. Helena Cheek, and Dave Baker.

Two freshmen were selected, Miriam Taylor and Joyce Pelland. Joyce will serve as an alternate. Archie Alderman was selected as Mascot.

Returning from last year's cheering squad are Louise Lewis, Julie Memory, Cori Collins, Betty Kay Carroll, and Maxine Fladd, who serves as secretary-treasurer for the squad. Margaret Lassiter is head cheerleader. Margaret's assistant is Sherry Lacey.

Advisors for the cheerleaders are Miss Mobley and Mrs. Lewis. Both are physical education teachers.

U.N.C. Glee Club Presents Concert

The Men's Glee Club of the University of North Carolina presented a concert in the College Gymnasium Thursday night at 8 p.m. Admission was free and a social followed the concert.

The Glee Club, which was founded in 1848, is now celebrating its seventy-fifth touring year. Its present director, Dr. Joel J. Carter, has been with the club for 15 years.

Presently the club is saving its money for a second tour of Europe. Its first tour of Europe was in 1927 under the sponsorship of the Ambassador to Great Britain, Alston E. Houghton. They presented concerts in Paris, London, and a special concert in Stratford-Upon-Avon for the benefit of the Basketball Season Begins

The basketball team plays its first game of the season tomorrow night against Campbell in Wallace.

Optimism is the spirit of the day for the Hawks, with eight returning lettermen. In fact, the Seahawks have lost only two lettermen, Al Thiry and Larry Edens. Eden's loss should not hurt the team too much; he was sidelined most of last season with injuries.

Returning are last year's top scorer, Jay Neary and his fellow guards, Jim Hebron and Bill Harris. Lettermen available for the forward slot include James Budd, Dave Baker, Marshall Hamilton, and Wray Ware. Jim Braxton will be back at center.

It should be noted that three

In 1875 the Glee Club became the first group to perform the North Carolina state song, "The Old North State." The Glee Club sang the song at a concert 50 years before it became the state song.

With 16 members the group traveled by horseback and train to perform before 2500 North Carolinians during its first concert season. In 1943 during gas rationing, the 60 members of the Glee Club hitch-hiked to Raleigh for their only out of town concert that year.

Made Recording

The Glee Club has a repertoire of sacred music, operatic works, and novelty selections. In 1957 the freshmen are on the varsity roster: Wayne King, James Kaylor, and Wayne Johnson.

The game will be played in Wallace to mark the dedication of the new Wallace — Rose Hill High School Gymnasium.

Since the gym has only a 2,000 seat capacity, it is not known if any tickets will be available to Wilmington College students. The Seahawk will attempt to post this information on the bulletin board in the pub and also on the one outside the library.

The first home game will be with Frederick on December 3. As usual, students will be admitted by activity card, so be sure to pick yours up.

Glee Club made a long playing record of UNC loyalty songs. They were the first college Glee Club to be asked to record for RCA Victor Broadcasting Co. Their album includes a medley of college, folk, and religious songs.

UNC's singing Tar Heels have participated in the National Inter-college Glee Club contest, the Virginia-Carolina Prize Song Concert for Men's Colleges, and the Southern Intercollegiate Glee Club concert.

Last June UNC's Men's Glee Club was a member of the state's delegation of 115 entertainers for the North Carolina Day at the New York World's Fair.

"Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" by Tennessee Williams opens tonight at Thalian Hall at 8:30 p.m., and will run Saturday and Sunday nights. This play marks the beginning of the third season of the joint efforts of the Thaliens and Wilmington College Theatre.

This winner of the Drama Critics Circle Award and Pulitzer Prize of the New York 1954-55 season, is a provocative drama that treats of human extremities of emotion. It is fraught with brilliant scenes, scenes of sudden and lashing dramatic power.

The action in Tennessee Williams' play takes place in the bed-sitting room and along the gallery of a plantation home in the Mississippi Delta, on the estate of Big Daddy Pollitt, an uneducated field hand who became overseer of a cotton plantation, then inherited it, turned it into "twenty-eight thousand acres of the richest land this side of the Valley Nile," and became a multimillionaire.

Excited Characters

It is an evening in summer. It is Big Daddy's sixty-fifth birthday and his wife, Big Mama (Linda Somersette), and his family are also celebrating a favorable report on his health from a clinic. But unknown to Big Daddy (Jim Potter) he is dying of cancer. An older son, Cooper (Randy del Lago), Cooper's wife, Mae (Martha Loughlin), and their four children (Alan Hill, Ellen Olsen, David Porter and Deborah Rogers) are closing in on the inheritance.

There is another son, Brick (George Deaton) Big Daddy's favorite, who is confined to his room as a result of breaking his ankle in a drunken feat of athletics, and who is fast becoming sullen, withdrawn and disinterested, in the family squabble. Brick's wife, Maggie (Sally Rea) is the "cat" of the title, clinging to an uncomfortable position—her marriage and Brick's rightful share in the inheritance which will mean security, something she has never known in her life.

About the plantation house are field hands and servants played by Gayle Foyles, Roland Joye, Willie Loughlin, Brooks McEachern, Artie Markatos, Margaret Newman and Robert Wood.

Visiting Big Daddy in his hour of need are Rev. Tooker and Doctor Baugh, portrayed by Frank Hall and Gary Weathersbee, respectively.

Students Construct Set

The crew responsible for constructing the ingenious and artistic set is composed of Eston Brinkley, Robert Foy, Robert Greer, Marshall Hamilton, James Harris, Robert Hooks, Dickie Hudson, Elmer Maley, Daniel Martin, George Poisson, Joseph Morton, Tony Sellers and Samuel Tyler.

Those charged with securing properties are Elizabeth Bridgers, Isobel Hobbs and Virginia Spear. Albert Corbett and Sandy Carr will handle sound and lighting respectively.

Make-up artists are Phalbe Henriksen, Sophie Hilburn, Ralph Justice, Ronald Lee and Nancy Ramseur. The Sigma Phi Kappa social fraternity of Wilmington College will furnish the ushers for the three nights of production.

Doug W. Swink, the director of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" states that "this production, I feel certain, will rival the presentations of 'Look Homeward Angel' and 'Amahl and the Night Visitors' of last season."

U. S. Foreign Policy In Viet-Nam Causes Various Reactions From Students

Editorial:

The Road To Martyrdom

The recent demonstration on campus in support of U. S. policy in Viet Nam, while admirable from the standpoint of enthusiasm and patriotism, fell short when it came to one of the two-fold purposes for which it was held.

Specifically we are speaking of the recognition of the draft card burners.

Not only does the recognition and dramatization of the press and the government of these pacifists pave the road to martyrdom for these few card burners, but the students at Wilmington College aided in this dramatization.

The government played it up when it strengthened the consequences of failing to carry a draft card and made it punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine of $10,000. There are many more crimes that are worse than burning a draft card which are punishable by the same amount of years imprisonment and fine, such as a false oath before a federal judge, lying on the witness stand, and fraud.

For the government to class draft card burning in the same category is ridiculous. The government has the number of each draft card issued, and should someone burn his, the government can prosecute and by proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the offender was issued a card and intentionally destroyed, convict him. Often this will be easy because the pacifists who burn their cards usually do so in full view of newsmen, t.v. cameras, and hundreds or thousands of bystanders.

George Roundtree, Jr., president of the New Hanover County Bar Association, commented when questioned by this writer concerning whether draft card burners even belonged in the service or not, "They ought to be in the Army with a 100-pound sack of potatoes on their shoulders doing K.P. in order to free a man who has guts enough to get out and fight and do the job." Mr. Roundtree supports policy in Viet-Nam in that he said, "The U. S. promised to give aid in 1954 and once a nation has promised something, if she does not do it then she might as well not even make another promise."

Mr. Roundtree stated further that he thought "everybody should do his job, no matter what it is."

Contrary to his opinion, we think these pacifists who burn their draft cards do not belong in the armed forces. In fact we can't think of anywhere they belong. Their desire to avoid the draft on the grounds that they don't believe in the state department's foreign policy can hardly be considered a legitimate one.

In conclusion, the students who took part in the demonstration are to be commended for their enthusiasm and interest, barring the students who patriotically waved their draft cards while signed up for 12 hours in order to avoid the draft. Whether or not one supports the policy in Viet-Nam, he should be willing to serve his country. The less said about the card burners, the better. Rather a concerted effort to help supply blood to the wounded in Viet-Nam would make a better topic.

Writer Explains U. S. Policy

By LLOYD SAUNDERS
Students of Wilmington College recently turned out to voice their support of U. S. policy on Viet-Nam. This was a very spontaneous reaction on the part of the student body and was in no way prompted by a few persons in the student government. The participation by a majority of the student body signified that this is the attitude of Wilmington College.

The demonstration was significant in only one aspect. The student body was able to serve the student government. It causes some to wonder just how many persons were able to experience a genuine feeling of accomplishment for their participation in this demonstration.

Majority Supports Policy

A recent survey has shown that these students are part of a majority of Americans who support U. S. policy in Viet-Nam. More than half of the population supports even further involvement in Viet-Nam. This includes more extensive bombing of North Viet-Nam and even a possibility of taking the war to Communist China. Most people wish to "get it over with as quickly as possible" by any means available. This can hardly be accomplished by fighting a defensive war in Viet-Nam.

Our government is involved in the conflict in Viet-Nam at the request of the South Vietnamese. Our troops are to help the local forces to protect the population from Communist terrorism by an overwhelming majority of Americans. When we cease to contain our military activities within the borders of South Viet-Nam, we have committed what even we know as aggression. For us to advocate aggression in Viet-Nam, we give sanction to aggression everywhere. This seems like a very dangerous policy for any country or group of individuals to support.

No Simple Solution

There is no simple solution to the crisis in Viet-Nam. More extensive involvement may reap more serious consequences than we desire. We cannot withdraw without suffering defeat and the loss of the freedom of the people of South Viet-Nam. A purely defensive war will probably be long and expensive. Perhaps a better question for students to ponder is not whether or not they support our policy in Viet-Nam, but whether or not they think it is worth the price.

Do you support U. S. policy in Viet-Nam and Why?

I support the policy because the fight is to stop the spread of Communism into the free world and as the most democratic society it is our job to preserve and defend the integrity of nations threatened by this menace. John E. Noe.

In the past months, many people have asked "What are we doing in Viet-Nam?" My answer is that we must be in Viet-Nam. If we get out of there, where then do we draw the line and stop the Communists? Would we decide on the Philippines, our own West Coast, or the Mississippi River. Thus I feel we must stay and will stay in Viet-Nam and win. Ralph B. Kornegay.

As a Christian pacifist I oppose any aggression by any nation, by any peoples. In regard to our action in Southeast Asia and especially in Viet-Nam, our escalation can lead only to major warfare on the Asian Continent involving atomic weapons and therefore the annihilation of the world. Our policy to stop Communist peoples is wrong. Our efforts in Viet-Nam have succeeded in only perpetrating dictatorship, killing innocent peoples, disrupting the economy, and causing a listless feeling among the Vietnamese in regard to their autonomy. If we are realistic we must seek to allow the Vietnamese to develop their own government whether it be socialist, or in any form a manner cognizant with their heritage. This can be done through the treaty outlined by Geneva convention of 1954. With this in mind our policy should be to bring all parties to the conference table under the auspices of the UN, to the end that either one or two nations may be evolved as in the case of the Koreans and of the Germans. Only by preserving peace by seeking peace can we uphold our concept of Democracy. Larry E. Bohamon.

I think that we should be in Viet-Nam because we are going to have to make a stand for our rights and for what we believe somewhere. Viet Nam is as good of starting place as Cuba would have been during the missile crisis. Ray Bordeaux and Bob Eakins.

The U. S. is such a superior power that we must show them who is boss. If we chicken out here we can never help anyone else and our aid is needed to preserve freedom. George H. Poisson.

I support the policy in Viet-Nam because we have reached a point in the situation and cannot withdraw, as our retreat would aid the spread of Communism and this we do not want. Thelton Skipper.

The U. S. must remain in Viet-Nam because it must fight Communism and it is and it is there. Carmen DeVelasco.

The U. S. policy in Viet Nam is right in that we should meet violence with violence where matters of civil democracy and freedom are at stake. Richard Baldwin.

Our presence in Viet-Nam is largely abortive but is however necessary because prestige is involved and if we fail to fulfill our commitments in Viet-Nam then our commitments all over the

RAMBLER TELLS TRADITIONS INVOLVING THANKSGIVING DAY

By Shirley Manning

Thanksgiving more nearly resembles the original manner in which it was first celebrated than any of the other national holidays, including Christmas and Easter.

The joys of Thanksgiving are divided into four categories: religious, feasting, sharing, and reunion. On Thanksgiving Day nearly all churches are open for services. As much time is spent in the kitchen on preparing the traditional thanksgiving meal as in any other activity that day. People share on Thanksgiving Day by giving baskets of food to the needy. And lastly, Thanksgiving remains a time when families get together and share the day in reminiscing and enjoying the good food.

Old Tradition

The tradition of Thanksgiving dates back to biblical times when people celebrated the harvest. Mention is made in the books of Judges, and Deuteronomy, as a time when the people "went out into the field and gathered their vineyards, and trod the grapes and held festival, and went into the house of their god, and did eat and drink."

Thanksgiving can be traced from then through the festival of Demeter, or the Thesmophoria; to the Roman harvest festival or the Cerealia. There was also the English Harvest Home held during later times. Thanksgiving was also celebrated in the Netherlands.

The Pilgrims, who were chiefly shopkeepers and artisans, were ill-equipped and trained for hewing a living out of the vast virgin earth of America when they landed, and had it not been for the Indian, Squanto, there might not have ever been a Thanksgiving. Squanto, the first American Indian to ever make two round trips to Europe, taught the Pilgrims many things about cooking, hunting, fishing, and farming. Had it not been for his invaluable advice, many more than the 50 who did die, that first year, might have perished. His most important contribution, though, was acting as go-between in the peace treaty with Massasoit which enabled the Pilgrims to survive, also. To further insure peace, Squanto told the other Indians that the Pilgrims kept the Black Plague buried under the Common House in barrels, so the Indians refrained from attacking them.

The Pilgrims objected to a fixed date on a calendar for paying homage to the Provider, but the governor did set aside a day after that dreadful first year to give thanks and to enjoy some of the fruits of their labor. They sent Squanto to invite Massasoit, and the Chief showed up with 90 hungry braves. Everybody did eat heartily, though, for several days, and paid dearly for it the next winter. There was no Thanksgiving the next year as there was near starvation.

Becomes Annual Event

Thanksgiving did not become an annual event until 1863, nearly 242 years after the first Thanksgiving by the Pilgrims. Even now Thanksgiving is still announced. (Probably a carry-over of the Pilgrims' objection to fixed dates.) George Washington first proclaimed it a holiday to be observed on Thursday, November 26, 1789. Later Lincoln signed a proclamation to the effect that it would be observed on Thursday of the fourth week in November. Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed in 1939 that it would be held on the third week because merchants complained that they did not have enough time to prepare for Christmas when it was observed on the fourth week. There was so much confusion that two years later, I went back to the fourth Thursday. Interestingly enough, Thomas Jefferson ignored Thanksgiving during his entire tenure in office, because he thought the proclamation was "monarchical," an argument still heard today.

Let us not forget the efforts of Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale who campaigned for eight or nine years to have Thanksgiving proclaimed a national holiday, many years ago. She wanted everybody to come to a halt (this was during the height of the civil war) and give thanks to the Maker. The proclamation was signed, but the war went right on.

Changes Made

Truly Thanksgiving is imbedded deep in American tradition, but when we sit down to Thanksgiving dinner we'll find that a few things have been added from that first dinner observed long ago. We'll have cranberry sauce - the Pilgrims had none, for there wasn't enough sugar to make it. We'll eat with utensils - the Pilgrims had none and used clamshell spoons instead. Every table in America will probably be graced with pumpkin pie - the Pilgrims might have been familiar with the pumpkins the Indians raised, but even later on they were still using it as a sauce and in bread. Our Thanksgiving dinner will be prepared with all the modern conveniences - the Pilgrims cooked their on open spits. Finally, instead of discharging blank volleys and blowing bugles, Americans will watch parades and football games.

Yes, a few things have changed, but still as one tastes the good food on Thanksgiving he cannot help but be thankful for the bountiful blessing of plenty.

World would be mistaken in places such as Berlin, the African States, and S. A. Jack Loftus.

Construction continues on the Sarah Kenan Memorial Building with completion scheduled for sometime in January.

Students Practice Teach; Number Will Increase

This quarter there are only seven students practice teaching: Frances Dean Smith, Ernest B. Fullwood, Edwin G. Piver, Frances Dianne Hewett, Mary Sue Elixson, Artis Roland Joye, and Rebecca Burgess. However, the number of student teachers will increase next quarter to approximately 52, which will more than double last year's number.

While student teaching, the student's schedule is the same as the teacher's. For the first two or three weeks of the quarter, the student teacher observes and gradually assumes the teaching responsibility. For four or five weeks the student has full responsibility of the class.

The student teachers are observed by college supervisors who pay regular visits to the classrooms. They are Thomas McCall, Thomas Moseley, Mrs. Ruby Knox, Mrs. Betty Stike, Mrs. Mary Bellamy, Miss Barbara Moser, Franklin H. Allen, and William Brooks.

Program Expands

Wilmington College will have students teachers in the New Hanover County schools and in Burgaw High School in Pender County next quarter. This will be the first time the College has sent student teachers out of New Hanover County.

Students who will teach next quarter are Jo Ann Bostic, Wilbur E. Carr, Jr., Richard C. Lewis, Edward W. Maulsby, Jr., Everett Keal Ward, Jr., James Edward Sterling, and Billy Carlton Shipman.

Students teaching in the elementary schools will include Janet Thompson Stegall, Margaret Mills Mabry, Sandra Jean Edwards, Jewel Royal, Herman J. Johnson, Loretta Bancroft, Linda W. Murray, Edith R. Ford Motor Company is:

responsibility

Stephen Jaeger
B.B.A., Univ. of Pittsburgh

A key dimension of any job is the responsibility involved. Graduates who join Ford Motor Company find the opportunity to accept responsibility early in their careers. The earlier the better. However, we know the transition from the academic world to the business world requires training. Scholastic achievements must be complemented by a solid understanding of the practical, day-to-day aspects of the business. That is the most direct route to accomplishment.

Stephen Jaeger, of the Ford Division's Milwaukee District Sales Office, is a good example of how it works. His first assignment, in January, 1963, was in the Administrative Department where he had the opportunity to become familiar with procedures and communications between dealerships and the District Office. In four months he moved ahead to the Sales Planning and Analysis Department as an analyst. He studied dealerships in terms of sales history, market penetration and potentials, and model mix. This information was then incorporated into master plans for the District. In March, 1964, he was promoted to Zone Manager—working directly with 19 dealers as a consultant on all phases of their complex operations. This involves such areas as sales, finance, advertising, customer relations and business management. Responsible job? You bet it is—especially for a man not yet 25 years old. Over one million dollars in retail sales, annually, are involved in just one dealership Steve contacts.

As a growth company in a growth industry, Ford Motor Company offers an exceptionally wide spectrum of job opportunities. The chances are good that openings exist in your field of interest. See our representative when he visits your campus. We are looking for men who want responsibility—and will be ready for it when it comes.

Seahawk Interviews Faculty

David M. Wells joined the College faculty as an assistant professor of English this year. He was originally from Wilmington and was graduated from New Hanover High School.

He did undergraduate work at Taylor University in Indiana. His graduate work was completed at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. While at both colleges, Mr. Wells worked in various architects' offices. Medieval literature was his major field of study, and his minor was in the eighteenth century—"God's own century." An old English Poem entitled Genesis, written in 700 A.D., was the subject for his doctorate thesis.

Before coming to Wilmington College Mr. Wells taught at Trinity School in Atlanta, Georgia; at Howard College in Birmingham, Ala.; and at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill where he also worked in the planning office. He likes Wilmington—the town, the college, and the beach—and notes with interest the changes that have taken place since he left.

Mr. Wells' hobbies include building and sailing boats, listening to classical music, and reading Little Abner. His reply to the question "Do you have any children?" was a cool, fortunately, not after an embarrassing silence he continued, "I'm not married!"

Sue A Professor

Interested in the latest course of action if wronged by a professor? Sue him. That's right—and there is precedent—of a sort. The following quote is taken from an article in The Hiltop, Mars Hill College's paper. It was datelined Salt Lake City and from the wires of CPS. The story concerned two suits now pending where students are suing professors for misuse of their powers.

"Possible redress for students suing universities and professors who do not follow established procedure when expelling or suspending students was indicated recently in a Vermont Federal District Court Decision.

"Before dismissing a complaint from a former University of Vermont medical student who was suing for re-admission, Judge Ernest W. Gibson said he would order the university to 'conduct a fair and impartial hearing' if he found that it had 'acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or in bad faith' in dismissing a student.

After a hearing, however, the judge ruled that no evidence was produced in this particular case to substantiate the complaint that the university's action had not followed the established procedure."

Morris Brown Speaks To Scholarship Recipients Here

Morris Brown of the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh visited Wilmington College Thursday, November 11, to speak to the recipients of the Prospective Teachers Scholarship Loan.

He explained the policies and regulations of the scholarship loan, and answered questions about the loan. Mr. Brown noted that 4,037 persons have received this loan since the program was set up in 1957. Presently, there are 2,105 recipients representing 56 colleges in the State of North Carolina.

Recipients of the Scholarship Loan at Wilmington College are Linda Batten, Phyllis Ellis, Bonnie Howard, Nancy James, Florence Johnson, Carol Proctor, Judy Ring, Myra Rochelle, Florence Tucker, and Virginia Baysden.

Miss Mary Alice Whitfield, R.N., new assistant professor in nursing, is a graduate of James Walker Memorial Hospital School of Nursing.

After four years of nursing at Rex Hospital in Raleigh, Miss Whitfield became interested in public health nursing. She attended the University of North Carolina's school of Public Health in Chapel Hill.

Miss Whitfield served as a public health nurse for 11 years before going back to UNC for her bachelor's degree in public health. She then worked for one year as the Public Health supervisor in the Jacksonville City Health Department, Tennessee.

She received her Master's degree in Public Health in 1962 and then traveled to work as the Public Health supervisor in Guilford County, North Carolina.

First Teaching Experience

In the nursing course here, Miss Whitfield will be teaching maternity and child care. This will be her first formal experience in formal teaching, but she pointed out that "in public health work you cannot work without teaching."

Miss Whitfield decided to go into nursing as a career since she "just preferred the human touch nursing seems to have." She believes public health nursing has such a broad scope as "you look on the whole community as your patient."

The college course in nursing is a new trend in nursing education, Miss Whitfield believes, and said "I wanted to be a part of it."

"I'll be glad when I get into teaching," said Miss Whitfield who will begin in the spring quarter. "I've always been an active person, I like to be doing."

Miss Whitfield enjoys reading, loves gardening—outdoor gardening first, indoor gardening second, and ceramics, when "I have the time." She also enjoys civic activities.

Originally from Sampson County, Miss Whitfield lives in Pine Valley.

NEARS COMPLETION OF REQUIREMENTS FOR DOCTORS

Calvin Doss of the College education department, is working on his Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Mr. Doss started in 1962 by attending Saturday classes. Since then he has been continually working toward the completion of the requirements. At this time he has completed the course work, the resident credit, the preliminary orals, and the language requirement (a reading knowledge of two languages).

Mr. Doss is now working on the last requirement for his Ph.D. in Education, his thesis. His thesis will consist of a study of persons who have dropped out of high school and later returned to a Technical Institute to complete their education. Those drop-outs who return will be compared with groups that dropped out at the same age and grade but did not return to finish.

He hopes to complete his thesis and take his final exam by June, 1966. Mr. Doss, whose major area is higher education, undertook a project for one of his courses which counted toward his Ph.D. The course was teaching science in the elementary school.

With the aid of several students, he constructed the Nature Trail which starts behind Hoggard Hall and goes back into the woods. This trail has been an aid to the biology and art departments here at Wilmington College as well as providing a place to relax and walk.

ROC PROGRAM NOW ON CAMPUS

John E. Noe, a junior at Wilmington College and a ROC/SN in the local unit of the Naval Reserve was recently appointed as Reserve Officer Candidate (ROC) representative at Wilmington College.

The Naval Reserve Officer Candidate program is open to any male who is physically qualified and who is enrolled in a full-time program of education at Wilmington College. In addition, he must pass entrance examinations and be otherwise qualified for enlistment in the Naval Reserve.

Those young men who are accepted into the ROC program spend eight weeks of training at OCS, Newport Rhode Island, between their Sophomore and Junior years, and a similar period of training between their Junior and Senior years. Upon graduation, they are commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve.

John, who completed his first eight weeks at OCS last summer has full information regarding the ROC program. He was appointed ROC representative by Commander Thurston Formy-Duval, USNR, commanding officer of Surface Division 6-29(M), the Wilmington Naval Reserve Training Unit.

B. S. U. Attends Charlotte Convention

The State Baptist Student Union Convention was held in Charlotte, November 5-7.

The following students from the Wilmington College B. S. U. attended: Elliott O'Neal, Larry Bohannon, Bobby Bohannon, Fred Jacobs, Sue Duff, Dennis Lennon, Ethrage Warters, Jimmy Davis, Pat Todd, Mary Hughes, and Kay Ennis.

Also attending was the Rev. George Lewis, local B. S. U. pastor adviser from Masonboro Baptist Church, and his wife, Peggy.

About 600 students from campuses all over the state met for the weekend on the theme "Called to Proclaim."

One of the highlights of the convention was the showing of a very unusual movie, "Parable," which received "rave" notices at the New York World's Fair.

The main addresses were by Dr. Carlyle Marney, an outstanding minister and theologian and by Mr. Arthur Driscoll, consultant to the Baptist Sunday School Board.

Worship services were under the direction of Dr. Charles E. Boddie, President of American Baptist Theological Seminary.

Discussion groups on the addresses and the film were divided according to vocational interests and were led by outstanding persons from the different vocations.

Among several proposals adopted during the business session was a work camp project at Cherokee and Durham for the summer.

Elliott O'Neal, the local B. S. U. President and State Social Actions Chairman, presented the Social Actions Committee's proposal for a Washington Seminar to be held in February.

Saturday evening was devoted to a presentation by this summer's "Cherokee Work Camp Team," who told about their experiences while helping to construct and remodel Indian churches in Cherokee, North Carolina.

The remaining portion of the evening was spent as a sing along with Dr. Boddie who is an outstanding musician.

The last local B. S. U. meeting was Tuesday, at the Rex Restaurant. It was a Thanksgiving dinner with Elbert Felton, State B.S.U. President, as the after-dinner speaker. Elbert is a student at East Carolina College where he is majoring in psychology.

Pictured above is John E. Noe, Reserve Officer Candidate representative at Wilmington College. John will be glad to explain the ROC program to any interested students.

"AN APPLE FOR THE TEACHER"

The Student NEA at Wilmington College observed American Education Week this year with "an apple for the teacher." Members of the student group put an apple in each faculty member's mailbox Monday with a reminder that November 7 through 13 was American Education Week and that the theme for 1965 is "Invest in Learning."

Since 1921, when it was inaugurated by the National Education Association and the American League, American Education Week has been a valuable instrument in calling public attention to the needs and achievements of the nation's schools—a reminder to each citizen that good schools are, to a very large degree, his personal responsibility.

In 1922 the founders were joined by the U. S. Office of Education as a co-sponsor; the National Congress of Parents and Teachers became the fourth co-sponsor in 1938.

Debators Begin Season Travel To Tournament

The Wilmington College Debate Team traveled the first weekend of November to the 29th Appalachian State Teacher's College Mount-in Tournament in Boone. This was the first full-team tournament trip of the 1965-66 debate season.

Among the schools entered in the debate were Duke, U. N. C., Wake Forest, East Carolina, Western Carolina, and East Tennessee State University.

The varsity team, composed of Cori Collina and Ralph Kornegay, made a five-win and one-loss record for the Wilmington club. "All members of the team are looking forward with great hopes to a very successful tournament year," Kornegay president of the club, said. "Currently some six tournaments remain, with very strong competition." The tournament circuit ranges from the Florida State University Tournament to the Richmond University Invitational, with the top schools in the eastern United States attending.

"The novice debators," according to Thomas Scism, faculty advisor, "showed definite improvement." The 8-man team averaged 16.37 points per round out of a possible 30 points," Mr. Scism said. "This is a definite growth of their debating ability over a 12.25 previous average, and we are sure that the team as a whole will do as well as they did last year." Among the novice members Ellen Davis and Charles Weiss were the top debators averaging 20.00 and 18.8 points respectively, per 30-point round.

Other members on the team were Lynda Bagby, Lynne Harris, Elizabeth Humphrey, and Frank Pratt.

Formal Dance To Be At Wrightsville Beach

The Blockade Runner at Wrightsville Beach will be the scene for this year's Winter Festival on December 4. Lasting from 9:00 p.m. until 1:00 a.m., the dance will be semi-formal; dark suits and ties will be appropriate for the men, and party dresses should be worn by the women.

This year, for the first time, the Inter-Club Council is sponsoring a Winter Festival Queen. Various college organizations will sponsor girls to compete for the honor. The queen will be decided upon by student body elections, and she will be crowned by a special out of town celebrity.

Wilmington College couples will be admitted free upon the presentation of their student activity cards. Guest couples are invited at the responsibility of the sponsoring students. Admission for these guests is two dollars per couple.

The Dance Committee hopes there will be a large crowd of students to dance to the music of the Delmonicos.

CONTROVERSIAL SPEAKER BAN LAW PROMPTS STUDY BY COMMISSION

By SHIRLEY MANNING

In 1814, Thomas Jefferson wrote a letter in which he said, "For God's sake, let us hear both sides!" One hundred and forty-nine years later, Representative Phil Godwin successfully introduced, and the General Assembly passed, a Speaker Ban Law which denied one side to be heard; the Communist view.

Two years later the Speaker Ban Study Law Commission recommended that this law be amended and the following changes would result:

- Authority to control visiting speakers would be returned to the trustees of the college
- Trustees of each college adopt the speaker policy written and recommended by the commission.

The controversial Speaker Ban Law in effect prohibited any person who pleaded the fifth amendment in loyalty hearings or known Communists from speaking on the 11 state supported colleges in North Carolina. The law made national headlines; and the cry and hue of "freedom of speech," and "loss of accreditation," went up in all parts of the country. Opposition to the SBL gave these cries, while supporters of the law responded with the fact that the legislature had taken away the authority of regulating speakers from the trustees because the people of North Carolina had lost faith in the trustees' judgment concerning visiting speakers.

The Consolidated University of North Carolina was especially implicated in the latter. Accused of being a hotbed of Communist activity, the president of the University came to the defense of the school by appearing before the Speaker Ban Study Commission in behalf of the opposition to the law.

Study Commission Set Up
Governor Dan K. Moore prompted by such widespread opposition and support of the law appointed a study commission who came up with the recommendations already named.

Some pertinent facts stand out about the commission's recommendations. The first is the fact that the trustees must adopt a speaker policy like that of East Carolina College which in effect says "East Carolina College found it possible to teach about communism without inviting Communists to the campus. The school would allow a Communist to speak . . . only on the rare occasion when it felt the appearance would serve a particularly educational purpose to the advantage of the college."

Senator Robert Morgan, an advocate of the SBL, said that if other college boards of trustees would adopt such a position that the legislature might be willing to return the power to control visiting speakers to the trustees. Morgan said that "if all the trustees of the state supported colleges would take such a position he would then favor amendment or repealing the law after such a resolution had been passed. What makes the findings of the commission pertinent is that it fails to say what the rules would be in regulating speakers."

Secondly are facts Senator Phil Godwin has summarized for us. "The very fact that the commission did not recommend that the law be repealed is evidence within itself that there is need for the law. It is further evidence that the 1960 General Assembly acted in good faith and with justification."

Asked to Adopt Policies
The third pertinent point is that the trustees are asked to adopt policies that they should have adopted long ago without recommendation from anybody.

As this paper went to press the General Assembly was scheduled to meet as per request of the governor. When this paper is issued the outcome of the most controversial law to be passed in over a decade will probably be known.

Playboys Perform

The Playboys, a dance band from Burlington, provided the music for the third annual Rushmore Dance at the College November 6. A crowd of approximately 150 attended the dance, which had as its theme, "Rushmore Goes Surprise."

Vicky Tinken and Joe Crutchfield were responsible for the theme as well as the decorations. They were assisted by a committee composed of Sherry Lackey, Janice Burris, Catherine Proctor, Gayle Sanderson, Patsy Futchs, C. F. Hudson, Mike Koserubo, and George Hodnett. Tim Chappel headed the entire Dance Committee.

Tartuffe Is Next For Drama Group

Try-outs for "Tartuffe" will be held by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thaliens on Monday and Tuesday nights, January 3 and 4 at Thalian Hall beginning at 8:00 o'clock.

This hilarious and classic farce will mark the second production of the Thalian-Wilmington College Theatre 1965-66 season and will be presented on February 11, 12 and 13.

This comedy was written by one of the best known French playwrights of any age—Moliere. Biting and timeless in its satire, the play is a triumph of wit and style as it details the incredible machinations of a pious fraud and the maddeningly obtuse benefactor who stubbornly refuses to believe the truth about him even when faced with the loss of his wife, his daughter and all his worldly goods.

There are roles for ten males and five females. Also, anyone interested in working backstage is cordially invited to attend these try-outs.

Deadline Today For Engineer's Refresher Course In January

Wilmington College will offer an engineer's refresher course as preparation for the Professional Engineer's Examination which will be given in June.

Classes have been tentatively planned to begin around the middle of January with meetings scheduled for one or two nights a week. Persons interested are asked to contact Thomas P. Brown, acting dean and director of admissions at Wilmington College, by December 10, 1965.

Students Go To Polls

Polls were open last Friday for Wilmington College students to cast their vote for Winter Festival Queen, May Queen, and May Queen Courts. Results of the May Queen and Court appear in column five.

gen said. Pembroke is the other Depository Library in this district.

"We realize our responsibility in accepting this designation and are looking forward to the extended services these publications will enable us to give, not only to our own students and faculty, but also to this area of our state. These publications are available to the general public, and we certainly hope that they will use these new facilities," Miss Hagen stated.

Miss Katherine Howell, librarian in the Wilmington Public Library said, "We are delighted to know that the Wilmington College Library has been designated a Government Depository Library, and we will make every effort to refer our Public Library patrons to the College Library for such source information that they may be seeking."

In expressing his pleasure at the new appointment, Dr. William Randall, president of the College, said, "The establishing of a Documents Center at Wilmington College will provide a source of information for many types of needs in this expanding industrial and education area of Southeastern North Carolina.

Identity of Queen Kept Secret

A new queen reigned over Wilmington College's Winter Festival Dance Saturday night, December 4, at the Blockade Runner Motor Hotel.

Campaigning for the elections held last Friday gained momentum as the College's clubs and organizations pushed their choice for Winter Festival Queen last week.

Only Freshman and Sophomore co-eds were eligible as candidates to reign over the festivities, and her identity was a tight secret until she was crowned at the dance by Santa Claus himself. The Queen's Court was made up of girls sponsored by the College's clubs and fraternities.

SNEA Meets

The second Student NCEA meeting was held Wednesday, November 17, in the SRO Theater. The guest speaker was Mrs. Catherine Furr, who teaches the trainable children in the Special Education program in Wilmington.

Mrs. Furr began her talk by giving a brief history of the Special Education program in North Carolina and especially in Wilmington. Today there are 14 classes in Special Education.

Mrs. Furr then discussed some of the problems in the program and some of the plans for the future.

"Thinking Spring"

Announcement of the Queen and her Court was made on Saturday, December 4.

Spring and May-time may seem far away — but the May Queen Candidates at Wilmington College were "thinking spring" as they also got ready for May Queen elections on Friday. Eight pretty senior co-eds were in the running. The May Queen's Court will be made up of two girls elected from each of the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes. Freshman candidates topped the list with a record number of 27 freshman pretties competing. There were 12 sophomore, seven junior, and eight senior candidates running for the respective court slots.

In Case We Have Forgotten

Oftentimes at Christmas we forget who to put under the tree, Santa or Jesus. After careful consideration of the two, though, the choice seems obvious.

Unlike Santa, originated by Thomas Nast, Christ was begot by God.

Unlike Santa, guided by money (or lack of it), Christ's gift-bearers were guided by a brilliant star.

Unlike Santa, symbolized with an evergreen tree lighted by electric bulbs, Christ is symbolized by a cross illuminated by the radiance of His Love for all mankind.

Unlike Santa, dressed in a warm red suit and emitting jolly "ho, ho, ho's," Christ now wears heavenly robes, being stripped naked while on earth by sinful men.

Unlike Santa, bearing gifts costing money, which break and need repairing; Christ brings lasting gifts eternal: love, joy, life, and peace, all of which are free.

Unlike Santa, who comes once a year, Christ comes year-round, day or night, whenever we call upon Him.

Unlike Santa, who slips in through a chimney, Christ stands knocking at our front door.

Unlike Santa, traveling in a reindeer-drawn sleigh, Christ travels within our hearts accompanied by legions of angels.

Unlike Santa, who visits only the good people, Christ comes to the good and bad alike.

Unlike Santa, who is a resident of the North Pole, Christ lives in Heaven, in our hearts, everywhere on earth.

Unlike Santa who is disguised, Christ Jesus comes to us openly, offering eternal life.

The choice surely is obvious.

Christmas Facts and Fantasies

We always think of only three wise men because of the three gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh that was brought as gifts to the King of Kings. Actually the Bible doesn't say how many there were. Some scholars say that three would never have traveled alone during those times because of bands of thieves and robbers. It's really not important, though, as to number; only the reason for their coming is important.

The Professor and His Poem

Dr. Clement Clarke Moore, who was professor of divinity in a New York Theological Seminary in the nineteenth century, was reading some of his own poems to his children one Christmas. A friend who happened to be listening copied one of the poems down and sent it for printing to a newspaper. It was very well received by the public for it was entitled "The Visit of St. Nicholas," or better known as "The Night Before Christmas." Dr. Moore did not claim the poem because he thought it beneath his dignity as a professor in a school of divinity. Not until years later when he died was the poem attributed to him. Now it is translated into many foreign languages and I probably the best loved Christmas poem.

Star, Meteor, or Comet?

The Star of Bethlehem has aroused much thought as to its origin. Astronomers say that a meteor might have appeared and fallen near Bethlehem, or a comet might have appeared. The Chinese recorded a comet in the year 4 B.C. visible from February to April. Still other astronomers say that a new star (Hipparchus notes one in 134 B.C.) might have appeared. The last hypothesis is that two or more planets came together creating a big light. "Computation shows that such an event took place in the year 7-6 B.C. At that time Jupiter, Saturn and Mars were in conjunction. This phenomenon recurs with a periodicity of about 800 years." (Christmas Facts and Fancies, p. 49)

Burning the Candle at Both Ends

Candles have always symbolized faith and warmth because they dispel darkness, whether it be of paganism or to prolong the day. Candles are burned at Christmas because Christ is called the Light of the World. The expression, "burning the candle at both ends," comes from candles used long ago during festivities. Rushes on the candles were soaked in oil and folded so that both ends burned at once."

Gathering at the Fireplace at Christmas

This seems to be the warmest place to congregate during Christmas; much eating, singing, and talking takes place. The fire has always symbolized security whether it was from wild beasts or just to keep warm. "This safety from the threatening of man and nature gave a feeling of very definite happiness that still has its echo in our Christmas fires."

The Yuletide and Flat-footed Women

Druid priests of ancient times used to celebrate festivals called Hou or Hiu, from which yule seems to have derived. Traditionally and superstitiously "a squinting person, one with bare feet, and above all a flat-footed woman," were not welcome when the yule log was being burned.

The Opera of the Steeples

Victor Hugo said, "The ringing of bells is the opera of the steeples." From times ago until now, bells have been rung in the mourning and in happiness. At Christmas, especially, we hear bells; and favorite songs have taken their place, such as "Jingle Bells" and "Silver Bells."

Christmas Presents and Queen Elizabeth

Queen Elizabeth requested gifts from her subjects long ago, and this was how she replenished her wardrobe. In Catholic countries gifts aren't given on Christmas, because it is such a solemn occasion. In the U. S. Santa gives gifts on Christmas Eve, "a variation of the observance of our early Dutch settlers."

The Christmas Tree

In ages past, nature was associated with the phenomenal, and trees were especially significant because the whisperings in the leaves were supposed to be the sayings of the gods within their boughs. So originally they were brought in just because of their significance. Now they are brought in for decorative purposes.

Xmas or Christmas?

Many people complain about the Christ being taken out of Christmas and X inserted in its place. Actually X is the "Greek equivalent of 'Ch,'" and therefore, is taken to represent the word "Christ."

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Hither, Thither, And Yon

By LOUIS SCHNEIDT

MY CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

My Christmas message as we gaily gleed around the tree, to appraise and weigh unopened stuff from the sleigh: shirts that fit, belts too long and sing past gladsongs to here we cheer, as our glassy eyes glear, with families so dear we mark another year, jaws and beans don't well set—prosperity you bet, miles traveled, friends meeting, merry Christmas everybody season's greetings!

Letter Sent To Editor

Editor:

This individual believes your editorial on November 5, 1965, entitled, "King Strikes at Justice," was extremely misleading in several respects. Further clarification for the average reader may be necessary in order to make the commentary valid.

First of all, the editor fails to observe Dr. Martin Luther King as the intellectual, which he obviously is, and also the academic qualifications of Dr. King as compared with the average "proper authority" or "justice" in Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi. How do these "proper authorities" stack up against King's undergraduate work at Howard University and his doctorate from Boston University? Who is more qualified to be the judge?

Secondly, the editor freely criticizes Dr. King and the leaders of CORE as well as the NAACP for "taking Negroes off their jobs to demonstrate or march." How does the editor feel about the "Grand Wizards" of the Ku Klux Klan who ask whites to leave their jobs in order to "strut in their sheets"?

Thirdly, the editor fails to arrive at a conclusion as to where the NEECP or CORE funds should be channeled for maximum efficiency. Where could the cash be distributed for a better purpose? Perhaps the editor would give it to the John Birch Society or the Citizens Councils of America?

Fourth, the editor fails to supply proper bibliography for the statement concerning the World War II German scientists who won the Nobel Prize. Indeed, in which area did these scientists win the Nobel Prize? (Dr. King received the Nobel Peace Prize for 1964.)

Perhaps the editor could be more objective in her public commentaries and seek to qualify statements which may not be self-explained.

Sincerely,
SANDY CARR

Writing About Winter

By RICHARD MOORE

Through this smooth new snow-made world flaps the jackdaw on big black blanket wings looking, appears on the field's black branch, shakes down snow, humps to a dot, and is gone there. Through this frail white silence black flows the stream trickling, into which clumps of snow, pushes, fall and in lucid darkness become ghosts.

Great Presents Opened Early

It was Christmas morning, and we anxiously ran to the World Christmas Tree, 80 feet high on the White House lawn. Hoping to find wonderful things, we looked for an end to the war in Viet Nam; we looked for a budget that was reasonable. We also hoped that the Great Society would be paid for in time to enjoy it over the holidays. We hoped that the cost of poverty in underdeveloped nations would be less. We hoped that a man would finally be put on the moon and returned so he could bring back all the cheese to feed the two-thirds of the world's hungry peoples.

But, alas! As we began to open the oddly shaped packages, we found the war in Viet Nam still raging, and a note from President Johnson saying that more than $2.4 billion would be spent this fiscal year, and probably more.

Secondly we found that the budget had risen and in fact surpassed Santa Claus high in the sky by reaching a figure of an estimated $99.7 billion. Another note from President Johnson said that he was sorry, but it (the budget) had already gone over that; and that out of the $12 billion more appropriated this year than last, that still didn't include medicare, but that Washington would try to think of something.

Thirdly, we found that the Great Society had turned into the Late Society; and that not even the new math could solve this one, what with wasteful spending and poor administration. Actually we were appalled at the resemblances the programs had to those of some of the ill-fated New Deal programs.

Next we found that aid to poorer countries had diminished but would only require a bigger broom next Christmas to get all the Communists out from under the rugs of the underdeveloped nations.

And finally there was the last package. We opened it expectantly and found it was a cruel joke. It was a bill for $20 billion dollars for the Apollo program and booster. As if this were not enough, there was a note from the President's science advisor, Donald F. Hornig, requesting $100 billion to try to send a man to Mars!

We just couldn't believe it. We couldn't take it all in. But . . . we awoke, glanced around us. Why, it's only December 10th! Thank goodness! We had only been dreaming. For a minute there we thought it was all true!

CRITIC REVIEWS "CAT"

The third season of the joint efforts of the Thaliens and the Wilmington College Theatre began rather warmly this year. Their first production, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," the provocative drama by the slip and slop playwright Tennessee Williams, played to substantial audiences November 19, 20, and 21 in Thalian Hall.

Most of the action in the play—and there was plenty of it dished out—took place on a most effective suggestively designed set, a bed-sitting room of a plantation home in the Mississippi Delta, on the estate of Big Daddy Pollitt, an uneducated, but wealthy man.

The cast did remarkably well in the performance of Williams' award winning play, depicting an inter-family conflict fraught with scenes of sudden and lashing dramatic power.

The occasion for the emotional side show was centered around the celebration of Big Daddy's sixty-fifth birthday. There was, however, a raft of enlivening complications: the revelation that Big Daddy was dying of cancer, his family's vulturous conniving for his estate, the issue of "mendacity," and the barrenness of Maggie, the frustrated wife of Big Daddy's favorite son, Brick—who broke his ankle jumping hurdles at three o'clock in the morning, was an alcoholic, and even more frustrated than Maggie—all served up with gusto!

Although all nineteen members of the cast deserve plaudits for their interpretations, the leads were especially good. Sally Bea, as Maggie the cat, measured up marvelously to the demands of her role. Jim Potter gave a most lively portrayal of a dying man and somewhat overshadowed Big Mama, played by Linda Somersette. George Deaton, although no Wally Warr, did a fine job with the characterization of Brick. Randy Del Lago as Cooper ("Brother Man") was an asset to the company as was Martha Loughlin, who portrayed Mae ("Sister Woman").

Sister Woman's "litter" children, Dixie, Buster, Sonny, and Trane, played by Ellen Olsen, Alan Hall, David Porter, and Deborah Rogers respectively, were an effective element in the overall emotional bedlam. Gary Weathersbee was a rather distinguished looking doctor and Frank Hall a most convincing reverend. Lest the field hands and servants be overlooked, they were an integral part of the cast and were played by Gayle Foyles, Roland Joye, Willie Loughlin, Brooks McEachern, Artie Markatos, Margaret Newman and Robert Wood.

The success of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" was the result of the combined efforts of both the acting and the back-stage personnel. As Doug W. Swink, director of the production predicted, the show promises to be a memorable one.

HAWKS NEST

The Trouble With Tom

BY MARTIN GRANT

This will probably be the first the administration has heard about the latest failure of Bumbling Tom Noe, because Coach Bill Brooks is too nice a guy to complain on his own behalf.

We observed Coach Brooks leveling the sight of the walkway to the tennis court with a shovel. Since it struck us as rather odd for the head of a department to be doing his own shovel work, we questioned him about it. The following facts came to light:

- 1) Brooks had asked "the man with the tractor" to do the job.
- 2) The job had not been done satisfactorily.
- 3) The surfacing for the walk was sort of a gift from a firm doing work on the tennis courts, and the men were coming to put it down, so Brooks couldn't wait for Tom & Co. to do it right.
- 4) Brooks was doing it himself. (Maybe he knows more about the capabilities of the maintenance department than the rest of us?)

Now we on the newspaper staff were told not to print opinion unless based on fact. Well, we think the fact that Coach Brooks had to go out with a shovel and do ANYTHING is proof enough that there is something seriously wrong in the maintenance department.

PGA And Player, Palmer Problems

The Professional Golf Association, it seems, is trying to commit suicide. At least that is what we gather from recent news of trouble their rules have been causing some of the top touring pros.

Let us consider the case of Jack Nicklaus. In order to become a Class A pro, he must compete in 25 tournaments in this, his final year as a probationary member.

But the Miami Open was canceled and Nicklaus does not have another weekend free. So willing was Jack to meet the requirements he even offered to put up $25,000 of his own money to sponsor a tournament for the vacant weekend.

Not enough money, said the PGA. Nicklaus found a club willing to chip in another $10,000. The PGA replied that the tournament would conflict with a nearby one THE NEXT WEEKEND.

It is too many for us when they say two tournaments on different weekends, conflict, especially when they had already scheduled the Miami Open for those dates.

Now Nicklaus will have no choice but to ask the PGA to let 24 tournaments do. Observers do not think the PGA will look favorably on this request.

In other decisions the PGA has threatened to suspend several golfers for playing in foreign tournaments which conflict with PGA events. Some of these pros had already obligated themselves for the foreign tournaments before the PGA passed the rule.

Among those threatened with suspension are Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

If the PGA carries out its threats, it will make itself the laughing stock of sportsdom. It could also bring on the financial doom of that organization. We cannot imagine anything more meaningless or less interesting to view than a golf tournament without Nicklaus, Player and Palmer.

Play ACC Saturday Night

SEAHAWKS HUMBLE
FREDERICK 101-77

FREDERICK COACH vs. REF-REE- The coach apparently was not enthusiastic about the call. Frederick lost the game to Wilmington 101-77.

Intramural Response Enthusiastic

Response to intramural basketball has been quite good according to the athletic department. Ten teams have turned in rosters.

The teams and managers are: Studcoats-Lawrence Lehning Sigma Phi Kappa-Bob Stephenson WVPS-DJS-C. W. Casey Shotguns-Phil Ward Beaumonts-Hillery Booth Circle K-Eston Brinkley

Jets-Jimmy Rich Pi Sigma Mu-Jim Farlow Aces-Ken Miller Independents-Jerry Randall Play is scheduled to start after Christmas, but the schedule is incomplete.

Girls interested in intramural basketball are urged to contact Mrs. Judith Lewis at the gym after Christmas.

WRESTLERS WORTH OF VIEW

Wilmington College teams are winning again—we are especially pleased with the wrestling team—winning all weights except one on the first time out is pretty good for even an experienced team.

Wilco is now in its second wrestling season—but several of the team members have experienced in prep school, high school, or at other colleges.

It should not be too long before Wilco is really making a name for itself in this sport... last year's won-lost record notwithstanding.

The wrestling team will play at least one match before a respectable audience—one of the matches will be a preliminary to the homecoming basketball game.

It seems wrestling should draw good crowds anyway—Wilco does not have what could be called a profusion of sports to watch, but such has not been the case.

The majority of spectators at most college sporting events may be students, but outsiders do contribute to the size of the crowd. Except for basketball, Wilmington fans have not given our teams what one could call overwhelming support.

Loss To Pembroke
Makes Team 4-3
For The Season

The Seahawks properly chastened the new gym December 3 by soundly thrashing Frederick College 101-77.

The score was particularly good in view of the fact that Jay Neary, ace scorer for the 'Hawks, was ejected from the game for a "flagrant foul" with 13:52 to go in the second half.

The college shot a healthy 50-8% from the floor, connecting on 31 of 61 attempts.

The cagers were also 78% from the free throw line—39 for 50.

In spite of his early exit from the court, Neary paced the scoring for the Seahawks with 26 points.

The game was dominated by Wilmington, who grabbed an early lead and held it throughout the contest. Wilmington led 49-38 at the half.

The only issue that remained in doubt was whether the Seahawks would make it two games in a row topping the century mark.

The final basket came with less than a minute to go.

A fair crowd of fans, both students and town people, turned out to see the home team baptize the new gym.

The Hawks stood four for six following the game.

It was the second loss in a row for Frederick. They lost to Hampton-Sidney December 1, by the equally lopsided margin of 111-79.

Neary was only one of four Seahawks to hit in the double figures. Budd had 23 points, Hamilton 15, and Hall 11.

Top scorer for the Frederick team, Hodges, also scored 26 points. Only one other player for the visitors hit in the double figures—Johnson had 11.

Wilmington College will play its second game in the new gym Saturday night.

The Hawks now stand 4-3 for the season, having lost their last game to Pembroke Saturday night.

Saturday's game will be the second real "home game" in Wilco cage history. On December 3, the team battered Frederick College out of over 100 points to the joy of the audience.

JAY NEARY- Seahawk scoring ace prepares for Wilmington's Saturday night encounter with Atlantic Christian. AC has a 2-1 record, having defeated Campbell and Elon and lost to Lenoir-Rhyne.

Let's Go Duck Hunting

By ARCHIE ALDERMAN

It was a Friday, late in January. The wind was blowing from the northeast about twenty miles an hour. The day was cloudy and cold. Buddy and I decided to go hunting and get away from it all.

Outside, the old snow goose was running and waiting for us to go. We put on all the clothes and sweaters we possibly could put on and left by the back door. As we reached the car, I heard Buddy say, "The temperature is dropping fast, and it will soon be just right for duck hunting!"

We were happy when we saw the old familiar logging road that we had traveled so many times before. We turned and parked the car in the woods where no one could see it from the road. Buddy and I didn't want any game wardens to spot us by air or ground. The car would have been a sure give away to the position where we loved to duck hunt so dear to our hearts.

We left the car and started down the winding path that led to the marsh we knew so well. Buddy started across the marsh first. I followed behind him as he pushed through the marsh. The tide was perfect. It had dropped about four feet and made it ideal for crossing creeks.

Finally, we reached the river. The wind had picked up, and we felt cold for the first time. We got down on our knees and crawled slowly, but carefully, to the reeds beside the river. Raising up together, we saw, to our delight, about two hundred black ducks and mallards swimming lazily along the bank. I tapped Buddy, the best dam hunting partner ever to be had. He moved out along the reeds and across a little creek that we crossed many times before. I felt my heart beat faster and faster as we closed the gap between the ducks and us. We finally made it to the blind that we had built a week before.

Looking through the grass, we saw that the ducks were just to the right of us about 80 yards away. They were coming down with the tide, and they were feeding as they came. Two minutes passed before we looked again. The ducks were now 65 yards away. We looked at each other, and I saw Buddy smile as he checked his gun. Shortly the ducks would be in range. The wind blew on our faces and made our eyes red and watery. But, we knew there was no other place that we would rather be.

Now, Buddy gave me the high sign telling me to get ready. I saw the first big, lead duck swim past me. Then the flock was all around us. We raised up together. Buddy nodded his head telling me to take the first shot. (He was that kind of guy.) I picked out two big mallards swimming close to shore. I waited until they got side by side, and then I gave them hell. They never knew what hit them. The air was full of flying ducks. I saw Buddy raise, shoot one mallard and then another. I managed to get off another shot and knocked another one down. He was just wounded and was about to swim away, only Buddy was too fast for him. When it was all over five mallards lay in front of us.

Buddy and I dashed excitedly down to the shore to reach the game. In a couple of minutes we had all five ducks and were comfortably in our blind once again. I told Buddy there were probably more ducks on their way. He agreed and said, "I wish Daddy could be here to enjoy the feeling of seeing a good kill."

Before he had finished his sentence two blacks came whistling in and landed in front of us. We raised up and fired together. Buddy killed his outright. I only wounded mine, but Buddy helped me out again. We got both the ducks and had hardly made it back to the blind when we heard flapping wings overhead. We held our breath to see if they would land. They did. They swam immediately beside the bank, where they would be sheltered from the wind, but not from us. Again Buddy moved out, and I moved right behind him. We went along the side of the river because the ducks were out of range.

It was easy for us to sneak up on the unexpected game. The wind was blowing so hard that you could not hear a sound as we moved slowly through the reeds. Now we were crawling through the grass, because we were getting very close. Buddy raised up to take a look and then bent back to whisper that all the ducks were now on the side of the bank. He counted eight black ducks.

Again he started out, and I followed close behind. We crawled up about 35 yards from our quarry. We were so close that we changed from number fours to seven and a half. Buddy picked out two that he could get with one shot, and I did the same. We fired together. When the smoke had cleared away two ducks were dead, and two were flapping around in the mud helplessly. Buddy yelled, and off we went to get our prize. Our hearts beat fast as we reached the ducks. They flapped helplessly in our hands as we raced for the cover of the marsh grass.

It was about six forty-five, and the sun had already sunk behind the cypress trees. We gathered our eleven ducks and started for the car. Our hunting jackets were very heavy from the weight of the game. The temperature must have been in the twenties. By now, ice was forming along the shore. We knew we had to hurry to get out of this swamp. Buddy once again set the pace ahead of me. In twenty minutes we were breathlessly at the car.

Faculty Grows

Miss Ryland, a native of Lexington, Ky. comes to Wilmington with a B.A. Degree from the University of Kentucky and a Master's Degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where she was a part-time instructor. Her father was a professor at the University of Kentucky.

As a child, Miss Ryland did quite a bit of traveling. She lived at West Point for two years and spent a year in both France and Switzerland. After receiving her B.A. Degree, she returned to France and resided in Paris for a year.

Water skiing and swimming are two of her hobbies and are two of the reasons she enjoys living at the beach. While in Kentucky, Miss Ryland was a member of the Synchronized Swimming group, which she explained was a league of swimmers who swam to the accompaniment to music — on the order of a musical, only in the water. Playing the piano, ice skating, and drama are also hobbies enjoyed by Miss Ryland.

Homecoming Festivities Starts February 3

The "Shirelles"

Pictured above, are the "Shirelles," top recording stars, who will perform at the Homecoming Dance, Saturday, February 5, in the pub.

Swink Announces Date For "Tartuffe" Production

A cast of 29 for the second production this season has been announced by Doug W. Swink, chairman of the drama and speech department. This presentation will be "Tartuffe" by Moliere on February 11, 12 and 13 at Thalian Hall and staged by the combined efforts of the Thalian-Wilmington College Theatre.

Tartuffe, which was first performed in 1664 at Versailles before King Louis XIV, has been a continued favorite of the theatre-going public throughout the world. It is now included in the permanent repertory of the Comedie Francaise.

This performance by the Thalian-Wilmington College Theatre will be divided in two parts. One a Prologue taken from Moliere's "L'Impromptu de Versailles" and the other the play "Tartuffe" itself as translated and adapted by Miles Malleson.

The cast for the prologue will consist of George Deaton, Randy del Lago, Sam Garner, Rosemary Green, Frank Hall, Alan Hill, Bill Hodges, John Kallman, Dolan Little, Artie Markatos, Brooks McEachern, David Porter, Jim Potter, Jerome Reed, Jean Rogers, Carol Shoobred, Michael Smith, Bill Wahlgren, Robert Wood, and Terry Wortly.

The play "Tartuffe" deals with a pious hypocrite with the same name as the title. This part will be played by Randy del Lago. This character secures a foothold in the household of Mme. and M. Orgon, played by Tina Forrester and Jim Potter, respectively. Though Orgon's daughter, Mariane (Barbara Deaton) is betrothed to Valere (Art Bannon), he promises her hand to Tartuffe and even disinherits his son, Damis (Bill Weir). The maid, Dorine (Carole Benton), sees through the sham of Tartuffe and his manservant, played by David Stone, and sets about righting all the wrongs. Dorine, with the aid of Flapote (Diana Smith), Orgon's mother (Eleanore Howland) and Mme. Orgon's brother (David James), finally exposes Tartuffe as the fraud he is to an officer of the king (George Deaton) and a bailiff (Frank Hall).

Serving as technical director will be Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at the College. Toni Reynolds will be stage manager, assisted by Lynn Harris.

The first three acts of "Tartuffe" were presented in 1664 before King Louis XIV as one of "The Pleasures of the Enchanted Island." Because the play was violently attacked by the Jansenists and other religious groups who claimed that it was sacrilegious, it was not allowed to be publicly performed until 1669. When the play was prohibited, Moliere did not hesitate to make changes which might give less offense to those who objected to it in good faith.

In the original play Tartuffe was probably an ecclesiastic, which was interpreted as a direct attack on the Church, rather than religious hypocrisy which Moliere had intended. Louis XIV was apparently pleased with "Tartuffe" which is not surprising considering the role he plays in the denouement. In fact Scribe said that Moliere would probably never have been allowed to produce it if he had not made the King an actor in it. Whatever his reasons, the King finally permitted the public performance of "Tartuffe" in February of 1669, and it was performed many times after that, to the delight of Paris audiences.

Various Activities Planned For The "Big Weekend"

Wilmington College Homecoming will begin Thursday, February 3, and continue through Saturday, February 5. The crowning of the Homecoming Queen will highlight the activities, backed up with games, dances, and entertainment.

Thursday's activities will include the election of the Homecoming Queen, a bonfire, and pep rally at 7 p.m. An informal dance will be held immediately following from 8 o'clock until 11 o'clock p.m. Music will be furnished by the "Embers," a well known group. The dance will be limited to Wilmington College students who will be admitted free. Each student must have his student activity card. Stags will be admitted.

During the dance the Homecoming Court will be presented. Master of ceremonies for the Homecoming events will be Sam Smith.

On Friday, February 4, there will be a semi-formal dance in the Pub from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The music will be furnished by the "Fabulous Five." During the dance the Homecoming Court will be presented and the Queen will be crowned. Admission will be free for all Wilmington College students and their dates. Each student must have his student activity card for this event also. There will be a limited number of outside guests. Only 25 guest tickets will be available for Friday and Saturday nights. Each guest couple will be charged $2 and they must be guests of a Wilmington College student. There will be a pre-sale for guest tickets on Monday.

Saturday, February 5, will be the highlight of the Homecoming

Festivities. The Seahawks and Campbell will play their third basketball game of the season at 8 p.m. in the Wilmington College gym. At half time, the Queen and her court will be presented. Following the game from 10 p.m. until 2 a.m., there will be a dance-concert in the Pub featuring the "Shirelles," whose hit recordings have placed them with the top singing artists of the country. They will be backed by the "Playboys," who have backed many other recording stars such as Major Lance. Dress for this dance will be suits and ties for the men.

Wilmington College students and their dates will be charged $1 admission and must show his activity card for entrance. Again only 25 guest tickets are available for this dance, and the price is $2.

Formal Rush Recently Held By Sigma Phi Kappa

Sigma Phi Kappa fraternity held the Formal Rush for the Winter Quarter on January 11 and 13 at 8 p.m.

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa welcomed a group of men to the fraternity house. The men were addressed by President Dick Debnam, Bill Huggins, Dennis Frisbee, Bill Reid, Bobby Greer, Bobby King, and Greer Craig.

The hostesses for the Formal Rush were Patsy Futchs and Janis Burris. Miss Futchs is the Sigma Phi Kappa Dream Girl and Miss Burris is the Queen of the Winter Festival. She was sponsored by the fraternity.

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa are continually improving the fraternity house both inside and outside. New furniture has been bought for the house along with new draperies. On the outside, painting the house and working on the yard is continuing.

A party was held at the fraternity house on Saturday night, January 15, for brothers and their dates. Entertainment was by Greer Craig, Jack Harrell, and their band. All the Brothers and Pledges are looking forward to the Annual Homecoming Weekend at the house along with all the homecoming activities at the college.

Sigma Phi Kappa began the intramural season in basketball last Monday night. The fraternity has several good athletes who, along with the whole fraternity, would like to add the basketball championship to the softball championship that it won last spring in grand style.

The Sigma Phi Kappa fraternity house is located at 2529 Market Street. The Brothers invite anyone interested to come see what is behind the RED DOOR.

Homecoming Coming — You Should Too!

Some really fine entertainment is scheduled for the annual Homecoming, February 4, 5, and 6 (see page one). Needless to say, every student at Wilmington College should make an effort to support the efforts of tireless students who have worked, and are still working, to make this Homecoming the best of all.

This urging for support has been given so many times on different occasions—how else can we say it? Or can we say it differently? The obvious answer is, of course not. Therefore suffice it to say, we have said it—try to make it, to the bonfire, dances, Homecoming game, and all the other activities scheduled.

Dedicated Professor Worthy of Comment

It is not often that one finds such a truly dedicated professor on the college level, but we have one right here in our own College. How is he dedicated? First he is dedicated to his profession. He loves it; he teaches it as a love of life, instead of merely a credite toward graduation. Secondly, he is dedicated to the student. He doesn't announce as some professors do, "I don't care whether you learn it or not. It's your money; if you want to waste it, go ahead" . . . no, not this one. He has the masters of the ages right at the end of his elbow, to make us learn whether we want to or not.

One day he said, "I'd rather be a fanatic about what I teach, than to not care at all." And he is, and this is good. A student can learn better sometimes from a teacher who is slightly fanatical, than one who is apathetic (yes we have them).

One day he said, "I want to be friends with you and get to know you." Some students took him up on it . . . he later regretted that more of them did it.

The last day of class, he said, "God bless you." No snide remarks about religion or political preference, just plain old "God bless you." It was just like honey in the classroom.

BRIEF EDITORIALS

MAY COURT UNSURPRISING

Nobody was surprised when the results of the May Court were announced because most of them were incumbents. What was surprising were the comments that the same ones seem to get everywhere. Well, who puts them into that position? Their votes? If you don't see the same people getting the same titles all the time, follow our example and nominate someone else, like we did last year. Our nominees were elected too.)

Registration: Writing and Waiting

That registration line gets longer and more distressing every quarter. Question: Instead of issuing everybody a permit to register, why not issue a list of those ineligible to register; then if our name is not on that list, everybody is AOK? Why not let us take those registration forms home with us and fill them out at our leisure, just so they are back at the college at the proper time? Is all that information necessary, or could someone devise a permanent form for the various different offices? Granted, things do change, but unless the change is one of, say, dropping out of school, we fail to see where it would be important enough to necessitate filling out those forms every single quarter.)

M.P.H. Or D.O.A.

Either speed limits of 10-15 MPH need to be placed on campus, or there is really going to be a bad accident one day, especially over around the new parking lots.

LETTERS TO EDITOR ALL ABOUT PARKING

I understand that rules must be made. I also understand that if they are made they should be enforced. So, why aren't they?

Parking space is allotted for the ground superintendent behind Hoggard Hall. But, I ask, is the space also to be allotted for his family? Why should his son, a student, be given privileges that no other student has?

All the ground superintendent seems to do is to leisurely walk around the parking lots, and whistle while picking cars out at random to leave tickets on. Is this all that he has to do? Why not fire him, and hire students who need the money and will put out much more effort and work.

A student who is disgusted over the infraction of rules.

State of Union Varies As Glance Over Years Indicate Happenings

Over the past 25 years the state of the Union has varied greatly as the time for the president to make such an annual address to the public clearly shows.

Taken by years at a glance, new years opened like this:

1941: College enrollment declines sharply. Lend-Lease Bill becomes law. President Roosevelt's third inauguration.

1942: "Remember Pearl Harbor" is cry of nation in a year of defeats unparalleled since the Revolution, Manila falls to Japanese. President Roosevelt's State of Union message calls for production of 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns. Japan suffers first great sea losses. Thailand declares war on U. S.

1943: Streptomycin discovered by Dr. Selman Waksman. One World, by Wendell Wilkie sells 2,000,000 copies in two years. First all-American bombing assault on Germany.

1944: The war has reached highest pitch. "This nation has become an active partner in the world's greatest war." (Roosevelt)

The question is always arising as to where our legal parking areas are located. Some students become highly indignant when ticketed for a parking violation while others endeavor to park in the proper areas. It is realized that parking is a massive problem on our campus, but at the same time there is sufficient parking for everyone if they will just park properly.

We have a parking area on the south side of Riegel Road which will accommodate approximately 500 cars. We permit parking alongside of the road where grass is not sewn. There are approximately 150 paved parking places available to students. Still there is that two percent who insist on parking in places that they know are improper; thereby showing gross disregard for campus regulations. Our regulations are simple. Don't park in spaces designated as faculty by yellow lines. Don't park in driveways or too close to corners. Don't park or drive on lawn. Don't park immediately behind any buildings. Never park in construction areas since you are subjecting your car to possible damage. Could any regulations be simpler?

How about trying to do a little better. We try—Can't you! Incidentally—Is your College tag displayed on your car where it can be seen?

Resolutions

By now probably every New Year's Resolution we made has been added to our list of New Year's Resolutions to be broken. Probably the truth is that many of us don't bother to make resolutions like we did when we were younger. Actually, then, the real list should be headed up "New Year's Resolutions That Are Nice, But I Realize I Couldn't Keep Them Anyway."

Back when this writer was in the fifth and sixth grades, one of the teacher's pet projects was to tell all the children that we should begin thinking about our new year's resolutions. After we had thought diligently, we should then compile a list, and we would bring it to school and read it before the class. The list, although we thought then that it was really a resolutions list, actually became kind of a little "be nice" list that sounded good in front of everybody and teacher.

Thinking back to some of the profound things one used to resolve not to do, and read in class, these few were remembered.

"I will not make fun of anybody."

"I will not fight with my brothers and sisters."

"I will brush my teeth three times a day."

"I will not tell a lie."

"I will not cut through Mrs. Stanley's flower bed anymore."

Usually the resolutions centered around things not to do, rather than good things into which one would evolve either through deed or refraining from evil-doing.

The only evidence we can find today of any serious resolution making are say, those like the State of the Union message in which the President always tries to resolve for the better or affirms present resolutions already in effect. Or another might be those of the organization kind. For instance the different religions adopt resolutions for the coming year, and ministers then resolve to make these themes predominant in their sermons. Businesses set resolutions by determining goals in dollars and cents to be gained during the new year.

Whether or not we make resolutions, it is interesting to read some of the things said about reforming, which is actually what a resolution becomes.

"Reforms should begin at home and stay there."

"At 20 a man is full of fight and hope. He wants to reform the world. When he's 70 he still wants to reform the world, but he knows he can't."

"Reform must come from within, not from without. You cannot legislate for virtue."

Clay, Hell's Angels, and the KKK

It is interesting to note that the Army will try once again in administering the tests to find out if Cassius Clay is fit for duty in the Armed Forces. He doesn't want to go because his religion doesn't approve of war.

A little note about the Hell's Angels, those darlings out in the West. THEY want to go fight and think they could really clear up things in Viet Nam.

A third note—a member of the clan stated that one group of the KKK could go over and clear up Viet Nam in just a few weeks.

And now the notes all together, and we get something short of a tune, with Cassius Clay swinging through the jungle, hollering "I am the greatest!" followed by Hell's Angels on motorcycles, all hot and steaming 'cause they won't take off their leather jackets even for Uncle Sam; and a group of Klansmen stumbling along behind because their robes keep getting caught in the underbrush."

End of tune. Except for one statement. If the army keeps lowering its standards, pretty soon they'll have some over there who won't even be able to tell the Viet names from the Viet Cong.

HAWKS NEST

Problems, Problems

MARTIN GRANT

The Seahawk cagers are a disappointment to many fans this year, but they have had their share of bad luck in the form of injuries and tough opponents.

Nearly still leads the cagers comfortably in the scoring department with an average of better than 22 points per outing.

Butch Budd is second with over 12 and Jim Braxton third with 10. Braxton also leads the team in rebounding.

Marshall Hamilton and Jim Hall both have averages of around 8 points.

Second teamers likely to see action in the Wednesday night Phillips 66 game are Wray Ware, Bill Harris, Wayne King, Wayne Johnson, Terry Bron, and Jim Kaylor.

Lo, The Fences

It isn't exactly news from the sporting scene, but since we blasted Tom Noe of the Maintenance Department in the last issue, we feel we must give credit where credit is due.

When we returned from Christmas break, we found the fences guarding the lawns had been lowered from four feet to about one foot.

The lower fences improve the looks of the campus, and they are a lot easier to get over, especially for the members of the fairer sex wearing tight skirts.

Perhaps Mr. Noe's job around the liberal arts building will be easier in the future if the administration follows the example of a recently constructed New England college who did not build the sidewalks UNTIL THEY FOUND OUT WHERE THE STUDENTS WALKED.

Roger VanDeburg Receives Commendation Medal

Last month Roger VanDeburg received a commendation medal from the U. S. Army.

Awards are old stuff to Roger. Among other awards, he holds the Purple Heart, because he was wounded in action in Vietnam.

He also is entitled to wear the paratrooper wings of the Vietnamese Army, because he was a member of a Special Forces outfit which the Vietnamese considered especially worthy of recognition.

Roger was in Vietnam when the only U. S. soldiers there were volunteers, serving as advisors. The wings are among what Roger calls his "routine awards."

In a way, the god conduct ribbon, airborne wings and others are routine. Routine for someone who has spent seven years in the service of his country before he started college.

Roger was a Marine for four years. He was a helicopter mechanic and infantryman. "All Marines are infantrymen", Roger says.

After his hitch in the Marines, he joined the Army for three years.

He was with the famed 101st Airborne for a while, and then he began his 1½-year training in Special Forces.

He was cross-trained in medic, radio, and demolition work. All Special Forces soldiers are cross-trained so if they lose a member of the team, they have someone who can instruct in everything.

Roger spent the last six months of 1963 as an advisor to the Vietnamese. Several of his friends were captured by the Viet Cong and at least one of them was murdered.

Roger is through with military life now. He is a sophomore at Wilco and finds time to work part-time at the Brigade Boys Club. He plans a career in youth work or an allied field.

He also managed to letter in soccer and wrestling, while carrying a full class load.

Recently Roger married the former Regina Merritt of Folsom, Pa. She attended Moore College of Art and Keystone Business College in Philadelphia.

Roger has packed a lot of activities into his short lifetime.

Radio Station Hopes To Begin Broadcasting

The Wilmington College Radio Station, WVPS, has been closed down due to infractions of the rules pertaining to the operations of the station, as set forth by the College.

Dean Thomas Brown has stated that a meeting would be held sometime between January 17-22 to discuss the possibilities for re-opening the doors of the station.

At the time this paper went to press the meeting had not been held. Staff members of WVPS have expressed their hopes that the station will be opened soon.

Nursing Program Enrolls Fourteen

Fourteen students are enrolled in the James Walker Memorial Associate Degree Program in nursing now in its first year here at the College. Miss Luetta N. Booe is acting director of the program.

Other instructors in the program are Miss Mary Alice Whitfield, R.N., assistant professor of nursing; and Miss Dorothy Dixon, R.N., assistant professor at Wilmington College and director of the terminating nursing Education Diploma Program at James Walker Memorial Hospital.

All graduates of the two year program of nursing "are prepared to give patient-side nursing care in an institution where they will have supervision," said Miss Booe. The graduates are also eligible to take the State Board Examination for their licenses as a Registered Nurse.

Have Regular Privileges

The fact that in nursing students are also college students with all the privileges of the regular college student is one of the advantages of a nursing program offered at a college. "Nursing students are encouraged to participate in college activities," stated Miss Booe.

Also, the nursing students are taking classes with students from the college and are not kept in separate classes. "Nursing education belongs in an institution whose primary purpose is education," declared Miss Booe.

The Nursing program is college controlled. "We do use hospital facilities for laboratory learning and experiences, but not to provide service to the institution," she stated.

Flexible Program

The program is covered in two academic years and one summer session. This program offers more flexibility. If a student is married

Oilers Here Wed.

The Seahawks will play one of the top amateur basketball teams in the country here Wednesday—the Phillips 66 "Oilers."

The Oilers now post an impressive 17-1 record, compiled against some of the best collegiate teams in the country. All the members of the Oilers squad are employees of the Phillips Petroleum Company, but they are recruited under a very liberal plan, which maintains the amateur status of the team.

Many American Olympic Basketball Team members are recruited from the ranks of the Oilers.

Following are some statistics on the team that figures to be the Seahawks toughest 1966 opponent:

Six Oilers have averages in the double figures, led by Bobbie Rascoe, with a 13.7 average and Kendall Rhine with 12.5.

Other Oilers averaging better than 10 points are Darel Carrier, Ray Carey, Tony Cerkenik, and Tom Black.

The Oiler team average is 99.6 points per game compared with 67.1 for their opponents.

Wrestlers To Meet Pembroke Tonight

Three Hawk grapplers are undefeated this season—State Champ Eddie Ratford, Kent Cobb, and Jim Joyce.

Ratford, from Goldsboro, and Charlestonian Joyce, team captain, both post 3-0 records, while Cobb is 1-0-1.

Other team members and their records are: Mark Fear, 0-1; Jim Morrissey, 2-1; Roy Jones, 2-1;

Dickie Hudson, 1-2; Stewart Smith, 1-2; Wayne Barker, 1-2; Tom Simmons, 1-1; Jim Rich, 0-1.

Rich has been dropped from the wrestling team because of a bad knee which may require an operation.

Pembroke grapplers will visit Wilmington tonight for an 8 p.m. contest with the Seahawks.

Girls Cage Action

Girls basketball is not organized into intramural teams this year, but they meet each Tuesday night and pick teams and play.

Any girls who are interested are urged to come to the gym Tuesday night at 6:30 p.m.

or needs to work, she may go to school part time and complete the course in three years instead of two.

In the nursing program here there are fewer courses in number and are broader in scope than in the hospital program. "What may have been a course in a hospital program is a unit here," commented Miss Booe.

Nursing students are required to take courses in the biological and physical sciences, social sciences, humanities, and nursing subjects.

The first nursing course will begin during the winter quarter. All lectures for the nursing course will take place at the college. Actual patient-care work will be at James Walker Memorial Hospital and other local health facilities.

Laboratories in the nursing subjects will be at the college and hospital as the students work with patients. Teachers will always be with the nursing students during their laboratories at the hospital.

Will Have Uniforms

Uniforms will be worn only during laboratory sessions. Miss Booe described the uniforms as "a light blue wash and wear, with a white panel in the front, a white collar, and having an A-line skirt."

During the summer session the students will travel out of town for a course in psychiatric nursing. According to Miss Booe, no location for this course has been decided yet.

Students in the nursing program are Mary Blaud, Berta Broussard, Cynthia Biele, Constance Fergus, Nancy Hume, Judy Linderman, and Joyce Pelland.

Also Lou Anna Pelland, Connie Rodrick, Pauline Roseberry, Carol Sanders, Bonnie Savage, Cheryl Smith and Carolyn Sutton.

Hodges Discusses Karate

By BILL HODGES

A new word has been circulating around the Wilmington College campus . . . KARATE. Karate is one of the ancient oriental arts of self-defense. The word itself comes from two Chinese characters: KA-RA, meaning empty, and TE, meaning hand. Hence, the art of empty-hand fighting. To be more precise, karate is the art of striking the body's nerve-centers and vulnerable areas with the hands, arms, knees and feet, with the purpose of inflicting serious physical damage.

Today, in America there are two types of karate taught in the over 200 established schools: the applied and classical forms. The applied form of karate is the most common here in America. This type of instruction deals primarily with self-defense against attack with a knife, gun, club, dangerous object, or in event of group bodily attack.

The classical form of karate is something else entirely. This is the real karate. The classical schools teach not only the forms of self-defense mentioned previously, but also give instruction in the ancient oriental combat dances known as KATAS. The kata is a dance which consists of a series of movements in which the karateman fights imaginary opponents. Its purpose is to keep a record of movements in the student's mind, and to also teach him coordination, balance, agility, change of body direction, group fighting, and self discipline.

These ancient dances are sometimes quite beautiful when seen performed correctly. The kata requires the same discipline and agility which a ballet dancer must have in order to be executed properly. Often the movements are remarkably similar to ballet.

In most of the larger schools of karate, the katas are required for advancement in rank. There are approximately 50 katas found in the world's major schools today. In this writer's school there are 12 katas. I know three at the present time. Perhaps after three or four years I will learn the other eight katas. They are not easy to learn nor execute. If you ever get a chance to see a kata performed by an adept karateman, you probably will be somewhat thrilled by the speed and beauty of the dance, but remember this . . . a kata is a dance of death.

Only a small minority of Americans have a substantial knowledge of karate. The remaining majority of people have wide and varied opinions of this violent yet restrained art. Often, people picture the karateman as an off-beat individual that does nothing but break bricks and boards with his bare hands. The rest of the people regard the karateman with awe, suspicion, puzzlement, or just don't care either way. Actually, a karateman is not what the average person thinks him to be.

Karate is an art which requires a tremendous amount of self-discipline and effort. Like all difficult arts and sports which require physical effort, karate builds character. I have seen hot-heads, shy and withdrawn people, and general unfits take up karate and become better citizens.

One reason for karate's character building ability is the amount of self-restraint required during practice. You either learn to restrain yourself, or you injure yourself or your sparring partner, and even worse, you are disbanded from your organization because of your lack of control. I know for a fact, the first time I came into close contact with my instructor and didn't hold back a kick, I was very sorry in the end. I learned very fast that you do not hit your sparring partner.

Another reason for karate's character building ability is the physical training involved within the art. Karate is physical-education par excellant. The required physical exercises are strenuous and taxing on the body. Karate men not only do regular exercise, but they develop techniques of breath control, dynamic tension and controlled movement under physical tension. They develop the bodies so well in fact, that they can absorb blows and shocks which would seriously injure the average man.

Karate in America is growing very rapidly. So rapidly in fact, that there are just not enough good instructors to go around. As mentioned earlier, there are at present, over 200 genuine karate dojos (training gyms) in America. Most of these schools are located in the larger cities. We in Wilmington are fortunate to have an association here in town.

The colleges and universities of America are also getting on the band wagon. At many of the large colleges, karate is an accepted part of the schools physical-education program, which brings me to another point of interest.

Karate at Wilmington? Why not? Most of the colleges in the state already have established organizations, or they are in the process of forming clubs which treat the study of oriental fighting arts. For example, the University of North Carolina already has both male and female karate clubs. East Carolina college also has instruction available in both arts. It would be nice if we here at Wilmington College could keep up with the larger schools in this particular area of sports.

This writer has been authorized to begin the organizing of a karate club here at the college. Already

I am instructing about six students in the art of Isshinryu karate. After the publication of this article, I believe that I will have a considerably larger number of students.

The advantages of a college having a karate club outweigh the advantages of not having one. For example, a karate club can be very beneficial in promoting most college sport events. People will attend more ball games if they know that they will see a demonstration of an exotic oriental fighting art during the half time.

There is little cost involved in a karate club's operation. Generally, the school already has all necessary equipment.

The most notable and beneficial product of karate is its building of character in the students who practice the art. I have seen some good men within the art as I know it, and I contribute a large amount of their character to the practice of karate. We in the Wilmington Karate Association try to instill the following in a student's character: self-restraint, sincerity, effort, and cleanliness in mind and body.

All readers of this article who have an interest in instruction in karate, please contact me here at the school. I will be giving instruction at least three days a week, from 1:50 until 3:50, at the gym. I would be pleased to discuss karate with the faculty and any of the school's students, at any time applicable.

What does it take to "spark" a man to his very best . . . to bring out the fullest expression of his ability and training? At Ford Motor Company we are convinced that an invigorating business and professional climate is one essential. A prime ingredient of this climate is the stimulation that comes from working with the top people in a field . . . such as Dr. James Mercereau.

Jim Mercereau joined our Scientific Laboratory in 1962. Recently, he headed a team of physicists who verified aspects of the Quantum Theory by creating a giant, observable quantum effect in superconductors. This outstanding achievement was the major reason the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce selected Dr. Mercereau as one of "America's Ten Outstanding Young Men of 1964." Your area of interest may be far different from Dr. Mercereau's; however, you will come in contact with outstanding men in all fields at Ford Motor Company.

We believe the coupling of top experience and talent with youth and enthusiasm is stimulating to all concerned. College graduates who join Ford Motor Company find themselves very much a part of this kind of team. If you are interested in a career that provides the stimulation of working with the best, see our representative when he visits your campus. We think you'll be impressed by the things he can tell you about working at Ford Motor Company.

Music Department Holds December Recital

Wilmington College applied music students presented their quarterly recital Tuesday, December 7, 8 p.m. in the Great Hall of St. James Episcopal Church.

The recital was open to the public without charge. Vocal students offered a variety of selections from arias to art songs and the piano students played selections with range from pre-Bach to Romantic.

Frank Honey and Charles Woodward, piano instructors presented the following students and their selections:

New Teacher Interviews

Mrs. David Wells, a Shreveport, La., native, is just beginning her second quarter as one of Wilmington College's chemistry laboratory instructors. A 1965 graduate of Agnes Scott College, Mrs. Wells spent last summer teaching organic laboratory and quantitative analysis at Centenary College.

Mrs. Wells and her husband of only a few weeks, who is an instructor in the College English Department, reside at the beach. There, Mrs. Wells enjoys swimming and other water sports. Horse back riding and listening to classical music are also listed among her hobbies.

A vacation in Europe highlights the Wells' summer plans. After the trip, Mrs. Wells will study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for the remainder of the summer.

A former Wilmington College student, David Miller, has recently joined the College coaching staff. A native of Woodruff, S. C., Coach Miller attended Wilmington College while it was still a junior college. Upon completion of two years' study here, he transferred to Wake Forest.

His graduate work was done at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Coach Miller is happy to be here, and is well pleased with the changes that have taken place during his absence. He says he has no complaints concerning the college, but only wishes the students would make a more active part in the extra-curricular activities.

Brown Attends Meeting At Pfeiffer College

Thomas P. Brown, acting dean of Admissions and dean of men at Wilmington College, attended a meeting at Pfeiffer College on Wednesday, December 8. The details of the student assistance provisions of recent Federal legislation and a proposed coordinated state-wide approach to "Work-Study" (off campus), was discussed.

Dr. James W. Moore, Director of the Work-Study Program in the U. S. Office of Education, was the featured resource person at the meeting, which was jointly sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Student Aid Officers, the Division of Community Services of the State Board of Public Welfare, and the State Board of Higher Education.

"The meeting was held to clear up the complexities of several of these new student assistance programs," Dean Brown said, "particularly with reference to the Work-Study Program."

Evaluation of Professors At N. C. State

The following article is being reprinted from the January 7, 1966, issue of the Technician. The evaluation of teachers, as is being done at North Carolina State, should be tried here at Wilmington College. It would help to wake-up many of the instructors causing them to take a better look at their methods of teaching.

By HAL HARDINGE, IV
N. C. State students still are in the process of evaluating their professors in a unique program which began here Monday.

Numerous students have indicated they are confused as to what the evaluation program and its purposes are.

Committee members who have worked on the program have reiterated the history and purpose of the program.

The Faculty Ad Hoc Committee on Support of Teaching was appointed by the administration last January. This committee, headed by H. C. Kelly, Dean of the Faculty, was formed to study and recommend ways and means of recognizing those members of the faculty considered outstanding teachers by their faculty peers and students.

The emphasis placed on research in the universities has taken professors away from teaching, according to committee members.

The experimental evaluation program itself is composed of four sections.

First, a Faculty Selection Panel, composed of members recommended by the faculties of the various schools, will be selected to evaluate information from the poll.

Second, faculty members can make recommendations to the panel.

Third, student evaluation: students will, at the end of every semester, evaluate their teachers.

Fourth, only full-time faculty members will be considered by the panel. Part-time professors and graduate teaching assistants will be rated, however.

The panel will be divided into two sections so teachers will not judge themselves. It will consider individual faculty nominations along with the top 25 per cent of the student-rated teachers in order to reward 15 to 25 outstanding teachers.

Later, when "further experience with the selection process has been gained," an elite fellowship, starting with four to eight of the best teachers, will be formed.

Except for the top 25 per cent of the student evaluation (which will be made public), the individual evaluations will be seen by no one but the person evaluated.

Committee members believe this will keep teachers from running a "popularity contest."

Data on the worst teachers on campus will not be used.

It is hoped that the individual evaluations will be used by the professors to improve their own teaching, the committee indicated.

President Randall Attends Conference

Dr. William M. Randall, president of Wilmington College and Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty, attended the Conference on New Federal Education programs on December 8 through December 11 in Washington, D. C.

"The Conference, sponsored by the American Council on Education, was held to clarify the details of the Higher Education Act of 1965," Dr. Randall said.

The major possibilities for federal aid to education was discussed. They included such areas as libraries and books, scientific equipment, scholarships, student loans, and funds for new buildings.

Food Service Under New Management

The Wilmington College food service facility is now under the ownership and management of Frank P. Byrne.

Mr. Byrne began his work in the restaurant business in 1925. Since that time he worked in Florida before coming to Wilmington in 1940. Mr. Byrne was the owner and operator of the H & W Cafeteria for 18 years and presently owns and operates the Sirlin Diner.

A past president of the North Carolina Association of Quality Restaurants, Mr. Byrne received the Rocamora Award in 1953 by being elected the Restaurateur of the year by the members of the North Carolina Restaurant Association.

In March of 1964 he was presented the Salut Au Restaurateur Award and the Host Award by the University of Florida at Tallahassee, together with those of 16 other southeastern states which participated in a similar program.

Mr. Byrne stated that he hoped "to upgrade the food services facility here and improve the quality of the food and improve and speed up the service wherever possible." He also will try to improve on the vending machine service by keeping them better stocked and in better repair.

"It is a genuine delight to be here at Wilmington College," he commented.

An Opportunity For Summer Employment

Governor Dan K. Moore urges college students interested in state government to apply for the 1966 Summer Internship Program.

In announcing the 1966 summer program, Moore stated that 25 North Carolina college students will be selected to participate in the 11-week program. Students will attend an orientation program and then work for ten weeks in selected state departments while attending evening classes on the North Carolina State campus.

To be eligible, students (1) must have satisfactorily completed three years of college, (2) must be residents of North Carolina, and (3) must be currently enrolled in a college or university either within or outside the state.

The State Internship Program will begin June 7 and continue through August 19, 1966. Students will be paid $75.00 a week while employed.

Governor Moore stated that he had asked the Institute of Government to be responsible for administering the internship program. The Institute has been participating in the program since it was established in 1962. Students will be selected for the program by a committee including prominent professors of political science teaching in North Carolina colleges and universities.

Students interested in applying for the Internship Program may secure applications from college placement offices, departments of business, government, history, or political science in North Carolina colleges and universities, local offices of the N. C. Employment Security Commission, and the N. C. State Personnel Department.

Applications must be mailed to the Institute of Government, Chapel Hill before February 15, 1966.

SNCEA Travels

Seven Wilmington College members of the Student North Carolina Education Association traveled to Raleigh Saturday, December 4, to attend the SNCEA annual convention at the State NCEA headquarters.

The theme of the meeting for the future teachers was, "Today we learn, tomorrow we teach." Dr. Lois Edinger, of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and past president of the National Education Association, gave the keynote speech entitled, "Education Sufficient for our Times."

"The purpose of the convention was to give college students an insight into the teaching profession," Mrs. Stike said. She is the advisor for the Wilmington College group and attended the convention with them.

Discussion group leaders at the convention were Dr. Woodrow Sugg, director of the Comprehensive School, Greenville; and Dr. B. Proffitt, Superintendent of the Burlington Schools.

Students attending the convention were: Parker Bryant, Nancy Graham, Linda Swinney, Jewel Royal, Barbara Gravette, Art Joye, and Sandy Carr.

The Book Stack

The committee responsible for selecting current recreational books continues to do an excellent job. The following books are some latest results of their efforts.

THOSE WHO LOVE is a biographical novel by Irving Stone. It is the story of Abigail and John Adams. Their love story has been set against a background of history's most glorious crises, the years of America's struggle for independence, and against the background of the massacres of Boston, the brilliance of King Louis XVI's Versailles, the Court of St. James in London, the seats of government in New York and Philadelphia, and finally the newly-born city of Washington. Not only does the book tell the love story of a man and woman for each other but also the love of men and women for freedom. The story proves the truth of Abigail's words: "Life is for those who love."

THE SITUATION IN FLUSHING by Edmond G. Love is another biographical love story. In a warm and funny style the author tells the story of his home town and of the romance of a young boy with the railroad which passes through the town. He tells the story of the sudden and complete change in rural America and underlines the reasons why it happened.

THE WATERS UNDER THE EARTH by John Moore is another book about change—the changing face of England during the years since the Second World War. The Seldon Family entered English history with a contemporary of Elizabeth I. Susan, the present Seldon, represents what is best in English breeding and tradition. This Susan with her background in English breeding and tradition seeks for experience and understanding in a setting of constant change, and through the critical years gains both.

SARKHAN is another book about Southeast Asia by the authors of THE UGLY AMERICAN, William J. Lederer and Eugene Burdick. It is a penetrating investigation of today's confusion and tomorrow's tragedy. It is a novel of Communist threats and Washington politics. It is a powerful novel with an urgent message.

LOST EMPIRES by J. B. Priestley is a novel about life in the Empire Theatres of the English Variety Stage in the years before World War I. The amazing cast of characters includes members of a boozey, amorous, nomadic troupe of "artists"—dancers, comedians, jugglers, magicians. It is a delightful tale of a world that would soon die under the competition of motion pictures to become "lost empires" to patrons of the variety stage.

Other new recreational books to be found in the library are: WANDERING THROUGH WINTER by Edwin Way Teale, THE MANDELBAUM GATE by Muriel Spark, and YES, I CAN by Sammy Davis, Jr. and Jand and Burt Boyer.

Wilmington College welcomes you most heartily for Homecoming in 1966. If you have been away for only two years, you will see changes. The new Physical Education Building is complete and in use and our Seahawks finally have a home court of their own. Tennis courts are nearing completion and will be ready for play in the Spring. The Sarah Graham Kenan Liberal Arts Building is in the final stages of construction, and the departments of Art, Drama, Music, English, Modern Languages and Education will occupy it, hopefully during the Spring quarter. Plans are taking shape on the drawing boards for a $1,500,000 Library and a $885,000 Chemistry Physics Building, construction to begin this summer.

The faculty has many new faces, and will have more new ones next year. And all of us, faculty and administration, are busy with a self-study which will result in our accreditation—we confidently hope—in 1967, one year before we expected.

Have a good time at your Homecoming, and renew your acquaintance with your alma mater. She is a lively lady.

Every Team Needs A Home

We do not agree, but the other day a citizen of Wilmington told us he thought it would be better if the Seahawks played their home games in Brogden Hall.

He thought it would improve attendance because local sports fans have become used to going to ball games there.

After years of work to get a gym on campus, we think it is only appropriate the Hawks have a court to call their own.

The fans will get used to coming to the campus to see the games; Brogden Hall hasn't exactly been a Wilmington landmark dating from the Revolution.

We do wish, however, the seats were more comfortable at the new gym. We would not be surprised to see fans showing up in large numbers equipped with boat cushions to make the seats a little more comfortable.

But hard seats or no, we are glad the Wilco cagers have a home they can call their own. We think over the years, attendance will be helped by the move.

Homecoming A Milestone

Certain events in the lives of colleges are considered milestones. We consider this weekend one of them.

Probably for the first time, the wrestling team will perform before a decent crowd, when they wrestle North Carolina Wesleyan as a preliminary to the Homecoming basketball game.

Also, as noted above, the Seahawks have a home now. The Homecoming game will be played at home, on the college's own court.

For once this year, they should also have a crowd worthy of the effort they will put out.

There is something about Homecoming that attracts students to turn out for the game who never seem to make any of the other contests.

The Hawks are 10-9 for the season and after Saturday night, they will be 11-9. In spite of the fact that they have split with Campbell 1-1 for the season so far, we feel sure a good turnout and the home court advantage will turn the tide.

We know it is old stuff, but we wish to urge everyone to be sure and attend the Homecoming game. The student body may be surprised to learn how much good a little support will do.

Cheerleaders Need Help

Students get tired of editorials on school spirit. For this reason we have tried to stay away from this topic, because we like to imagine our page is read.

But something happened the other day which really brought the point home.

A friend of ours, a former Wilmington College cheerleader, remarked after a ball game that the current crop of cheerleaders must feel a little strange out there leading a cheering section which does not yell.

"It was fun back in the old days," she said. "The crowds were behind us."

Our cheerleaders do a good job. They try. But all their efforts are wasted if the student body doesn't support them.

There is nothing unsophisticated about cheering. It isn't just looks that cheer at games, we all should.

We personally don't see how a fan, a real fan, can go to a ball game and not make some noise.

Let's support our cheerleaders.

Brooks Is Not A Loser

Wilmington College basketball coach Bill Brooks is not a loser! He always figures he is going to win. And he usually does.

However, this year, the tall modest Seahawk coach is having to suffer through one of his worst seasons. At present, the Seahawks have a 10-9 record and it is hard to understand why the record is not better.

Talent problems? No, few schools are fortunate enough to have as much talent on campus as Wilmington does this year.

With Jay Neary, Wilmington has probably the best all-around performer in North Carolina. In Marshall Hamilton and Jim Braxton, the Seahawks have more than adequate height to dominate backboards.

In Butch Budd, Wilmington has one of the smoothest shooting pouchers seen in collegiate circles. In Jim Hall, the Seahawks have a good solid ball player who seems perfect to go with the four previously mentioned.

Admittedly, reserve strengths has been a problem at times with Wray Ware lost for much of the season and Dave Baker leaving school. Recently the loss of guard sub Bill Harris has begun to hurt.

Only once has the Seahawk record dipped below 500. However, never, now the team seems to be in great danger of finishing below 50 per cent for the first time in the history of the school.

We feel that the Seahawks have a much better team than their record indicates and that teams such as Asheville-Biltmore and Pembroke do not belong on the same floor with the Hawks.

We would like to see our team finish the season without another loss. We think this could easily be accomplished.

Campbell Here Tomorrow

Jim Braxton battles for the tipoff in the Wilmington College-Phillips 66 Oilers basketball game. The Oilers won 99-66.

Phillips 66 Shows Real Talent In 99-66 Win Over Hawks

One thing is to be said about the Phillips 66 Oilers-Seahawk game—it was basketball.

In perhaps the best display of talent Wilmington fans have ever encountered, the Hawks went down to a 99-66 defeat.

The score does not always reflect the true situation. As one sports writer put it, "If the Hawks played like that every game they would be undefeated."

However, the home team was outclassed by the well rounded scoring attack of the Oilers, who are now 27-1 for the season.

Four players hit in the double figures for the visitors, paced by Carrier and Rustand with 16 points apiece.

All-American Kendell Rhine dropped in 12 points for the visitors, all in the second half.

For the Hawks, Neary paced the scoring of both teams with 34 and Braxton had 14.

One of the highlights of the visit of the Phillips 66 Oilers was a banquet for both teams held by the local Phillips dealers, W. R. and Archie Fountain of Fountain Bros. Oil Company.

The teams gathered for a seafood dinner at the Neptune Restaurant at Wrightsville Beach, courtesy of the Fountains.

"It certainly was thoughtful of them to treat us," said one Seahawk. "If this is a sample of the type of treatment we're going to get, I hope the Oilers are scheduled for about five visits next year."

The Oilers are now reported to be solid fans of North Carolina seafood.

The banquet didn't seem to slow down the performance of the Oilers the next night, however, when they bested the Hawks 99-66.

The Seahawks will host the Campbell five for the Homecoming game Saturday night.

The Wilco cagers have beaten Campbell in one previous outing, and also been bested by the Indians once.

However, with the home court advantage, coupled with "homecoming fever" a victory is forecast for the Saturday night encounter.

Coach Brooks is expected to go with his usual starting lineup of Jay Neary, Marshall Hamilton, Jim Braxton, Butch Budd, and Jim Hall.

The Camels are expected to start Robertson, Davis, Yenchio, Dean, and Wish.

The Seahawks bested Campbell 81-72 in the first game of the season played at Wallace.

The game was part of a dedication program for a new gym at Wallace-Rose Hill High School.

Neary paced the Wilco team with 35 points and Hall had 14.

Braxton had 13, Hebron 5, Baker 4, and Hamilton 3.

For the Camels, Dean led a well-rounded scoring attack with 15, followed by Wish with 13 and Marshbanks with 12.

The Wallace encounter looked close for awhile—the Hawks only led by one point at halftime.

But the second half, Brooks' team had things all their way.

In the second meeting Campbell put on a late rally to down the Hawks 76-73 in overtime.

The game was tied 66-66 at the end of regulation time, on a basket by Braxton.

Neary paced the Seahawks in this encounter, also, with 26. Braxton had 19, Hamilton 14, Budd 6, and Harris 4.

Dean paced the Campbell five with 16, and Davis was close behind with 15.

Robertson had 12 and Wish 11.

Wilmington built up a commanding 20-9 lead early in the first half and in spite of a full-court press by the Camels, they still led 40-31 at the half.

However, for one five-minute period in the second half the Campbell five outscored the Hawks 17-0 and took a 54-52 lead with five minutes to go.

The Camels dropped in the clincher with one second to go in the overtime when Dean sank two charity tosses.

Wrestlers Perform Here Saturday Night

The Wilmington College wrestling team will perform here at 8:30 p.m. as a preliminary to the Homecoming varsity basketball game.

Coach Dave Miller was quoted as saying he expects a good crowd to turn out for the performance, in spite of the fact that the grapplers have now fallen below the 50% mark.

The Hawks are hosting North Carolina Wesleyan, and the match is expected to be close, with the home team enjoying a slight edge.

The Hawks are in their second year as a wrestling team, but overall performance has not been up to the standard some have expected.

Several Hawk wrestlers have had high school and prep school experience, and at least one team member held a slot on another college wrestling team.

However, the wrestlers have not had very much support from the student body; attendance at wrestling matches at the best has been "very poor."

College graduates, new to Ford Motor Company, often comment on the comparative youth of many of our top executives. The example of these men in key positions is evidence that being young is no handicap at Ford to those who possess ability and ambition. In fact, new employees can expect challenging assignments while still participating in our College Graduate Program. This means an opportunity to demonstrate special skills and initiative while still learning the practical, day-to-day aspects of the business. Consider the experience of Jim Weston, who has been with Ford Motor Company for three years.

Jim came to Ford in February, 1963. His first assignment was in marketing analysis where his principal job was evaluating present and potential dealer locations. For a time, he also gained experience in the actual purchasing of dealer locations. Later, an assignment forecasting sales and market potential with Ford Division's Truck Sales Programming Department gave him the background he needed to qualify for his present position. His job today? Only three years out of college, Jim is now a senior financial analyst in Ford Division's Business Management Department.

Jim Weston's experience is not unusual. At Ford Motor Company, your twenties can be challenging and rewarding years. Like to learn more about it? Talk to our representative when he visits your campus.

The Curtain Will Rise For "Tartuffe" Next Weekend

"Tartuffe" by Moliere will be presented by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Societies on February 11, 12 and 13 at the Thalian Hall. The curtain will rise at 8:30 p.m.

This classic comedy written in 1664 depicts the wiles used by a hypocrite named Tartuffe, played by Sandy del Lago, in gaining entrance into a household and slowly taking over everything. Jim Potter as Moliere, Tina Forrester portray M. and Mme. Orgon. Their son and daughter are played by Bill Weir and Barbara Deaton, respectively. Davy James is cast as Mme. Orgon's father and Art Bannon is the best friend of Orgon's daughter.

The two maids are Carole Benson and Diana Smith, while the servant to Tartuffe is Sandy Deaton. Eleanor Howland is the sister of M. Orgon and Frank is the bullfinch who arrives to announce the arrest. George Deaton is the officer of the King and is accompanied by his two arresting officers played by Bill Alexander and Charles Newkirk.

The above portion of the night's entertainment is precluded by a dialogue during which actors and actresses arrive to meet M. Moliere (Sandy del Lago) and Mme. Moliere (Jean Rogers). The actresses are played by Rosemary Green, Art Markatos, Brooks McEachern, Carol Shoobred; the actors by George Deaton, Frank Hall, John Homan and Jim Potter.

The stage manager of the Thalian Palais Royal is Sam Garner. Bill Hodges portrays the Court Official and Robert Wood, Aristocrat. Bill Alexander, Peter Girty, Lynn Harris, Dolan, Sam Long, Charles Newkirk, Terry Wortley act as Stagnards, while Alan Hill, David, Jerome Reed and Michael serve as footlight lighters. The King, Louis XIV, appears and is portrayed by Bill Wahlgren.

Serving as technical director for production is Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech. Toni Reynolds as stage manager and Lynne Harris as assistant manager.

The scenic crew, whose job it is to produce a setting of Louis XIV, is led with its highly ornamented effects is composed of: Bill Anderson, Richard Daughtry, Thomas Debnem, Dick Hudson, Dolan Little, Sam Long, Danny Martin, Charles Newkirk, Tom Simmons, Stuart Smith, and James Williams. Tony Sellers and James Stinson are concerned with the two elaborate chandeliers that were designed for this production.

Sandy Carr and Hoyle Foster will execute the intricate lighting for the show. Properties will be handled by Elizabeth Bridgers and Isabelle Hobbs. The make-up crew will be composed of Phalbe Henriksen, Sophie Hilburn, Ralph Justice, Ronald Lee, Nancy Ramsauer, Sally Rea, and Toni Reynolds.

Frank Honey of the college music department has supplied the records that will furnish the background music for "Tartuffe." It is in the authentic Baroque manner with its breadth of concept, rich harmonies, ornamentation and brilliant effects. Acting as French consultant for this classic of French plays is Professor Roger Bissell of the modern language department.

Costuming is a major factor in this Moliere production with combinations of brilliant colors, padded flowing skirts for the ladies with lacy accents and brocade coats and waistcoats for the gentlemen. Thelma Sellers is the head of the costume committee, being assisted by Mary Broadfoot, Sue Prince, Calder, Tina Forrester, Rosemary Green, Art Markatos, Brooks McEachern, Jean Rogers, Lucille H. Sauls, Carol Shoobred, Linda Somersette, Ruth Stanland, Virginia Walsh, Cornelia White and Ellen White. The wigs for the gentlemen are being shaped and styled by Carol Fink. Those whose job it is to see that the costumes stay fresh and well pressed are Sharon Covert, Vickie Cupton and Renee Hartman.

The entire production is under the direction of Doug W. Swink, who stated recently that "I am certain that the entire family will thoroughly enjoy the antics of 'Tartuffe.' Further, we will welcome anyone interested in future productions as the next play will be cast on the following Monday and Tuesday, February 14 and 15."

New Instructors Interviewed By Staff Reporter

John Gold, new instructor in the English department, attended Atlantic Christian College in his hometown of Wilson. He was certified to teach in the public schools of North Carolina by ACC.

He also did undergraduate and graduate work at the University of North Carolina where he received his M.A. degree.

Mr. Gold had always aspired to teach. He thought teaching "would be a vocation to combine with an avocation since I had always enjoyed reading and I would have a profession where I could support myself and do a thing I very much enjoyed."

Mr. Gold has found his "experience here to be quite enjoyable."

Literature is Mr. Gold's first hobby, and he hopes to someday have astrology as a second hobby. Poetry is his favorite form of literature.

Wrightsville Beach is the home of Mr. Gold and his wife.

New instructor in the French department is Kenneth Stites from Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Stites received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Kansas.

Mr. Stites also studied in Paris for a year at the University of Paris on a Fulbright scholarship. He described this year as "the best."

Mr. Stites has always loved languages and believes that if you major in a language and want to teach with it you have to teach as working offers the most opportunities.

Mr. Stites taught two years at the University of Kansas and also for three years in a high school in Lake George, N. Y. "I didn't like the winters there," he remarked. He does like Wilmington, especially for the ocean and the warmer climate.

Reading, "yelling at students," and fiction writing are his hobbies. Mr. Stites is presently taking a correspondence course in writing.

Mr. Stites' wife is Danish and they are planning a trip to Denmark next year. He is presently practicing his Danish as preparation for his trip.

Although he has no pets, Mr. Stites does have a plant named Arthur which was given to him by his students in Lake George.

Mr. Stites lives in Devon Park.

Wilmington College Continues To Grow

When the first students attended classes of Wilmington College on September 4, 1947, they went in the afternoon and evening. The classrooms for the first year were located in New Hanover High School.

Later the Isaac Bear Building was taken over by the College, until the summer of 1961 when the first Wilmington College students attended classes at the present campus.

Education of the college level first came to Wilmington in 1946 when a college center was established here by the Extension School of the University of North Carolina.

In 1947 the voters of New Hanover County approved a tax levy which set up Wilmington College as a county organization under the control of the New Hanover Board of Education.

Wilmington College was officially accredited by the North Carolina College Conference and became a member of the American Association of Junior Colleges in 1948. In 1952 the College was accredited as a junior college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Until 1957 the College was a unit of the New Hanover County public school system. At that time the North Carolina Board of Education voted to relinquish control to the present Board of Trustees. In 1958 Wilmington College became one of the community colleges in the state.

From the proceeds of a 600,000 dollar County Bond issue approved in 1958, from funds accumulated over the years by the college, and from matching funds furnished by the state, the Trustees began planning a new campus.

In December of 1958 an engineering team had just completed surveying the new college site. Tentative plans at this time called for construction to begin by 1959 and for the college to open for the September 1960 term.

Construction began the first of April 1959 and in December of 1960 the construction of the buildings neared the half way mark.

The first students to use the new campus were those enrolled in the summer session of 1961.

In 1963 the College changed from a junior college to a senior college by an act of the General Assembly.

Tryouts Announced For New Production

Tryouts for "Lady's Not for Burning" will be held by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Societies on Monday and Tuesday nights, February 14 and 15, beginning at 8:00 p.m. in Thalian Hall.

This poetic comedy is one of the most widely discussed and produced plays of the modern theatre. Its author, Christopher Fry is a distinguished young dramatic poet who has contributed such well-known plays as "Venus Observed," "A Phoenix Too Frequent," and "Ring Around the Moon."

The plot of this comedy concerns Thomas Mendip, a discharged soldier, weary of the world and eager to leave it, who comes to a small town and announces that he has committed murder, and demands to be hanged. Officials oppose his request and even believe he is not guilty of the crimes he confesses to. Shortly after, Jeanette Jourdemayne, a young girl, is brought before the mayor for witchcraft, but for some strange reason she has no wish to be put to death. Thomas takes a hand by trying to prove to the official how absurd it would be to refuse to hang a man who wants to be hanged and at the same time how unreasonable to kill an attractive young lady who is not only guiltless, but doesn't want to die, of course.

There are roles for eight men and three women. Anyone interested in trying out for this production or interested in some work backstage, is cordially invited to the try-outs.

Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at the college, will be the director of this, the third production of the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian 1965-66 season.

The first freshman class of Wilmington College had 160 students; this year there were 1054 students enrolled. From occupying classrooms in New Hanover High School, Wilmington College is now located on a 600 acre campus.

Our Seahawk Valentine MISS DELORES GARRISON

Miss Seahawk for this issue is Miss Delores Faye Garrison, a freshman at Wilmington College. A no more appropriate Valentine on campus, Delores is 18 years old, and lives at 2414 Belvedere Drive. She graduated from New Hanover High School last year.

Delores spends most of her time working at the Credit Bureau of New Hanover County, if she is not at school. She is planning to major in Elementary Education.

Honors Participants Must Complete Form

Effective beginning of the Spring Quarter, 1966, eligible students who wish to participate in the Honors Program must make application according to the procedure given below.

This should be done during registration of the quarter in which the honors work is to begin. The honors work should extend over the three quarters of the senior year. However, those who plan to do student teaching should start one quarter earlier in order to have three full quarters for the work.

1. Secure an application blank at the registrar's office, fill it out and submit it to the registrar, who will record on it the number of hours credit and the cumulative grade point average.
2. Have the form signed by the major department head.
3. Submit the completed form to the chairman of the Honors Committee. The deadline for turning in the completed application is the official "Last Day for Registration" of the quarter in which the honors work is to begin.

According to Dr. Will S. DeLoach, starting next quarter, students will no longer be notified of their eligibility for the Honors Program. The student must decide whether or not he is eligible and then apply. The regulations for the program are listed in the 1965-66 catalog on page 53:

"A senior who has a quality point average of 3.0 ('B' average) or better over the first three years of college work, who has completed at least 45 hours work with a 3.0 or better quality point average at Wilmington College, and who is recommended by his major department, is eligible for the Honors Program. This includes independent study in the major field during the fourth year, a paper reporting the results of the study, and an oral examination defending it. This program is not intended to replace any specifically required work for the major. The study is scheduled to cover a three-quarter period. Two hours credit per quarter will be extended.

Those who attended the Rushmore Dance can bear witness to the fact that the "Playboys" is a swinging group. Dress for this dance will be suits and ties for the men.

College graduates, new to Ford Motor Company, often comment on the comparative youth of many of our top executives. The example of these men in key positions is evidence that being young is no handicap at Ford to those who possess ability and ambition. In fact, new employees can expect challenging assignments while still participating in our College Graduate Program. This means an opportunity to demonstrate special skills and initiative while still learning the practical, day-to-day aspects of the business. Consider the experience of Jim Weston, who has been with Ford Motor Company for three years.

Jim came to Ford in February, 1963. His first assignment was in marketing analysis where his principal job was evaluating present and potential dealer locations. For a time, he also gained experience in the actual purchasing of dealer locations. Later, an assignment forecasting sales and market potential with Ford Division's Truck Sales Programming Department gave him the background he needed to qualify for his present position. His job today? Only three years out of college, Jim is now a senior financial analyst in Ford Division's Business Management Department.

Jim Weston's experience is not unusual. At Ford Motor Company, your twenties can be challenging and rewarding years. Like to learn more about it? Talk to our representative when he visits your campus.

The Curtain Will Rise For "Tartuffe" Next Weekend

"Tartuffe" by Moliere will be presented by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association February 11, 12 and 13 at Thalian Hall. The curtain will rise at 8:30 p.m.

This classic comedy written in 1664 depicts the wiles used by a hypocrite named Tartuffe, played by Randy del Lago, in gaining entry into a household and slowly taking over everything. Jim Potter and Tina Forrester portray M. and Mme. Orgon. Their son and daughter are played by Bill Weir and Barbara Deaton, respectively. David James is cast as Mme. Orgon's brother and Art Bannon is the betrothed of Orgon's daughter.

The two maids are Carole Benton and Diana Smith, while the manservant to Tartuffe is Sandy Carr. Eleanor Howland is the mother of M. Orgon and Frank Hall is the bailiff who arrives to make the arrest. George Deaton is an officer of the King and is accompanied by his two arresting officers played by Bill Alexander and Charles Newkirk.

The above portion of the night's entertainment is precluded by a Prologue during which actors and actresses arrive to meet M. Moliere (Randy Del Lago) and Mme. Moliere (Jean Rogers). The actresses are played by Rosemary Green, Artie Markatos, Brooks McEachern and Carol Shoolbred; the actors by George Deaton, Frank Hall, John Kallman and Jim Potter.

The stage manager of the Theatre du Palais Royal is Sam Garner, while Bill Hodges portrays the Court Official and Robert Wood, an aristocrat. Bill Alexander, Pete Daughtry, Lynn Harris, Dolan Little, Sam Long, Charles Newkirk and Terry Wortley act as Stage Hands, while Alan Hill, David Porter, Jerome Reed and Michael Smith serve as footlight lighters. The King, Louis XIV, appears and is portrayed by Bill Wahlgren.

Serving as technical director for the production is Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech, with Toni Reynolds as stage manager and Lynne Harris as assistant stage manager.

The scenic crew, whose job it is to reproduce a setting of Louis XIV period with its highly ornamented effects is composed of: Bill Anderson, Richard Daughtry, Thomas Debnem, Dick Hudson, Dolan Little, Sam Long, Danny Martin, Charles Newkirk, Tom Simmons, Stuart Smith, and James Williams. Tony Sellers and James Stinson are concerned with the two elaborate chandeliers that were designed for this production.

Sandy Carr and Hoyle Foster will execute the intricate lighting for the show. Properties will be handled by Elizabeth Bridgers and Isabelle Hobbs. The make-up crew will be composed of Phalbe Henriksen, Sophie Hilburn, Ralph Justice, Ronald Lee, Nancy Ramseur, Sally Rea, and Toni Reynolds.

Frank Honey of the college music department has supplied the records that will furnish the background music for "Tartuffe." It is in the authentic Baroque manner with its breadth of concept, rich harmonies, ornamentation and brilliant effects. Acting as French consultant for this classic of French plays is Professor Roger Bisson of the modern language department.

Costuming is a major factor in this Moliere production with combinations of brilliant colors, padded flowing skirts for the ladies with lacy accents and broadcated coats and waistcoats for the gentlemen. Thelma Sellers is the head of the costume committee, being assisted by Mary Broadfoot, Sue Prince Calder, Tina Forrester, Rosemary Green, Artie Markatos, Brooks McEachern, Jean Rogers, Lucille H. Sauls, Carol Shoolbred, Linda Somersette, Ruth Stanland, Virginia Walsh, Cornelia White and Ellen White. The wigs for the gentlemen are being shaped and styled by Carol Fink. Those whose job it is to see that the costumes stay fresh and well pressed are Sharon Covert, Vickie Gupton and Renee Hartman.

The entire production is under the direction of Doug W. Swink, who stated recently that "I am certain that the entire family will thoroughly enjoy the antics of 'Tartuffe'. Further, we will welcome anyone interested in future productions as the next play will be cast on the following Monday and Tuesday, February 14 and 15."

New Instructors Interviewed By Staff Reporter

John Gold, new instructor in the English department, attended Atlantic Christian College in his hometown of Wilson. He was certified to teach in the public schools of North Carolina by ACC.

He also did undergraduate and graduate work at the University of North Carolina where he received his M.A. degree.

Mr. Gold had always aspired to teach. He thought teaching "would be a vocation to combine with an avocation since I had always enjoyed reading and I would have a profession where I could support myself and do a thing I very much enjoyed."

Mr. Gold has found his "experience here to be quite enjoyable."

Literature is Mr. Gold's first hobby, and he hopes to someday have astrology as a second hobby. Poetry is his favorite form of literature.

Wrightsville Beach is the home of Mr. Gold and his wife.

New instructor in the French department is Kenneth Stites from Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Stites received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Kansas.

Mr. Stites also studied in Paris for a year at the University of Paris on a Fulbright scholarship. He described this year as "the best."

Mr. Stites has always loved languages and believes that if you major in a language and want to work with it you have to teach as teaching offers the most opportunities.

Mr. Stites taught two years at the University of Kansas and also for three years in a high school in Lake George, N. Y. "I didn't like the winters there," he remarked. He does like Wilmington, especially for the ocean and the warmer climate.

Reading, "yelling at students," and fiction writing are his hobbies. Mr. Stites is presently taking a correspondence course in writing.

Mr. Stites' wife is Danish and they are planning a trip to Denmark next year. He is presently practicing his Danish as preparation for his trip.

Although he has no pets, Mr. Stites does have a plant named Arthur which was given to him by his students in Lake George.

Mr. Stites lives in Devon Park.

Wilmington College Continues To Grow

When the first students attended classes of Wilmington College on September 4, 1947, they went in the afternoon and evening. The classrooms for the first year were located in New Hanover High School.

Later the Isaac Bear Building was taken over by the College, until the summer of 1961 when the first Wilmington College students attended classes at the present campus.

Education of the college level first came to Wilmington in 1946 when a college center was established here by the Extension School of the University of North Carolina.

Homecoming A Success

Wilmington College Homecoming got off to a fabulous start. Thursday, February 3, with a bonfire and pep rally in the parking lot near the gym.

Thursday afternoon members of the Engineers Club built a huge construction of wood, tires, paper, and other flammable material to be burned that night. At 7 p.m. Julie Memory lit the bonfire, starting the festivities.

The cheerleaders led the crowd in some rousing cheers. By the time the pep rally was over, the crowd was ready to slaughter the Camels.

Immediately after the bonfire and pep rally the crowd reassembled in the Pub for an informal dance. The music for the dance was furnished by the Embers.

Introduction of Court

At 9:30, Thursday night, the Homecoming Court was introduced by Sam Smith. The court consisted of Janet Moore, sponsored by the Civitan Club; Sharon Scott, sponsored by B. S. U.; Judy Ring, sponsored by Circle K; Sherry Lackey, sponsored by the Dance Committee; Diane Moore, sponsored by Alpha Chi Sigma; Anita Rogers, sponsored by the Pep Club; Mary Bosso, sponsored by SNEA; Patsy Futches, sponsored by Sigma Phi Kappa; Cori Collins, sponsored by the Scriptic Society; Julie Memory, sponsored by the Engineer's Club; Virginia Baysden, sponsored by the Seahawk; Susan Pearson, sponsored by Pi Sigma Mu; Margaret Lassiter, sponsored by the Cheerleaders; Lana Kay Lewis, sponsored by the Student Senate; and Linda Melver, sponsored by Westminster Fellowship.

Decorations for Thursday night were made by Circle K and the Civitans. They carried out the idea of an Oriental scene with junk sails and a huge Buddha.

Crowning of Queen

Friday night was one of the highlights of Homecoming with the crowning of the new Homecoming Queen. Excitement mounted as the time neared for the announcing of the Queen. As a result of Thursday's elections Miss Patsy Futches, sponsored by Sigma Phi Kappa, became Homecoming Queen. Patsy was crowned by Addison Hewitt, former member of the State House of Representatives. Gloria Shepard, last year's Queen, presented Patsy with a huge bouquet of white mums.

The Fabulous Five provided music for the semi-formal dance. Decorations were provided by Westminster Fellowship and the Pep Club. The theme for Friday night was "Oriental Palace."

Seahawks Victorious

Saturday night, the final night of Homecoming, was an exciting night. The Seahawks met the Campbell Camels in the Wilmington College Gymnasium for the Homecoming game in its own gym. The Seahawks defeated the Camels, 91-73, which brightened the festivities.

During the half-time, the Homecoming Queen, Patsy Futches, and her court were presented with their escorts.

Shirelles Appear

After the game, students, their dates, and guest couples attended a dance and concert in the Pub. Music was furnished by the Tempests of Charlotte. The big treat of the evening was the appearance of the Shirelles.

Responsible for the decorations for Saturday night was the Dance Committee. The theme was "Oriental Garden."

The Dance Committee and Interclub Council worked with the clubs mentioned above on the decorations each night. Joe Crutchfield was in charge of the Homecoming Court. B. S. U. provided the programs for the ball game. Much credit goes to the clubs and individual students who took part in making this year's Homecoming a memorable one.

An Interview Backstage With The Shirelles

By SHIRLEY MANNING

The Shirelles, Shirley, Mickey, Doris, and Beverly, certainly made history at the college with fast-moving entertainment at the Homecoming Dance.

They were just as lively backstage as they were onstage. Between performances they had slipped into t-shirts, sweaters, and boots, and commenced to engage themselves in a card game.

Shirley kindly consented to record a station-break for a local d.j., while Doris told a little about the group and signed autographs on the posters with their pictures on it.

Three of the Shirelles are from North Carolina, so they know about the South. They like it, but live in New Jersey, and spend most of their time traveling and performing in northern colleges. The night of their performance here at Wilmington College, they were planning to drive all night on their way to New Jersey. Beverly said that Mickey Mouse did most of the driving because they knew she wouldn't speed.

In their off-time, the Shirelles like to listen to music and prefer Nancy Wilson and the Beatles. They also bowl a lot in their spare time. They also travel a lot, twelve months out of the year. They always drive, and their guitarist and drummer go with them.

The Shirelles really liked Wilmington College, and commented about the students during their performances. They said that many college audiences were noisy, especially between number, but that students at Wilmington were orderly, but appreciative at the same time.

Three of the Shirelles are single; only Shirley is married. She has a tiny baby girl. Asked if they ever received phone calls from admirers, they said that Mickey always got the calls because she gave her phone number out. Mickey replied that "I always tell them I don't remember."

The Shirelles were very cooperative and polite, and posed for pictures, while answering numerous questions, before again donning their flaming orange-and-black satin gowns for the next performance.

In an informal discussion between acts are shown Shirley Manning, Eddie Anderson, and Jay North with the Shirelles (Shirley, Mickey, Beverly, and Doris).

Saturday, February 26, there will be a bake sale sponsored by Alpha Chi Sigma at Wilson's Supermarket, Oleander Drive.

EDITORIALS:

What A Good Time!

If you were one of the ones who didn't attend Homecoming, you really missed a good swinging week-end. The entertainment was great; thanks to the dance committee, the music was great; thanks to the Engineer's Club, we had a good bonfire; thanks to the cheerleaders, there was a lot of support and rallying among the students.

The chaperones for the week-end, many of them, tirelessly sat through the many events, and we thank them for keeping an eye on things. Especially was the entertainment nice. We think that it is the best Homecoming that Wilmington College has ever sponsored. We were present at the first Homecoming sponsored, and there is a whole of a difference in then and now, and the difference is certainly to the advantage.

Our Note of Thanks For All The Hard Work

In trying to secure a list of those responsible for making Homecoming 1966 so successful, we found that the Inter-Club Council was linked with the Dance Committee, to do the work. The Council is made up from two representatives from every club on campus. It would be impossible to name them all, and unfair, in that many who were supposed to work, did not; while many of the Council went above and beyond the call of duty. Since no one wanted to take the glory, we thought about who to give thanks to, and decided that we would tell the members of the Interclub Council and the Dance Committee, thanks for a nice time. Then upon reflection, it seemed to us that whenever there is anything going on around Wilmington College, Tim Chappel and Joe Crutchfield are always there. Usually they are hustling around possessed of all the headaches involved in securing entertainment, and taking care of tickets and the like. They seem to be tireless in effort if not in feet. So to them, we say keep up the good work.

U. S. Policy In Viet Nam Calls For Closer Look

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, U. S. Army Retired, had some interesting comments to make last week on the war in Viet Nam. He first indicated alarm in the U. S. cutting back in commitments in the realm of U. S. or foreign economies, and then pledging $10.5 billion to the war in Viet Nam. He mentioned that he knew that our support was needed in vital areas, such as Thailand, Korea, and many others, but or and that a turning back from what? of the U. S. through economic measures in order to spend more in Viet Nam, called for a closer look at the situation by policy makers.

His opinion is that the questions (1) What can the U. S. do with what we already have over there in Viet Nam? and (2) What do we have? should be given careful consideration. "We must do the best we can with what we have," he said, "keeping in mind global strategy." We think that this statement is also a very wise one, for it would seem that in such vast commitments of money and logistical support for iViet Nam, that other places in the world are not being given what consideration they should be. He advocated that the "U. S. troops hold what lines we have and that the policy makers revamp and ask where they're going."

We have always felt that the terms in Viet Nam could be defined more than they have been to the public. It is not unusual to hear someone say that "those poor boys over there don't know what they're fighting for." And yet the money, the supplies, the troops, the rice, keeps pouring into Viet Nam. We are quite in agreement with Gen. Gavin's warning to the U. S. to act with sagacity, thoughtfulness, and awareness, when acting on Viet Nam matters.

Just Rambling

By SHIRLEY MANNING

Dr. Chambers made the statement the other day in class that when the President's plane landed after conferring in Hawaii on the war in Viet Nam, he was confronted by some people picketing. One placard that particularly caught his eye was one reading "MAKE LOVE, NOT WAR."

Dolls and the Ace of Spades

A senator suggested a bit of psychological warfare might be helpful in Viet Nam. The Vietnamese, who are superstitious, believe that if they see a woman at dawn before going to work, that that means death. The Ace of spades is also a bad omen to them. The senator suggested that the U. S. drop plastic women from planes, and the ace of spades. The Dutch used this same type of tactic many years ago, and it was effective. The Daughters of the American Revolution supported the senator's idea, but another man who didn't, suggested that if the DAR wanted to really help like they pledged, that they be dropped out of planes into the midst of the Viet Cong.

The Prince of Groundhogs

The Prince of Groundhogs has predicted an early spring. I really wish it were true, with warm weather seasons being my favorite. One blot, though, on the prediction for an early fun-season, is the cold wave predicted to reach here by the 20th. Weathermen predict some of the worst weather before the month of February ends. Maybe after February things will warm up for good. The weather we have had in North Carolina in the last 2-3 weeks will certainly be memorable in years to come, and many of us will be able to reflect to the younger generation that we "remember the winter of '66 . . ."

The Draft

Well, Cassius Clay was re-examined, and there has been a statement made by those in charge, that they see no reason why he will not get called up into the service. A student made the statement in class the other day, that with the new rules governing the draft of college students, that Wilmington College might be changed to Woman's College, by next year. Another student said that with things the way they were (a hard Spanish test), it looked like all he could write on it was "Good-bye W. C.—Hello V. C."

Destroying the Scene

It is so perplexing to me to see the service station going up across the street in the midst of such beautiful buildings as Wilmington College, and the surrounding churches, and here we get what will eventually be a dirty-grease laden place, and probably a junk yard surrounding it. It would seem to me that there should be different zoning regulations about things like that cropping up in what could have been a beautiful spot.

DAY'S CLOSE

When at the close of day tempestuous waves of memories,
The children of a never-ebbing tide,
Begin to pound against the gates of thought,
They soon gain entrance by their untamed power.
Thus as this mighty sea engulfs my soul,
The elements begin to claim their own,
And I, transformed into the shimmering foam,
Am carried out into the watery realm
Where once again with you, O Neptune, I abide.

Alpha Chi Sigma Serves USO Meet

Major Gen. Herman Nickerson, commanding general of Camp Lejeune, was the guest of honor at the Wilmington USO Sunday, February 6, marking the 25th birthday of the organization.

Among those on hand for the celebration were Wilmington Mayor O. O. Allsbrook, Admiral A. J. Ellis, superintendent of the Battleship North Carolina, and W. R. Sheehan, president of the Jacksonville USO.

J. E. L. Wade, an active supporter of the USO, made the principal address. He received an award in recognition of his work with the organization.

A cake cutting and a music program marked the anniversary of the organization which has been a home away from home for thousands of American servicemen. The Second Marine Division Choral Group under the direction of Sgt. T. L. Williams entertained the group.

Alpha Chi Sigma was asked to serve at the cake cutting. Members who served were Cynthia Hewitt, Sharon Eadons, Virginia Baysden, Mary Hughes, Sharon Blake, and Myra Blake.

THE FINE ARTS

The Wilmington College Fine Arts Series presented the Deane-Drinkall Duo, violin and cello, Wednesday, February 16, at 8 p.m. in the Student Services Building, Wilmington College.

This was the fourth in a series of programs presented by the College for the Community.

This unique and exciting duo is in its third season of concertizing. Being the only one of its kind now touring, it offered programs of varied music seldom presented to the concert world. Critics throughout Europe, Iceland and America have been unanimously outspoken in their praise of the rich sonorities and the excellent musical qualities of this most unusual combination of violin and cello alone.

The Duo has just returned to North Carolina from a concert in the Carnegie Recital Hall in New York City where critics were all in accord with praise over the husband and wife team.

Deane, violinist, is achieving outstanding success as a recitalist and soloist throughout Europe, Iceland and the United States. She has won a number of musical prizes such as: Prix de Salabert, First Prize of the Fontainebleau School of Fine Arts, France; Young Artist Award of the Aspen Musical Festival and of the North Carolina Symphony, as well as the Kate Neal Kinley Fellowship for study abroad.

She is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music and has appeared with many orchestras including the Aspen and Brevard Festivals, Rochester, Memphis, and the North Carolina State Symphony.

Roger Drinkall, graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, is winning the unanimous praise of critics and audiences wherever he plays. He has concertized both as soloist and recitalist in Europe, Iceland, and the United States.

Appearances have included being soloist with orchestras in Chicago, Wheeling, Philadelphia, Durham, and three appearances with the Brevard Festival and others.

In addition to having won many prizes, he was recently awarded a grant to study and perform many contemporary cello works under the direction of the composers, both in Europe and the United States.

The Drinkalls have also recently performed with the Augusta, Georgia Symphony and the Jacksonville, Florida Symphony.

Art Exhibit Now Showing

The "Fourth Annual Lower Cape Fear Exhibition" is now showing in Hoggard Hall, featuring 45 entries.

The show opened with a reception February 6, and will close at the end of February. Dr. and Mrs. Justus Bier judged the show. He is director at the North Carolina Museum of Art, in Raleigh, and while here gave a lecture on German Painting and Sculpture in the collection of the N. C. Museum. The lecture, according to Mr. Claude Howell, was well attended.

Winners in the show are:
First award: Sculpture, Anna Aycock, Wilmington

First award: Painting, Henry Wyche, Whiteville

First award: Graphics, Tom Hammond, a former Wilmingtonian.

Mr. Howell, and Miss Patricia Miner both had entries in the show along with many students from the college.

The show contains many media including woodcuts and sculpture.

OH! MY ACHING BACK! Not only did this player get hurt during the Seahawk-Campbell Annual Homecoming Game, but the Camels also were hurt over the score 91-73.

Wilmington College Trips Campbell At Homecoming

By JERRY HOOKS

Jay Neary and Butch Budd combined for 53 points and the Wilmington College Seahawks rolled to a 91-73 victory over Campbell College in the annual Homecoming game February 5.

Neary scored 29 points and Budd tossed in 24 as the Seahawks collected their 11th win against nine losses.

Wilmington had four starters in double figures as Jim Hall and Marshall Hamilton scored 14 points each. Big Jim Braxton paced the rebounding for the game as he grabbed 12. Neary had 10 rebounds and Hamilton eight.

The Seahawks connected on 37 of 71 field goal attempts for 52 per cent from the floor.

In such a game, it is hard to single out a hero, but perhaps an unsung one could be guard Hall who scored 14 points. Playing with a broken nose, the Danville, Va., native entered a local hospital immediately after the game to have it set.

Wilmington took the opening lead on a basket by Hamilton and only twice were the Camels able to tie the score before the Seahawks began to click. With 14:53 left in the half, Wilmington had a 13-8 lead. After a Campbell basket by sharp-shooting guard Bennie Dean, consecutive baskets by Hall, Budd, Neary and Budd again, the hot Hawks were out-front, 21-10. Neary hit a free throw and scored again on a follow-up and it appeared the Seahawks would run the Camels out of the gym.

However, the poised Camels, with Dean connecting on long outside shots, began to cut the Wilmington margin, but the Seahawks led, 45-35, at the half. Budd scored 16 of his 24 points in this period.

In the second half, with Hamilton and Braxton clearing everything that came off the boards, the Hawks gradually increased the lead to 52-39 with 17:30 left in the game.

With Neary feeding on the fast break, Wilmington grabbed a 20 point lead, at 77-57 with 6:51 left in the game.

Coach Bill Brooks cleared his bench as reserves played the last two minutes of the game.

Gary Davis and Frank Stewart scored 14 each for the Camels. Jim Marshbank added 12 for the losers.

Seahawks To Host Mars Hill

The Wilmington College Seahawks wind up a difficult season with the hope of a victory over Mars Hill on the home court tomorrow night at eight. Despite the fighting spirit of the Hawk five, their record for the season following an 88-74 defeat at the hands of Atlantic Christian in Wilson February 10th, stood at 11-11 with two more games to go.

The Mars Hill meet marks the last season for the 'Hawks' high-scoring guard Jay Neary who retires from the squad after three years of impressive ball handling.

Neary, who came to Wilmington via North Carolina, has accumulated almost 2000 points in his college career. This season alone, the Cambria Heights, New York native has scored over 600 points.

Besides an effective rebounder, Brooks attributes the lefthander with 15 more points per game on assists.

It is Neary's passing ability that has attracted quite a bit of national attention. His uncanny ability to hit the open man has the 6-3 All-American candidate high on the draft lists of several NBA clubs.

Also leaving the team roster this year are Marshall Hamilton, Wray Wave, and Bill Harris. Harris and Wave, however, will continue on in Wilco athletics; both will play baseball for the Seahawks this spring.

The wrestling team with a 4-3 record up to the last four meets scheduled for the season, finish this, their second year with an open date afternoon match with Pembroke on the Seahawk mat. The 'Hawk grapplers will travel to Atlanta March 4 and 5 for participation in an amateur tournament. All members of the present team are expected to be available for next year's season.

Although the baseball season will not begin till about the middle of March, some of the boys have begun throwing a little inside. Steve Coley, who has signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates, says of his former team mates: "They will probably have pretty good depth in the infield this year." Last year's capable pitching staff will be on the field again. The Seahawks will probably open the season with an exhibition game with Camp Jeneune.

It is expected that there will be a tennis team by next spring and hoped that the soccer team will make a better showing next season than they did in this, their first year.

Seahawks Bow To Pembroke

(Editor's note: Martin Grant, sports editor, has withdrawn from school. In the period during which we have no sports editor, you will have the opportunity to read sports as viewed and written by other members of the staff.)

By VIRGINIA BAYSDEN

The game between the Seahawks and Pembroke got off to a slow start with careless passing, and fumbling of the ball too much on the part of the Seahawks. However, they were able to keep the Braves from scoring too much.

During the first quarter Jim Braxton pushed one in to even the score, 10-10. Then Marshall Hamilton followed with another basket to put the Seahawks in a two point lead. But Pembroke's Henry Byrd followed with a field goal to even the score again.

After the ball had passed from one team to another, the Seahawks broke into an 18-12 lead. But Hamilton fouled, giving the Braves a chance to make a basket, and they did. Later in the game, Jay Neary followed a great shot by Braxton with a lay-up bringing the score up to 24-16.

With two minutes and 14 seconds to go before the end of the second quarter, Wayne King topped a basket in for the Seahawks giving the Seahawks a 37-29 lead. But the Braves scored and with a foul by Braxton, they were able to gain another point narrowing the gap to 37-32.

After the half, the Pembroke Braves seemed to have renewed their strength. The gap narrowed to 39-36.

As the game tightened up, Neary was fouled. He added another point to the score. Then Peed, fouled by Neary, tossed a one-pointer in for Pembroke. After a few minutes of play, Gallagher fouled Butch Budd and gave the Seahawks another apple for their barrel.

"Just A Little Bit Higher"

The Engineer's Club was responsible for the construction of the 20 foot bonfire fuel to set off Homecoming week-end.

"Let's Go Seahawks"

The cheerleaders practiced faithfully and presented a humorous, if not always on key, Musical comedy, interspersed with corn and praise, to liven up the bonfire.

Book Stack

Wilmington College students now have a source of information which, while it is not exactly new, is much enlarged and improved. This is the recently begun documents collection. In November with the aid of Congressman Alton A. Lennon our library was designated an official depository for United States government publications. Ours is the second depository in this congressional district. The other in Pembroke is too distant for people in this area to use conveniently.

Before this the Library did have government publications as part of the collection, but they were scattered here and there in the book collection, periodical collection, and vertical file. There was no separate record kept of all these various items. Now that the Library is a depository there is one central point through which the documents go. Here it is possible to tell if the Library has an item, and, if so, where it is located.

Some of the documents received as our depository designation are being cataloged; some are being treated as current periodicals; and others are being kept in a separate collection arranged by Superintendent of Documents' su-doc's, for short, classification numbers.

The Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications is an index to these documents: In it you can find material by subject, title, and issuing agency. Included in the main entry for each document is the su-doc's number which enables you to find out if we have the document in question. Documents are circulated. Those that are cataloged are treated just as the other books in the collection. The ones in the separate documents collection are checked out on a special form.

The Library now receives copies of most of the bills and resolutions introduced in Congress. The hearings of various committees come to us as documents. The Congressional Record and Federal Register appear almost daily. The Record is published each day Congress is in session; the Register is published Tuesday through Saturday except for holidays.

The business field is one covered very well by government documents. We receive regularly Census of Business reports, "Current Industrial Reports," and "Foreign Trade Reports." The Geological Survey issues a number of very specialized papers and bulletins. There are many other publications of a very technical nature coming in; some of these abstract scientific material for the research worker.

To give you an idea of other types of information available in government documents there are a few of the individual items to come in recently. We received a copy of the federal budget for the fiscal year ending June 1967; with the 70-page budget came a 1304-page appendix. A few days later we received the "Budget in Brief." Office of Education publications come fairly often. Some of these are quite useful, especially to persons with specialized interests. One recently was entitled "The Low Achiever in Mathematics," one was called "Inservice Education for School Counselors," and another "Guide to College and University Business Management."

There is an area wage survey done by the Bureau of Labor Statistics; number ten of this series was a study of "The Raleigh, North Carolina, Metropolitan Area." A number of agencies issue career information. The Civil Service

INVITATION

The brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa extend a cordial invitation to the students and faculty of Wilmington College to attend Open House, Sunday, February 20, between the hours of 2 o'clock until 4:30 p.m. at 2529 Market Street.

An Open House is being held in order to acquaint everyone with the brothers of the fraternity, and also to show the progress that has been made in the fraternity since its formation.

Julie Humphrey Horrell has been selected for Miss Seahawk for this issue. She has hazel-brown eyes and is very tiny and petite with brown hair. She attended Burgaw High School and graduated in 1964. This is her second year at Wilmington College, where she is majoring in business. She already is a Mrs. and is now after her degree in order to pursue a career in secretarial work.

Her hobbies include music and traveling. She has been to Cuba, and this past summer traveled in ten European countries.

Informal Dance With "Embers" Big Favorite of Students

Commission publishes much of this, but individual agencies put out information relating to their particular fields, for example, the U. S. Information Agency leaflet entitled "Career Intern Program in Broadcasting."

These are but a few of the documents received by the Library in the last two and a half months. Already they fill nearly eight shelves. As the collection grows it will be a valuable source of information for students, faculty, and other residents of our area.

College Theatre Announces Opening Of Charming Comedy

"The Lady's Not for Burning" will be presented by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association March 25, 26 and 27 at Thalian Hall at 8:30 p.m. This comedy will mark the third production this season.

Christopher Fry wrote this charming comedy in 1947, and it was produced in New York three years later under the direction of Sir John Gielgud starring himself, Richard Burton and Pamela Brown.

The plot concerns itself with Jeanet Jourdemayne, played by Dorothy Pastis, who is an enchanting young creature, who admits speaking French to her poodle but denies having turned old Mathew Skippis (Willie Loughlin) into a dog. Thomas Mendip, portrayed by Bill Weir, is a disillusioned, life-weary soldier, who claims to have killed old Skippis, but the older people, like Mayor Hebble Tyson (Randy del Lago), his sister Margaret (Rosemary Green), Judge Tappercoon (David James), and the Chaplain (Frank Hall), cannot be bothered with this voluble murderer as long as there are witches to be burned.

Margaret's son, Nicholas (Hank Blaustein) and Humphrey (Robert Wood), are interested in the physical attributes of Jeanet and compete for her favors, which gives Humphrey's pure fiancé, Alizon, a chance to elope with an equally pure clerk, Richard, portrayed by Michael Shea. But all ends with an eventual solving of everyone's problems and love can span, not only years, but also social barriers.

The setting for this play takes place in a room in the house of Hebble Tyson, Mayor of the small market town of Cool Clare in the fifteenth century. Those in charge

Daniel Guest Speaker On Academic Freedom

The monthly meeting of the Student Carolina Education Association was held Wednesday night, February 16, in the SRO Theatre.

In a brief business session a nominating committee was selected to make preparations for the upcoming club elections. It was also announced that final plans were being made concerning the annual SNEA Banquet to be held this year at the Holiday Inn Restaurant on the evening of Friday, April 27.

Following these proceedings President Parker Bryant introduced the evening's guest speaker, James C. Daniel of the history department. In his speech entitled "Academic Freedom in North Carolina", Mr. Daniel traced the history of infringements on academic freedom in our state. He pointed out that beginning with the Hendrick Case in 1856, through the Basset Case in 1903, and up to the 1920's and cases concerning Professors Odum, Potet, and Chase, a gradual increase in academic freedom took place in North Carolina universities.

Hendrick was fired for his conduct, Basset threatened with dismissal; but Odum, Potet, and Chase were allowed to retain their positions. This shows that even in the twenties, when fundamentals were running loose, the right of a man to exercise his freedoms of speech and opinion was respected.

After this trackback, Mr. Daniel concerned himself with the current Speaker Ban Issue. As for the reasoning behind the law, Mr. Daniel referred to a meeting he attended in which Representative George Clark discussed the bill. According to the representative, the North Carolina Assembly passed this "gag" law in the true sense of a "gag", that is as a joke. Several Assemblymen were offended by student demonstrations which took place in the summer of 1963, so they shuffled their Speaker-Ban bill through the legislature in order to put a thorn in the side of the University and, thus, vent their anger.

Again citing several references, Mr. Daniel concluded his speech by pointing out the various absurdities and several unconstitutionalitys present to see to it that they teach their students the basic tenets of our Constitution, of our democratic heritage, and of the importance of keeping a broad-minded outlook. Only by doing so can we prevent them from becoming misinformed citizens who are easily swayed by glib politics.

After a brief question and answer period, the meeting adjourned to the lobby for a coffee hour.

The director for this production of "The Lady's Not for Burning" is Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech. Having joined the faculty of Wilmington College this year, Mrs. Fitzgibbon has already distinguished herself by serving as technical and artistic director for "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and "Tartuffe". For the latter play she was also costume designer.

The students are reminded that admission to these college plays are free upon presentation of their activity cards at the box office. Additional tickets are available at the door.

SAUNDERS RECEIVES GRANT

Lloyd H. Saunders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Saunders of Carolina Beach, and a senior at Wilmington College, has received word from the Research Grants Committee of the North Carolina Academy of Science that he has been awarded a research grant to help complete his Honors project at Wilmington College. He is one of the few undergraduate students in North Carolina to receive such a grant.

Saunders, who is majoring in Biology and minoring in Chemistry, is doing his Honors research in Biology. The title of his Thesis is: A Survey of the Native Mammals of Smith Island.

This is the third research grant Saunders has received during his studies at Wilmington College. For the past two summers he has received grants from the National Science Foundation.

At the end of his sophomore year, in the summer of 1964, he received a grant for independent research at North Carolina State University.

At the end of his junior year, he was also awarded a summer research grant in Biology at the University of Oregon by the National Science Foundation. There he worked on bacterial physiology.

ART EXHIBIT TO OPEN

The next exhibit to be sponsored by the Art Department at Wilmington College will be "The Collection of Mr. James Taylor." The show will include art pieces which Mr. Taylor collected during two years with the Peace Corps in Nigeria. It will feature original African art, including sculpture, clothing, and jewelry.

The show will open March 6, in Hoggard Hall.

NOTICE

Due to exams and the end of winter quarter, this will be the last issue of the Seahawk until Spring Quarter.

Editorials:

OH! MY ACHING STOMACH! THE SEAHAWK'S OUT AGAIN

Keeping in vogue with other college newspapers across the country, we are about to indulge in a "Bitch-in." For those of you who do not know what it is, it is simply an expression similar to that of a sit-in, walk-in, or wade-in, in which views are presented in protest of something or somebody.

This is a few paragraphs of complaint directed against the "all-knowing," "highly intellectuals," "I could do so much better." (But incidentally, never have, and probably couldn't be hired to do better, if, in truth, they could.) I am speaking of those students who continually sit back, criticize, poke fun of, and are generally anti-Wilmington College everything. More specifically, we are speaking of criticisms recently overheard in the hall, and we quote, sneeringly, "How is your stomach today for reading the Seahawk?" Well, we can only suggest at this point that you take some Pepto-Bismol, and struggle through the rest of these paragraphs, because it's going to get worse.

For those critics who indiscreetly voice condemnation of the school paper, we would like to ask what exactly do they expect in a paper? Sensationalism? Long columns on such probing thought, as "Death is the end." Or what? Sorry, but not much sensationalism around here. As far as our facts go, there is no S.A.V.E. (Society to Abolish Virginity Everywhere) on campus, and we know of no scheduled meetings at the "Den" to discuss "Is God Cruel?" from 6:55 until 5:30 M-W nights as one college advertised. We just print what happens around campus.

We try to give an accurate account of the news, and play up events to come. We serve as a historical document, since we are on a bi-monthly printing schedule. In the editorial column, we give the opinion of the editor which may, or may not, coincide with those of its readers. So sorry, if some of you aren't feeling well.

Berkeley Offers A New School For Draft Dodgers, Etc.

A month ago it was reported, tongue-in-cheek, that the University of California at Berkeley was offering a new curriculum including a four-hour course in rioting, a five-hour class in draft-dodging, a six-hour course to prepare graduates for the Job Corps and a two-minute, optional class in personal hygiene.

It was a joke, of course. But it is no joke that a group of leftists and peaceniks will open their own "Free University of Berkeley" next month in rented quarters near the UC campus offering a curriculum which will include courses in Marxism, communism, Socialism and anarchy. A spokesman for the new school told an Associated Press reporter: "We won't preach any ideology except discontent."

Well, we suppose there will always be a few kooks for whom even the University of California is too orthodox and conservative. What intrigues us is the built-in orthodoxy of this supposedly unorthodox "university." How can it be truly "Free" if its students are exposed to but one "ideology" which its faculty will "preach"? What will the school do with those who become discontented with the ideology of discontent, who rebel against the conformity of the nonconformist?

And how, in Heaven's name, do you teach anarchy—the philosophy of confusion? The very idea of a professor giving scheduled lectures on anarchy to a classroom full of students is, perhaps, the ultimate in organized chaos.

We predict a short life for the "Free University of Berkeley." With all these problems, there is one more the FOB will face. For the lack of funds, its professors will be unpaid. That's the surest way we know to promote discontent—ideological or otherwise—that leads to the closing of an institution's doors.

THE NEW DEMAND OF THE DRAFT

Letter To Editor

Our personal health is a personal problem, for we know that if we do not take care of ourselves, it is we who will ultimately suffer—this being the case, why are we required to take physical education in college? It is just like a child being told by his mother to eat something he doesn't like.

We are not children, but are required to take it. Furthermore we do not get credit for it, but yet it (a poor grade) can keep us off the dean's list.

It is worse for students who are not athletically inclined, for the grading system is based on those who are the best, not on how hard one tries.

It is simply unfair. We should have the choice of whether we want to be healthy or not. It is surprising that we have soft drinks and cigarettes available here at the college. It is more surprising that milk is not the required drink on campus.

Math Teacher Attends Meet

Mr. Allen J. Barwick, teacher of mathematics and physics at Wilmington College, attended the Southeastern Division of the American Society of Agricultural Engineering this week.

Mr. Barwick presented a paper entitled, "A Periodic Heat Balance of A Farm Structure" which is part of his advanced program of study at North Carolina State University. This program is under the direction of Dr. K. O. Jordan and in cooperation with West Virginia University.

The meeting in Jackson, Mississippi was attended by the academic and professional agricultural engineers in the Southeastern United States.

WASHINGTON (CPS) — An overwhelming outcry from colleges is about the only thing that will stop the reintroduction of voluntary tests and students class standings as criteria for student deferments from the draft.

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service, hopes to have the screening system operative by the end of spring semester. This way, he says, more college students can be turned into soldiers if the manpower pool dips dangerously low.

Draft calls are expected to average about 30,000 men a month, at least until June, largely to offset a troop increase of 112,000.

The official decision has not yet been made on the reintroduction of the Korean type-system for passing on student deferments. Hershey has said that he wants to wait until the last of his three regional meetings with state selective service directors of Feb. 8 before announcing any change in the current setup.

A spokesman for the Selective Service System said, however, that the decision is virtually "already made" and that the general might not even wait until Feb. 8 to reveal officially what is becoming an open secret in Washington.

Only the strong protest of college heads and other educators can dissuade the general from putting the Korean war formula into effect, the spokesman said.

Hershey said that he had received some indication from college representatives that they would not oppose the test criteria for draft deferments although they appeared to object to the use of class standings.

He observed that this attitude indicated an unwillingness to accept responsibility for contributing to a student's possible call-up, especially when the student achieved passing grades but was still subject to the draft because of his relative standing.

Hershey emphasized that the test and class standings would be regarded as contributing evidence to be considered by local draft boards. These local boards, however, under the law still have the authority to pass on which students will receive deferments and which won't.

The system used during the Korean war allowed students graduating from high schools and freshmen and sophomores at college to take tests voluntarily. The test results were sent to local boards along with other information prepared by the colleges, indicating the student's grades and standing. The tests were prepared by Educational Testing Services, Inc., of Princeton, N. J., the same group that gives the graduate record examinations to college seniors and the college board tests for high school students. Deferments are usually granted to those who scored 70 points on the test or who were in the top two-thirds of their college class.

Hershey himself does not like the idea of tests. "I've never done too well on exams," he said. There have also been complaints that the 1951 version of the test which was used during the Korean war was weighted heavily in favor of science and math students. Many educators share his distaste for the use of tests to determine who will be allowed to finish school before being drafted. There is no evidence, as Hershey said, that educators will protest the return of the tests.

Not all colleges are bending over backwards to help draft boards check up on students. Ernest R. Zimmerman, assistant to the vice president of academic affairs, at the University of Michigan, said a student has a right to keep his transcript of grades out of the hands of the draft board.

Zimmerman said that on the request of a senior at Michigan he had ignored a letter from the student's draft board asking for his transcript.

"Generally our policy is that information about a student is not released without his consent," he said.

Zimmerman said that as far as he was concerned, any student could have his transcript withheld from his draft board. A campus political group, Voice, entered the controversy this week when it passed a resolution demanding that the university withhold grades of all students. "If the university allows a student to enter and remain in fully qualified and reported as school he should be considered such," he resolution said.

Zimmerman cautioned that any student asking for his grades to be withheld would have to suffer the consequences, if any. Some draft boards, he explained, might consider the move an obstruction of the draft system.

Colleges probably will not be raided in strength, at least this year, although college men are more worried about military service than they have been at any time since 1953. Selective Service officials generally concede that college students won't be needed, at least to any large degree, to meet the present goal of men in the armed forces.

However, these officials point out that if the war in Vietnam is to be expanded and the armed forces built up to Korean war levels, then men in categories not now being used will have to be called up.

Even though interest currently centers around the 1,834,240 registrants in the II-S classification, other groups will be nearly depleted before students are taken.

There are only 642,000 draft-age men who are single or were married after the Aug. 26 cut-off date for considering marriage as a factor, who are classified I-A. Of these, 224,260 have been examined and, according to current percentages, only about half of them may qualify.

Draft boards are already reaching into the pool of 758-320 who were married before the cut-off date. So far 117,930 of these men have been examined and declared eligible. The acceptance rate is low in this group because many become fathers and thus are eligible for class III-A before they are inducted. A man is considered a father as soon as his wife is certifiably pregnant.

Another source is the I-Y category: men who don't meet the current standards. There are 2,165,985 classified in this group at present and some are to be re-examined in the light of reduced armed service standards.

Finally, in the order of those to be taken, there are those 1,884,240 students and, if things really get bad, 3,376,117 fathers.

The draft is throwing job-hunting seniors into a quandary, reports John Shingleton, director of placement at Michigan State University.

"They are uncertain of what path to follow as they consider the alternative of employment, the draft, and in some cases, graduate school," Shingleton said. One of the best employment markets, however, Shingleton says, and the highest starting salaries for college graduates in history await the 1966 graduating class.

Evidence of the perplexing situation, according to Shingleton, is the drop in the number of job interviews last fall to 3,374 from 3,845 the previous fall. The number of employer visits to MSU increased 18 per cent during the same period.

College Wrestling Team Beats Pembroke 28-10

A fired-up Wilmington College wrestling team trounced Pembroke College, 28-10, in a meet Thursday afternoon, February 24, at Hanover Hall.

The win gives the Charles Sproles-coached grapplers a 7-4 record for the season and was the second victory over the Braves this season.

The Seahawks won two of the nine matches on decisions, two by pins, two on forfeits and lost one by decision, and forfeited the unlimited class to the Braves.

Little Ed Radford got the Seahawks started by trouncing his opponent, 13-2. Radford picked up valuable points late in the match when he almost pinned his opponent.

Ken Cobb had more difficulty with his opponent, but gained the winning points in the last 1:30 of action. Cobb won 8-6.

Pembroke forfeited the next two matches giving the Hawks a 16-0 advantage.

Jim Joyce, the Seahawks' captain, pinned his opponent in 7:06, assuring the Wilmington team of victory.

The next Wilmington action will be in the third annual Southern Tournament in Atlanta, Ga., March 2-3. The tourney, an NCAA event, will feature Georgia, Georgia Tech, Appalachian, and several other top teams from North Carolina.

Seahawks Top Lions In Season's Last Game

Wilmington College's 1965-66 basketball season ended February 19, with the Seahawks playing host to the Mars Hill Lions. Leading throughout the game, Wilmington emerged victorious, with a final score of 78-65.

The first half of the game was marked by an almost touch-and-go situation, for at no time during this period was Wilmington able to pull ahead by more than five points. Once, the score was tied at 20-all, and half-time found Mars Hill trailing by only two points.

In the second half of its bout with Mars Hill, the Wilmington cagers were sparked by superb performance from each of their players. As the half progressed, the home team's slim lead increased to 11 points, and the score stood at 51-40 with 12:02 game-time remaining.

A slight rally by visiting Mars Hill again dwindled the Wilmington lead, but this time by only two points. The Seahawks still led by nine. A retaliatory rally by Wilmington resulted in the eventual Seahawk victory. This victorious finish for its 1965-66 season left the Seahawks with a 13-11 record.

The final whistle that marked the end of the game and the end of the season also marked the end of college basketball for four Wilmington stars. Jay Neary, Marshall Hamilton, Wray Ware, and Bill Harris—all seniors—will no more help spur the Seahawks to victory. Fond memories of these fine players in action will live in the heart of each Seahawk fan, however, and their past performances will no doubt inspire their team mates who await another season of college basketball.

Wilmington College Coed Wins Local Beauty Title

The new Miss Wilmington is shown with a thoughtful look. Could she possibly be wondering what the coming year holds for her?

It seems that Wilmington College is very lucky to have such a big selection of beautiful and talented young misses. March 12, the city of Wilmington held the Annual Miss Wilmington Pageant, which is one step in the direction of the Miss America Pageant.

This year, Miss Diana Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murl E. Smith, won first place in the pageant. The talented redhead also was voted by the other contestants as "Miss Congeniality." First runner-up was Miss Joan Ensign. Tied for second place were Misses Miriam Taylor and Betty Anne Pierce, and Miss Sophia Hilburn was in the position of third runner-up.

Only about three weeks before the pageant did Diana decide to compete. She said that Saturday night was the only time she worked with her props. However this did not disturb her poise and charm.

Dressed in a "Cigarette Girl" theme, Diana did a tap dance and sang "Second Hand Rose." In the evening gown competition, she wore the traditional black suit.

This year Diana will accompany Miss Sarah Kay Kittle to the Miss North Carolina Pageant where she will observe and know what to expect next year when she will compete in the state finals.

The 19-year-old Miss Wilmington is majoring in English, minoring in drama and speech, and history. She plans to teach high school English.

Shown crowning Diana Smith is last year's Miss Wilmington, Miss Sarah Kay Kittle. Diana will accompany Sarah to the Miss North Carolina Finals in June. Next year Diana will compete.

Registration For Spring Quarter Marked By Line

As the 1966 Winter Quarter at Wilmington College drew to a close, students handed in their final examination papers, preparatory for an all-too-short break from the pressures of school.

Students headed in various directions, many to far-away homes and friends. Others, already at home, relaxed in the knowledge that they had four days of freedom. Each student, anxiously (if a bit apprehensively), awaited the arrival of his grades. For some, those grades determined whether or not he would be able to return for Spring quarter. For these students, the pressures of school seemed a blessing in comparison to the fate of "flunking out."

With grades released, vacation over, and Spring quarter soon to begin, students began conditioning themselves for the mad rush commonly termed "Registration." March 22 was designated as registration day, at which time students flocked into the library in enormous numbers, and hastily began the process of filling out the necessary forms.

Each advisor was besieged by impatient advisees, anxious for attention. Some students wanted schedule changes, some wanted to arrange their schedule for the first time, and some did not know what they wanted; but they fought as determinedly as the others for an interview with their advisors. Following that interview, it was "back to the drawing boards", to complete the forms.

After more writing and perhaps more advice from their advisors, students made their way to the tables of their teachers, who were already suffering from writer's cramp from initialing numerous forms. Then it was back to the advisors for a last minute check and signature, and the students were ready to stand in another line, this time to pay tuition and fees. At the end of the line, the students were free to leave, while the faculty remained to advise and assist the seemingly endless flow of students who were still coming to register.

NCEA Convention Held In Raleigh

The Eighty-Second Annual Convention of the North Carolina Education Association was held in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium on March 24, 25, and 26. Dr. Frank Greer, NCEA president, presided.

Attending the Convention from Wilmington College were Dr. Harold C. Hulon, Mrs. Betty H. Stike, Parker Bryant, and Sandy Carr.

During the Third General Session, Miss Parker and Carr were presented to the convention along with other student teachers by Rebecca Kasuboski, president, Student NCEA, as representatives of SNEA.

On Friday, nominees were made for next year's officers. On Saturday, the election and a business meeting were held.

Divisional meetings were also held. Dr. Hulon represented Wilmington College at the Divisional Meeting of Higher Education.

Faculty Members Given Promotions In Rank

Seven members of the Wilmington College faculty have been given promotions in rank, Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty announced today.

In announcing the professional appointments, Dean Reynolds said, "I'm pleased that these members of the faculty have proved themselves worthy of their promotion. The promotions are based on merit."

Dr. Reynolds went on to say, "As a senior institution, it's necessary for Wilmington College to add faculty at the higher ranks, and it is encouraging to have promotions within our own faculty, who after experience here, deserve this kind of recognition."

Dr. James Parnell of the biology department at Wilmington College has been promoted from assistant professor to associate professor.

Dr. Parnell is a graduate of North Carolina State University where he received a bachelor of science degree and his masters and doctors. He was also a teaching assistant at the University of Zoology and Ornithology.

Walter H. Allen, Jr. of the Department of Social Sciences has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor.

Mr. Allen is a graduate of Moravian College and Moravian Theological Seminary where he received his bachelor of divinity degree. He received his master of arts degree from the University of North Carolina.

Mr. Allen taught at Salem College and Atlantic Christian College before coming to Wilmington College.

William F. Love, of the department of modern languages has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor.

Mr. Love is a graduate of the University of North Carolina where he received both his bachelors and masters degrees in German.

He taught German at Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss., before coming to Wilmington College in 1964.

Mrs. Betty Stike, of the Department of Education has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor.

Mrs. Stike received her bachelor of arts degree from Appalachian State Teachers College and her master of arts degree from East Carolina College.

She has taught the second grade at both Sunset Park Elementary School and Chestnut Elementary School.

Dr. Samuel D. Chambers of the History Department has been promoted from associate professor to professor of history.

Dr. Chambers is a graduate of John Hopkins University and received his masters degree and doctors degree from Georgetown University.

He has taught at the University of Baltimore, Coppin State Teachers College, Baltimore; Georgia Southwestern, and Pembroke College before coming to Wilmington College.

Thomas E. Gay, Jr. of the Department of History, has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor.

Mr. Gay graduated from Wilmington Junior College and received his bachelor of science degree from Tampa University. He received his master of arts degree from the University of Virginia.

He taught at the University of Maine before coming to Wilmington College.

William J. Brooks, director of athletics, has been promoted from assistant professor to associate professor in the department of physical education.

Mr. Brooks graduated from Atlantic Christian College and received his masters degree from East Carolina College.

He taught in the physical education department at New Hanover High School before coming to Wilmington College.

Final Production

The final production for this 1965-66 season by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association will be "The Man in the Dog Suit". The try-outs were held on Monday and Tuesday nights, March 28 and 29, and rehearsals and set construction are now well underway.

This gently hilarious comedy tells of a quiet modest young man who had wanted to be a tree surgeon, but, having married an attractive girl whose relatives are small-town bankers, is being groomed by them for a good job in their organization. A shy and ineffectual fellow under ordinary circumstances, he discovers that he can be bold and independent when wearing the dog costume he had acquired for a masquerade ball.

Registration was a long and tiresome ordeal for both the students and the instructors. The final count of students has not yet been completed although it is nearing the one thousand mark. The scene above is typical of registration day at most colleges. While involved in the long process of registration, one can not help but think that a computer would greatly shorten the time. It would certainly shorten the load for the faculty.

This comedy has been viewed on television with Art Carney and on the Broadway stage with Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn. Since its debut in 1958, the play has been a favorite of community theatres throughout the nation.

For this production the director and technical director will be Doug W. Swink and Anne Fitzgibbon, respectively, of the drama and speech department of Wilmington College. The dates for this performance will be May 13, 14 and 15.

Heart of Ban Controversy Lingers Under Clouds of Emotions - Misunderstanding

Many of you reading this paper have probably wondered what will eventually happen to the controversial Speaker Ban Law, wonderings caused no doubt, by the recent decision to ban Communist theorist, Herbert Aptheker, from the campus of the University of North Carolina.

What will become of the law will only be evident with the passage of time, but in the next few paragraphs, we will attempt to show that the SBL has had two factors working against any suitable solution.

The first factor is the approach assumed by the hearings on the SBL. Instead of making the issue clearly known, and that issue is not the common one associated with the law, that of denial of freedom of speech, but is to be defined from part of the text of the Proceedings of the Seventieth Annual Meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools for 1965, under Standard Two—Organization and Administration. We quote: "There should be a clear differentiation between the policy making functions of the governing board and the responsibility of those in charge of administering these policies. General institutional policies may originate within the board, or be approved by the board upon the recommendation of the administration. Once these have become the policies of the governing board, the chief administrative officer should be free to implement such policies and to administer the institution within the broad policies laid down by the board."

And now the heart of the issue, "The governing board should not be subject to undue pressures from state officials or other outside political or religious groups; furthermore, the governing board should protect the administration from similar outside pressures."

Although it might have been the intent of the hearings, this vital aspect of organization and administration was neglected or minimized, in the light of another aspect, which brings us to the second factor of the speaker ban law.

Emotionalism is the second factor.

Mention the speaker ban law, and immediately the tension mounts. The denial of use of state facilities to accommodate Communist speakers touches at the hearts of those who either take up the cry of "suppression of academic freedom," or "denial of one of the freedoms upon which this country was founded," or the cry of "keep the communists off our campuses and from infiltrating the youth of today." Whatever our viewpoint of the law, most of us have one, something that cannot be said about many bills that are passed.

People take a stand on the law, and stand up for it, sometimes with sincerity, sometimes with intent only to stir up trouble. But feelings run high. As long as the two aspects outlined here remain uncoordinated or unchecked, we contend that a satisfactory solution to the ban law will not be effected.

In the first place, it must be determined if the General Assembly has infringed upon the administrative organizations of the institutions of higher learning, and if so, steps taken to correct this, but through the administrative offices, rather than through legislative offices. Power was given back to the administration through amendments to the law, so now perhaps the outcome of the law will depend entirely, or for the most part, on school officials.

In the second place, uncontrolled emotionalism (i.e. flag-waving, even resignations, wild rumors) must be replaced with sound facts. For instance, many people were heard to declare, "Why let a bunch of outsiders come down here and tell us how to run our schools? Who are they to tell us that we can't be accredited if we refuse to allow communist speakers on our campuses?" Clearly, these people are not aware that the Association is made up of the colleges themselves, and so the policy making procedures must surely involve the opinions of the school in question.

Another instance: many people contend that the SBL was passed in the closing minutes of the General Assembly, and this fact alone makes the wisdom of the bill highly questionable. What they do not realize is that many bills are passed exactly like this bill, hurriedly and in the closing minutes of the assembly, hence the passage of the SBL was not unusual.

Surely the SBL has blown up into proportions many times above what it should have been due to these two factors, the first having been suppressed, the second having gone unchecked. Something must be done about reversing the two, before the most favorable solution is reached.

Art Department Announces Future Art Exhibitions

Wilmington College's Art Department is engaged in preparation for three events which are scheduled for the near future. Several students are putting the finishing touches on paintings which they plan to exhibit in the Annual Student Show, scheduled for May. The Cottage Lane Art Exhibit during the Azalea Festival will also feature work of some of the students.

April 3 is the opening date for an exhibition featuring the work of Judy and Lamar Lynes. The pair comes to Wilmington with wide acclaim and recognition from various exhibitions throughout the South. The Association of Georgia Artists Annual, Gardens Art Exhibition and Southeastern Annual Exhibition, and shows at the Woman's College of Georgia are among the exhibitions to which the Lyneses are credited.

Judy Allen Lynes is from St. Petersburg, Fla. After receiving her BFA degree from the University of Georgia in 1961, she began her present occupation as art instructor in Milledgeville, Ga. public schools.

Lamar Lynes, also a Georgia native, received both his AB and MFA degrees from universities there. Since 1962, he has served as assistant professor of art at the Woman's College of Georgia.

Art enthusiasts (and even those who profess no interest in art) will be stimulated to attend the exhibition after reading the words of Judy Lynes.

"I think it's sad that painting is talked about so much but discussed so little. At times, it becomes more verbal than visual. Frequently after seeing a painter's work I have wanted to hear what he has to say, but never before."

These paintings make it clear what I think about painting. Never has it been more impossible to excuse it with words, nor less necessary to offer an explanation."

Batman

By Shirley Manning

The new "Camp" is Batman and Robin. Anyway you look at it, it's "in." The reason: it has been explained by the producers of the show who say that the Dynamic Duo represent a new type comedy program, with older watchers catching the double meaning of the program. For instance, the things that used to make youngsters cringe, now are slightly hilarious to adults.

Each segment of Batman and Robin costs about $65,000 to produce. Most of this money goes for special effects, such as the Batmobile, and producing the bizarre.

The show has enjoyed such popularity that the producers quickly bought up the rights of other comic characters in order to keep them from flooding the TV market. Well known stars, such as Frank Sinatra, beg for a part on the show, because it offers a chance to play the spectacular, in all earnestness. Most of the parts are read while the show is being filmed, and are read very seriously. This is thought to have something to do with the success of the show, for when these parts are played in all seriousness, they strike a funny vein.

In some of the exchange papers that the "Seahawk" receives, it was noted that on Batman Night, many of the student unions were crowded to overflowing, because so many students wanted to see it. These ardent fans will be tickled to find out that the original Batman and Robin serials have been combined into a 248 minute marathon entitled "An Evening with Batman and Robin." Well, welcome another addition to the latest in high "camp" art!

College Musical Program Planned For Lenten Season

The Wilmington College Music Department will present the Brass Ensemble and the College Chorus in a program of sacred music in two separate concerts during the lenten season. Loyd Hudson, head of the Wilmington College music department announced.

The first concert was held March 27 in the Methodist Church at Elizabethtown and the second will be held Monday, April 4, at 8 p.m. in St. Paul's Lutheran Church at 6th and Market Streets, Wilmington. No admission charge will be made, and the public is cordially invited to both concerts.

Mr. Frank Honey, instructor in music, will join the Brass Ensemble, under the direction of Mr. William F. Adeock, assistant professor of music, to perform the "Canzona in the First Mode" and the "Canzona in the Ninth Mode" by Gabrieli. These canzonas were written to be performed by two brass choirs and the organ at St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice.

The Brass Ensemble, alone, will play the "Sonata Number Two" by Johann Pezel.

The Requiem Mass in D Minor, K. 626 by W. A. Mozart, will be the main work performed by the chorus. The accompanist for the "Requiem" will be Miss Sandra Willoughby.

The College Chorus, accompanied by Mr. Honey, will also sing "Now Let Us All Praise God and Sing" by Gordon Young and "Jubilate Deo in D" by Joseph Haydn.

Soloists for the concert will be: Mrs. Margaret Jolls, director of vocal music at Roland-Grice Junior High School, Wilmington, soprano; Mrs. Willora Faulkner, well-known soloist in eastern North Carolina, alto; Robert Chapman, part-time instructor in voice and minister of music at Temple Baptist Church, Wilmington, tenor; and John Cheek, soloist with the New Hanover High School Hanover Singers, bass. Mr. Hudson is the director of the College Chorus.

Mozart's "Requiem Mass" has an interesting history according to Mr. Hudson. It was a commissioned work, but Mozart is said not to have known who ordered it. The patron turned out to be a Count Franz Walsegg zu Stupach, who liked to perform the works of others which he gave out to be his own and in July, 1791, he sent his commission to write such a work.

Mozart began and sketched about 40 pages of the score. Then he had to lay it aside in order to do "Die Zauberflöte." He was able to finish only the Requiem and Kyrie, and to sketch the eight sections from the Dies Irae through the Hostias—that is set down in the score the voice parts, bass, and hints for the instrumentation. The last three movements were completely lacking.

Mozart died on December 5, 1791, leaving the "Requiem" unfinished. Franz Sussmayr, a pupil of Mozart's was at the bedside when the master died. Mozart gave the necessary instructions for completing his "Requiem," a task for which Sussmayr was peculiarly fitted by his knack of imitating Mozart's handwriting. Much of the "Requiem" is probably the work of the now little-known Sussmayr.

The 40-voice Wilmington College Chorus was organized under Mr. Hudson's direction in 1957. The first choral group had only eight singers, but interest has grown to such a point that there is now a limit on the number of enrollees. The "Top Twelve," well-known throughout Southeastern North Carolina, is a unit taken from the chorus.

January's Expenditure Nears February's

Mr. Rex Willis, vice-president for finance at Wilmington College reports that there was only 27 cents difference in the College's expenditures in January and February. January's total came to $89,257.23 and February's expenses amounted to $89,257.50. Mr. Willis said that the odds for it to come so close are pretty small, but is still wondering who the 27 cent "spend-thrift" in February might be.

COACH OF THE YEAR

"Coach of the Year" honors should go to Coach Charles Sproles of the wrestling team. Last year in the first year of wrestling at the college, he took a team from scratch to win the final two matches of the year.

Knowing that he had to get better wrestlers to have a better record, he went out and got some fine young boys. The recruitment was successful as indicated by this year's 9-4 record. With everyone returning from this year's team, there is optimism that there will be an improvement even over that record.

The team was put through its rigors early and practiced very diligently. They were in excellent shape to perform in a sport that demands every participant to be in good physical condition. It should also be pointed out that captain James Joyce did his job well and was a real inspiration to his teammates.

With better wrestlers in the two heavier divisions, the record would have been 11-2. But knowing the dedication and hard work Coach Sproles puts into his work, the weaknesses will be overcome.

OTHER LAUDITS

A voice of gratitude should also go to Coach Dave Miller who did such an outstanding job with the boys' intramural basketball program. Twelve teams and close to 100 boys participated. It just goes to show that a little conscientiousness and hard work can mean a successful program. This is what others who headed the intramural program in recent years lacked.

Jay Neury, Seahawk basketball ace, made first team All-Opponent of Oglethorpe College of Georgia. He placed ahead of two other players who were chosen All-Americans by various media. Congratulations to a most deserving athlete.

Optimism Reigns In Baseball

The baseball team will play a 27 game schedule. There is a lot of optimism at this time, but a lot of the team's success will depend on many unproved players. Many of these do appear capable of coming through with good years. The team has been bolstered both offensively and defensively by the return of Bill Harris who was out last season with leg burns. However, Larry Honeycutt appears to be out for six weeks with a pulled ligament in his right knee.

Excellent pitching and improved defense seem to be the biggest assets. As of now, the hitting has been spotty. This might be attributed to the fact that the team has had very few days to practice outside.

The schedule includes:

Seahawks Split With Williams

WILLIAMS 4, WILMINGTON 2
Williams 000 200 002—4 2 1
Wilmington 000 002 000—2 4 2

Williams College (Mass.) scored two runs in the ninth inning to defeat Wilmington 4-2 and spoil the Seahawk's opening game on Monday, March 21. Held hitless for 8 1/3 innings by Ed Lemon and Doyle Whitfield, Williams capitalized on a walk by losing pitcher Whitfield, a single on a hit-and-run, and a fluke bunt single on a squeeze play. After another base on balls, Williams closed out their scoring on an infield ground-out.

Williams had taken an early lead by scoring two unearned runs off Lemon in the fourth without the benefit of a hit. Three walks and throwing errors by Dan Whisnaut and Elmer Maley did the trick.

Wilmington had then momentarily rallied to tie the game until the fateful ninth. Ironically, they also did it without a hit. Three straight walks loaded the bases. Pete Daughtry was hit by a pitch to force in one run, and the other scored when Glen Mills hit an infield grounder.

Wilmington outlived Williams 4 to 2. Ken Miller was the only player to get two hits. Both were singles.

Aces Defeat Jets In Tournament

The Aces defeated the Jets 51-42 to win the Intramural Basketball Championship Tournament on March 3. The victory followed a semifinal win over Beaumont and gave the Aces an overall 14-0 record. The Jets ended at 11-3.

Strong outside shooting by Bill High, Jim Parmenter, and Chuck Lewis led a second half rally which overcame a 23-19 lead by the Jets at the half. Sterling Coward and Gene King led the losers in scoring.

In the consolation game, Beaumont clinched third place in the tournament by romping over the Studecoats 61-29.

Great Need for Teachers in Certain Areas Is Revealed in Supply and Demand Survey

The latest study of teacher supply and demand in North Carolina reveals a critical need for more elementary school teachers and for high school teachers in science, mathematics, and foreign languages.

The 19th annual Teacher Supply and Demand Study, released recently by the State Department of Public Instruction, indicates that North Carolina institutions of higher learning are producing only three-fourths of the elementary teachers needed, but twice the number of secondary teachers needed.

Dr. Charles F. Carroll, superintendent of public instruction, said there would be "no teacher shortage in the schools if prospective teachers were preparing to teach in the areas of critical need" and if "those being prepared to teach sought and accepted teaching positions in the state."

Dr. J. P. Freeman, director of the Division of Professional Services of the State Department of Public Instruction, said the chronic shortage of adequately prepared teachers at the elementary level is expected to continue "with no prospect of relief."

Lost & Found

Various items have been turned into the main office and the book-store. However, no owners have shown up. Some of the items are umbrellas, change purses, gloves, keys, wool mufflers, scarf, make-up, and an all weather coat.

These articles are piling up, and are taking up a lot of room. If you have lost something around the campus, please see if it has been turned in.

WILMINGTON 3, WILLIAMS 0
Williams 000 000 000—0 3 2
Wilmington 001 020 000—3 6 1

Jim Braxton, Wray Ware, and Vic Johnson combined to strike out 16 Williams' batters as the Seahawks gained revenge on Tuesday 3-0. Braxton, the winning pitcher, pitched four strong hitless innings and struck out eight. Ware struck out five in four innings and Johnson whiffed the side in the ninth inning.

Wilmington struck first in the third. Speedy Bill Harris walked with one out and proceeded to steal second and third base. Ken Miller then drove him in with a sacrifice fly to left.

Then in the fifth, Sandy Dew was hit by a pitch and Miller walked. After Chuck Lewis moved the runners up a base with a sacrifice, freshman Wayne Johnson scored them with a sharp single to centerfield.

Williams threatened only twice. Once was in the seventh when they put runners on first and third via a single and a dropped popfly by Dan Whisnaut. Ware then struck out shortstop Bodinson to end it. In the eighth, two single and a walk by Ware loaded the bases with two out. Shortstop Harris then ended only last hope Williams might have had by stabbing a line drive to end the inning.

WRONG TRAVELER

One-third of a million Americans secured passports to travel abroad during the summer of 1965. Of that number, four per cent identified themselves as teachers, while 16 per cent identified themselves as students.

The danger, one educator cautions, is that with four times as many students traveling as teachers, some teachers are going to find themselves taking lessons from students.

As one solution, the National Education Association suggests that teachers should study the NEA folders, "Windows on the World," a description of NEA tours available this summer. Copies can be obtained by writing to the NEA Division of Educational Travel, 1201 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Two Regulars Return In Golf

The golf team lost seven members from last year, but Coach Earl Allen has hopes for an improvement over last year's 9-3-1 record. Gone are such standouts as Jim Henderson, Ricky Berman, and Ford McDonald.

Ace golfer Paul Bergen and Robert Parker are the regulars returning. Bergen is being counted on to continue his fine performances of his freshman year. Bergen will probably start in the number one spot with Parker, Alex McCrackin, Alan Murray, John Williams, Tim Duncan, Glenn Hodges, Johnny Gore, or Jim Kaylor filling the other spots. Other team members are Leon Wells, Clinton Hardee, and Raymond Gardner.

The schedule as of now includes 12 individual matches with other schools and one triangular meet.

"He say school is out."

All-State Lemon Outstanding Athlete

Only seven players from the National Championship team of 1963 remain on this year's baseball team. One of the most valuable and steady players of them all is Ed Lemon, 5' 10" Senior pitcher from Wilmington.

Ed's athletic success dates back to his high school days at New Hanover. He transferred there his junior year. That year he established a 3-1 won-lost record and topped this with a 6-0 record the next year on the State Championship team. Also, in his senior year, he was chosen to pitch in the High School East-West game.

Playing on the local American Legion team for three years, he compiled a 21-4 record. In 1962, he was chosen American Legion All-State. His team that year won the State Championship and advanced to the National Regionals where they were later eliminated.

The highlight of Ed's collegiate career was his freshman year as a member of the Championship team. Out most of the year after an appendectomy, he returned to the team in Colorado and shut out Southern Utah 9-0. For this, he was chosen to the All-Tournament team.

Every year as a Seahawk, Ed's ERA has been less than 2.0 runs per game. Further honors were bestowed on Ed last year when he was chosen to the All-State Collegiate team of North Carolina.

This all adds up to true credentials of an outstanding athlete.

BOOK STACK

In the LC section of our library stacks there are shelves reserved for new books. Although the books are not necessarily the most recent publications, they, however, are new to our book collection. All new books remain in this section for one week before they are shelved in the general collection. You are invited to look them over. If you find one that you wish to reserve, write your name on the card and it will be held at the circulation desk for you.

Among the interesting books found on the "new books" shelves this week are Larousse Encyclopedia of Modern Art, Doctors in Blue by George Washington Adams, The Better Half by Andrew Sinclair, and The Life of Johnny Reb by Bell Irvin Wiley.

Larousse Encyclopedia of Modern Art covers the past 150 years of the arts. Included in this reference book are the paintings, sculpture, architecture, literature, music, and the minor arts such as ceramics and furniture of the various periods since 1800.

Doctors in Blue is another Civil War book. However, it tells the story from a different slant, for it is a medical history of the Union Army. It describes the beginnings of ambulance field work, the Army Nurse Corps, and other organizations taken for granted in military medicine today.

The Better Half is the story of the emancipation of the American woman. It begins with the first 24 women at Plymouth. It continues through the first for woman suffrage. It closes with a choice for the future.

The author of The Life of Johnny Reb has not presented the gray-clad soldier of tradition. Instead he has used wartime letters and diaries to draw a picture of the common soldier of the Confederacy as he really was. It all adds up to fascinating reading.

The Faculty Library Committee and the Library Staff would like to thank each of you for your co-operation during the recent library surveys. These surveys were part of the self-study program being conducted at Wilmington College at the present time.

African Art On Exhibit

An exhibition of African Art opened Sunday, March 6, 1966, at Wilmington College in Hoggard Hall. This was the fifth in a series of monthly exhibitions held by the College Art Department every year.

The exhibition was from the collection of James Taylor of Vanceboro, who acquired pieces of sculpture, jewelry, and other items while working as a Peace Corpsman in Nigeria.

Several items on exhibition were typical of the culture as well as the art of Nigeria, including baskets, carved gourds, woven mats, and swords and daggers.

There were also several native costumes from some of the tribes in Nigeria, including an embroidered blue and black vest worn by the Hausa people in Northern Nigeria.

"We were very delighted to be able to present this type of variety in our exhibitions," Mr. Howell, head of the art department at Wilmington College said. "Seeing art and culture from other countries as well as other sections of this country, widens our appreciation of it."

The exhibition remained on view throughout the month of March.

"It's a very nice school," she stated about Wilmington College. "It has a very friendly atmosphere."

"I'm a great traveler," she said. She visited Europe the summer following her college graduation and then returned next summer.

Reopening Of Radio Station Considered

The Student Affairs Committee met on Tuesday, April 12, to give further consideration to the operation and organization of W.V.P.S.

Rules and regulation were established by the Student Affairs Committee in 1964-1965. Because of serious infractions of these regulations, the station was closed in early December 1965.

The Student Affairs Committee on January 25, 1966, requested the advice and recommendation of the Student Senate in regard to provisions for possible reopening of the station. Although a partial poll of student opinion was reported to the Student Affairs Committee, March 28, 1966, no official accompanying recommendations have been received as of this date from the Student Senate.

The Committee has decided that the WVPSS will remain closed for the remainder of this school year. The Committee will give further consideration to the matter upon receipt of recommendations from the Student Senate.

Accreditation Anticipated

Wilmington College is currently engaged in a self-study program in preparation for its initial accreditation as a four-year institution. Wednesday, April 6, the student body met in Hanover Hall to fill out questionnaires pertaining to the self-study.

Kitty O'Brien, president of the student body, opened the meeting. Before discussing the self-study program, she discussed the upcoming election, and the new enforcement of parking rules.

Dr. B. Frank Hall was then introduced. He explained the reason of the self-study program. The self-study began two years ago with the writing of the purpose of Wilmington College. Last year a Southern Association committee visited the school and were favorably impressed. As a result, they urged that the process of accreditation be speeded up.

The questionnaire which was prepared by the faculty for the students covered such areas as criticism of the faculty, evaluation of the library, reasons for choosing Wilmington College, orientation, counseling, admissions and scholarships, the student in relation to school, housing organizations and clubs, publications and fine arts, and alumni and placement.

Election Time Draws Near

Nominations are now open for the 1966-67 general elections for offices in the rising Senior, Junior, and Sophomore classes. April 25, 1966, is the last day for nominations to be made. The Judicial Council will consist of two men, two women, and one member at large.

The election will be held on May 12. If necessary, primary elections will be held on May 5. The election will be held in the lobby of the Pub.

Members of the board of elections will be in charge of the May election. The board consists of Thelton Skipper, chairman; John Meshaw, vice chairman; Martha Meshaw, secretary; Jerry Randall; Anita Rogers, Gail Otts, Marilyn Mack, and Forest Brown.

Senior Receives Honorable Mention

John F. Newber, a senior at Wilmington College, won honorable mention for his composition for three trombones and a trumpet in the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity of America composition contest held this month at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The composition, "Motivic Variations," received one of the only two awards given by the judges. The judges, in this year's competition, gave two honorable mentions as the only awards.

Newber's composition was performed at the Contemporary Music Festival to be held at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on March 30, according to Robert Bass, chairman of the Composition Contest sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha.

Newber, who plays in the Wilmington College String Ensemble, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Newber of 5813 Oleander Drive and is a graduate of New Hanover High School. He is a member of the Circle K Club, Wrestling Team, Panmathian Society, Collegiate Civitans, Pen Pushers, and the Fledgling Staff at Wilmington College.

Andy Owens Performs

The Wilmington College Fine Arts Committee presented Andy Owens at the organ Wednesday, April 6 at 8 p.m. in the "Pub" in the Student Services Building.

This was the last of a series of Fine Arts programs presented by the College during the past academic year. The program was held in the Student Services Building after the concert.

Mr. Owens presented a program of "pop" and "swing" as well as medleys of universally popular music.

Born in Greenwood, S. C., Mr. Owens studied music at the Patterson Conservatory of Music. He has also entertained in the Jacksonville area with his combo, "The Tremolos."

Mr. Owens has presented several concerts in the area. He performed for the Jacksonville Fine Arts Program in 1964, the Wilmington Organ Society at Thalian Hall in 1965, and has performed periodically at the Wilmington Hammond Organ Society.

Mr. Owens also teaches the organ and is the supervisor of the music teaching department of the Johnson Music House in Jacksonville.

College Board Of Trustees Holds Meeting

Members of the Board of Trustees at Wilmington College heard Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College, describe plans for the new library building and chemistry-physics building Tuesday, March 28, at the regular meeting of the Trustees at the College.

Dr. Randall informed the board that architects are going ahead with plans on the two proposed structures, which are expected to be built from both state and federal funds.

The Board of Trustees approved the proposed "B" budget which will be submitted to the next legislature and passed a motion which will allow Dr. Randall to add any additional requests he might consider necessary.

The "B" budget, as approved, provides additional services not now offered by the College and calls for $248,791 in 1967 and a total of $327,502 for 1968-69.

L. Bradford Tillery, chairman of the Board, suggested that a Booster's Club be formed to supplement the athletic budget at Wilmington College.

Closing Of Radio Station

By SHIRLEY MANNING

Unfortunately, the Wilmington College Radio Station, WVPS has been closed. More unfortunate, it looks as if the station is going to stay closed.

Let us consider some of the facets of the radio station. First, the advantages of having a station. The first, is that learning to operate the station gives the staff valuable experience. Secondly, the station provides entertainment.

Let us consider another facet of WVPS . . . why it was closed. For those of you who aren't familiar with what happened the staff broke a rule which stated that no ads could be sold for WVPS. How did they do this? They asked for contributions, or equipment such as a filing cabinet or swivel chair, in return for air time. The rule had been made because (1) it concerned money and (2) that would entail bookkeeping, and finally (3) being operated under the state as Wilmington College, is, the books would have required auditing. In short, selling ads was more trouble than it was worth.

Three members, Don Skipper, Hank Blaustein, and Michael Shea, were guilty either of selling the ads or in the knowledge of their being sold. But, their intentions were honorable. They were doing what they did in the interest of WVPS. Nevertheless, they broke the rule. Instead of suspending them from the staff of WVPS, and possibly putting them on probation, the entire station was closed on orders from Dean Thomas P. Brown.

The next facet we will consider, is the turning over of the station matter into the hands of the Student Affairs Committee, comprised of Mr. Brown, Frank Allen, Walter Allen, Mrs. Helena Cheek, Mrs. Elisabeth Pearsall, Roger Webb, Kitty O'Brien, and Bobby King. The Committee decided to let the student body vote on the matter, and then the problem was turned over to the Student Government who conducted an ineffective, non-conclusive poll of the student body. Interestingly enough, all but two of the students polled, said to re-open the station. The report was turned over to Dean Brown, March 28.

Doug Swink, head advisor of the station, said, "I feel that it is totally unjust to the rest of the students involved directly with the radio station to be punished or denied the opportunity of learning to operate the station, due to infractions of rules by two or three. Also, I feel there is a certain amount of incompetence or failure to exercise proper and expedient measures by the dean or faculty."

What is the trouble? Our last consideration must necessarily conclude with that question, for nothing concrete can be said. Some questions might be raised, but who would answer them?

Accreditation Nears

Things are really buzzing around this campus. It started about two years ago when the aim, "That mind and soul, according well, may make one music as before, but vaster," and the purpose of Wilmington College was written.

Since that time the pace has speeded up. Last year a committee visited the College and urged that the process of accrediting be pushed up one year. This past Fall quarter the faculty started on their departmental reports. Each member of the faculty had some area of their department to cover in their report.

The Board of Trustees is also doing a study. This will be included in the final report to the accreditation bureau.

Perhaps the first visible sign of the self-study was the spot questionnaires passed out in the library. It was to find out if the facilities were being used, and if they were adequate.

Recently the student body was asked to answer a questionnaire. This questionnaire was designed to cover all facets of life at Wilmington College. It was really the first attempt at finding out why the students chose Wilmington College.

It is possible that Wilmington College will be accredited in the latter part of 1967. It will be retroactive to the first Senior graduating class of 1965.

Being accredited will be of much importance to the past graduates as well as the future graduates of Wilmington College. It will aid them in securing prestige as a graduate of a four year accredited school. This will also make many desired positions more easily attained. If asked to help with this task, the student should do so with eagerness and thoughtfulness for he will greatly benefit.

Letter Written

To The Editor:

For the past 11 years Wilmington College has been host to the Southeastern North Carolina District Science Fair and for the past 11 years the Engineer's Club of Wilmington College has provided assistance in setting up the exhibits, running the movies, "policing" the fair, and cleaning up afterwards.

Each year these young men are complimented by the exhibitors and their teachers for the courteous and efficient way they handle their duties. This year they deserve a special vote of thanks since they came out on a Saturday during the quarter "break" to help out.

On behalf of the College which they so ably represented and the Science Fair Committee whom they helped immeasurably, our thanks to Ken Hurrell, Hubert Hoffman, Jerry O'Quinn, Dick Johnson, Jerry Waldorf, Gene Fales, Tom Timney, Bobby Lee, Duncan McFadyen, David Culp, Bill Pate, and their adviser, Col. Gorham.

For the Science Fair Committee,

A Kiss May Lead To Tooth Decay

(ACP)—From the University of Miami comes news which may revolutionize the dating habits in America, says the Daily Reveille, Louisiana State University.

Dental researchers there have discovered that tooth decay is a highly contagious disease rather than a hereditary defect.

At first this may seem insignificant. However, upon closer examination, who would knowingly destroy his ivory smile or earn himself a premature set of false teeth simply because he had been kissing the wrong girl?

Dr. Doran D. Zimmer, one of the researchers confirmed that tooth decay was caused by certain types of mouth bacteria. The dentist-microbiologist asserts that these bacteria are transmitted by direct contact, using case histories of rats, hamsters and humans to prove it.

A person will now need to check a prospective date's dental history as well as other vital statistics. The question arises of how this may be done without arousing suspicion.

Zimmer announced that the best tooth decay protection comes from the use of flourides. Here is a positive area for discrimination. Once a person knows where his date is from, he need merely check his pocket guide of flouridated water supplies in the United States. If the local supply is flouridated, then he can be sure by subtly plying her with water.

Another method which might prove helpful calls for a bit of sleuthing. By staking out in the drugstore, one could take note of what kind of toothpaste she buys.

With this social problem exposed, one can with proper precaution be sure before saying "Pucker up."

Exhibition On Display

A two man exhibition by husband and wife, Judy and Lamar Lynes, opened Sunday, April 3, at Wilmington College in Hoggard Hall with a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. This was the sixth in a series of monthly exhibitions held by the College Art Department every year.

Lamar Lynes was born in La Grange, Ga., and received his AB degree from Emory University and his Master of Fine Arts degree from the University of Georgia. He has been a member of the faculty of the Woman's College of Georgia since 1962, where he is assistant professor of art.

In discussing contemporary art, Mr. Lynes said, "A painting becomes eloquent only when its concerns are uniquely visual. As far as I am concerned, the rest is of very little consequence."

"It does seem incredible that after 50 years or so of having non-figurative paintings around, we should still be expected to defend the fact that they are non-figurative."

Mrs. Lynes agreed with her husband on a modern philosophy of art. "I think it's sad that painting is talked about so much but discussed so little. At times it becomes more verbal than visual."

"These paintings on display make it clear what I think about painting. Never has by work been so stripped of superficial frills. Never has it been more impossible to excuse it with words, nor less necessary to offer an explanation."

Judy Allen Lynes was born in St. Petersburg, Fla. and in 1961 received her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from the University of Georgia. Since 1962 she has taught art in the public schools in Mill-Edgeville, Ga.

Among the group exhibition in which her work has been included are: Association of Georgia Artists Annual, Wesleyan College Annual, Gardens Art Exhibition and Southeastern Annual Exhibition. Mrs. Lynes has also had a one-man show at the Woman's College of Georgia.

Mr. Lynes has had several one-man exhibitions including those held at the University of Georgia and the Woman's College of Georgia. Group shows in which Mr. Lynes has exhibited include: Association of Georgia Artists Annual, Southeastern Exhibition of Prints and Drawings, Winston-Salem Gallery of Fine Arts, Wesleyan College Annual and Southeastern Exhibition of Paintings.

The exhibition will remain on view throughout the month of April and will be open to the public on weekdays from 8:30 a.m. until 9 p.m.

To The Editor:

I would like to question the action taken by the administration to punish the student body by the closing of the radio station. I feel that the person directly responsible could be disciplined without causing the rest of the students to suffer the lack of a radio facility especially since the faculty advisor was not even aware of the persons improper actions. Specifically, I object to:

- 1) An incomplete investigation being held before remedial action was taken.
- 2) The students were not informed of the reasons for closing the station or circumstances provoking this action.
- 3) No opportunity for defense or justification being allowed to the rest of the radio staff.
- 4) The students as a whole being allowed no means through which they could adjust the situation, especially relevant since this is a student sponsored activity through student funds for student enjoyment.

Many students want to see the station reopened this year. This means that the Student Affairs Committee must reconsider their decision to close it for the rest of this school year.

Will other students please speak to the members of this committee and encourage them to restore the station immediately. Once it is restored we, the students, can help to improve it and make it more representative of what we want.

Teacher Interviews

Former Wilmington College student, Charles Barnhill, has returned here to teach in the mathematics department.

After attending Wilmington College Mr. Barnhill received his B.S. degree from North Carolina State University at Raleigh. He later attended Appalachian State Teachers College for his masters degree. He plans to go to the University of North Carolina this summer to "hopefully" work on another degree.

Mr. Barnhill's last year at Wilco was the first year the college moved to the new campus. He has noticed quite a change in the philosophy of the school since he was a student here.

"I had always enjoyed school," he stated, "but had never thought about teaching until I was a senior."

Reading math books is one of Mr. Barnhill's hobbies. He also includes weight lifting and karate as some of his interests.

Another new teacher in the mathematics department is Allen J. Barwick, who is also teaching physics.

Mr. Barwick has a degree in engineering but minored in math for his masters degree, and stated, "Math is probably my major interest."

He attended the Merchant Marine Academy in New York for two years. One year was spent sailing on a merchant vessel. During that year he traveled over 100 thousand miles and visited over 25 different countries.

Mr. Barwick decided that he wasn't cut out to be a seaman and returned to the North Carolina State University at Raleigh where he got his B.S. in engineering and later his masters.

Always having a desire to teach, Mr. Barwick enjoys it more than working in industry, which he did for a year. He hopes to make a career of teaching.

Mr. Barwick is now working on his Ph.D. during the summer at State.

His hobbies include bridge, golf, and collecting sea shells. One attraction for his coming to Wilmington was the closeness to the sea.

Sports Talk by Don Evans

A Tribute To Jay

His walk was slightly pigeon-toed and his hair often flopped when he ran up and down the basketball court.

His attitude was cocky, and often he was unable to control his temper.

However, no matter how you describe Jay Neary, the name of his game was class. No other basketball player in the history of Wilmington College played a better all-around game of basketball. His shooting was good and his passing was superb, sometimes spectacular. His moves that produced close to 2000 points were incomparable.

When recent All-American teams were chosen, Jay was conspicuously missing. But do not use this as a guideline to his true ability. Many things contributed to his absence from consideration. Probably the major reason is the lack of an athletic publicity director at the college. Adding also was the fact that he played on a mediocre team as well as playing in a town with an impotent local newspaper with no national pull.

Everyone knew that he had too much class for the competition he faced, but the factor most overlooked is the fact that he played for a College that has no class itself. Jay Neary put a lot of hard work into his basketball and turned a poor basketball team into one that was capable of making a respectable showing.

But where were the ceremonies that a big star like Jay Neary so truly deserved? At the Asheville-Biltmore game, there was no mention that it was his last game or any action by the student body to show they appreciated his excellent ability. It is time for Wilmington College to wake up. The Student Council and Pep Club should get on the ball and show us that they can act. Or can they?

Jay Neary played the brand of basketball that retires jerseys to trophy cases at other colleges. Is his number 34 in ours? Don't bet on it!

Attendance

Where is everybody? As of now, there has been an average of about 50 students at each home baseball game. Most of these are wives or girl friends of the players. Of course, this is to be expected from the students of Wilmington College, the only school in the state where visiting teams laugh at its attendance.

The games start at 3:00 and are usually over at around 5:30. Most students are through with classes at that time, so there should be no conflict there. It all boils down to one fact: Wilmington College has no pride in its athletics. Granted the baseball team is not going to win any big championships, but they do play an exciting brand of baseball that is only a step behind the "big" colleges in the state.

It is time for the students of Wilmington College to get behind its team and help them to a successful season. The next home game is April 26 against Wesleyan. Let's see if more of us can show up than has been the case in the past.

Whitfield Hurls Shutout Over Visiting S. Conn.

Doyle Whitfield, Seahawk right-hander, hurled a 5-hit 3-0 shutout over visiting Southern Connecticut State. Ken Miller knocked in two runs with a sixth inning single and Glen Mills accounted for the other one with a seventh inning homer, the first of the year for the Hawks.

Whitfield, in constant trouble, was aided by the strong fielding of his teammates. Connecticut had base runners in all but two innings, but left eight runners on base.

In the first, Whitfield issued the first of his six base on balls. However a fine throw by catcher Mills caught the runner stealing. After Whitfield gave up a single and a walk in the second with no outs, center fielder Sandy Dew made a perfect throw to double up Connecticut's centerfielder Torres after a fly ball. Then in the third, a Bill Harris to Dan Whisnant to Wray Ware doubleplay killed yet another rally.

Wilmington, held at bay for five innings by Russ Brooder, struck out in the sixth. Whisnant singled to center to open the inning. Whitfield, trying to sacrifice, forced Whisnant at second. Harris, in turn, forced him at second. Dew then kept the rally going by singling to deep short. Both Harris and Dew moved up a base on a wild pitch to set the stage for Miller's big hit.

Then, in the seventh, Mills opened by slamming a 2-2 pitch from Brooder far over the left-center-field fence to round out the scoring. It was Mills' second hit of the game. Whisnant also had two hits by striking out a single and double. S. Conn. 000 000 000-0 5 0 Wilmington 000 002 10x-3 8 1

All-Star Team

An Intramural All-Star team has been chosen by the members of the 12-team league. Championship team Aces placed only one member while runnerup Jets and sixth-place Circle-K Club placed two members each.

The players chosen to the team are: Gene King (Jets), Sterling Coward (Jets), Chuck Lewis (Aces), Joe King (Circle K), Wayne Kellum (Circle K), Wynn Moore (WVPS), Eddie Lemon (Independents), and Larry Corbett (Stuclcoats).

Seahawks Play Colby

After losing two practice games with Camp Lejeune, the Seahawk baseball team returned to Wilmington to play a three-game series with Colby College of Maine on April 1 and April 2.

The Seahawks lost the first game of the series 6-3. Both teams collected ten hits, but Colby was able to put theirs to better advantage in the clutch. Ed Lemon pitched eight innings and gave up all the runs, four of them earned. Percy Wood came on in the ninth and allowed two of the Colby hits but no runs.

Colby drew first blood in the third. Colby firstbaseman Phillips opened the inning with an infield hit and continued to second when SS Bill Harris threw wild to first. Phillips was then sacrificed to third where he scored on an infield out. They struck again in the fifth. A walk by Lemon, a sacrifice, and a single scored one run and the second run of the inning scored on another throwing error by Harris.

Wilmington first scratched in the seventh. A double by Pete Daughtry and a single by Wayne Johnson sandwiched around an out put runners on first and third. Freshman second baseman Dan Whisnant then scored Daughtry with a sacrifice fly.

Colby then put the game out of reach with a three-run eighth. After one was out, two singles off Lemon and a groundout put runners on second and third. Another single scored one and a double scored Colby's fifth and sixth run of the game.

After blowing a good chance in their half of the eighth, the Seahawks closed out their scoring in the last half of the ninth. With one out, singles by Whisnant and pinch-hitter Jim Parmenter and a throwing error put runners on second and third. An infield hit by Harris and a fielder's choice by Sandy Dew scored the last two runs.

The second game of the double-header was stopped after five innings because of strong winds and threatening darkness. The score stood 0-0 and featured brilliant pitching by Jim Braxton who allowed only a scratch single and struck out seven.

WILMINGTON 9 - COLBY 5

Wilmington batters slapped out six hits and scored five runs in the bottom of the eighth inning as the Seahawks rallied to defeat Colby 9-5 and gain a split in the series. Vic Johnson pitched eight innings before being pulled for a pinch-hitter and received credit for the win. Doyle Whitfield came on and closed out the ninth. Glen Mills was the hitting star for the Hawks by slamming out two hits and driving in three runs. Bill Harris and Ken Miller also had two hits for the Hawks.

In the decisive eighth, with Wilmington trailing 5-4, Jim Hall opened with an infield hit off the pitcher's glove. Wray Ware then slashed out a triple to left-center to score Hall and tie the game. After Dan Whisnant was intentionally walked, pinch-hitter Wayne Johnson looped a single to right to score Ware with the decisive run and to send Whisnant to third. Harris then scored Whisnant with a single, but Johnson was out at third on the relay from the outfield. Sandy Dew then tripled to deep center to score Harris, and himself scored on a single by catcher Mills.

Wilmington had opened strong with three runs in the first, but allowed Colby to rally for the lead. Bill Harris opened the game with a double that bounded over the centerfield fence. Dew was safe on an infield error and Ken Miller drew a walk to load the bases. All runners eventually scored on a single by Mills, a sacrifice fly by Pete Daughtry, and an error on a grounder by first baseman Ware.

Colby tied the game with three in the fourth and went ahead with one in the sixth. Wilmington then momentarily tied the game in the seventh when Mills scored Dew on a sacrifice fly. It was Dew's second of the three runs he scored in the game. Colby then took the lead again in the eighth by scoring one run on a walk by Vic Johnson and a double by Colby's firstbaseman Snow. It was then that Wilmington started the rally that meant victory. Colby 000 301 010-5 8 5

BASEBALL TEAM

The Wilmington College baseball team increased its season record to 7-4 by winning four games and losing two over the Easter holiday. As has been the case all season, outstanding pitching and spotty hitting have been the major characteristics of the team. Up to this point in the season, the ERA of the pitching staff is under a sensational 2.0, while the team batting average is only .250.

LETTERS TO EDITOR Apathy, Tennis, WVPs

Why is it that we seem to have become increasingly apathetic about our own endeavors? I am not alone in this. I have noticed that many of our fellow students are not interested in the college because they are not interested in the future.

Coalition Causes Comment

While the student body is divided into many different groups, the coalition of these groups is causing a lot of comment. The coalition is a group of students who are interested in the future of the college. They are interested in the future of the college because they are interested in the future of the country.

Lemon Pitches 3-0 Game

Senior lefthander Ed Lemon pitched the outstanding game of the season for the Hawks by blanking St. Andrews 3-0 on only one hit. Lemon allowed only four baserunners in winning his third consecutive complete game, in which he has allowed only one earned run.

The only St. Andrews hit was a single by second baseman Fredrick leading off the fourth inning. Up to that point, Lemon had retired the first nine hitters.

Bill Harris had triples in the third and eighth innings that led to two runs. Sandy Dew had two sacrifice flies that scored Harris both times he tripled. Harris' second triple scored Lemon who had opened with a single. It was Lemon's second hit of the game and his eighth in his last thirteen times at bat. His average is now .533.

Wilmington's record jumped to 10-5.

Apology

Mistakes will happen. Twice they have, and to the same person. For two years in a row, THE SEAHAWK has run the wrong picture with Paul Bergen's write-up underneath it. To Mr. Bergen, we apologize, and promise that it will not happen again.

The picture in the last issue of THE SEAHAWK was that of Johnny Gore.

HAWKEYE... BY DON EVANS TOM COLE LEADS ACC

It was not surprising to those who know Tom Cole to see that he is leading the Atlantic Coast Conference in hitting. Latest official statistics show Tom batting .468 and possessing a large lead over Danny Talbott of UNC.

Tom has to rank as the best hitter to ever play at Wilmington. He was a freshman the year Wilmington won the National Championship of Junior Colleges. He led the team that year with an average of .424 as well as leading the team in RBI's. The next year he "tailed off" to .385. It was then that he began gaining attention from college coaches as well as professional scouts.

The decision to transfer to Wake Forest was a very hard one for him. He liked Wilmington College, but he knew that his chances to play pro baseball would be enhanced by playing at a better known and larger school.

His success at Wake last year was not instant. He got off to a slow start that included a streak where he went only two for 33 on the road. A late surge raised his average to .296, but the important thing was that his average against members of the ACC was about .375 and he tied for the league lead in doubles and RBI's. This enabled Tom to be chosen to the All-ACC team while compiling the third most votes in the league.

Determined more than ever to atone for last year, Tom started off this year with a bang. On the same road trip that had proven so disastrous to him last year, Tom followed up a day of 4 for 4 with one of 5 for 5. That streak soon ended, but only after he had 10 hits in a row.

Tom was always a quiet and easy-going guy, but he had one bad habit. He used to like to tear the heads off fielders with his vicious line drives. Very few of his hits were flukes, because he always got good wood on the ball. His fielding and throwing were good, and his speed was decent.

Once again Tom Cole has scouts flocking to see him play and drooling over his talents. It is the wish of everyone here at Wilmington College that success always follow him.

Sophomore Paul Bergen still holds the lowest average among the Seahawk golfers. Bergen has maintained a 76 average to place ahead of Robert Parker through eight rounds that they have played. The team is now 2-8 after taking double losses in two recent triangular meets.

	Rounds	Strokes	Average	Low
(1) Bergen	8	608	76.0	70
(2) Parker	8	630	78.8	74
(3) Gore	8	633	79.1	75
(4) Murray	8	657	82.1	78

Seahawks Sweep Series

Bill Harris' booming home run in the top of the tenth inning gave the Seahawks a 3-1 win over Davidson and a sweep of the two game series. The victory went to big Jim Braxton who went all the way, allowing only five hits and striking out twelve. He walked only three.

Pete Daughtry opened the decisive tenth by reaching first on an error by the Davidson third baseman Lindsey. After two strikeouts, Harris uncorked the winning blow.

Davidson had scored first in the fifth on three consecutive singles after two were out. The Hawks then rallied to tie in the sixth with Glen Mills again coming through in the clutch. After two were out, Ken Miller slapped out a single and scored on a Mills' double.

Braxton had killed a Wildcat threat in the second. A single and two walks loaded the bases, but Braxton bore down and whipped his fast ball past the next three batters for strikeouts. Again in the seventh, a Braxton strikeout left the bases loaded.

Mills was the only Hawk hitter with two hits. He also had one RBI, while Harris' homer accounted for the other two.

Dr. Wm. Randall Issues Memo On Courts

In a memo from Dr. William M. Randall, president of Wilmington College, he has issued the following statements concerning the tennis courts:

"The tennis courts were built with appropriated funds as a part of the equipment of the Department of Physical Education for teaching purposes.

"When they are not in use by the Department, they may be used by students and faculty members, provided adequate supervision be provided.

"The college has no budgeted funds to provide for such supervision on Sundays. The members of the faculty have been informed that if they will provide responsible supervision on Sunday, the courts will be opened for faculty and student use."

Trustees Elect New Directors

The Wilmington College Board of Trustees, April 26 elected 11 directors of the Wilmington College Foundation.

To serve one-year terms are J. Fred Rippy, H. A. Marks, and Frederick Coville, R. D. Schwartz, Harry E. Payne, W. Mervin Rowe Jr., and Harry Kanner will serve two-year terms.

Named to a term of three years were John H. Fox, Samuel D. Bissette, Peter B. Ruffin, and Thomas H. Wright, Jr.

The new Foundation directors met last Thursday at the College to reorganize.

The Wilmington College Foundation has made the accumulation of funds over and above State funds, its prime aim. The Foundation, to date has raised over $40,000 in endowment funds which assist the academic program of the College.

Dr. C. E. Hatfield, chairman of the Board of Directors stresses the importance of the work of the Foundation. "Through this Foundation interested citizens can assure an expanded educational program which will better meet the needs of the area and the students served by Wilmington College."

Seahawks Drub N. C. Wesleyan

Dovle Whitfield pitched a 5-hitter and Chuck Lewis drove in four runs with three singles as the Seahawks drubbed visiting North Carolina Wesleyan of Rocky Mount 11-0. The win was Whitfield's third against a single loss.

The Hawks scored one run in the second, one in the fourth, two in the fifth, four in the sixth, and three in the seventh. Lewis, the Hawks' reserve catcher, drove in single runs in the fourth and seventh and two in the sixth.

Whitfield, a junior right-hander, struck out 13 and allowed only one walk. Dan Whisnant was the only other Hawk with two hits and scored two runs. Pete Daughtry also scored two runs for the Hawks who rapped out 11 hits.

The team then prepared to travel to Buies Creek for a game with Campbell on April 28, but it was postponed to a later date because of heavy rains.

"THE MAN IN THE DOG SUIT" FINAL SEASON'S PRODUCTION

The final production for this 1965-66 season by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalias will be "The Man in the Dog Suit." This comedy will be presented on May 13, 14, and 15 at Thalian Hall. Curtain rises promptly at 8:30 p.m.

"The Man in the Dog Suit" is a wholesome, family-show written by Albert Beich and William H. Wright from a novel by Edwin Corle. It premiered on Broadway in late 1958 with Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy in the lead roles.

The plot of this comedy about unconventional treats of Oliver Walling (George Deaton), who is a bank teller, and his wife, Martha (Mary Adams). Both conform by living in suburbia, belonging to the country club, wearing the right clothes and behaving themselves without "disturbing the waters and making waves".

Naturally, all this does not make them happy, for the authors are telling the one about the little man who revolts.

All of Oliver's good fortune is owed to his wife's family headed by Mrs. Louisa Stoddard (Edith Huggins) and her sons, Stewart (Robert Wood) and George (Bill Weir). George's wife Eileen Stoddard (Sally Rea), has her own escapism from this sham life and it comes bottled and bonded.

Oliver Walling works for Martha's brother-in-law, Henry Gaxton (Sam Garner), a bank president, Lotty Gaxton (Jean Rogers). Henry's wife, is a long-time conformist. Anthony Roberti (Art Bannion), is a young nephew who is being forced into this mad world of molded manhood and Oliver tries to save him.

Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at Wilmington College, is the technical director and Randy Del Lago is the stage manager. Carole Benton and Terry Wortley are the prompters while properties are being handled by Myra Blake, Elizabeth Bridgers, and Isobelle Hobbs.

Construction crew is busy adding final touches to the scenery while property and furniture crew gather necessary items to complete the set of a living room in modern suburbia. Those concerned with the building of the set are: Ray Bordeaux, Jim Brothers, Dick Debnam, Bob Greer, Jim Kaylor, Bob McCord, Charles Newkirk, James Stinson, Terry Turner, and Dan Whisnant.

Richard Thompson is the sound technician and Sandy Carr and Hoyle Foster are handling the lighting. The Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity will act as ushers for this production.

Director Doug W. Swink states that "this is a delightful comedy geared for the whole family. The cast is busily engaged in rehearsals and the play itself concerns the hilarious situations of involvement which surround a man trying desperately to retain his identity in a suffocating sea of conforming conservatives."

Take your good time going home.

Fly half-fare on Eastern via Florida.

Florida swings in the spring—but it really swings in the summer.

Lower off-season room rates are in effect. And Eastern will take you to Daytona or Ft. Lauderdale or even Miami for half-fare.

So take a detour and enjoy it on your way home. Or go home first and down to Florida later.

Just use your Eastern Youth ID card, or similar card from another airline. If you don't have such a card, it's a snap to get one—provided you're under 22 and can prove it. For the specifics, stop by a Travel Agent or any Eastern ticket office.

Once you have your card, you can get an Eastern Jet Coach seat for half-fare. You can't make an advance reservation. But if there's a seat available at departure time, you can fly to any Eastern destination within the continental U.S. including Florida.

NASA Speaker Gives Lecture

The faculty committee on lectures at Wilmington College had as its initial speaker, Egon E. Kafka, Apollo Vehicle Test Planning Manager at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Kafka addressed the faculty and students of Wilmington College at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, April 19, in the Student Services Building on the subject of "Project Apollo—America's Manned Lunar Landing Program."

The Apollo Program of landing two American astronauts on the lunar surface by 1970 was discussed in terms of the required hardware, astronaut training facilities, and earth orbital flight program, and briefly touched on the Apollo Application Program which describes NASA's follow-on goals beyond the lunar program.

"We were very pleased to have a man of Mr. Kafka's caliber as the first speaker in our newly inaugurated Lecture Series," Walser Allen said. "The College plans a complete series of lectures during the next academic year. The Committee is planning the series to cover a wide scope of interest to faculty, students, and the community."

Mr. Kafka is responsible for the overall development, qualification, ground and flight test planning for the Saturn IB and Saturn V vehicle programs. In 1949 he graduated from the University of Denver, where he completed his studies in Aeronautical Engineering and Business Management. He spent seven years in the airline industry, and seven years with the Martin Company in Baltimore, Maryland, before joining NASA in 1962.

Prior to his present position he managed the S-1 and S-1B stage project in NASA Headquarters, and worked in the Apollo Program Control department on the Saturn V vehicle project.

Mr. Kafka is a member of various engineering societies, and resides with his wife, son, and daughter in Baltimore, Md.

In addition to his talk at Wilmington College, the speaker addressed the Wilmington Rotary Club on the subject of Manned Space Flight. His talks were illustrated by slides and a recently released NASA space film.

Mr. Beverly

Another new member of the business department is John Graham Beverly.

Mr. Beverly received his B.S. in business administration from the University of Florida and his M.S. at Florida State University. He is presently working on his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina.

Mr. Beverly has taught at Florida State and also at UNC.

"I come from a family of teachers. Teaching just seemed to be the thing to do. I do enjoy teaching very much," said Mr. Beverly.

"I was pleasantly surprised and pleased with the quality of the students here," said Mr. Beverly.

Mr. Beverly has "quiet" hobbies as furniture refinishing, gardening, and piano tuning.

Pi Sigma Mu Has Initiation

Five new brothers were initiated into Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity Saturday, March 26. The new brothers are Gary Chadwick, Marty Farrar, Andy Futrelle, John Noe, and Frank Wooten.

Their induction climaxed a quarter of pledgship.

March 28 through April 3 was rush week for the fraternity. Snokers were held on Tuesday and Thursday nights of that week. A rush party on Saturday night was held at the Press Club in downtown Wilmington. Music was provided by the Impacts, a local combo.

On Tuesday, April 5, three men were inducted into pledgship. The new pledges of Pi Sigma Mu for the spring quarter are Butch Huffman, Tom Tinney, and Norman York. If these men complete the pledgship period, they will be initiated into Pi Sigma Mu at the end of the quarter.

Wilmington Opens Series With Davidson

Wilmington opened a two game road series with Davidson College by whipping the Wildcats 4-1. Vic Johnson paced the victory by limiting the Southern Conference foe to six hits while striking out 10. He walked only two.

The Hawks scored first in the fourth inning with back-to-back extra base hits. Right fielder Ken Miller opened the inning with a sharp double. Miller then scored on a long triple by catcher Glen Mills, who has been the Hawks' most potent hitter this season. However, he was stranded there.

Davidson then momentarily tied the game in the fifth when star shortstop Him Hyder lashed out an inside-the-park home run. Other than Hyder's homer, Davidson never mounted a severe rally against the hard throwing Johnson.

Wilmington then sewed up the game with a three run outburst in the sixth. Consecutive singles by Sandy Dew, Miller, and Mills loaded the bases. Jim Hall then followed with a sharp single to score Dew and Miller. Two outs later, a single by Dan Whisnant scored Mills with the final run of the game.

Dew, Miller, and Mills had two hits each. Hall had two RBI's while Mills and Whisnant had one each.

Cupid's Arrow Now Mechanized

Taken from the Technician, student newspaper of N. C. State College at Raleigh.

Many college students today are feeling the prick of Cupid's arrow shot from a mechanized bow. Cupid's newest assistant is an IBM computer.

Students at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina, had the opportunity last fall to participate in operation match, a computer matching project. Each girl answered a personality test especially designed for college students and their dating habits. She then sent in her answer sheet and three dollars. The Winthrop students were matched with boys in North Carolina colleges.

Within a few weeks names and addresses were sent to Operation Match participants. Excited looks could be seen on the Winthrop campus as girls began receiving letters that began "You don't know me, but . . ."

One boy, however, departed from this standard form. His entire letter consisted of two sentences. "Letters to someone you don't know are hard to write, but since the computer say we are interested in the same things, this interests me. If it interests you, let me know."

Students were matched on the basis of such things as interest, attitudes, and qualities looked for in an ideal date. Some of the questions asked were "Do you think romantic love is necessary for a successful marriage?" "Do you smoke?" and "What is your political affiliation?"

Not only did each student answer the questions as they pertained to herself, but she also answered them in the way she would like her ideal date to answer. Each student also answered questions concerning the physical appearance of her ideal date.

Although many of the matches made with Winthrop students have been quite successful, the general attitude seems to be one of disappointment. For many of the Winthrop students, the computer seems to take all the romance out of dating. As one girl said, "a machine can't take the place of mother nature herself."

Most of the girls agreed that a fallacy in Operation Match is that it is impossible to match emotional qualities. In many cases interests were very similar, but there was a personality clash. Cindy C., a sophomore, said, "a lot of people are interested in the same things I am, and I still don't like them."

Another common complaint was that the two people were too much alike. Anne D., a sophomore, had this to say about one of her Operation Match dates. "we were too closely matched. There was nothing different about us. It seems like I get along better with boys I just meet other places."

Many of the girls at Winthrop never heard from any of the boys they matched with. Patsy F., a junior, said, "I'm benefiting more from the friends of my roommate's matches than I am from my own matches."

Most girls feel they were forward enough just to send in the Operation Match questionnaire and did so with the idea that the boys would act first. One enterprising girl found a solution to this problem. She made valentines and sent one to each boy on her list. She received letters from all of them.

Also, many girls felt that they expected too much since this match was supposed to be her ideal date. This attitude easily led to disappointment when the date did not turn out to be the looked for knight in shining armor.

Operation Match has led to some ironic situations. One girl who took part was told by her boyfriend that she should not have wasted her money on such a ridiculous experiment. When she received her list of matches, his name was on it.

Even machines sometimes make mistakes. One disillusioned girl received the names of ten other girls.

Many girls said they did not feel they were matched well enough and thought the people answering the questionnaire should be more honest. Several girls were especially disappointed when they

An ambitious lawyer, wanting to impress a prospective client with his importance and wealth, buzzed his secretary on the intercom.

"Miss Collins," he barked. "Get me my broker."

"Which one," came the reply, "stock or pawn?"

Shoe department manager, to customer: "Yes, we have a selection of loafers. I'll see if I can get one to wait on you."

Bill: How do you keep your roommate from reading your mail?

Bob: Easy. I just hide my letters in his textbooks.

A typical reaction was stated by Barbara A., a junior, "You win some; you lose some."

Connie F. was glad she did not participate. "I'm glad I didn't waste three dollars" was her reaction to a friend's date with a mismatched boy.

Many girls took part in Operation Match because they felt it was a good way to meet people, especially at a girls' school. However, there is general agreement on the Winthrop College campus that machines will never replace Cupid.

May Dance, A Gala Affair

Lovely ladies, handsome men, and "music, music, music"—such was the scene at the Covenant Club Saturday night, May 7, as the 1966 May Dance became a reality for Wilmington College students.

A crowd of approximately 200, appropriately dressed in formal attire, were present to witness the crowning of Memory Farrar, who succeeded Kitty O'Brien, as May Queen. The 1966 May Queen, escorted by Mike Taylor, was crowned by Thomas Burke.

Others in the Queen's Court were Kitty O'Brien, maid of honor, escorted by John Henry Brunjes; Diane Sellers, escorted by Joe Blackburn; Diana Smith, escorted by Roy Frantzen; Sherry Lackey, escorted by Hank Cranford; Miriam Taylor, escorted by Bill Rowe; Janis Burris, escorted by Jim Joyce; Parker Bryant, escorted by Dr. Richard Corbett; Marie Lassiter, escorted by Celbron Fussell; and Patsy Futch, escorted by Johnny Gresson.

The guests danced to the music of the Continentals, a local band. Punch and cake were served at intermission. Due to much time and effort on the part of the dance committee, the decorations were beautiful, the program well-planned, and the dance a success—one of the best Wilmington College has sponsored, according to those who attended.

Music Recital Presented

On May 24 music students presented their quarterly recital with approximately 16 students taking part. These students were under the direction of William Adcock, Charles Woodward, and Robert Chapman.

The college band and chorus traveled to Pinehurst May 15 to present a program for the General Federation of Women's Clubs State Convention.

On May 30 there will be a program by the chorus and Top Twelve at a place to be announced, according to Loyd Hudson.

May 31 the band will present a program playing original student pieces as well as other "Pieces of music," said Mr. Hudson.

Sarah Elaine Fussell Scholarship Awarded

The Sarah Elaine Fussell Memorial Scholarship will be given for the first time this year to two students at Wilmington College. Established to provide assistance for students to attend Wilmington College, the memorial scholarship is in memory of Elaine Fussell who was a graduate of the Class of 1983 at New Hanover High School.

At the time of her death in September, 1964, as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident, she was a student at Wilmington College through a scholarship provided by the North Carolina Veterans Commission.

The scholarship was established by Harold H. Fussell in memory of his daughter. The initial scholarship award will be made to Sally June Johnson, one of the closest friends of Elaine Fussell, and Alan Ray Fussell, her brother, a member of the graduating class of 1966 at New Hanover High School, while they remain students of Wilmington College. These awards will become effective with the academic year beginning in the fall of 1966.

Jack Batson Receives An Assistantship

Jack Batson, a senior at Wilmington College, has received a $2,300 assistantship from the University of Tennessee located at Knoxville. He also received offers for an assistantship in chemistry from North Carolina State and Wake Forest.

The assistantship was judged on grades, and the Graduate Record Exam. Jack also had three letters of recommendation.

September 1, Jack will begin teaching nine hours per week plus doing research. He will graduate at the end of summer school.

Jack, who is a native of Wilmington, is married to the former Charlotte Piver of Hampstead. They have a daughter.

Chemistry Equipment To Be Purchased

Wilmington College has received a grant from the National Science Foundation for undergraduate instructional scientific equipment including library materials, Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College announced.

Dr. Will S. DeLoach, head of the chemistry department, and Dr. Frederick Hornack, associate professor of chemistry, said that part of the $3,300 grant will be used to purchase a piece of equipment for the physical chemistry courses and the remainder will be used to buy back files of periodicals pertaining to chemistry.

Periodicals to be purchased include: Journal of the American Chemical Society, Journal of Physical Chemistry, Journal of Organic Chemistry, Journal of Chemical Physics, Analytical Chemistry, and Journal of the Chemical Society (London).

In some cases the complete back file of the journals will be purchased, and in other cases a working back file will be bought, Dr. DeLoach said.

NSF Awards A Grant To Adcock

Louis H. Adcock, assistant professor of chemistry at Wilmington College, has been awarded a $1400 grant by the National Science Foundation for study leading to the Ph.D. degree in Analytical Chemistry at Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

This is the third consecutive summer Mr. Adcock has received a grant from the Foundation.

Mr. Adcock will begin research June 6 on "Mean Activity Coefficients of HCL in mixed solvents; Thermodynamics of Ligation. Electronic Spectra of Chelates."

Dr. Buddhadeu Sen of the University of Calcutta, India, will be Mr. Adcock's research director. Mr. Adcock is one of 20 applicants throughout the United States selected to receive the grant.

Slave Day

Alpha Chi Sigma is sponsoring a Slave Day. They had a car wash behind the Pub, one dollar per car. The car wash lasted from 8:15 til 4:30. Hondas were washed for a charge of 50 cents. The girls shined shoes for 25 cents and carried books for ten cents.

Elections Held;

It's spring, "and a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of . . ."—elections for officers for the 1966-1967 school year. A young woman's fancy runs in a similar manner; in fact, many women are considering thoughts of elections, for several women ran for offices in the student government and in the individual classes. These students, both women and men, were given a chance to voice campaign promises in an assembly held in the Pub on Wednesday morning, May 25, at 10:30.

In a primary on Thursday, May 19, John Noe, Carol Trebing, Eddie Anderson, and Charles Hawley vied for a chance to compete in the general election.

At the time THE SEAHAWK went to press, the results of the general election, held one week after the primary, were unknown. A list of the candidates and the students which they sought follows: student body president, Gregory N. Godwin; student body secretary, Yvonne Bonny Marshboun; senior class president, Virginia Baysden; senior class vice president, Joseph M. Cavenagh; senior class secretary, Carol Lee Merki; senior class senators, Norberto Machiran, Thomas Grant, Adron Hall, and Leon Thomas; junior class vice president, Sharon Scott; junior class secretary, Glenda Hayes; junior class senators, Linda K. Machiran, Margaret L. Long, Mary Jean Moore, Gail O'Rourke, and James D. Caison; sophomore class president, William M. Farrar; sophomore class vice president, Gary W. Chadwick; sophomore class senators, Vivian G. Harris, Lana Kaye Lewis, Sara B. Rivenbark, Margaret Ellen Davis, and Gaye Godwin; judicial council, William George Akel, John C. Meshaw, Jr., Cynthia L. Hardy, and Harold Spencer.

SPORTS TALK

With Don Evans

Jay Neary, 6-3 guard from Cameria Heights in New York City, became the first basketball player in the history of Wilmington College to be drafted by a professional basketball team when he was chosen in the seventh round by the St. Louis Hawks. Several teams had scouted Jay and were very interested in his many talents. Last year, he was drafted by the New York Knicks, but he chose to return for his senior year at Wilmington.

It is well known how he and Billy Cunningham both played on the same freshman team at UNC and had almost identical scoring averages. Just the fact that he had been recruited by Frank McGuire is clear testimony of his true ability. McGuire, now at South Carolina, has the reputation of having his choice of almost any New York high school player.

Jay's chances of sticking with St. Louis are enhanced by the fact that they are probably the weakest team in the NBA at guard. Len Wilkins is a mainstay, but Coach Richie Guerin, the other starter at guard, plans to quit as a player after next season. The only other guard the Hawks retained is Rod Thorn, who has never proven his merits as a pro after an illustrious career at West Virginia.

First thing in the future though is his marriage in New York on June 26. After the honeymoon, it will then be up to Jay to be in top shape when he has to report to rookie camp. That is, if he can resist eating too much of his attractive fiancée's cooking.

There has been much said in this corner about Jay Neary, but the fact remains that enough cannot be said about him. It is very seldom that a player of his ability comes to a school, much less a small one like Wilmington College. Too few of our students were able to appreciate him. But that doesn't matter. The pros do and they want him.

Final Golf Averages Compiled For Year

The Wilmington College golf team ended the season by losing matches to St. Andrews and Campbell. Their final record was 2-13. High scoring plagued the team all year as the statistics below show. Paul Bergen had the lowest average, but it was over 76. He and Johnny Gore scored the most individual points for the Year.

	Matches	Strokes	Average	Low
Paul Bergen	13	994	76.4	70
Robert Parker	13	1036	79.7	74
Johnny Gore	13	1036	79.7	75
Alan Murray	13	1063	81.8	75
Glen Hodges	13	1050	80.8	75
Alex McCrackin	13	1085	83.4	77

PORTRAIT OF A WINNER

Well, baseball season is over and the results seem so very familiar: A winning season. The person most responsible is Coach Bill Brooks. Last year was his worst season at 13-10, but he was molding a pitching staff that was to prove almost unmatched in the college ranks. This year's team was fairly inexperienced, with five freshmen starting the last part of the season. Coach Brooks was also able to bring here a young and capable coach in Dave Miller. All these assets added to this year's very successful record.

Coach Brooks has often been wrongly criticized by people who have nothing better to do. The truth is that he has added to the school enough to make it known as a power in the athletics field. It makes one wonder if everyone at Wilmington College were as capable, what would keep it from becoming as large and important as is planned?

Baseball season is in action as seen in this photo. Many fine players were seen, but by too few spectators.

This year the boys have put hard work into making Wilmington College a fine baseball team.

WILCO Bows To Pembroke

Pembroke, the top ranked college team in North Carolina, edged Wilmington 9-8 by scoring a run in the bottom of the 13th inning. The loss went to Jim Braxton who failed to get anyone out in the fateful inning. A walk, a passed ball, and a single spelled defeat for the Hawks.

Pembroke gained an early lead by scoring four runs in the first with some hard hitting and four in the second or some faulty Seahawk fielding. In the big first, Pembroke collected a single, two doubles, and a homerun.

Wilmington then rallied strongly with one run in the third, three in the sixth, and one in the seventh. In the sixth, the Hawks combined only two hits with four walks for their runs.

Their last rally tied the game in the ninth with three runs scored on three singles and three more walks. Wilmington actually outhit the Braves 11 hits to seven. Ed Lemon, who relieved starter Doyle Whitfield, pitched seven strong innings. He allowed only one scratch single.

Glen Mills, Wayne Johnson, and Wayne Bray all had two hits, while Jim Hall drove in two runs to lead in that department. In all, 22 Seahawk batters struck out.

Seahawks Defeat Wesleyan

Percy Wood went all the way and scored his first win of the year by defeating Wesleyan 8-4. He scattered 10 hits, while striking out eight and walking four.

Wesleyan scored first in the bottom of the first inning on a walk, an error, and a sharp single. They closed out their scoring in the eighth after the game had been decided with three runs.

Wilmington had scored four in the second with Wood aiding his own cause with a bases loaded single. Sandy Dew drove in the other runs in the inning. After scoring one in the fourth, they closed out their scoring in the eighth. Extra-base hits by Pete Daughtry and Jim Hall led the Hawks to three runs.

Hall had three hits to lead the Hawks, with Bill Harris, Dew, and Daughtry adding two each to the attack. Dew drove in three runs and Wood had two with his single.

Practice Game Successful

The Seahawk baseball team added four wins to its total with two practice games with Camp Lejeune and one each with St. Andrews and Campbell just before deadline.

The wins were featured by continued outstanding pitching by Wray Ware, Jim Braxton, Doyle Whitfield, and Ed Lemon. The best performance was Lemon's one-hitter over St. Andrews, in which he allowed only two base-runners. He retired the first 19 batters before allowing the only hit.

The Hawks' record was increased to 17-6 with only a rematch with Pembroke remaining on the official schedule. Practice games were also scheduled with Camp Lejeune and Atlantic Coast Conference Champion UNC.

Outstanding Players Chosen

The outstanding players for each athletic team of the past year have been chosen by the sports department of THE SEAHAWK. In some cases, the choice was a difficult one while others were obvious. Below is a rundown for each team.

SOCCER—

Bob Vaughn is the choice here. His work as goalie was one of the brighter spots in a winless season. Others were Dan Whisnant, Pete Daughtry, and Jim Joyce.

BASKETBALL—

Who else but Jay Neary here? His loss will sorely hurt next year's team. Others include Jim Hall, Butch Budd, Marshall Hamilton, and Jim Braxton.

WRESTLING—

Freshman Eddie Radford is the best of the younger wrestlers that made this year's team so successful. Others are Jim Joyce, Ken Cobb, and Jim Morrissey.

GOLF—

The outstanding golfer, without doubt, is Paul Bergen. Although the season was very disappointing, Robert Parker and Johnny Gore added some outstanding shots.

BASEBALL—

This was the hardest choice because so many had a good season. The result is a tossup between catcher Glen Mills and pitcher Ed Lemon. Because the pitchers were so outstanding, other standouts were Jim Braxton, Doyle Whitfield, and Vic Johnson. Outstanding freshmen were Sandy Dew and Dan Whisnant.

Bingles Win Championship

Regular season champs, The Bingles, won the Intramural Softball championship by sweeping the double elimination tournament without a loss.

Their clear superiority over the rest of the league is shown by the fact that they only lost one game the whole season. They were led by Coach Bill High, Mark Young, and hard hitting Jimmy Rich. The Batmen were the runnersup for the regular season and the tournament.

Coach David Miller, head of the intramurals programs, was pleased with the season with the exception of a lack of interest by some people. He was quick to point out the apathy in the two fraternities. One fraternity did not even enter a team and the other one had to forfeit numerous games due to a shortage of players failing to show up.

Coach Miller thinks that the fraternities should be the base for a successful program, but this year proved the opposite. He expressed a desire for both of them to lead the program next year. It should be a matter of pride for them to be superior to the other one. What bigger challenge could they have?

Campbell Top Hawks

The Wilmington College Seahawks ran their record to 14-6 by scoring a 5-1 victory over Campbell College at Buies Creek. Jim Braxton went all the way to record his third win of the year. He allowed only four hits and struck out 11, while walking only three.

Campbell had jumped off to an early lead in the second when they scored their only run of the game. A Braxton base on balls and a double by Campbell's 3B Adams scored the run.

The Hawks then tied the game in the top of the third. Bill Harris opened with a walk and Sandy Dew singled. Two passed balls brought Harris home with the run.

Then in the deciding tenth, Dew singled with one out. Glen Mills walked and Wayne Johnson singled in Dew. Jim Hall's sacrifice fly scored Mills and Wray Ware's single scored Johnson. Ware then stole second and scored on Dan Whisnant's single.

Dew, Hall, and Whisnant all had two hits for the Hawks, who had a total of eleven for the game. Wilmington 001 000 000 4-5 11 0
Campbell 010 000 000 0-1 4 1

Friends of College Name Mrs. Kallman As Chairman Again

Mrs. Robert Kallman was re-elected as chairman of the "Friends of Wilmington College" and Mrs. Bradford Tillery was re-elected as secretary. Six new members of the Board of Directors were also elected. They were: Mrs. Dan Cameran, Mrs. W. H. Cotten, Mrs. David Harris, Mrs. Addison Hewlett, Mrs. Alan Marshall, and Mrs. William Randall.

Standing committee chairmen appointed were Mrs. B. Frank Hall, membership; Mrs. C. J. Bekert, nominating; Mrs. Wallace Schorr, public relations; and Mrs. Henry von Oesen, finance.

Dr. William M. Randall, president of Wilmington College announced at the annual meeting of the "Friends of Wilmington College," that the College has received word from Senator Everett B. Jordan that federal funds have been approved for the building of the new library building on the campus. "This was the largest grant any College in the state received," Dr. Randall said. Groundbreaking for the new library which is being financed by both state and federal funds will start this summer.

Miss Booe Prefers Teaching; Scism Wants Academic Life

Acting director of the nursing program, Miss Loretta Booe, took her basic training in nursing from the North Carolina Baptist Hospital School of Nursing.

She received her B.S. in nursing from Duke and her M.S. in nursing from the University of Texas. She has also attended Emory University and Teachers College of Columbia University.

Miss Booe spent 13 years as an army nurse and has just finished 20 years of reserve service.

This is Miss Booe's ninth year of teaching. She has taught at the school of nursing at U.N.C. and at Lander College.

Miss Booe prefers teaching to actual nursing since she feels that as a nurse "I am only helping a small group of people, but as a teacher I am able to do more for nursing. In teaching I am helping others to go out and provide care for many others."

Teaching is a pleasure for Miss Booe. She believes, "There are many joys and gratifications." Her biggest thrill is watching her students develop as graduate nurses.

Miss Booe believes Wilco is a "vigorous young college with great potential."

Miss Booe enjoys knitting, sewing, collecting stamps, and people.

"I enjoy talking to people," she stated.

Political science teacher, Thomas Scism, received his A.B. and M.A. from U.N.C. and is now a candidate for a Ph.D. from there.

"I am interested in politics and it seemed logical that with a dual interest in political science and teaching to teach," he said.

He returned to college when he was 30 and went back a year to get his A.B. degree. He taught at N. C. State, North Carolina College, and U.N.C. as a graduate assistant.

Mr. Scism wanted to teach since "I wanted to be in an academic life because it is the most pleasant of all lives," he said.

He believes students here will do more work and have more motivation "than any other of the places I've been."

"I've given up everything for writing the dissertation," he said, but normally Mr. Scism enjoys reading and playing golf.

Office Organized, Helps Students With Problems

Are you in undergraduate and need a job to help defray College expenses? Are you a senior and not sure where to turn to get the best job opportunities for your College training? Do you wonder if there is anyone at Wilmington College who can offer help in such situations?

Don't answer "yes" to all the above questions; you are not alone. According to the student survey you filled out last month, 38% of you are not aware of the College placement service and why it is not realize that the College Relations Department tries to help the same students in such situations.

The newly formed Office of College Relations with Mr. David E. Warner as its director, has been organized this year to help students with most such problems.

The purpose of the Office of College Relations is fourfold. Not only does it function as a placement service, but it handles the Alumni Bureau, the Public Information, and assists the Wilmington College Foundations.

Now that Wilmington College has become a four-year institution and is growing into a well-known and respected College, you—who are future alumni—will want to keep up with what the College is doing and perhaps want to help out. The Office of College Relations will keep up with you when you graduate and hope that you will keep up with Wilmington College.

Another responsibility of the College Relations Office is to keep the public informed on what the College is doing academically and culturally, as well as student activity-wise. You can help the Public Information Bureau publicize your activities by bringing your news items to that office. From there it goes to the newspaper, radio, and TV stations locally, and if newsworthy enough, across the state.

The Office of College Relations is situated just off the library. It is there to help you!

Engineers Club

Holds Last Meeting

The Engineers Club held its final meeting of the year Tuesday, May 10 for the purpose of choosing its officers for the coming school year. Elected were: president, Jerry Waldorf; vice-president, Jerry Lewis; secretary, Butch Huffman; treasurer, Dan Walker.

The last official function of this year will be the annual banquet, to be held May 28 at the Boucan Room. This meeting will climax a year of tours, lectures, service, and fun for the engineers.

In addition to the club's service to engineering students, the members served as marshals to the District Science Fair each year. The Homecoming Bonfire was planned and built by the Engineers Club.

Under the advisement of Adrian Horst and Col. A. D. Gorham, the club has become a valuable part of the learning process of the engineering students at Wilmington College, according to Bill Pate, outgoing president.

Lloyd H. Saunders

Advances Studies

Lloyd H. Saunders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Saunders of Carolina Beach, and a senior at Wilmington College, has received word from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill that he has been accepted in the Graduate School for advanced studies in zoology for a teaching assistantship.

Saunders was one of 15 students accepted by the Department out of over 300 applications.

At the time, he received notification from the dean of the Graduate School of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill that he has also been designated as an alternate for a graduate scholarship (without the necessity of teaching).

Earle Wallace, acting dean of the graduate school said, "We offer you our congratulations on this achievement. We hope you realize that, in view of the very large number of exceptional applications which were reviewed by the selection committee, this indicates that you have a truly outstanding record and one of which you should be justly proud."

College Now Can Offer Music Major

In action taken by the State Board of Higher Education, Wilmington College was given full approval to offer a major in music education in the bachelor of arts program.

The department of music and the department of education proposed the major curriculum in April, citing the need to enhance the cultural climate in the Southeastern area of the State and for service to the schools, by preparing certified music education teachers.

During the Spring quarter 140 student hours were registered by the music department or a total of 405 credit hours.

Courses offered are in music theory; music literature and history; music methods and conducting; and an emphasis on applied music of piano, voice, organ and wind instruments.

The music department is comprised of Loyd Hudson, chairman; William Adcock, Frank Honey, Charles Woodward, and Miss Ann Darden, who has been added to the department this year.

The music department recently moved into its new facilities in the Kenan Fine Arts Building.

Thalians-Wilco Begins Season Swink, Alexander To Direct Musical Drama Department Initiates New Program

The Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association held try-outs for the first show of the 1966-67 season "Good News" on September 28 and 29. The production dates for this musical show are November 18, 19, and 20 at Thalian Hall.

The principal roles will be played by Lynda Bagby, Carole Benton, George Deaton, Wina Dowdy, John Ford, Sam Garner, Rosemary Green, Jere Hodgson, and Joy Lee.

Secondary leads will be handled by Art Cannon, Blanche Blaustein, Doug Cochrane, Mike Craft, Steve Craft, Frank Hall, David James, Jim Potter, Tony Rivenbark, Michael Sampley, R. C. Shackelford, Robert Wood, and Terry Wortley.

The dancing chorus will be composed of Nancy James, Tony Rivenbark, Jeannie Snell, and Michael Sampley.

Those composing the singing chorus will be Linda Cowell, Christine Deasey, Artie Markatos, Mary Miller, Maxime Robbins, Diana Smith, and Vangie Waggett.

Bob Alexander, director of vocal music at New Hanover High School, will be the music director and Doug W. Swink, of Wilmington College, will be drama director. Anne Fitzgibbon, of the college's drama and speech department, will serve as technical director. Bill Wahlgren will be the stage manager. The piano accompanist for the entire production will be Lynda Carter.

Students of Wilmington College will be able to attend this and the three following shows presented by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association free upon presentation of their student activity cards.

The Wilmington College drama department is initiating a new program of presenting on-campus plays of note on a university level and is also considering several original manuscripts.

One play is planned for each quarter. The first play, No Exit, by John Paul Sartre, will be presented November 11 and 12.

Doug Swink, associate professor of drama, explained that presenting plays on campus has been a "sorely neglected area for several years. It will also provide directing and theatre production experience for students interested in live theatre, as well as those acting in the play itself."

One original play is planned for either winter or spring quarter. The other play will be announced. All plays will be presented in the S.R.O. theatre and students will be admitted with their activity cards.

No Exit, called Huis Clos in French, was written in 1944. In this play Sartre gives his existentialist theories.

The play concerns three people who have died and have been ushered into an apartment to spend the rest of eternity. This apartment they slowly realize is their hell and they realize also they are put there to torture each other.

There are four characters in the play. Garcin, a coward and deserter; Inez, a completely destructive force, and Estelle, who lives in a world of self-deception. The fourth character is the porter who ushers the people into the apartment.

On one night following the play Roger Bisson and Dr. Lloyd Bishop of the French department will lead a discussion on the existentialist view point as expressed in the play.

Fine Arts Films To Begin Oct. 11

"It will be the goal of the Fine Arts committee this year to offer to the student body the finest entertainment possible," states Randy Del Lago, chairman of the committee.

In trying to achieve this goal the members of the committee are continuing to seek presentations of such quality that they will appeal to every student.

Presently the committee is corresponding with Won Kyung Cho, a master of the classical oriental dance, who will be here in April. Mr. Cho offers lectures and demonstrations to audiences on all aspects of oriental culture, including literature, dance, music, and drama.

Another program will be duopianists, Nelson and Neal, a man and wife team, considered among the finest ensembles playing on the concert stage.

In addition to live presentations, this year's fine art's program will include a regular series of outstanding motion pictures. Films in the series include Marlon Brando in On The Waterfront, Jean Cocteau's The Strange Ones, Kind Hearts and Coronets with Alec Guinness, and an Italian film, The Nights of Cabiria.

The first film of the series, Anna Karina, will be presented October 11 in the lecture room of the Kenan building. All other films will be also presented in this room.

The films—as well as the other programs—have been chosen by their quality and the interest they might hold for members of the student body, according to Randy.

"The programs will be neither formal or academic. They will simply be provided for your enjoyment and entertainment," said Randy.

Students will be admitted free to all programs with their activity cards.

Members of the Fine Arts committee for this year are Artie Markatos, Renee Hartman, and Beverly Anderson. Doug Swink and Roger Bisson are advising the committee.

which goes to student activities. Fines will increase with the number of offenses.

"This parking privilege was enjoyed by Seniors last year and requires everyone's cooperation again this year," said Greg Godwin, student body president. "Your student government will strive to keep this policy both enjoyable and successful."

Seniors To Take Exams

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 23 — College seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teacher Examinations on any of the four different test dates announced today by Educational Testing Service, a nonprofit, educational organization which prepares and administers this testing program.

New dates for the testing of prospective teachers are: January 7, March 18, July 1, and October 7, 1967. The tests will be given at nearly 500 locations throughout the United States, ETS said.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers. Some colleges also require all seniors preparing to teach to take the examinations.

Leaflets indicating school systems and state departments of education which use the examination results are distributed to colleges by ETS.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations, which measure the professional preparation and general cultural background of teachers, and one of 18 Teaching Area Examinations which measure mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective teachers should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and on which dates they should be taken.

A Bulletin of Information containing a list of test centers, and information about the examinations, as well as a Registration Form, may be obtained from college placement officers, school personnel departments, or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Box 911, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J. 08540.

Miss Booe Discusses Nursing Department

As Wilmington College begins a new quarter and a new school year, the nursing department gets into full swing. The department boasts 25 students who are enrolled in the first year of the nursing program, and nine students who are starting their second year. When Miss Luetta Booe was asked to comment on the program, she said, "We are pleased with the number for this year."

The nursing program, officially called "The James Walker Memorial Associate Degree Program in Nursing," may be completed in two academic years and one summer session. During the academic year, approximately one-half the courses are science and other basic courses which give the student a foundation for "patient-centered nursing care." Nursing students join students from other programs at Wilmington College when they enroll in these basic courses.

Each girl in Wilmington's nursing department will find herself carrying a larger laboratory assignment than the normal college laboratory. The size of the nursing laboratory depends upon the stage of the student's education. During the first year, a student is supposed to have six hours of laboratory each week.

After a development of the basic skills, the student is taken to a hospital, where she gains ease and confidence in the care of patients. Laboratories, which for the nursing student includes actual "patient-side care," are also offered at the health department and other agencies. A contract has already been signed with the New Hanover Memorial Hospital for use of its laboratory nursing facilities when the hospital begins operation. During the summer session, students also make use of facilities at Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro, as an aid to their study of psychiatrics.

The graduate of the Wilmington College nursing department is eligible to write the state for a license as a Registered Nurse. At the present time, she writes the same licensing examination bureau that is written by a graduate of a three year hospital diploma, or a bachelor degree graduate.

BSU Cites History, Purpose, Aims

The Baptist Student Union of Wilmington College is one of many such organizations on over 30 campuses in North Carolina and is supported by the Baptist State Convention and the Baptist Association of Wilmington.

It's purpose is to challenge the Christian student to accept his role responsibly and actively for Christ on campus, to help him adjust to new concepts of life as his horizons are widened and to encourage him to respond to situations of significance with his fellow students and teachers.

The Wilmington College BSU is only four years old at present, being founded in October, 1962, at the First Baptist Church of Wilmington. It's first leadership was provided by Miss Rose Williams and was backed by Dr. Randolph Gregory. From this beginning its scope and outlook has been broadened, having a fluid structure with membership open to anyone. This year's president is Larry Bohannon, and some of the programs will be dealing with social concerns, race relations, and the Christian and war.

Howell To Be Juror - Exhibit

Claude Howell, chairman of the art department at Wilmington College, was selected as one of the jurors for the exhibit of the Tidewater Virginia Artists.

The Tidewater Virginia Artists exhibit was held at the Janef Shopping Center in Norfolk, Va., September 8-9-10.

Mr. Powell was associated with Miss Dee Church, well-known painter from Washington, D. C., as the jury to select the works to be awarded some $1,000 in prizes.

DRUG ADDICTION

Other factors: the fun of horrifying parents, the secrecy, the danger, the new "in" language—"joint" is slang for a marijuana cigarette, a "nickel bag" is five dollars worth of marijuana tobacco, an "acid-head" takes "a trip" and a "pot-head turns on."

Most of the teens who had tried drugs fall into the category of "fun users" and most are fairly casual about them. "My purpose in life is to experience as much pleasure and the least amount of pain as possible," said a 18-year-old. And a college freshman admitted: "I enjoy taking marijuana occasionally just as I enjoy ice-cream cones."

For others, drugs answer an inner need. "At times the world is just too much," one girl wrote. Another, describing several friends who take mescaline and marijuana regularly, said: "With them it's not just a healthy rebellion but a basic malaise . . . a feeling of helplessness, that everything is wrong with their world and there's nothing they can do about it."

Freshmen Orientation Week Successful

The Freshman Orientation Week program of events began at 9:30 Monday, September 19, with a general assembly required of all freshmen and transfer students.

The assembly was held in Hanover Hall, with J. Marshall Crews, dean of students, presiding. The students were welcomed to the campus by Dr. William M. Randall, president. An introduction to the academic affairs of the campus was given by Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty. The students were given an opportunity to visit with the professors in their respective areas.

A recess for lunch was followed by a series of special tests for placement and motor abilities.

The general assembly on Tuesday, September 20, was in the Student Services Building with Greg Godwin, president of the Wilmington College Student Government Association, welcoming the new students. A program of factual information about student activities was presented while on campus tours. The new students met with their faculty advisors in group meetings from 2:00 until 3:00 p.m. to discuss policies and procedures at the college.

The Student Government Association entertained the students at a social hour at 3:00 p.m.

On Wednesday pre-registration was held for all new students both freshmen and transfer in individual conferences with their advisor to arrange courses to be selected and registered for on Thursday morning.

Social Break— Freshmen and transfer students are shown relaxing from their orientation schedule as the Student Government Association entertained them during a social hour. It perhaps gave them a boost which carried them through pre-registration and registration.

Jones Gives Silk Screen To College

Claude Howell, head of the art department of Wilmington College, has announced that a silk screen print entitled "Nocturne" had been given to the College.

Mr. Howell further stated, "that this serigraph by L. T. Jones of Asheville, North Carolina, was the twenty-first piece of art in the permanent collection of Wilmington College."

Mr. Jones is a member of the Associated Artists of North Carolina and a frequent exhibitor, having reached the status of an exhibiting member.

The pieces in the collection of permanent works are in various buildings on the campus with one painting on loan to the Greenville Art Center.

Crowe Loams Manuscripts

Paul Jennewein, in the Sunday Star-News of November 27, 1949, wrote, "In observance of Bible Sunday, Dr. William Crowe, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, submitted these manuscripts from his diversified collection of religious literature. Although only one of these specimens is taken from a Bible, all are related in some way to the growth of religion and the Bible."

Dr. William Crowe, Jr., has again loaned his manuscripts with notable additions to Wilmington College for the Art of the Book show in the first College Art series in the Kenan Galleries. The illuminating manuscripts were the only form of art available for talented monks, outside sculpture, architecture, and music.

Pages from a book of the beatitudes lettered on vellum by hand in France about 1230 A.D. and pages from a Vulgate Bible of the same period may be seen.

Another interesting part of the show are the leaves from a missal book, which is the official collection of liturgy, including prayers for the Catholic Church for celebration of the Mass.

There are 34 manuscripts on exhibition from the Dr. William Crowe, Jr., collection. Dr. Crowe also has a collection of "lamalle" on display. This is a process of using the wood and mounting pictures to give a very antique appearance to the "lamalle."

Initial Art Exhibit On Display

The one man show of Susan Moore, native North Carolinian, consisting of recent oil and silver points, is the initial exhibit now on display at Wilmington College, one of four unusual exhibits that may be seen in the college galleries weekdays from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The first Wilmington College Art Show of the season opened two weeks ago in the Kenan Galleries.

Claude Howell, head of the arts department at Wilmington College, has described the exhibits as

Seahawk Soccer Team Scores 4-1 Victory Over Wesleyan College

ROCKY MOUNT—Wilmington College's soccer team scored its first win in the short history of the sport here Thursday afternoon with an impressive 4-1 victory over Rocky Mount Wesleyan College. Gene Russ, a former New Hanover High School baseball star, sparked the victory booting in three goals for Coach Charles Sproles Seahawks.

The victory by the Seahawks broke a 11-game losing skid. The Seahawks met Methodist College at the Wilmington College Athletic Field at 2 p.m. Saturday afternoon. The Seahawks now have a 1-3 record for the year with five more matches left to play.

Music Department Chooses Top Twelve

Wilmington College's Music Department has chosen its Top Twelve—the singing group which represents the College Chorus in and around Wilmington.

The Top Twelve for this year are sopranos — Gaye Newborn, Cynthia Hardy, and Sheila Page; altos—Margaret Lassiter and Chris Tinken; tenors—David Allen, Wynn Moore, and Paul Roderick; and bass—Sam Garner, Grady Griffith, and Fred Merit.

Lloyd Hudson, of the music department, announced plans for an aria entitled "Jephth" to be presented at or near Thanksgiving. Miss Anne Dardin will be the soprano soloist. Mezzo-soprano soloist will be Miss Gaye Newborn. Dr. Robert Melton will be tenor soloist, and Dean J. Paul Reynolds will be bass soloist. Cellist will be Bob Alexander.

The Clarion Wind Quintet from North Carolina School of the Performing Arts at Winston-Salem will be on campus November 18, to hold a clinic for wood-wind players from bands from public schools in southeastern North Carolina. The clinic will be open to all interested students, as well as to the general public.

Directors Say BackstageCrew Indispensable

"Good News" is to be presented upon Thalian Hall stage by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association on November 18, 19, and 20, at 8:30 p.m.

The musical show of 1927 was written by Laurence Schwab, B. J. DeSylva, and Lew Brown, and enjoyed a long-run. It sports such long-time favorite songs as "Just Imagine," "The Best Things in Life Are Free," "The Varsity Drag," "Lucky in Love," and the title song, "Good News."

The scenery and its adaptability to being easily moved is one of the major concerns. "Good News" calls for ten scenes which must be changed easily and swiftly so that the continuity of the plot will not be lost.

Charged with designing of the sets and all the technical aspects of the production is Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at Wilmington College.

The construction of the sets and the actual manipulation of the scenery during the run of the show will be handled by Neal Borrelli, James Cobb, Curtis Dale, Jack Gerock, Frank Henry, Walter Lackey, Ed Lemmon, Tom Simmons, Jerry Spell, Gene Sue, Richard Thompson, Bill Wahlgren, John Ward, Charles Weiss, and Buck Williams.

Serving as stage manager will be Bill Wahlgren and as assistant stage manager, Mary McKee. Richard Thompson will be operating the sound system.

Directors Bob Alexander and Doug W. Swink in speaking of these people whom the audience never sees, refer to them as the "backbone of the show." Upon them lies the task of the show's smooth running, quick movement, precise timing, and the building of the varied sets for the musical. Both directors agreed that "the backstage crew are the indispensable ones."

Colonel Gorham would like to have his personal slide rule (4 ft.) returned to room H 225 immediately!

OCTOBER 27

WILCO Drama Department To Present Sartre's Play

On November 11 and 12 the drama department of Wilmington College will present Jean-Paul Sartre's existential masterpiece, No Exit.

"Situated in a brightly lighted chamber in Hell, this drama focuses upon the damned souls of three individuals and traces the movement of each toward an eventual understanding of the spring of his damnation and of the existential Hell to which he is doomed—a Hell in which the damned are their own torturers," said director of the play, Randy Del Lago.

Attending the damned souls is the valet, who will be played by Terry Wortley. Anne Fitzgibbon will portray Inez, a wasted, joyless woman for whom Hell is simply an extension of a life filled with estrangement and malvolence. Dorothy Pastis plays Estelle, the socialite who rejects the peculiarly existential necessity of choice and makes of her life a prolonged effort to evade responsibility, only to be confronted with her failing finally in death.

Garcin, the priotial character of the play, is portrayed by Hank Blaustein. It is with Garcin that the audience moves toward an eventual understanding of what it is that constitutes this Hell these characters forever must endure.

This play, by the Noble Prize winning Sartre and which won the Drama Critic's Circle "Best Foreign Play" Award for 1946, is one of the most powerful pieces on the modern stage.

"No one should miss it," stated Randy. "It is truly a unique experience in theatre."

For those interested in knowing more about Sartre and Existentialism, an open discussion will be held after the performance on Saturday, November 12. The discussion will be led by Roger Bisson and Dr. Lloyd Bishop of the language department.

The play will be presented at 8:30 p.m. in the S. R. O. Theatre. Students will be admitted free with their activity cards. All other admissions will be one dollar.

Soccer Season Opens

By JERRY HOOKS

The Wilmington College soccer team opened a nine-game schedule here by hosting St. Andrews College.

Several returning lettermen from the 1965 team and a crop of promising freshmen have Coach Charles Sproles eagerly looking forward to the season.

"I think we'll win some games this season," he said. Last year, Coach Sproles initiated the program at the college and then suffered through a miserable season as the Seahawks dropped seven straight. Lack of experience and size were reasons cited by Sproles for the poor start.

"This year, we'll be playing with more experience. We have returning lettermen to form a good nucleus and several of the Freshmen appear strong physically," Sproles pointed out. Not many of the newcomers have soccer experience past the intramural level in high school, but Sproles feels this could be overcome because of the tremendous enthusiasm the group has. "They want to play badly and work hard in practices," he added. The team holds daily drills preparing for the opener and according to Sproles, improvement has been rapid.

Two departments he hopes for improvements in is speed and shooting. "Last year, we didn't score enough, we lost several games, 2-0, 2-1, 3-0. If we can score this year, it could be a different story."

Coach Sproles has nothing but praise for his defense. "This is definitely one of the strong points," he continued. Goalie Bob Vaughan and fullback Tom Simmons, both returning lettermen were standouts last season. Vaughan in particular had a good year. In several games he had 20 or more saves.

Personnel wise, Sproles has 21 candidates out for the team. "I plan to keep them all," he emphasized.

Returning lettermen beside Simmons and Vaughan include starters Dan Whisnant and Pete Daughtry, Tom Tinney, Wayne Barker, Wolfgang Weide, and Jim Dorrell.

Newcomers to the team include Elmer Maley, Gene Russ, Phil Oakley, Doug Peacock, Paul Livingston, Mike Brannan, Larry Everett, Hugh Jernigan, Steve Mundy, Jim Paschal, Phil Saigh and Jerry Simmons.

Sproles said Russ, Oakley and Maley would probably play the wing positions. Russ from New Hanover High School and Maley a junior from Arlington, Va. have been particularly impressive. A sophomore newcomer, Doug Peacock, will see some action at the left wing spot. Peacock kicks left footed.

At the inside positions, Sproles has Whisnant and Daughtry, a of capable veterans returning. Both are quick and love the rugged action necessary for the position. Weide, a starter last year will also join the pair at the inside post. Backing up men for this spot will be Jim Livingston and Jim Johnson.

At the halfbacks, Tinney and Barker have the experience, but both boys are being pushed for starting spots by newcomers. Mike Brannan, Larry Everett, Jim Dorrell and Hugh Jernigan are capable starters.

Fullback is one position Sproles is not worried about. Simmons, a Hallsboro native and Mundy are more than adequate for the position. Jim Paschal and Phil Saigh will probably be back-up men.

The Seahawks have one of the best goalies on the East Coast. Vaughan, a Maryland native, had considerable experience in high school with the growing sport. He was the 1965 captain. Jerry Simmons, New Hanover High School graduate will see action at both fullback and goalie.

Wilmington Bows To St. Andrews

By WALTER HEALEY

A complete team lapse on offense and defense, for the short span of five minutes in the second period, proved costly to the Seahawk soccer team as they bowed, 5-4, to St. Andrews Presbyterian College October 12.

The loss nullified a tremendous individual effort on the part of right wing, Dan Whisnant, who tallied three of the four Seahawk goals.

St. Andrews opened the scoring as Gary Ball passed to Joe Schoech, who also scored three goals in the game, for a direct shot on goal. He booted the ball into the left corner past Seahawk team captain Bob Vaughn. But Vaughn got the score back when he plastered the ball into the right side of the St. Andrews net on a free kick, to knot the score at 1-1 at 17:20 of the first period.

With the 6:48 gone by in the second period, Whisnant scored the first Seahawk goal as he did a roll over the mouth of the St. Andrews goal and kicked the ball into the left corner of the net to give Wilmington the lead at 2-1.

Suddenly the Seahawks went to sleep. St. Andrews tied the score two minutes later on a tally by Bob Welch. Still the Seahawks were lagging and at 13:30 Gary Bell scored on a corner kick to make the score 3-2.

No sooner had play resumed than Bell had another chance at a corner kick. He was almost successful except for the astonishing save by Vaughn who tipped the ball over the top of the net.

At the outset of the third period, St. Andrews was determined to make it a runaway as they put pressure on all the Seahawk players and keep pressing for a goal. Their efforts were being stopped by a strong defense but suddenly Schoech, with a magnificent play, raced along the sidelines, turned to the middle, and dribbled through the Seahawk defense for a score.

But suddenly the Seahawks came to life behind the fine play of Whisnant, who tallied with only 30 seconds remaining in the period to the close the score to 4-3.

The fourth period saw both teams miss clear opportunities at a score. Nothing seemed to jell until Schoech scored his third goal of the afternoon which was the deciding goal as a late rally led by Wolfgang Weide and another score by Whisnant fell short leaving the final score at 5-4.

For the afternoon, goalie Vaughn made 24 saves. Coach Sproles said "except for the second period, where the boys seemed a bit tired we might have won. They came out in the second half and played a real fine game, especially the wings."

Applications For Student Loans Surpass Available Funds

WASHINGTON (CPS) — Despite expansion of student loan programs by Congress and private sources, mounting student applications for loans have outpaced the available supply of funds, a Collegiate Press Service study has revealed.

The House of Representatives voted in May to grant $190 million for student loans under the National Defense Education Act. The Senate Appropriations Committee recently approved this increase over last year's $179 million, but the full Senate has not voted on it yet.

In the commercial sector, the American Bankers Association (ABA) initiated a campaign last June to persuade bankers to increase student loans. Financial institutions, which lent nearly $150 million last year to students, are expected to provide up to $400 million this year.

The shortage in funds is due to soaring college enrollment, not to fewer bank loans, according to the ABA's legislative counsel, James Smith. College enrollment for 1966 is estimated by the Office of Education at six million, a ten per cent increase over last year.

To accommodate the growth, colleges must expand, and over three-fourths of American colleges and universities have recently raised tuition and board, according to surveys by the Life Insurance Management Association.

Tuition and room fees for at least 25 schools are $3,000, and costs are expected to rise.

Possible cheating in loan applications may account for some increases in requests. Parents may be borrowing money through their children because of low interest rates granted to students, Smith said.

Meanwhile, other parents have sold their stocks to obtain money, despite a twenty per cent drop in stock market prices over the last months, and some students will work this year instead of joining the class of '70, according to Smith.

Under the NDEA student loan act, undergraduates can borrow up to $1,000, and graduate students can receive $2,500 yearly, not to exceed $10,000 for undergraduate and graduate study combined.

Students pay no interest on loans while in school, and only three per cent after graduation.

Federal allocations, divided among states on the basis of school enrollment and requests, are granted to students through financial aid offices of colleges. Schools must match government funds by providing 10 per cent of every government loan.

Under commercial loan programs, students borrow directly from banks or loan companies, instead of their colleges. Interest rates are held at six per cent, although commercial rates range from six-and-one-half to eight per cent.

While a student attends college, the federal government pays the interest, then pays three per cent when studies are completed. Thus the cost to students for loans at commercial banks is equivalent to that under the government NDEA program.

Since the Bankers Association drive, limited reports reveal some increases in students loans, Smith said. New York state banks have increased loans by 25 per cent; Massachusetts banks have tripled their outlay; and New Jersey metropolitan areas have serviced more loans in August than in all of last year.

In areas where loans have not been granted to students before, such as Miami, Washington, D. C. and coastal areas of New Jersey, banks are not cooperating with the student loan program.

On the whole, of the nation's 14,000 member banks of ABA, 7,000 banks, representing 75 per cent of the nation's total banking assets, participate in student loan programs.

The loan shortage might have been intensified, had Congress accepted President Johnson's proposed revisions for the federal student loan program.

Last January, President Johnson urged eliminating the NDEA program and establishing government backing to banks for more student loans.

Bankers strongly opposed the President's measure, and said they could not support the government's insured loan plan and their own student loan program.

"Federal insurance of student bank loans is of no consequence," Mr. Smith of ABA said. Banks would still not have the funds for both programs.

States and private organizations, such as the United Student Aid Fund, insure private student loan programs now.

Representative Edith Green (D-Ore.), chairman of the House education subcommittee, accepted the bankers' arguments and called the President's proposal premature.

The administration withdrew its proposal and suggested extending the federal program for another year with a $29 million cut in appropriations.

The House and Senate Committee rejected this proposal, and increase the loan program.

Miss Byrd Interviewed

Tommye Sue Byrd, new member of the Art Department, attended the University of Georgia where she received her B.F.A. and her M.F.A.

Miss Byrd believes that "staying in an environment where a lot of people are producing art will be a stimulus to me."

"I don't consider anything I do as a hobby," stated Miss Byrd; "it is all serious business to me."

Most of her work is concerned with art, but she does write poetry — "only no one has ever seen it," she commented.

Hugh Roberts, sociology and psychology teacher, attended ECU for his B.A. He received his M.A. from Appalachian State Teachers College.

Mr. Roberts is interested in people and finds that his fields let him work with people. He had always planned to teach and believes his subject matter is geared to college level.

While at Elon Mr. Roberts was president of Pi Gamma Mu, a national social science honor society.

Playing golf, "the usual things" and the beach are Mr. Roberts' hobbies. He lives at Wrightsville Beach with his wife and two children, who both love the beach.

Jackson Sparks, new member of the language department, received his B.A. from U.N.C. He spent a year in France at the University of Lille on a Fulbright scholarship before returning to U.N.C. for his M.A. Mr. Sparks will go to Chapel Hill October 26 for the final oral for his Ph.D.

Languages appeal to Mr. Sparks, who likes to travel. He believes "The two seemed to go together."

"I enjoy languages, traveling, and reading," stated Mr. Sparks, and I like to share this as much as the students will let me."

After teaching at U.N.C. for four years Mr. Sparks "got fed up with academic business" and went to France.

Relaxing is his favorite pastime. This is one thing the Army did for him. He also enjoys hunting, fishing, and gardening.

Churchill To Appear At College

Noted Author To Speak In Gym November 14

John Spencer Churchill, author, painter and nephew of the great British war-time Prime Minister, will speak here on November 14 at 8 p.m. in Hanover Hall (gym) under the auspices of Wilmington College. His subject will be "We Churchills."

A distinguished writer and painter in his own right, John Spencer Churchill was in unique and intimate touch with Sir Winston throughout the great leader's most active years. It was Sir Winston who first encouraged his nephew to paint and inspired him to write. In his younger years, the two Churchill families were frequent visitors together at Blenheim (the famed Marlborough Palace); more recently he has spent much time at Chartwell, Sir Winston's own home for which Lady Churchill commissioned John Spencer to paint a mural for his uncle's 75th birthday. The uncle and nephew often painted together.

John Spencer Churchill is a great raconteur with a lively sense of humor and a flair for colorful anecdote. Many have described his eloquence and resonant voice as typically Churchillian. He deals with the living stuff of historical event and shares his uncle's dual ability to describe events in the sonorous phrase—and to expose pretense and humbug with a mordant quip.

Born in 1909, the son of Sir Winston's younger brother, he is a grandson of Lord Randolph Churchill and his American wife, Jennie Jerome. His mother was Lady Gwendoline Churchill, the daughter of the 7th Earl of Abingdon. His sister is the wife of Lord Avon (Anthony Eden). He was educated at Harrow and Oxford and studied painting, sculpture, and architecture in art centers throughout Europe. During World War II he served as a major in British Counter-Intelligence and took part in the evacuation of Dunkirk. He now makes his home in the South of France.

John Spencer Churchill's two books are "The Churchill Canvases" which was published by Little Brown and Co., and "Behind the Churchill Canvases," soon to be issued by the same house.

Library Prepares Special Reading Material Display

The Wilmington College Library, in preparation for the forthcoming lecture by John Spencer Churchill on November 14, is offering a display of reading material relative to the Churchills.

At the main desk of the library, is displayed the titled volume Churchill, as Taken from the Diaries of Lord Moran. Lord Moran was the personal physician for Sir Winston Churchill, and he rose to the top of English medicine. He is also author of The Anatomy of Courage.

The bulletin board features the Wilmington College Lecture Series' announcements and jackets from books by Sir Winston Churchill. This feature is centered around the four volumes by Churchill entitled, A History of the English Speaking Peoples, subtitled as The New World, The Great Democracies, The Age of Revolution, and The Birth of Britain. Violet Bonham Carter's work, Winston Churchill - An Intimate Portrait, and the writing by Guy Eden, Portrait of Churchill, are prominently displayed.

Other interesting Churchill works available for reading include Painting as a Pastime, Coniston, A Far Country, and The World Crisis. Miss Hagan, Librarian, stated that the collection is small but is an excellent source of material for background reading.

LOSE OF FOUR STARTERS CAUSES CHANGE IN '65-66 BASKETBALL TACTICS

By DON EVANS

Jay Neary has departed along with Wray Ware, Bill Harris, and Marshall Hamilton. Yet Coach Bill Brooks feels this year's basketball team might surprise many skeptical fans.

The brand of basketball will be different with the emphasis shifting from Neary's brilliant offensive outbursts to a more balanced and controlled offense. Back as starters this year are players who in recent years have performed in the shadow of Neary's excellence. Tentative lettermen starters are center Jim Braxton, forwards Butch Budd and Wayne King, and guard Jim Hall. The main reason for Coach Brooks' mild optimism is 6'3" guard, Frank Bua, a red-shirted transfer last year from Lenoir Rhyne. Big and strong, Bua may be moved to a forward position if that position seems lacking.

Bua is the possessor of an accurate jumper that may be able to solve the zone defenses that have shackled Seahawk teams in the past. Jim Hall, the other guard, may be more of a scoring threat than last year when he was used mainly as a playmaker. He led the team last year in shooting although his scoring average was low. Sophomore Wayne Johnson and freshmen Sparky Johnson and Jerry Martin are the backup men at the guard position who may see action.

The forward position has been a problem area for the Hawks in the past and looms as a big question mark again this year. Consistent scoring and rebounding has not been present, but could be improved if two freshmen are able to come through. Butch Budd is a sharp shooter, but lacks real size to ever dominate the boards. King, the other probable starter, is capable of a good scoring night, but lacks quickness to ever be overpowering. The two untried freshmen, James Durham and James Sanders, have good size, but only game experience will show their value.

Braxton is being backed up by freshman David Pratt, but it is questionable if Braxton will lose much sleep worrying about his position. Although Braxton has had some outstanding games in the past, Brooks is looking for more consistency. He holds down the position well enough, though, that the center position is not a real big worry.

Bua seems to hold the key to the success of the team, but it must be understood he is not a Jay Neary. He is only a few steps behind, and represents the closest thing to being a star. The scoring should be better balanced and teamwork will be the necessity, but general appearances indicate a long season. All we can do is hope for Coach Brooks' surprise.

PI SIGMA MU FRATERNITY ANTICIPATES BUSY YEAR

By RED DOUGLAS

A new year has started at Wilmington College and this means busy days for Pi Sigma Mu. A new house, new officers and many new ideas mean a busy year with new happenings for Pi Sigma Mu.

Now that fall quarter Rush is over, the Fraternity is busy making plans for the Rush next winter.

Zeta pledge class has been organized with Murray Gardner, president; Robert Gaddy, treasurer; Robert Prince, secretary; and Buzz Banadyga, chaplain. They have made plans to rebuild the bridge on the Nature Trail, have the usual brothers' party, paint the front parlor in the Fraternity House, and for a special surprise for the brothers which will be announced at a later date.

The annual masquerade party was held Oct. 29 where all members were required to wear costumes. Members came to the party dressed from a giraffe to a twitching pig. Future plans include a hayride or oyster roast, the annual Christmas Party, and numerous weekend record parties.

Jeffery Symmes has been elected Pi Sig girl of the week for actions that reflected favorably toward the fraternity.

WILCO Loses To St. Andrews

LAURINBURG.—St. Andrews took advantage of two penalty goals to down the Wilmington College Seahawks, 4-3, in soccer action here Wednesday, October 28.

Danny Whinsant paced the Wilmington attack with three goals, while Bob Vaughn, Pete Daughtry, and Paul Livingston were cited by Seahawk coach Charles Sproles for their effort.

Wilmington now has a 2-4 record thus far in the season, and will meet East Carolina at the Wilmington College field Friday at 3 p.m. in their next match.

Whinsant scored two goals in the first period to give the Seahawks a 2-0 lead, but St. Andrews scored on a penalty kick and a goal to tie the match at 2-2 at the end of the first half.

In the third period, Whinsant opened the scoring with his third goal of the day to the Seahawks ahead again, but again St. Andrews bounced back, scoring a goal to pull within one-point, then making good a penalty kick in the final 30 seconds of the third period for the win.

"Good News" To Be Presented

"It has 'grewed like Topsy,'" was the only comment that directors Bob Alexander and Doug W. Swink could make of the forthcoming production of "Good News." This musical will be presented at Thalian Hall on November 18, 19 and 20, by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

"Good News" written by the team of De Sylva, Brown and Henderson in 1927 contains such all-time hits as "Lucky in Love," "Best Things in Life are Free," "Varsity Drag," and "Good News." The other numbers from the show are of that same rousing vintage of the Roaring 20's, interspersed with the college robust tunes that maintain the "rah, rah" atmosphere.

The plot of "Good News" takes place during the carefree college days of the 1920's when depression was just a hole in the ground and a fapper was a femme fatale. The Tait College Campus is the scene, the opening of the Fall Term is the time, and the chief and often opposing topics of conversation are the coming football season and a ravishing new beauty who has just joined the senior class.

Brooks Atkinson, in his review, described the show as "a constantly fast entertainment with furious dancing and catchy tunes played to the last trombone squeal."

In order to sustain this "rah, rah" atmosphere, the latest additions to the cast have been a 1909 convertible Ford which is driven on stage during one of the scenes and a small marching band for the pep rally which is held for a forthcoming football game in the show.

The members of this band were obtained through Bill McAdams, director of instrumental music at New Hanover High School. These students are: Jimmy Braswell, Ralph Brown, John Frye, Vera Harrell, Bobby Lewis, Ike Puzon, Howard Talley, Raleigh Todd, and Warren Waggett. These students are members of the New Hanover High School marching and concert bands.

The musical accompaniment for the entire show will be furnished by Linda Carter, pianist; Bobby Jones, bass; and Mike Milligan, drums.

Wilmington College students will be admitted to the production on their activity cards. Others may obtain membership tickets for this and the other three productions or individual show tickets at the box office during the nights of production.

Chosen Few Visits Area During Summer

Last summer, when the Chosen Few were in town, Linda Linares and Gene Burnett interviewed them. The girls released the results of that interview to THE SEAHAWK staff, in order that it might be edited and published.

The Chosen Few, a band from Montana, made its first appearance in Wilmington last summer. The popularity and reputation of the Chosen Few is now well-established.

College Students Can Tour Europe At Reduced Rate

College students and high school seniors faced with the prospect of nine months' academic labors can take heart in contemplating a student-styled sojourn in Europe next summer.

When the last blue book has been handed in to close the school year, it will be time to jet away to Europe on an excursion tailored to the tastes of student tourists from 17 to 25 years of age.

Tours range from a three-week Student Continental Tour of Italy, France and Switzerland to a 67-day Student Comprehensive Tour, visiting 14 countries in Europe and North Africa. A wide choice of destinations, lengths of stay and departure times has been arranged by University Travel Company, a 40-year veteran of introducing American students to Europe.

Air France will participate in the program, providing swift transatlantic flights on Boeing 707 jetliners, as well as additional transportation in Europe and the Middle East. An attractive brochure giving full itineraries and prices for 17 summer tours is available on request from Air France Student Tours, Dept. CG, 683 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10022.

The three-week Student Continental Tour offers leisurely sightseeing in five cities. Activities en route encompass such varied experiences as attending the Rome Opera, mountain climbing in St. Moritz, visiting the Louvre Museum in Paris and swimming from the Lido in Venice. The $845 tour price includes all transportation, accommodations, sightseeing, transfers, service charges, and most meals.

Sections leave in groups of 25-30 members, each having its own tour leader. Well informed local guides, especially chosen for student interests, will provide introductions to the highlights of the cities to be visited. Plenty of free time is allowed for pursuing special interests, whether cultural events, shopping or sports.

Whitfield Attends Nurses Convention

Miss Mary Alice Whitfield, assistant professor of nursing at Wilmington College, represented the College at the N. C. State Nurses Convention in Winston-Salem, N. C. through October 21.

Miss Whitfield attended sessions at the conference specifically devoted to the education of nurses in academic programs.

lished around this area. The five-man band is composed of the following members: Bryan Knaff, drummer, a business major from Glasgow, Mont.; Rick Richter, who plays the saxophone and is lead singer, a pharmacy major from Havre, Mont.; Rocky Liebl, organist, a music major from Cut Bank, Mont.; George Wallace, who plays the guitar, a sociology major from Missoula, Mont.; and Steve Garr, also a guitar player, a marketing major.

These boys have been playing together for two years. At one time, each boy played in a different band, and according to Bryan Knaff, the Chosen Few is the "melting pot of the best of every group." After touring North Carolina for two months, the band heard about the Wilmington area through the Swinging Medallions, the group from South Carolina that is known for the song, "Double Shot."

The Chosen Few was impressed with the hospitality of Wilmingtonians, and said this hospitality caused them to prolong their visit. They were asked to appear on television twice on the Jim Burns Show. All of them are very fond of Mrs. Fonvielle, who boosted them quite a bit. All who saw them at the Upper Deck are well aware of their great reception there.

Each Sunday, they played in the Lumina ballroom, with sometimes more than 500 persons crowded in there to hear them play. On two or three occasions, they played at the airport armory. Their final performance in this area was for the High School's first dance of the school year.

Their equipment was carried in two Cadillacs. One had no back seat, so that it could hold the drums and amplifiers, and it resembled an airport limousine. While here, the Chosen Few stayed in an apartment at Wrightsville Beach. When they were not practicing or performing, they dated different local girls.

The Chosen Few will certainly be back next summer, and they hope to get back for a two-week tour around Christmas.

This is Russ Kennedy of Balboa Island, California, on an in-port field trip as a student at Chapman College's floating campus.

The note he paused to make as fellow students went ahead to inspect Hartsburg's Temple of the Valley of the Kings near Luxor, he used to complete an assignment for his Comparative Literature professor.

Russ transferred the 12 units earned during the study-travel semester to sea to his home at the University of California at Irvine where he continues studies toward a teaching career in life sciences.

As you read this, 450 other students have begun the fall semester voyage of discovery with Chapman aboard the s.s. RYNDAM, for which Holland-America Line acts as General Partner Agents.

In February still another 450 will embark from Los Angeles for the spring 1967 semester this time bound for the Panama Canal, Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Nigeria, Senegal, Guinea, Spain, Portugal, The Netherlands, Denmark, Great Britain and New York.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

The Reason

We rejoice that our forefathers who in coming to this land found it good to them.
On the first Thanksgiving many years in the past the Pilgrims invited all and the Indians came bringing more food to grace the already overflowing tables.
And many years later
President Lincoln proclaimed
THANKSGIVING
as a national holiday.
We rejoice today at the near beginning of our Thanksgiving release from classes, but instead of yelling because of the freedom from teachers and books, stop as you sit,
and remember the reason for this Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving - Annual Day Of Thanks

Thanksgiving Day is the annual day of thanks for the blessings of the past year. The custom of setting aside a day of offering thanks to a deity has been traced back to antiquity, and throughout history many such observances have been recorded in various parts of the world.

The American Thanksgiving had its inspiration in the proclamation issued by Governor William Bradford of Plymouth Colony in the autumn of 1621. The colonists observed that day of thanksgiving by feasting on wild turkey, and the custom eventually became popular throughout New England. During the Revolutionary War the Continental Congress ordered days of national thanksgiving, and in 1789 President Washington issued a call for thanksgiving upon the adoption of the Constitution.

Credit for the institution of a national Thanksgiving Day has been given to Sarah J. B. Hale, who, as editor of the Ladies' Magazine and later of Godoy's Lady's Book, campaigned for a nationwide observance. On October 3, 1863, President Lincoln issued the first national proclamation fixing the last Thursday in November "as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father."

The day has from the start been marked by church services and family gatherings for the traditional dinner of roast turkey and pumpkin pie. In New York and other cities in the eastern United States the custom developed of children parading through the streets in costumes and masks, soliciting for money or fruits and vegetables.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed November 23 (the fourth Thursday) as Thanksgiving Day, and for the next two years he also chose the next to the last (third) Thursday. Late in 1941 Congress adopted a joint resolution setting the date on the fourth Thursday.

At this time THE SEAHAWK wishes to extend to you best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving. Remember you always have something for which to be thankful

Popular Musical "Good News" Begins Tonight In Thalian Hall

The Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Associations will present their first play of the 1966-67 season in Thalian Hall tonight, tomorrow, and Sunday beginning at 8:30 p.m. The production will be the popular musical of the Roaring 20's "Good News".

The plot is concerned with Tom Marlowe (John Ford) passing an astronomy exam given by Professor Kenyon (Art Bannon) in order to play in Saturday's big football game with Colton College. In order for Tom to pass, his girl, Pat (Rosemary Green), and the coach (Jim Potter), persuade Connie (Joy Lee) Pat's poor relation, to coach Tom.

Tom's roommate, Bobby Randall (George Deaton), has trouble when Babe O'Day (Carole Benton), falls for him. Babe happens to be the private property of Beef Saunders (Robert Wood), the big brute of Tait College's team.

Throughout all these escapades Pooch Kearney (Sam Garner), the team's trainer, bungles his way. Other students at Tait College are Sylvester (Frank Hall), Windy (Jere Hodgkin), Slat (Bill Wahlgren), Millie (Lynda Bagby), Flo (Wina Dowdy), Jim (Terry Wortley), Ben (Michael Sampley), Pete (Tony Rivenbark) and George (Steve Craft).

Other students that include the chorus and dancers for this rousing musical are: Christ Deasy, Barbara Deaton, Nancy James, Artie Markatos, Tony Rivenbark, Maxine Robbins, Michael Sampley, Diana Smith, Jeannie Snell, and Vangie Waggett.

The latest edition to the cast has been a small marching band all its own. As the play takes place on a college campus and all action is centered around the winning of a football game, a marching band was mandatory.

Bill McAdams, band director at New Hanover High School has co-operated in forming a band for the show from the following students: Jimmy Braswell, Ralph Brown, John Frye, Vera Harrell, Bobby Lewis, Ike Puzon, Howard Talley, Raleigh Todd, and Warren Waggett. These students are members of the New Hanover High School marching and concert bands.

There are three others in the plot who do not attend college but have their own especial place within the outcome and goings-on. Tina Forrester plays the part of Sylvester's long-lost mother. David James, the beloved and yet feared gateman, and Mike Craft, the indispensable water boy to any football team.

Supplying the musical accompaniment for the entire production will be Linda Carter, pianist; Bobby Jones, bass; and Mike Milligan, drums.

The musical consists of ten sets which have been designed by Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at Wilmington College, who is also serving as technical director for the production. Swift manipulation was a key in the actual scenic design as the various scenes in "Good News" requires manpower and speed to operate the changes effectively.

Wilmington College students will be admitted to the production on their activity cards. Others may obtain membership tickets for this and the other three productions or individual show tickets at the box office during the nights of the production.

BSU Members Attend Convention At Wake Forest

The Thirty-seventh Baptist Student Convention of North Carolina convened at 7:00 p.m. November 4, at Wake Forest College in Winston-Salem. The theme of the convention dealt with the relationship of faith and learning.

The principle speaker for the convention was Dr. John D. Maguire, professor of religion at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn. In his main addresses, delivered on Friday evening and Saturday morning, Dr. Maguire stressed the fact that Christ's dictum to love God included not only our heart and strength, but also our minds. Failure to use one's mind is just as much an act of infidelity as failure to exercise social concern and worship.

Furthermore, he said, inquiry and faith are both acts. The act of inquiry and faith are both acts. The act of inquiry utilizes the faculty of the intellect upon its object, namely anything which can be studied, to achieve the goal of truth. The act of faith utilizes the faculties of every aspect of the being (or self) toward its object, God, in order to achieve an understanding and enjoyment of God. Both the act of faith and inquiry begin with an awareness of finitude and progress to an even deeper doubt. Without doubt there is no faith. Without doubt there

Freshman Class Attends Meeting To Plan Activities And Meet New Officers

"I'd like to welcome you to the Freshman Class meeting," said freshman class president, Bill Baugh, to the 37 freshmen in the Student Services Building on November 10.

The purpose of the meeting was to introduce the freshman officers to their class, and to acquaint the class with what the officers hope to do this year.

"Believe it or not, the Freshman Class is the most important class at Wilco," stated Hugh Newkirk, freshman vice president.

"Wilmington College has been waiting for a class to breathe the breath of life into its activities, and I believe we are members of the class that's going to do it," Hugh continued.

"Our class will be a class of action," he added. "This is your government and your support is needed," Hugh emphasized.

Bill listed the projects he and the other officers would like to see the freshman class undertake. The class would like to try to have a social after some of the home basketball games; to have a ping pong table upstairs in the Student Services Building; have more tables and chairs in the Pub; and to try to beautify the grounds.

Suggestions such as a car wash and rummage sale were given for fund raising since Bill pointed out that "We must raise money so we can have these projects."

Commenting on the attendance, freshman senator Sherry Manley said, "We're hoping to get enough enthusiasm from this group to go out and spur others."

Art Department Opens Exhibit In Kenan Hall

Wilmington College art department opened the second in its series of monthly exhibitions on Sunday afternoon, November 6 in Kenan Hall on the College campus.

The College is fortunate to have the loan of the Dillard Collection, purchased by the Dillard Paper Company from the 1965 Art on Paper Exhibition, and presented to the Weatherspoon Gallery, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, according to the art department. The exhibition consists of some of the finest contemporary art in the United States being done on paper in any medium. All styles are represented, the only criteria being quality.

Also on exhibit is a collection of Ceramics by Dottie Reid of Wilmington who is beginning to achieve acclaim for her work in this medium. Much of this work is new, never having been exhibited before.

Both exhibitions will be open to the public on weekdays through December 9.

An exhibition entitled The Ideal Theatre: Eight Concepts opened on November 12 and will remain on exhibit through December. This exhibition consists of 34 photo panels of eight architectural theatre projects by some of the outstanding contemporary theatre designers.

Student NEA Observes National Education Week

Louis Adcock Recipient Of Chemistry Grant

Dr. William M. Randall, president, announced that a National Science Foundation Grant of $2,000 has been awarded the College with Louis H. Adcock of the chemistry department the immediate recipient.

Mr. Adcock received this award as an outgrowth of study at Louisiana State University during the past three summers. While attending L.S.U., he was one of eleven in the Resident Research Participation Program for Teachers of chemistry. Mr. Adcock was one of four teachers nominated for grants in the academic year Extension On Campus Program for Advanced Study.

Mr. Adcock, assistant professor of chemistry at Wilmington College, is conducting research on the "Ionization Constants of acetic acid, propanoic acid, and butanoic acid in mixed solvents systems. This study will involve correlations of mixed solvent data and ionization constants. This will further involve the study of primary and secondary medium effects of solutions in pure water.

Since 1956, Mr. Adcock has been a member of the teaching staff at Wilmington College and holds the Bachelor of Science and the Master of Arts degrees from Duke University. He is a native of Durham.

A member of the American Chemical Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Mr. Adcock has been one of the college teachers instrumental in arranging for the High School Science Symposium of the Eastern North Carolina Section of the American Chemical Society.

He is married to the former Patricia Patterson, and the Adcocks have three daughters.

Anyone Interested In Learning Art Of Shoeing Horses?

Tucson, Ariz. (CPS)—Do you have an anvil you can bring to class? How about an 18-cubic foot freezer for storing horses' feet?

Well, then, instructor Zip Peterson will welcome you with open arms to his basic course in the art of shoeing the horse at the University of Arizona.

The non-credit course is being offered for the first time and has piqued the interest of horsemen country-wide, according to University officials.

Peterson, a local farrier (blacksmith) who specializes in shoeing gaited horses and in hoof therapy, completed his work in farrier training at Michigan State University. He will cover the structure, care and proper maintenance of the animal's hoof.

Horses' hooves are in abundant supply, but the search for a freezer in which to store them goes on. As does the search for anvils.

Business affairs for the College. "The College will be greatly strengthened by membership in professional associations," Dr. William M. Randall, president of the College stated.

Wind Quintet Gives Recital Here Today

Today the Clarian Wind Quintet from the North Carolina School of the Arts will give a lecture-demonstration and recital here. Their appearance is sponsored by the Music Department.

Woodwind students from 30 North Carolina school systems have been invited.

The quintet will give their lecture and demonstrations in the morning and will present a recital in the afternoon.

Lloyd Hudson, head of the music department, said, "We hope to have other authorities in vocal and music fields in the future and have similar events."

In the recent weeks the College Chorus sang for the United Church Women at the Fifth Avenue Methodist Church. The Top Twelve appeared at a function in the First Baptist Church in Burgaw.

The first quarterly recital for music students will take place December 6.

Here a student is reminded of the First Thanksgiving. Perhaps a reminder of the past is needed in order to realize how thankful we should be for what we have.

Support At Ball Games Is Our Responsibility

By CARRIE DAVIS

The coming of winter marks the beginning of another basketball season. As the Seahawks anticipate another year of basketball, it is hoped that the students and faculty will give their support to the team. How frustrating it must be for a team to be "playing its heart out," and look up into half-filled bleachers.

Almost as disheartening as empty bleachers, are bleachers filled with silent spectators. The "sound of silence," so appropriate for libraries, places of worship, etc., is very inappropriate for a gymnasium. And despite seemingly popular belief, cheerleaders are not supposed to do all the cheering themselves. They are just what their titles imply—cheerleaders, leaders of cheers—not the entire cheering section.

The Seahawks are playing for us—the students and faculty of Wilmington College. Therefore, it is our responsibility to support them in their athletic endeavors. We should not, though, view this responsibility as a burden or task that has to be done. Instead, it should bring us pleasure to display school spirit, pride in Wilmington College, by our presence and support at ball games.

The first game is tomorrow night at 8 p.m. With just a little effort, many of us can be present at that game. But as has already been stated, just being there is not all that is necessary; we should all proudly cheer our team on to victory!

"No Exit" Presented November 11-12

By DR. LLOYD BISHOP

On Wednesday evening, November 9, the S.R.O. Theatre held its final full rehearsal of Jean-Paul Sartre's "No Exit," which was presented to the public on November 11-12.

"No Exit" is a taut, highly concentrated one-act play dealing with three people who have made a mess of their lives. Anne Fitzgibbon was very effective as the sadistic lesbian. Dorothy Pastis excelled in portraying Estelle, an unconscionable nymphomaniac and infanticide.

Hank Blaustein played the role of the cowardly Garcin who cannot quite bring himself to face his real motives squarely. The bell boy was played by Terry Wortley.

The audience had to adjust somewhat to the British translations of the play, and in the theatre there is very little time to adjust. "Glass" is used for "Mirror," "round-a-bout" for "merry-go-round," "What matter" for "So what?" and so forth.

"No Exit" is one of the finest plays that has been offered to Wilmington audiences in the last few years. It presents in concrete terms some of the main tenets of Sartrean existentialism, e.g. that man's existence precedes his essence; that an individual's sole identity is the one he creates for himself. The play also explores some of the ways in which, for atheistic existentialists, "Hell is Other People."

The excellent performance of the S.R.O. theatre proves something rather important: that a play can be very philosophical and still be very good theatre.

Seahawks Host Armstrong Five Here Saturday

By JERRY HOOKS

A crackerjack team and top flight schedule are on the agenda for Wilmington College basketball fans this year, as the Seahawks launch their 1966-67 campaign here tomorrow night by hosting Armstrong College.

The schedule, a 26-game affair, will have the Seahawks playing at home 12 times including the Wilmington Invitational Tournament December 29-30. Athletic director and basketball coach, Bill Brooks, admits this is the best schedule he has played yet. Visiting teams here include NAIA District champion Guilford for the Invitational Tournament and Georgia Southern, who finished as runner-up for the NAIA basketball title last year in Kansas. In addition, the Seahawks meet Stetson University, Oglethorpe University, and NCAA power Jacksonville University on the road.

Although it's against his basic philosophy to say so, Brooks secretly feels the new edition of the Seahawks could be the best since the college gained four year status. With three returning starters from the 1966 squad that finished with a 14-10 record, Brooks has the needed nucleus. In addition, he gains the service of a transfer from Lenoir Rhyne in Frank Bua and has sophomore Wayne King ready to step into a starting role. The veterans, Butch Budd, Jim Braxton, and Jim Hall, all are proven performers.

Budd, a 6'4" Wilmington native, was second high scorer to Jay Neary last year. Braxton is an adequate center with defense and rebounding his strong points. Hall will be much improved as a sophomore, and with Neary departed, will be given the chance to demonstrate his shooting potential. King, like Budd, played under Leon Brogden at New Hanover High School. He was a top sub last year and has one of the finest shooting touches seen anywhere.

Bua, a Massachusetts native, played at Lenoir Rhyne in a starting capacity before transferring here in 1965. However, according to NAIA rules, he had to lay out a year before being eligible. Bua is expected to be one of the leading rebounders on the team and while at Lenoir Rhyne, became noted for defensive ability. That's one department the Seahawks have been woefully short of in past years.

Depth is the one problem that plagues Coach Brooks now. Outside of the starting five, only Wayne Johnson and Jerry Bron have seen any collegiate action. However, Brooks has a host of newcomers on hand that could develop fast. These include Jim Durham, Reidsville, Sam Askeew, Kenly; Sparky Johnson, Asheville; Jim Sanders, Florence, S. C.; with Jerry Martin, Dave Pratt, Bill Baugh, and Ed Lewis, all from Wilmington.

The first five will be as good as anybody's. If the newcomers develop, it could be an interesting season.

The cage team has new incentive now that Wilmington has gained NAIA status. The college, with the best record among the independents in this District, will be invited to the District playoffs. The independents include Pembroke, Campbell, Wofford, Erskine, Belmont Abbey, and Wilmington.

Seahawk Victory Closes Out Soccer Season

By WALTER HEALEY
Staff Sports Writer

The sweetest way to close out a soccer season is with a victory especially if it is before a home crowd. That is exactly what the Wilmington College Seahawks did as they edged Wesleyan College 3-2, with their second half heroics headed by Pete Daughtry's two second half goals Thursday, November 3.

The Seahawks looked like they were going to be on the short end of the score as the first period ended with them trailing the Bishops, 2-0.

Center forward, Bob Keyes, of the Bishops tallied with 6:10 gone in the opening period. Goalie Bob Vaughn, co-captain of the Seahawks, blocked a shot but could not stop Keyes from booming in the rebound for the score.

With 13 minutes gone in the period, the Bishops right wing, Ralph Thomas, went along the sidelines and out raced the Seahawk defense. He dribbled the ball about 20 feet from the goal and boomed in the score over Vaughn's left shoulder.

The Seahawks settled down after the second score but just could not generate an offense. In the middle of the second period, Coach Sproles substituted for his entire front line. The move paid off, as Doug Peacock booted the ball over the Bishops' goalie, Tom Dickenson, head, for his first goal of the season. The tally narrowed the score to 2-1 at half time.

The Seahawks came out in their usual third period fashion. They passed well and were excellent on defense enabling the offense to keep plenty of pressure on the Bishops' goal.

In the middle of the period some beautiful passing caught Pete Daughtry open and he booted the ball past the sprawling Dickenson.

There was about five and a half minutes to go in the game when Daughtry scored the winning goal. Dan Whisnant had a shot and the ball rebounded off Dickenson toward Daughtry. Pete then slipped the ball into the net for the score, to make the final tally 3-2, Seahawks.

Coach Sproles said after the game, "I was pleased with our second half. I wish we could have played that way in the first half. It seems that we should go out and play a scrimmage just before our regular games and maybe we'll put two good halves together."

Sproles also had high praise for his defense, which was led by Elmer Maley, Paul Livingston, Tom Simmons and Jerry Simmons, who shut out the Bishops over the last 70 minutes of the match.

Soccer Season Ends With Three Wins For the Seahawks

By WALTER HEALEY

The soccer season ended on a successful note as Wilmington downed Wesleyan, 3-2, in the finals. This was the third victory of the season for Coach Charles Sproles and the Seahawks and is a tremendous improvement over last year when Wilmington fielded a soccer team for the first time and went winless in seven matches.

The Seahawks final 1966 slate stands at 3-6. They were in all the matches save for a 4-0 defeat at the hands of tough Belmont Abbey.

The Seahawks opened the season with a 5-4 loss to St. Andrews. Co-captain Dan Whisnant scored three goals while co-captain and goalie Bob Vaughn scored the other on a penalty kick.

The next two games the Seahawks were shutout. They lost to Pembroke 2-0 and Belmont Abbey 4-0.

The first soccer victory in the history of Wilmington College was over Wesleyan College at Wesleyan. Gene Russ was all the Seahawks needed as he boomed in three goals. Wayne Barker added the fourth.

Whisnant scored three goals again in one game and it was against St. Andrews in a losing cause 4-3.

The Methodist Monarch's led the Seahawks 2-0 at the half. Then in the second half Wilmington scored three goals one each by Russ, Mike Brannon and Vaughn. Vaughn scored came with 33 seconds left in the match to clinch the victory.

Wilmington then lost two in a row. One to the East Carolina varsity 5-2 and the other to Campbell 4-1.

The finale was another one of those come from behind matches that the soccer team is becoming famous for, as they scored twice in the second half to defeat Wesleyan, 3-2.

In a majority of the matches the Seahawks always came to life in the second half, especially in the third period. A good example is the East Carolina match. Down 3-0 the Seahawks came out in the third period and outplayed the Pirates in every aspect of the game, but the ball only went in once for a score as it either hit the top of the goal bar and bounced up over the net instead of into the net or they booted the ball right to the spot where the goalie was playing.

Especially worthy of praise is the defensive play of Elmer Maley and the goal tending of Vaughn. Both these Seahawks played outstanding ball throughout the entire season. Maley played tough-nose type of defense that inspired the rest of the team while Vaughn took chances, especially when the opposition was near scoring, that most goalies would never dream of doing. Bob would go out and meet them instead of waiting for them to bring the play to him. This enabled him to prevent scores that might have put the Seahawks out of contention in the match.

The leading offensive players were Whisnant with six goals, Russ with five; Vaughn with four (all on penalty kicks), and Pete Daughtry with two.

Next season looks much brighter as Coach Sproles has his whole team returning for action. This season Coach had only eight experienced lettermen returning with varsity experience. The rest of the team consisted of freshmen who came through for the Seahawks when called upon. Next year with a year's competition under their belt and a year of playing together as a unit should really make them tough.

Student Services Building Dedicated

A Ribbon cutting ceremony marked the presentation of the Student Services Building to the Student Body of Wilmington College. Greg Godwin, Student Body President, is shown cutting the ribbon with the aid of Carol Trebing, Student Body Vice-President. Watching the two is Dr. William Randall, President of Wilmington College, who made the presentation of the building.

Rushmore Dance Held

Until recently, the Student Services Building at Wilmington College has contained classrooms. With the addition of the Kenan Building to the campus, however, classes are no longer held in the Student Services Building, and this building is now entirely for the student's use.

In a ribbon-cutting ceremony held Saturday night, November 5, this building was officially dedicated to the students. Dr. William M. Randall presented a symbolic key to the building to the president and vice-president of the Student Body, Greg Godwin and Carol Trebing, who accepted it on behalf of the Student Body. Dr. Randall explained that the students and the Senate were to assume responsibility for the building.

Following the ceremony, students and some faculty members entered the Pub of the newly dedicated building to dance to the music of the Nomads. This dance, the second one of the year at Wilco, was the Rushmore Dance. Due to much time and preparation by the dance committee, the hall and Pub were transformed into a country cabin, and students seemed to have entered the land of Snuffy Smith.

Like the first dance, held in honor of the Freshmen, the annual Rushmore Dance was informal, and the only admission was the presentation of student activity cards at the door. Tom McNair, chairman of the Dance Committee, expressed disappointment that some students did not attend the dance and he hopes the attendance at the next dance, the Winter Festival dance, will be better. The Winter Festival Dance will be held December 3.

is no understanding. Secondly, both have a similar structure. They move from a center outward.

Finally, both the act of inquiry and faith begin and end in action. Dr. Maguire concluded his addresses with the tenet that community is the place in which both inquiry and faith find their consummation and fulfillment. Freedom or truth is a common goal for both of these acts and this freedom is not only freedom from but for and with. Both acts require a period of renewal in order to progress. Worship is required for faith's renewal and research is required for the renewal of inquiry.

Finally, the end result of both the act of faith and the act of inquiry is transformation of the one who acts. As Plato said, "A man becomes like that to which he gives himself."

Saturday afternoon was left free for the students to use at their own discretion. Saturday evening the Summer Mission Projects gave their presentations and an address was given by Neil L. Jones, a two year missionary with the Home Mission Board doing juvenile work in Texas. There was also a drama, Inherit the Wind, presented Saturday evening. It was based on the famous Scopes "monkey trial" of Dayton, Tenn., in which a high school teacher was tried for teaching evolution. The play reflected, as did the trial, a battle between the precepts of Darwin and the literal interpretation of the Old Testament.

The conviction was brought to a close on Sunday morning by Dr. Warren Carr, minister of the Wake Forest Baptist Church.

Those attending the convention from Wilmington College were Elliott O'Neal, Joe Peterson, Sue Duff, Larry Bohannon, Ethrage

"Two And A Half" Gain Fame

Last year in Pi Sigma Mu's "Sigma Sayso," a statement was made about a group called the "New Goliards," to the effect: "Keep your eyes on this group, they're on their way up."

The group has now changed their name to a more appropriate, "Two and a Half," and if you lend an ear to radio every now and then, you'll know that they are truly "on their way up," with the sky being the limit. Their record, "The Thought of Yesterday," is, in the words of WGN's Jay Howard, "taking the town." (And no one is more happy or surprised about the new-found success than the "Two and Half" themselves.)

The song features the "Half" of the group, petite Miss Sherry Lackey. It was written, as was the other side, "Take Your Time," by the "Two," Roy Frantzen and Tom McNair. Roy spoke to us about the record, saying, "Naturally, we're very happy about the way the songs have gone over. We never expected this much enthusiasm!"

Here's hoping that the "Two and a Half" keeps clicking! THE SEAHAWK salutes them, and we know that its readers will want to do the same.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Saint Luke 2:1-14

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be taxed.

☆☆☆☆☆☆

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem;

5 To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

6 And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And she brought forth her first born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 And there were in the same country, shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly hosts praising God, and saying, 14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Sherry Lackey To Reign As May Queen

Senior Sherry Lackey will reign as May Queen... Her maids of honor will be Myra Rochelle. Senior attendants are Mary Ann Bosso and Raticia Futches. Betty Carroll Crisp and Carol Proctor are junior attendants.

Sophomore attendants are Anita Edwards and Linda Lannier. Cheryl Williamson and Barbara Wentz are the freshman attendants.

The nomination of the Queen and her Maid of Honor was from the Senior Class. A May Court of eight girls was chosen with two girls from each class as the representatives.

The election of the May Queen and her court took place in the Student Services Building on December 1 and on December 6 with the polls open from 8:00 a.m. until 3 p.m.

The May Queen at Wilmington College last year was Memory Farrar, now a teacher at Roland Grise Junior High School. Maid of Honor was Miss Kitty O'Brien, now a teacher at New Hanover High School.

Christmas Customs

Most of the customs now associated with Christmas were not originally Christmas customs but rather were pre-Christian and non-Christian customs taken up by the Christian church. Saturnalia, a Roman feast celebrated in mid-December, was the model for many of the merry-making customs of Christmas. From this came the elaborate feasting, the giving of gifts, and the burning of candles.

The Teutonic rule feast also provided customs such as the yule log and the wassail bowl. The origin of the Christmas tree has been traced to many sources; however, it was not in wide usage until the eighteenth century. The use of ivy and holly, and mistletoe comes from the Celts.

Nativity plays were the first part of the Christian celebration. About the thirteenth century merry songs on religious themes became an important part of the Christmas activities.

The sending of Christmas cards by way of friendly greeting and remembrance has grown up since the middle of the nineteenth century. Here in the United States the customs of many nationalities and faiths have gradually blended into the forming a new tradition.

Senior Class Approves Sun Dial Project

The members of the senior class present at the meeting held December 1, unanimously approved the bronze and granite sun dial suggested by the ways and means committee. Also approved, was the $3.00 per quarter class dues to be collected on registration day, winter and spring quarter. The dues will cover the cost of the sun dial, estimated at $600.00.

Blueprints of the sun dial may be seen in the trophy case of the Student Services Building, and other prints will be placed around the school as soon as they are obtained.

The project will be put before the Board of Trustees December 6, for their approval, and upon passage, the contracts for the sun dial will be let, no later than January 6, 1967.

Copies of the minutes of the meeting will be distributed to all seniors, explaining in detail the project, costs, class dues, and other considerations. Class officers will be glad to explain any point you may not be clear on.

William Adcock Elected President of State Association

The department of music of Wilmington College announced that William F. Adcock, assistant professor of music, was recently elected president of the North Carolina State Bandmasters Association. Mr. Adcock will serve for a two-year term.

Mr. Adcock has been clinician and adjudicator of the Association, has served on the board of directors, and has been vice-president. He has also served on the board of directors of the North Carolina Educators Association.

Mr. Adcock has been an instructor of music at Wichita University, as supervisor of instrumental music in the junior high schools of New Hanover County and director of bands at New Hanover High Schools.

Play Tryout Set For Next Production

Tryouts for the next College-Thalian production, A Man for All Seasons, will be January 3 and 4 at Thalian Hall at 7:30 p.m.

A Man for All Seasons, written by Englishman Robert Bolt, describes Sir Thomas More, England's chancellor in 1529, when he began to lock horns with Henry VIII. More was ordered to sanction the king's divorce from Catherine of Aragon so he could wed Anne Boleyn, but More remained loyal to the Church of Rome and refused to grant that a king, be he ever so mighty, can flout God's laws.

The play, winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle award in 1961, was cited for five Tony awards.

Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon will direct the play and Doug Swink will be technical director.

A Man for All Seasons will be produced February 10, 11, and 12.

College Chorus Presents Concert

On Monday, November 21, at 8:00 p.m., the Wilmington College Chorus presented a concert of Baroque music. The presentation was held in the sanctuary of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Sixth and Market Streets.

The major choral work for the evening was the oratorio "Jephthe" by Giacomo Carissimi. Taken from the Book of Judges xi, 29-40, with some paraphrasing and some added material, the oratorio told of the fatal vow taken by Jephthe.

Soloists for the oratorio were: Miss Ann Darden, instructor in voice; Miss Gaye Newber, senior student in voice; Dr. Robert Melton, well-known tenor soloist; and Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the faculty.

Bob L. Alexander, director of vocal music at New Hanover High School, was the cellist and Miss Sandra Willoughby was at the piano.

The College Chorus sang "Cantate Domino" by the German composer Heinrich Schultze.

Frank Honey, instructor in music, played "Sheep May Safely Graze" and the "Prelude in D Major" as Preludes as well as the "Toccata and Fugue in D Minor" as a Postlude. Mr. Honey's selections were all by J. S. Bach.

The conductor for the evening was Loyd Hudson, chairman of the music department.

Wilco Debate Team Defeats Wake Forest

Wilmington College's Debate Club defeated Wake Forest in a tournament held there the weekend of October 21. Six more tournaments are planned for the future.

Appalachian, Lenoir Rhyne, U. N. C., and Old Dominion College in Virginia are tentatively scheduled for debates, as well as a tournament at the University of Florida in March or April of 1967.

The College also plans to hold its first Invitational tournament some time in May, inviting several schools in North Carolina and surrounding areas. Out of state schools asked may include the University of South Carolina, the University of Georgia, Annapolis, Old Dominion College, and Hampton College.

It is customary for the school holding the tournament to give a banquet before the event, however this project has yet to be passed by the College.

Members of the Debate team are: Carol Trebing, Ellen Davis, Chas Weiss, Helen Honeycutt, and Tim Rider. Advisors are Miss Carol Ellis and John Gold.

SNEA Members Attend Convention

Several members of the Student NEA attended a convention in Raleigh in November. The meeting was held in the National North Carolina Education building.

The program scheduled was "Reaction to Teen Teaching," composed of a panel of teachers from the elementary school system in Raleigh. Dr. Warren Anderson was also on the panel, and Mrs. Betty Stike of Wilmington College served as narrator.

In the morning, Student NEA members watched a mock teaching situation, then met in groups to formulate questions to be posed to the panel that afternoon.

Mike Lawler, a representative of the Youth Educational Service, spoke to the group on setting up a tutorial service in North Carolina. Members from Wilmington are attempting to bring him to the College to speak at the January 18 meeting.

Under this program, students give two hours of their time to tutor elementary and high school students. They would work in association with the teaching staff. If YES can be brought to Wilmington, the Student NEA feels it would help to put Wilmington College on the map.

The club held a rummage sale this past Saturday to raise funds for the treasury.

Christmas — Another Day of Thanksgiving

Too often many of us forget the true meaning of Christmas. We tend to think of Santa, Christmas trees, parties, presents, and vacations from work and school.

However, we should think more of the first Christmas—the birth of our Saviour. Christmas, in a way, can be seen as another day of thanksgiving. We should be thankful that the Lord cared enough for us to send His Son to save us from our sins. We should also be thankful for all the blessings that we have received throughout the year, and look forward, with hope, to the new year.

Christmas should be a time of giving, not only materially but spiritually as well. This is a perfect time to show our love and concern for our neighbors, friends, and relatives. To really get into the real spirit of Christmas, let's do a favor for the people we know. We're sure you'll be glad you did, and it may brighten up the new year coming up.

At this time The Seahawk extends a wish to all Wilco students and faculty for a very merry Christmas and a very happy New Year!

Changes Made

The new method of pre-registration and registration should please all the students. Now, the large white cards may be filled out at home. However, there will be complaints at not being able to keep up with them and the permit to register until January 3.

One noticeable change was leaving to take the permits to registration to prevent lines for stamping. This was to cut down the chance of students escaping payments of transfer fees, and fines owed to the college.

The change is also allowing the students to choose the time at which they will register. From these changes we should realize that it is not as difficult to get the administration to see our points of view.

Standing Room Only

So far, things standing room only, and that condition existed during the second performance of No. 10. It was very good that students were willing to see the play and hear the discussion afterwards. And it was a shame that people had to stand during the performance. Some students were even turned away.

The production was excellent in the size of our college "theatre." The fact that you will have more seats than "theatre" is a shame. It is a shame that a discussion with a stage in the middle of the room. The stage is small and sits up into the room. The stage is small and sits up into the room. The stage is small and sits up into the room.

Merry Christmas . . . and Happy Chanukah. That last is for our Jewish friends who are rather left out during this season.

Since this is the season of "brotherly love" and all that, we would like to say we are sorry if we offended young Mr. Noe. But, we must say we still believe what we said and we were voicing not only our opinion, but the opinions of others to whom we have spoken.

A new system of registration—registration day hasn't arrived yet so we are not yet going to give a loud cheer, although we might attempt a weak one. It does look good—and by giving us the forms ahead of time we can have them filled out when we arrive to get through the formalities of registration.

Of course, there are about four weeks until January 3—time for those big beautiful cards to get out. But that is the least of our worries. It still makes us wonder though, why we have to give the same information every quarter. Information such as home address, telephone, and social security number, which doesn't change, the whole idea suggests a card that has room for the student's name, address, and phone number. Then the rest of the information would not have to be repeated.

There is something missing in the campus news. This name is Buck and last semester was his last day. He retired after 20 years with the school—he has been the one who has kept the college running since it began. As Buck himself said, "I'm going to rest—over 20 years, that's long enough." There is nothing more we can add to that.

Did everyone—or anyone—notice how nicely the music department was decorated in the spirit of the season? We have no idea who did it, but we believe it looked very good.

Still speaking of the music department, we'd like to say how much we enjoyed the concert by the chorus on November 21. And to add another thing enjoyed was the production of Good News. Mr. Swink and his cast and crew did a very fine job.

We hope everyone does exceedingly well on their exams and we want to say now: A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL, also Happy New Year!

World Almanac Facts

One inch of rainfall over one acre of land would produce a total of 6,272,848 cubic inches of water. The World Almanac. Weight of this water over the same area would be 226,512 pounds or 113.3 short tons. Since one U. Right now, says The World Almanac, you might be holding two half-pint glasses of the same in your hand. The enormous line that comes from the waters of the ocean and settles on the earth's surface, causes human organisms called plankton to settle in the water and are large enough to see.

Comments On "Good News"

The following comments that I offer on the Thalian-Wilmington College production, Good News, are not meant to constitute a "review" in any real sense. Let us rather consider the stirring occasions that greeted its "popular"

Letter

Salli Seahawk
c/o The Seahawk
Wilmington College

For three years I have read The Seahawk and read cutting comments about my father. I have been content, up until now, to set back and chuckle at them; however, I believe that the editor of this newspaper has obtained a new type of irresponsible editorship.

I refer specifically, to the column of November 14, 1966, in which, the author was accused of being too nervous about his job and believing that his power is without limit.

I must make exception to your statement. My father's job is to enforce the regulations of the college or direct the Department of the College and Grounds. He is extremely serious about his job as he has a most high sense of responsibility and due toward his employer a sense of responsibility. I might add, that would make laws and law-enforcement officers anxious to discontinue or opposed to our expanding system.

College students, the author not excepted, are well known for their lack of responsibility and dislike of enforcement authority. When tickled by a State Patrolman for a traffic violation they tend to vent their anger upon that officer. Such is the case with my father. He has no desire to tickle students for traffic violations, however, as long as his position demands it and violations continue, he will not hesitate to do his job to the best of his ability.

In regards to the comment about his unlimited power, it can only be said that any responsibility must go the autonomy to accomplish the task.

With reference to the students who complain that they were tickled wrong, I believe that they are. I would to advise themselves that they were in the right. I refusing to believe that they could possibly have done anything wrong.

I feel you give for a wilder version of running organizations, not do a real job because of our own emotions, but to feel hate toward us rather because of the student's wrong doing is an absurd misrepresentation of our person's self pity.

Perhaps, Miss Salli Seahawk, would care to be in my father's shoes for a while. I doubt it because, then, she would not be able to "write about a person, being nervous about his job and believing the school power is without limit." The new world does exist and she must have behind her work, unknown, but having our emotional, misrepresentations in students where are his but superficial knowledge.

Sincerely,
John E. Noe

1966-1967 Wrestling Season Outlined

By WALTER HEALEY
Staff Sports Writer

The 1966-67 wrestling season opened for the Wilmington College Seahawks when they met R. P. I. in a duel meet Wednesday, November 30 at Richmond, Va.

Wrestling began as a varsity sport two years ago at Wilmington. The Seahawks finished up their first season with a 1-6-1 record. Last season the Seahawks had grapplers like Eddie Radford, Jim Morrissey, Tom Simmons and Roy Jones to win seven meets against such opponents as William and Mary, Furman, Pembroke, RPI, and North Carolina Wesleyan.

This season is going to be a little rougher as Sproles has scheduled 15 meets. "We have a real tough schedule which includes three ACC teams, Duke, North Carolina and N. C. State and four Southern Conference teams, William and Mary, East Carolina, Furman and West Virginia," Sproles added. "We lost two meets last season on the last match of the day and wound up with a 7-4 slate which was big improvement over the previous year. I've lost some boys this year and lack some depth in a few weight classes but we are going to be tough," he added.

"We received a big blow when Eddie Radford, who finished second in the Southern Open at Atlanta last year, was given orders by his doctor not to compete due to a kidney injury," noted Sproles. "The way the starting lineup is picked is, that a few days before each meet the boys have an intersquad match. The boy defeating the opponents at his weight level is the one representing us at the meet coming up. This is done before each meet and causes keen competition during practice to gain that starting spot," said Sproles.

Kenneth King, a freshman from Norfolk, Va., is the only one out for the 123 pound class since the loss of Radford.

Larry Clukey, a freshman from Virginia Beach, with four years of high school wrestling is the representative for the 130 pound class.

James Morrissey, a sophomore from New Jersey, was fourth in the Southern Open last year for the 'Hawks, and Donald Walker, a freshman from Wilmington are in the 137 pound division. In the 145 pound class, Roy Jones, a sophomore from Goldsboro, who won six matches last year; Ken Cobb, a sophomore from Greensboro has moved up from the 130 pound division, and Mike Robertson, a freshman from Wilmington are competitors.

Dick Hudson, co-captain, is the only one out for the 152 pound division.

Robert Elliot, a freshman from Hampton, Va., has wrestled one year in high school and finished with a 10-1-1 record and Thomas McKeithan, a freshman from Goldsboro, are out in the 160 pound class.

In the 167 pound division Paul Baker and Neil Brennecke are out. Baker is a freshman who compiled an 8-0 at Frederick Military Academy last year. Brennecke is a freshman from Raleigh.

Co-captain Tom Simmons heads the list at the 177 pound level. Simmons, from Lake Waccamaw, is junior who won six matches last season. Charles Blackburn, a freshman from Shallotte, is Simmons' competition.

William Griffin, from Fayetteville, Ed Thompson from Wilmington, William Ruffe from Albany, New York, are all freshmen in the heavyweight division.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL BEGINS SOON

The intramural basketball teams, under the direction of Coach David Miller, are beginning preparations for another season. At present, there are three sports included in the intramural program—football, basketball, and softball—but Coach Miller hopes to extend the program later to include other sports, such as tennis and badminton. For now, however, he would be happy just to see increased interest in the sports that are already offered, especially in softball and football. There has been a fairly favorable response to intramural basketball; last year there was a league with ten teams.

So far, only five teams have been signed to participate in this year's action. The two fraternities and Circle K, who are permanent teams, are included in this five, which are as follows: Pi Sigma Mu, managed by Andy Futrelle; Sigma Phi Kappa, managed by Chas. Weiss; Circle K, managed by Horace Best; The Unknowns, managed by Wynn Moore; and The Turkey Buzzards, managed by Butch Budd.

Teams are still being formed, and anyone who would like to either form a team of his own or to join an existing team, is asked to go by Coach Miller's office in the gymnasium, for a conference. In order to form a team, a person has to turn in a roster to Coach Miller. Anyone who has not lettered in basketball is eligible to play.

Officials for the games are also being sought. Persons interested in officiating should also go by Coach Miller's office. One dollar will be paid per game to each official.

Intramural basketball games will begin after Christmas, but definite nights have not been decided. Games will be played sometime between Monday and Thursday nights, not on the week-ends. There will be no admission charge.

Wilco Defeats Armstrong

By JERRY HOOKS

Wilmington College Seahawks, passed by the play of a couple of local freshmen, rolled to an easy 91-72 victory over Armstrong College of Savannah, Ga. in the season opener.

The Seahawks never trailed in the contest and enjoyed a 49-38 halftime margin, with Dave Pratt and Jerry Martin, leading the way.

It was a surprisingly easy win for the 'Hawks who were impressive despite the absence of Butch Budd, their second leading scorer and rebounder last year. Budd suffered a broken foot in a scrimmage game and will be out at least until the Christmas tournament.

Frank Bua paced the 'Hawks in scoring with 21 points. Pratt added 19 points, Jim Braxton, senior center, collected 14. Martin had 12, and Wayne King added 11.

The Seahawks rallied late in the final period to defeat Methodist College 53-46, in a benefit basketball game.

The Seahawks jumped off to an early lead and at one point led 18-4, however in the final 10 minutes of the first half the team scored only six points. The Monarchs from Fayetteville tied the score at 24-24 in the final minutes of the first half.

The Seahawks rallied in the second half and was paced by Wayne King's 20 points. Frank Bua added 10 for the Hawks. Jim Hall collected 10 rebounds.

A late rally by the Seahawks fell short as Shorter College defeated Wilmington 61-49 in the first round of the Asheville-Biltmore Invitational tournament.

Frank Bua had 18 points to pace the Wilmington scoring, Jim Hall had nine points, and Wayne King and Jerry Martin each dumped in eight. Jim Braxton was the leading rebounder with 11 followed by Martin with nine and Bua with eight.

In the second round of the tournament Augusta College ripped the Seahawks 75-52.

Wayne King had 14 points and Frank Bua 11 to pace Wilmington. King had ten rebounds and Braxton eight.

Wilmington had a 30-27 half-time lead but could never start clicking in the second half. Augusta working a fast break to near perfection caught the Seahawks at 36-36 with 16:02 left.

In the remaining time the Jaguars outscored the Seahawks 39-16 for the margin of victory. Poor shooting again plagued the 'Hawks as they connected on 20 of 63 attempts from the floor for a 32 per cent shooting average.

Holiday Tournament Draws Near

From the Coach's office comes word that preparations are in full-swing for the Third Annual Wilmington College Holiday Invitational Tournament. The tournament this season will be played in Hanover Hall, as were the games last year and the year before. Students who were in attendance at these games in previous years, will probably remember that Seahawk Jay Neary was voted Most Valuable Player in 1964, and that John Scott of Guilford received the honor in 1965.

In last year's action, Guilford walked away with an easy victory the first night, beating Pembroke by a wide margin. Wilmington beat Catawba in the game which followed, only to bow to the powerful Guilford team the next night. A Seahawk rally near the end of the game, however, tightened the score, but Guilford still won by approximately 20 points.

Guilford is favored to win again this year, because they have essentially the same team as last year. They are also favored in the Carolinas District, as they went to the national finals last year.

Along with Guilford and Wilmington, teams participating in this year's competition include Roanoke and another team to be decided later. Roanoke, from the Mason-Dixon Conference, is considered a "tough team", and is expected to offer stiff competition.

The games will get under way Thursday, December 29, at seven o'clock, with Guilford playing Roanoke. At nine o'clock, Wilmington College will play the other team. Game times on Friday, December 30, will be the same as the preceding night. The consolation game will be played first, followed by the championship game.

Coach Bill Brooks announced that students will be able to attend the games free of charge by presenting their activity cards at the door. Tickets are on sale in various stores in town. Though last year's attendance was good, it is hoped that there will be an even better turn-out this year for Wilmington College's Holiday Invitational Tournament—the top basketball attraction of the year.

Committees, Clubs Plan Homecoming

Queen To Be Crowned During Ball Game

CATALINAS—This band will play for the Homecoming dance on Friday night.

Homecoming 1967 will be February 2-4.

Election of the Homecoming Queen and Court will take place January 26. Nominations for the queen had to be in January 19. Norberto Machiran was in charge of the election.

Homecoming activities will begin with a bonfire Thursday night. Cheerleaders are in charge of a pep rally which will be held at that time.

Following the pep rally there will be a dance on campus. The Embers will provide music for the dance. Dress for this dance will be casual.

On Friday night the Homecoming Court will be presented during the semi-formal dance in the Pub. Music for this dance will be by the Catalinas.

Saturday night's activities will conclude the Homecoming weekend. The Wilmington College Seahawks will host Augusta College in the college gym for the Homecoming basketball game.

The Homecoming Court will be presented during halftime of the game. The Homecoming Queen for 1967 will be crowned by the co-captains of the basketball game at this time.

Following the game Billy Stewart, backed up by his own band, will provide the entertainment for the dance at the Blockade Runner.

"Dance committee members are hard at work on the decorations for the dances," stated Elsie Bosso, dance committee member.

Members of the dance committee planning for Homecoming, which they predict will be the best Homecoming Wilmington College ever had, are: Tom McNair, chairman; Elsie Bosso, Kirby Walls, Georgia Macris, Anita Edwards, and Debbie Brown.

Civilians To Host Dance For Visiting Brazilians

The Collegiate Civitan Club will have a dance tonight in the pub for the visiting Brazilian students.

The dance is open to members of the Club, Circle K members, and their dates only.

John Walker, local attorney, will be the guest speaker at the next Civitan club meeting, January 24, at 8 p.m. in the lecture room of Kenan Hall.

The Civitan Club is in charge of publication of the student directory which will be put out as soon as advertising space is sold.

Future projects of the club include probable work with the Head Start program and assistance in the Azalea Festival.

Civitan members began their year's activities by painting room 201 in the Student Services Building.

Their next major project was a concentrated membership drive. The drive resulted in the induction of 17 new members.

The most recent new members of the club are Bob Andrews, Bill Baugh, Bobby McKeithan, Fred Rippy, Terry Smith, Dan Jensen, James Griffin, Paul Roderick, and Terry Wortley.

Another service project which is quite important to the club is the half-scholarship which is awarded each quarter to some worthy student.

The scholarship is based primarily on quality point average, need, and extra-curricular activities. John Hunt was the recipient of the scholarship for the winter quarter.

To be eligible for the scholarship a student must have 45 hours of credit and a minimum of a 2.0 quality point average. Application blanks for the scholarship may be obtained in the office of the dean of students or from club president, Eric Staton.

The club is sponsoring an intramural basketball team this quarter. The scoring thus far has been characterized by two extremes, prolific on the part of the club's opponents and anemic on the part of the club, according to an unidentified Civitan member.

The club is still open for membership. Interested boys should see any member for information. Officers for the year are Eric Staton, president; Manuel Machiran, vice president; Thomas Grant, secretary, and Adrian Hall, treasurer.

Circle K Members To Sell Mums

Circle K members will sell mums for Homecoming. In the Spring they will also be selling plastic covers for The Fledgling.

The club is going to try to purchase a new cement bench for the college and a new sign to show the various buildings on campus.

Programs for the year have thus far included speakers from on campus as well as off. An early club project was a rummage sale.

New Circle K members are Donald Harrington, Eddie Merritt, Kirby Walls, Phil Oakley, Dean McKittrick, Tommy Hamilton, Ray Marett, and Hugh Newkirk.

Officers of the club are Robert Prince, president; Billy Alexander, vice president; Wayne King, secretary, and Ray Pacer, chaplain.

Music Students To Present Monthly Recital

Applied music students will present their first monthly recital January 27. This is a new system, explained Lloyd Hudson, head of the music department. Formerly music students presented their recital at the end of the quarter.

The brass ensemble will travel to Raleigh tomorrow, January 21, to present a concert in the Hayes-Barton Baptist Church in Raleigh. Walter Ross, formerly of Wilmington, will play the organ with the brass ensemble.

BILLY STEWART—Backed up by his own band, Billy Stewart will provide the entertainment for the Homecoming dance following the ball game.

Fitzgibbon Announces Cast For 'A Man For All Seasons'

The cast for "A Man For All Seasons," by Robert Bolt, has been announced by director Anne Fitzgibbon. It is scheduled for production on February 10, 11 and 12 at Thalian Hall by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thaliens.

The action of the play is laid in England in the sixteenth century, at a time when England was embroiled in the most chaotic period in her spiritual history. King Henry VIII, played by Randy del Lago, had divorced Catherine of Spain and married Anne Boleyn of England. His Chancellor of England, Sir Thomas More, played by John Ford, could not, however, recognize the divorce because it was against divine law.

Though More was respected for his integrity and had strong following from both the masses and the royal courts of Europe, in this conflict with Henry VIII he found little help. Thomas Cromwell, Hank Blaustein, is the scheming court politician and is aware that he, like More, may be rewarded on the block. Richard Rich, Frank Hall, respects Sir Thomas but worships advancement more. The Spanish Ambassador, Al Carrus, admires More's stand because it suits his King and his own career. The Duke of Norfolk, David James, is loyal to the point where his own neck is endangered and ends by serving as one of Sir Thomas' judges.

Even his own kin are of little help. William Roper, Mike Milligan, his son-in-law, furiously defends principle, a different one every half year. Alice, his wife, Rosemary Green, thinks of the hearth and table. Margaret More, his daughter, played by Claudia Smith, is an intellectual like her father and wants his life spared at any cost.

Robert Wood plays the role of the attendant to the Spanish Ambassador and Gerald Dowdy, the woman who had at one time tried to bribe Sir Thomas but had been rebuked. The role of Cardinal Wolsey will be played by Joe Williams. The Archbishop of Canterbury will be Tony Rivenbark.

The Common Man who serves both as narrator and plays various roles within the play itself will be performed by Sam Garner. Mr. Bolt uses Common Man as all men—servant, boatman, publican, jailer, member of the jury and finally headsman.

"A Man for All Seasons" will mark the second production this season for the combined forces of the local little theatre and Wilmington College Theatre.
